

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

PREFACE

TO

THE FIRST EDITION.

Nothing has more engaged the attention of literary men since the revival of learning, than to trace from ancient monuments the institutions and laws, the religion, the manners, and customs of the Romans, under the general name of Roman Antiquities. This branch of knowledge is not only curious in itself, but absolutely necessary for understanding the Classics, and for reading with advantage the history of that celebrated people. It is particularly requisite for such as prosecute the study of the civil law.

On these accounts, near twenty years ago, the Compiler of the following pages thought of framing, from Kennet and Nieuport, a Compendium for his own use, with an intention to print it, if he should meet with no book on the subject to his mind. But he soon perceived, that on several important points he could not derive from either the satisfaction he wished. He therefore had recourse to other sources of information; and chiefly to the Classics themselves. To enumerate the various authors he has consulted, would be tedious and useless. It is sufficient to say, that he has borrowed with freedom, from all hands, whatever he judged fit for his purpose. He has been chiefly indebted to Manutius, Brissonius, and Middleton, on the senate; to Pignorius, on slaves; to Sigonius and Grucchius, Manutius, Huber, Gravina, Merula, and Heineccius, on the assemblies of the people, the rights of citizens, the laws and judicial proceedings; to Lipsius, on the magistrates, the art of war, shows of the circus and gladiators; to Sheffer, on naval affairs and carriages; to Ferrarius, on the Roman dress; to Kirchmannus, on funerals; to Arbuthnot, on coins; to Dickson, on agriculture; to Donatus, on the city; to Turnebus, Abrahamus, Rossinus, Salmasius, Hottomomannus, Grævius, and Gronovius, Montfaucon, Pitiscus, Ernesti, and particularly to Gesner, in different parts of the work.

The labour he has undergone can be conceived by those only who have been conversant in such studies. But he will think his pains well bestowed, if his work answer the end intended, to facilitate the acquisition of classical learning. He has done every thing in his power to render it useful. He has endeavoured to give a just view of the constitution of the Roman government, and to point out the principal causes of the various changes which it underwent. This part, it is hoped, will be found calculated to impress on the minds of youth just sentiments of government in general, by showing on the one hand the pernicious effects of aristocratic domination; and on the other, the still more hurtful consequences of democratical licentiousness and oligarchic tyranny.

As the work is not divided into books and chapters, the table of Contents, it is hoped, will supply that deficiency.

The Compiler has now in a great measure completed, what above twenty years ago he conceived to be wanting in the common plan of education in this country. His first attempt was to connect the study of Latin grammar with that of the English; which was approved of by some of the first literary characters then in the kingdom. It is sufficient to mention Mr. Harris and Dr. Lowth. He has since contrived, by a new and natural arrangement, to include in the same book a vocabulary, not only of the simple and primitive words in the Latin tongue, but also of the most common derivatives and compounds, with an explanation of phrases and tropes. His next attempt was to join the knowledge of ancient and modern geography, and the principles of history, with the study of the classics. And now he has endeavoured to explain difficult words and phrases in the Roman authors, from the customs to which they refer. How far he has succeeded in the execution, he must leave others to judge. He can only say, that what he has written has proceeded from the purest desire to promote the improvement of youth; and that he should never have thought of troubling the world with his publications, if he could have found, on any of the subjects he has treated, a book adapted to his purpose. He has attained his end, if he has put it in the power of the teacher to convey instruction with more ease, and in a shorter time; and of the learner, to procure, with greater facility, instruction for himself. He has laboured long in the education of youth, and wished to show himself not unworthy of the confidence reposed in him by the public. His chief enjoyment in life has arisen from the acquisition and communication of useful knowledge; and he can truly say with Seneca, Si cum hac exceptione detur sapientia, ut illam inclusam teneam, nec enunciem, rejiciam, Ep. 6.

TO THE SECOND EDITION.

“THE Compiler has felt much satisfaction from the favourable reception his performance has met with. Stimulated by such encouragement, he has exerted his utmost industry to improve this edition. The numerous facts and authorities he has added will show the pains he has bestowed.

“As several of the Classics, both Greek and Latin, are differently divided by different editors, it will be proper to mention what editions of these have been followed in the quotations: Cæsar by Clarke, or in usum Delphini; Pliny, by Brotier; Quintilian and the writers on husbandry, by Gesner; Petronius Arbitr, by Burmannus; Dionysius of Halicarnassus, by Reiske; Plutarch's Morals, by Xylander; and Dio Cassius, by Reimar. It is needless to mention the editions of such authors as are always divided in the same manner. Those not divided into chapters, as Appian, Strabo, Plutarch's Lives, &c. are quoted by books and pages.”

In addition to the above remarks of the author, it is considered requisite only to observe, that the Notes which have been supplied are intended to combine in this edition with the great antiquarian research displayed in the work of Adam, a portion of the more excluded and enlightened criticism with which recent authors, and particularly those of Germany, have illustrated the history of antiquity. It appears from the universal reception with which this work has been favoured for so long a period, that very little can be added to the text, as far as may regard the explanation of classical terms, or their ordinary acceptation even among the ancient writers. But the labours of Niebuhr and others have sufficed to show that there may be an interpretation of their remains to which the writings of the most learned commentators have not furnished a key; and which, though by no means within the view of Adam in the compilation of his useful manual, is equally worthy the attention of the classical scholar. To supply, in some measure, this deficiency, the Notes which will be found throughout the pages of this edition have been selected from Niebuhr, &c.

OF ROMAN ANTIQUITIES.

The FOUNDATION of the CITY, and DIVISION of its INHABITANTS.

ROME was founded by Romulus and a colony from Alba Longa, 753 years, as it is commonly thought, before the birth of Christ. They began to build on the 21st day of April, which was called Palilia, from Pales, the goddess of shepherds, to whom it was consecrated, and was ever after held as a festival; (dies natalis urbis Romæ.) Vell. Paterc. i. 8. Ovid. Fast. iv. 806.

Romulus divided the people of Rome into three TRIBES;* and each tribe into ten CURIÆ. The number of tribes was afterwards increased by degrees to thirty-five. They were divided into country and city tribes, (rusticæ et urbanae.) The number of curia always remained the same. Each curia anciently had a chapel or temple for the performance of sacred rights, Varr. de Lat. ling. iv. 32. Tacit. Ann. xii. 24. Dionys. ii. 23. He who presided over one curia was called CURIO, (quia sacra curabat, Festus;) he who presided over them all, CURIO MAXIMUS.

From each tribe Romulus chose 1000 foot-soldiers, and 100 horse. These 3000 foot and 300 horse were called LEGIO, a legion,† because the most warlike were chosen, Plutarch. in Romulo; hence one of the thousand which each tribe furnished was called MILLE,

* "In every nation of antiquity there was a peculiar immemorial mode of division into a stated number of tribes. If the citizens of a state, whether the whole body of them, or a portion of that body, enjoyed an equality of civil rights, and at the same time did not live united together in a central capital, but scattered about in hamlets, these were subjected to the same principle of arrangement. The tribes in the states of antiquity were constituted on a twofold principle: in some states the arrangement was regulated by the houses which composed the tribes, in others by the ground which they occupied. It might seem as if the two principles must have coincided, when at the settlement of a city a tribe consisting of certain houses had a whole tract of land assigned to it; nevertheless this did not form its bond of union. The genealogical tribes were more ancient than the local, by which they were almost everywhere superseded. Their form in its utmost strictness is that of castes; where one is separated from another, without the right of intermarrying, and with an entire difference of rank; each having an exclusive unalterable calling. The local tribes when first established are adapted to the division of a country into districts and hamlets: so that every one at the time when such a division was made, was enrolled in the phyle to the region of which the village belonged." Niebuhr.—Ed.

† From Lago, I choose.

Varro. de Lat. ling. iv. 16. (unus ex mille), Isidor. ix. 3. The commander of a tribe was called TRIBUNUS, (φυλαρχος vel τριναρχος.) Dionys. ii. 7. Veget. ii. 7.

The whole territory of Rome, then very small, was also divided into three parts, but not equal. One part was allotted for the service of religion, and for building temples; another for the king's revenue, and the uses of the state; the third and most considerable part was divided into thirty portions, to answer to the thirty curiæ, Dionys. ii. 7.

The people were divided into two ranks, (ordines), PATRICIANS and PLEBEIANS; connected together as PATRONS and CLIENTS, Dionys. ii. 9. In after times a third order was added, namely, the EQUITES.

THE SENATE.

1. The Institution and Number of the Senate.

THE senate was instituted by Romulus, to be the perpetual council of the Republic, (Concilium reipublicæ sempiternum, Cic. pro Sextio, 65.)* It consisted at first only of 100. They were chosen from among the Patricians; according to Dionysius of Halicarnassus, ii. 12, three were nominated by each tribe, and three by each curia. To these ninety-nine Romulus himself added one, to preside in the senate and have the care of the city in his absence. The senators were called PATRES, either upon account of their age, or their paternal care of the state; certainly out of respect; Liv. i. 8. and their offspring, PATRICII; Qui patrem ciere possent, i. e. ingenui, Liv. x. 8. Dionys. ii. 8. Festus.) After the Sabines were assumed into the city, another hundred were chosen from them by the suffrages of the curiæ, Dionys. ii. 47. But, according to Livy, there were only 100 senators at the death of Romulus, and their number was increased by Tullus Hostilius after the destruction of Alba, i. 17 & 30. Tarquinius Priscus, the fifth king of Rome, added 100 more, who were called PATRES MINORUM GENTIUM. Those created by Romulus were called PATRES MAJORUM GENTIUM, Tacit. Annal. xi. 25. and their posterity, Patricii Majorum Gentium. This number of 300 continued, with small variation, to the times of Sylla, who increased it; but how many he added is uncertain. It appears there were at least above 400, Cic. ad Attic. i. 14.

In the time of Julius Caesar, the number of senators was increased to 900, Dio. xliii. 47. and after his death to 1000: but, many worthless persons having been admitted into the senate during the civil wars, Id. lii. 42. one of whom is called by Cicero self-chosen, (lectus ipse a se), Phil. xiii. 13; Augustus reduced the number to 600, Suet. Aug. 35. Dio. liv. 14.

* "The contemporaries of Camillus, though they had a firmly rooted belief in the legends about Romulus, would have laughed at any one who, as the most intelligent men did three centuries after, should have represented the institution of the senate as a measure of policy issuing from the free-will of the founder of the city. In all the cities belonging to civilized nations on the coasts of the Mediterranean, a senate was a no less essential and indispensable part of the state than a popular assembly: it was a select body of the elder citizens." Nicbuhr.—Ed.

Such as were chosen into the senate by Brutus, after the expulsion of Tarquin the Proud, to supply the place of those whom that king had slain, were called CONSCRIPTI, i. e. persons written or enrolled together with the old senators, who alone were properly styled Patres. Hence the custom of summoning to the senate those who were Patres, and who were Conscripti, (ita appellabant in novum senatum lectos, Liv. ii. 1.) Hence also the name Patres Conscripti (sc. et) was afterwards usually applied to all the senators.

2. The choosing of Senators.

PERSONS were chosen into the senate, (Senatus legebatur, Liv. xl. 51. vel in senatum legebantur, Cic. Cluent. 47.) first by the kings, Liv. i. 8. xxx. 35. and after their expulsion, by the consuls, Liv. ii. 1. and by the military tribunes. Festus in Præteriti Senatores; but from the year of the city 310, by the censors: at first only from the Patricians, but afterwards also from the Plebeians, Liv. ii. 32. v. 12, chiefly however from the Equites; whence that order was called Seminarium Senatûs, Liv. xlii. 61.

Some think that the senate was supplied from the annual magistrates, chosen by the people, all of whom had of course admittance into the senate; but that their senatorial character was not esteemed complete till they were enrolled by the censors at the next Lustrum; at which time also the most eminent private citizens were added to complete the number. See Middleton on the Roman Senate.

After the overthrow at the battle of Cannæ, a Dictator was created for choosing senators, Liv. xxiii. 22. After the subversion of liberty, the Emperors conferred the dignity of senator on whom they thought fit. Augustus created three men to choose the senate, and other three to review the Equites, in place of the censors, Suet. Aug. 37. Dio. lv. 13.

He whose name was first entered in the censor's books, was called PRINCEPS SENATUS, which title used to be given to the person who of those alive had been censor first, (qui primus censor, ex iis qui viverent fuisset, Liv. xxvii. 11. ;) but after the year 544, to him whom the censors thought most worthy, Liv. xxvii. 12. This dignity, although it conferred no command or emolument, was esteemed the very highest, and was usually retained for life, Liv. xxxiv. 44. xxxix. 52. It is called PRINCIPATUS; hence afterwards the Emperor was named Princeps, which word properly denotes only rank, and not power.

In choosing senators, regard was had not only to their rank, but also to their age and fortune.

The age at which one might be chosen a senator (ÆTAS SENATORIA) is not sufficiently ascertained; although it appears that there was a certain age requisite, Cic. de lege Manil. 21. Tacit. Ann. xv. 28. Anciently senators seem to have been men advanced in years, as their name imports, Sallust. Cat. 6. Cic. de Sen. 6. Ovid. Fast. v. 63. Flor. i. 15. But in after times the case was otherwise. It seems probable, however, that the age required for a senator was not below thirty. This may be presumed from certain laws given to foreign nations, at different times, in imitation of the Romans, Cic. in Verr. ii. 49. Plin. ad Traj. Ep. x. 83. for there is no positive assertion on this subject in the classics.

The first civil office which gave admission into the senate was the Quæstorship, which some have imagined might be enjoyed at twenty-five, and consequently that one might then be chosen a senator; from Dio Cassius, lii. 20. Others think at twenty-seven, on the authority of Polybius, vi. 17. who says that the Romans were obliged to serve ten years in the army before they could pretend to any civil magistracy; and as the military age was seventeen, of consequence that one might be made quæstor at twenty-seven. But few obtained that office so early; and Cicero, who often boasts that he had acquired all the honours of the city, without a repulse in any, and each in his proper year, (suo anno), or as soon as he could pretend to it by law, had passed his thirtieth year before he obtained the quæstorship, which he administered the year following in Sicily. So that the usual age of enjoying the quæstorship, (ætas quæstorica), and of course of being chosen a senator, in the time of Cicero, seems to have been thirty-one.

But although a person had enjoyed the quæstorship, he did not on that account become a senator, unless he was chosen into that order by the censors, Gell. iii. 18. But he had ever after the right of coming into the senate, and of giving his opinion on any question, Cic. in Verr. v. 14. Ep. ad Fam. ii. 7. About this, however, writers are not agreed. It is at least certain, that there were some offices which gave persons a legal title to be chosen into the senate, (unde in senatum legi deberent), Liv. xxii. 49. Hence perhaps the senators are sometimes said to have been chosen by the people, (lecti jussu populi), Liv. iv. 4. Cic. pro Sext. 65. And Cicero often in his orations declares, that he owed his seat in the senate, as well as his other honours, to the favour of the people, post. red. in Senat. 1. He asserts the same thing in general terms, in Verr. iv. 11. pro Cluent. 56.

Persons also procured admission into the senate by military service, Senatorium per militiam auspicabantur gradum, Senec. Ep. 47. So Liv. xxiii. 23.

When Sylla, after the destruction occasioned by his civil wars and proscriptions, thought proper to admit into the senate about 300 Equites, he allowed the people to give their vote concerning each of them in an assembly by tribes, Appian. de bell. Civ. vi. 413. But Dionysius says, that Sylla supplied the senate with any persons that occurred to him, v. 77. and probably admitted some of the lowest rank, Dio. xl. 63.

The Flamen of Jupiter had a seat in the senate, in right of his office, Liv. xvii. 8. a privilege which none of the other priests enjoyed, Cic. Att. iv. 2.

Augustus granted to the sons of senators, after they assumed the manly gown, the right of wearing the latus clavus, and of being present at the debates of the senate, that thus they might become the sooner acquainted with public affairs, (quo celerius reipublicæ assuescerent.) Suet. Aug. 38. They also had the privilege of wearing the crescent on their shoes, Stat. Sylv. v. 2. 28.

No one could be chosen into the senate who had exercised a low trade, or whose father had been a slave, (libertino patre natus, Horat. Sat. 1. 6. 21. & 44. ;) but this was not always observed. Appius Claudius Cæcus first disgraced (inquinavit vel deformavit) the senate by electing into it the sons of freedmen, (libertinorum filii lectis.) Liv. ix. 29. 46. or the grandsons, according to Suetonius, who says, that libertini, in the time of Appius, did not denote those who were freed, but their progeny, (ingenios ex his procreatos.) Suet. Claud. 24, a distinction which no where occurs in the classics. Sex. Aur. Victor calls those chosen by Appius LIBERTINI; de vir. illust. 34. But nobody regarded that election, whatever it was, as valid, Liv. ix. 46. and the next consuls called the senate in the order of the roll, which had been in use before the censorship of Appius, Ibid. 30. It appears, however, that freedmen were admitted into the senate, at least towards the end of the republic. For Dio Cassius, speaking of the censorship of Appius Claudius, and Piso, the father-in-law of Caesar, A. U. 704, says, that Appius excluded not only all freedmen, (δασλεύθεροι), but also many noblemen, and among the rest Sallust, the historian, xl. 63. for having been engaged in an intrigue with Fausta, the daughter of Sylla and wife of Milo, (a quo deprehensus, virgis casus erat.) Gell. xvii. 18. Serv. in Virg. Æn. vi. 612. Acron in Horat. Sat. i. 2. 41. Cæsar admitted into the senate not only his officers, Dio. xlii. 51. but even his mercenary soldiers, Id. xliii. 20. xlviii. 22. lii. 25. & 42. all of whom Augustus removed, Ibid. At which time he was so apprehensive of danger, that when he presided in the senate, he always wore a coat of mail under his robe, and a sword, with ten of the stoutest of his senatorian friends standing round his chair, Suet. Aug. 35. .

In the year of Rome 535, a law was made, that no senator, or father of a senator, should keep a bark above the burden of 300 amphora, or eight tons; for this was reckoned sufficient to carry their grain from their farms, and it seemed below a senator to reap advantage by merchandise, Liv. xxi. 63. Cic. in Verr. v. 18.

Anciently no regard seems to have been paid to the fortune (cen-sus) of a senator, Plin. xiv. 1. and when it was first fixed does not appear. But in the flourishing state of the republic, as we learn from Suetonius, it behoved every senator to have a fortune of at least eight hundred sestertia, or 800,000 sestertii, which are computed to amount to between six and seven thousand pounds sterling. Augustus raised it to 1200 sestertia, and supplied the deficiency to those who had not that sum, Suet. Aug. 41. Cicero also mentions a certain fortune as requisite in a senator, Fam. xiii. 5.

Every lustrum, i. e. at the end of every fifth year, the senate was reviewed by one of the censors; and if any one by his behaviour had rendered himself unworthy of that high rank, or had sunk his fortune below that of a senator, his name was passed over by the censor in reading the roll of senators; and thus he was held to be excluded from the senate, (motus e senatu.)

But this, though disgraceful, did not render persons infamous, as those condemned at a trial; for the ignominy might be removed by the next censors, or they might obtain offices which again procured them admittance into the senate, Cic. pro Cluent. 42. as was the case with C. Antonius, who was consul with Cicero; and with P. Lentulus, who was prætor at the time of Catiline's conspiracy, Dio. xxxviii. 30. Thus also Sallust the historian, that he might recover his senatorian dignity, was made prætor by Cæsar, Dio. xlii. 52. and afterwards governor of Numidia, where he did not act as he wrote, (ὅτι ἐμίσησάτο τῷ ἔργῳ τοὺς λόγους.) Id. xliii. 9. but by rapacity and extortion accumulated a great fortune, which he left to his grand-nephew, Tacit. Annal. iii. 30. Horat. Od. ii. 2.

The indulgence of being enrolled in the senate as supernumerary members, without a formal election, was first granted to magistrates by the censors, A. U. 693. Dio. xxxvii. 46.

There was a list of the senators, (ALBUM SENATORIUM, λευκωμα vel ἀναγραφή βουλευτῶν,) where all their names were written, which, by the appointment of Augustus, used to be annually pasted up in the senate-house, Dio. lv. 3. et Fragment. 137. and the name of any senator, who had been condemned by a judicial sentence was erased from it, Tacit. Annal. iv. 42.

3. The Badges and Privileges of Senators.

THE Badges (insignia) of senators were, 1. the Latus clavus, or Tunica laticlavia, i. e. a tunic or waistcoat with an oblong broad stripe of purple, like a riband, sewed to it on the fore part. It was broad, to distinguish it from that of the Equites, who wore a narrow one. 2. Black buskins reaching to the middle of the leg, Horat. Sat. i. 6. 28. with the letter C in silver on the top of the foot, Juv. vii. 192. Hence calceos mutare, to become a senator, Cic. Phil. xiii. 13. 3. A particular place at the public spectacles, called ORCHESTRA, next the stage in the theatre, and next the arena in the amphitheatre, Cic. Cluent. 47.

This was first granted them by P. Cornelius Scipio the elder, in his consulship, A. U. 558. Liv. xxxiv. 54. Hence Orchestra is put for the senate itself, Juvenal. iii. 177.

In the games of the circus the senators sat promiscuously with the other citizens, till the Emperor Claudius assigned them peculiar seats there also, Suet. Claud. 21, Dio. lx. 7.

On solemn festivals, when sacrifices were offered to Jupiter by the magistrates, (in epulo Jovis vel in cœna Dialis), the senators had the sole right of feasting publicly in the Capitol, Gell. xii. 8. Dio. xlviii. 52. dressed in their senatorian robes, and such as were proper to the offices which they had borne in the city, Cic. Phil. ii. 43, Senec. contr. i. 18. When Augustus reduced the number of the senate, he reserved to those excluded, the badge of their dress, and the privilege of sitting in the Orchestra, and of coming to these public entertainments, (publicè epulandi jus;) Suet. Aug. 35.

4. The assembling of the Senate, and the Time and Place of its Meeting.

THE senate was assembled (convocabatur, vel cogebatur) at first by the kings, Liv. i. 48. after the expulsion of Tarquin, usually by the consuls, and in their absence by the prætors, Cic. Ep. Fam. x. 12, 28. also by the dictator, master of the horse, Liv. viii. 33. by the decemviri, military tribunes, interrex, prefect of the city, Liv. iii. 9 & 29. A. Gell. xiv. 7. and by the tribunes of the commons, who could summon the senate although the consuls were present, and even against their will; Cic. Ep. Fam. x. 28. xi. 6. De Orat. iii. 1. Gell. xiv. 8. The Emperors did not preside in the senate, unless when invested with consular authority, (Princeps præsidebat; erat enim consul;) Plin. Ep. ii. 11. Paneg. 76.

The senators were summoned (arcessebantur, citabantur, vocabantur, in senatum vocabantur, &c.) anciently by a public officer named VIATOR, because he called the senators from the country; Cic. de Sen. 16. or by a PUBLIC CRIER, when any thing had happened about which the senators were to be consulted hastily, and without delay, Liv. iii. 38. but in latter times by an EDICT, appointing the time and place, and published several days before, Cic. Phil. iii. 8. not only at Rome, but sometimes also in the other cities of Italy, Cic. ad Att. ix. 17. The cause of assembling it used also to be added, CONSULTANDUM SUPER RE MAGNA ET ATROC, Tacit. Annal. ii. 28. Edicere senatum in proximum diem; Edicere ut senatus adesset, &c. Cic. et Liv. passim.

If any senator refused or neglected to attend, he was punished by a fine and by distraining his goods, (multâ et pignoris captione;) unless he had a just excuse, Liv. iii. 38. Cic. Phil. i. 5. Plin. Ep. iv. 29. The fine was imposed by him who held the senate, and pledges were taken till it was paid. But after sixty or sixty-five years of age, senators might attend or not as they pleased, Senec. de Brev. Vita. 20. Controv. i. 8. Plin. Ep. iv. 23.

The senate could not be held but in a temple, that is, in a place consecrated by the augurs, Gell. xiv. 7. that thus their deliberations might be rendered more solemn, Cic. Dom. 51.

Anciently there were but three places where the senate used to be held (Curia v. Senacula;) two within the city, and the temple of Bellona without it, Festus. Afterwards there were more places, as the temples of Jupiter Stator, Apollo, Mars, Vulcan, Tellus; of Virtue, Faith, Concord, &c. Also the Curia Hostilia, Julia, Octavia, and Pompeia; which last was shut up after the death of Cæsar, because he was slain in it, Suet. Jul. 88. These Curia were consecrated as temples by the augurs, but not to any particular deity. When Hannibal led his army to Rome, the senate was held in the camp of Flaccus, the proconsul, betwixt the Porta Collina and Æscuilina, Liv. xxvi. 10.

When a report was brought that an ox had spoken, a thing frequently mentioned in ancient authors, the senate was held under the open air, Plin. Hist. Nat. viii. 45.

On two special occasions the senate was always held without the city, in the temple of Bellona or of Apollo; for the reception of foreign ambassadors, especially of those who came from enemies, whom they did not choose to admit into the city; and to give audience (cum senatus datus est) to their own generals who were never allowed to come within the walls while in actual command, Liv. iii. 63. xxxi. 47. xxxiii. c. 22, & 24.—34, 43, 36, 39,—42, 36. Senec. Benef. v. 15.

The senate met (conveniebat) at stated times, on the kalends, nones, and ides of every month; unless when the comitia were held. For on those days (diebus comitialibus) it was not lawful to hold a senate, Cic. ad Frat. ii. 2. ad Fam. i. 4. nor on unlucky days, (diebus nefastis v. atris) unless in dangerous conjunctures, Id. viii. 8. Liv. xxxviii. 53.—xxxix. 39. in which case the senate might postpone the comitia: Ibid. & Cic. Mur. 25.

An ordinary meeting of the senate was called Senatus LEGITIMUS, Suet. Aug. 35. If an extraordinary senate was given to ambassadors or others for any reason whatever, it used to be called INDICTUS or EDICTUS, and then the senators were usually summoned by an edict, whereby anciently those were ordered to attend who were PATRES, and who were CONSCRIPTI, Liv. ii. 1. but afterwards, "those who were senators, and who had a right to deliver their opinion in the senate." (QUI SENATORES, QUIBUSQUE IN SENATU SENTENTIAM DICERE LICERET, UT ADESSENT; and sometimes, UT ADESSENT FREQUENTES, AD VIII. CAL. DECEMBR, &c. Cic. et Liv. Passim.)

No decree of the senate could be made unless there was a quorum, (nisi senatorum numerus legitimus adesset.) What that was is uncertain. Before the times of Sulla, it seems to have been 100, Liv. xxxix. 18. Under Augustus it was 400, which, however, that Emperor altered, Dio. liv. 35. lv. 3. If any one wanted to hinder a decree from being passed, and suspected there was not a quorum, he said to the magistrate presiding, NUMERA SENATUM, Count the senate, Cic. Ep. Fam. viii. 11. Festus in NUMERA.

Augustus enacted, that an ordinary meeting of the senate should not be held oftener than twice a month, on the Kalends and Ides; and in the months of September and October, that only a certain number chosen by lot should attend, Suet. Aug. 35. This regulation was made under pretext of easing the senators, but in reality with a view to diminish their authority, by giving them less frequent opportunities of exercising it. Augustus chose a council for himself every six months, (concilia semestria sortiri), to consider beforehand what things should be laid before a full house, (ad frequentem senatum.) Ibid.

The senate met always, of course, on the first of January, for the inauguration of the new consuls, who entered upon their office on that day, and then usually there was a crowded house.

He who had the fasces presided, and consulted the fathers, first, about what pertained to religion, (de rebus divinis), about sacrificing to the gods, expiating prodigies, celebrating games, inspecting the books of the Sibyls, &c. Liv. viii. 8. next, about human affairs, namely, the raising of armies, the management of wars, the provinces, &c. The consuls were then said to consult the senate about the republic in general, (de republica indefinitè), and not about particular things, (rebus de singulis finitè, Aul. Gell. xiv. 7.) The same was the case in dangerous junctures, when the senate was consulted about the safety of the republic, (de summa republica, v. tota.) Cic. passim.

The month of February was commonly devoted to hear embassies and the demands of the provinces, Cic. ad Frat. ii. 3 & 12. ad Fam. i. 4. Ascon. in Verr. i. 35.

5. The Manner of holding and consulting the Senate.

The magistrate, who was to hold the senate, offered a sacrifice, and took the auspices, before he entered the senate-house, Plin. Pan. 76. Gell. xiv. 7. If the auspices were not favourable, or not rightly taken, the business was deferred to another day, Cic. Epist. x. 12.

Augustus ordered, that each senator, before he took his seat, should pay his devotions, with an offering of frankincense and wine, at the altar of that god in whose temple the senate were assembled, that thus they might discharge their duty the more religiously, Suet. Aug. 35.

When the consuls entered the senate-house, the senators commonly rose up to do them honour, Cic. Pis. 12.

The senate was consulted about every thing pertaining to the administration of the state, except the creation of magistrates, the passing of laws, and the determination of war and peace; all which properly belonged to the whole Roman people, Dionys. ii. 14.

The senate could not determine about the rights of Roman citizens, without the order of the people, Liv. xxvi. 33.

When a full house was assembled, the magistrate presiding, whether consul or prætor, &c. laid the business before them in a set form; QUAD BONUM, FAUSTUM, FELIX, FORTUNATUM, SIT; REFERIMUS AD VOS, PATRES CONSCRIPTI. Then the senators were asked their opinion in this form ; DIC. SP. POSTHUMI, QUID CENSES ? Liv. i. 32. ix. 8. OR QUID FIERI PLACET ; QUID TIBI VIDETUR ?

In asking the opinions of the senators, the same order was not always observed ; but usually the princeps senatûs was first desired to deliver his opinion, unless when there were consuls elect, who were always asked first, Sal. Cat. 50. Cic. Phil. v. 13. Fam. viii. 4. and then the rest of the senators according to their dignity, Consulares, Prætorii, Ædilitii, Tribunitii, et Quæstorii, which is also thought to have been their order in sitting, Cic. Phil. 13. The benches on which the senators sat, (subsellia.) Cic. Cat. i. 7. were probably of a long form, Cic. Fam. iii. 9. as that mentioned by Juvenal, (longa cathedra.) ix. 52. and distinct from one another, each fit to hold all the senators of a particular description ; some of them shorter, as those of the tribunes, which seem to have held only a single person, Suet. Cl. 23. The consuls sat in the most distinguished place, on their curule chairs, Cic. Ibid. & Cat. iv. 1.

As the consuls elect were first asked their opinion, so the prætors, tribunes, &c. elect, seem to have had the same preference before the rest of their order, Cic. ad Att. xii. 21. in Verr. v. 14. He who held the senate, might ask first any one of the same order he thought proper, which he did from respect or friendship, Cic. post redit. in Senat. 7. Liv. v. 20. Gell. iv. 10. xiv. 7. Senators were sometimes asked their opinions by private persons : (multi rogabantur, atque idipsum consulibus inuitis ;) Cic. Fam. i. 2.

The consuls used to retain through the whole year the same order which they had observed in the beginning of their office, Suet. Jul. 21. But in latter times, especially under the Emperors, they were asked in what order the magistrate who presided thought proper, Cic. Att. i. 13. Plin. Ep. ix. 13. When they were all asked their opinions, they were said perrogari, Liv. xxix. 18. Plin. Pan. 60. and the senate to be regularly consulted or the affair to be deliberated about, (ordine consuli.) Liv. ii. 28, and 29. Augustus observed no certain rule in asking the opinions of the senators, that thereby they might be rendered the more attentive, Suet. 35.

Nothing could be laid before the senate against the will of the consuls, unless by the tribunes of the people, who might also give their negative (moram facere) against any decree, by the solemn word VETO ; which was called interceding, (intercedere.) This might also be done by all who had an equal or greater authority than the magistrate presiding, Cic. Legg. iii. 3. Gell. xiv. 7. If any person interceded, the sentence of the senate was called SENATUS AUCTORITAS, their judgment or opinion, Liv. iv. 57. Cic. Fam. i. 2. viii. 8. and not senatus consultum or decretum, their command. So likewise it was named, if the senate was held at an improper time or place, (alieno tempore aut loco ;) or if all the formalities (solemnia) were not observed, Dio. lv. 3. in which case the matter was referred to the people, or was afterwards confirmed by a formal decree of the senate, Cic. Ep. Fam. x. 12. But when no mention is made of intercession or informality, Auctoritas Senatûs is the same with consultum, Cic. Legg. ii. 15. They are also sometimes joined; thus, Senatus consulti auctoritas, which was the usual inscription of the decrees of the senate, and marked with the initial letters S. C. A. Cic.

The senators delivered their opinion, (sententiam dicebant), standing: whence one was said to be raised, (excitari), when he was ordered to give his opinion, Liv. ix. 8. Cic. ad Attic. i. 13. But when they only assented to the opinion of another, (verbo assentiebantur), they continued sitting, Cic. Fam. v. 2. Plin. Pan. 76. The principal senators might likewise require the consul to lay before the senate any other subject which they thought would be of advantage to the state, besides the matter proposed; which Tacitus calls, Egredi relationem. They were then said CENSERE referendum de aliqua re, Sall. Cat. 50. Plin. Ep. vi. 5. or Relationem postulare, Tacit. Ann. xiii. 49. For no private senator, not even the consul elect, was allowed to propose to the senate any question himself, Cic. pro Dom. 27. Sometimes the whole house called out for a particular motion, Sall. Cat. 48. And if the consul hesitated or refused, which he did by saying, SE CONSIDERARE VELLE, the other magistrates, who had the right of holding the senate, might do it, even against his will, particularly the tribunes of the people, Cic. pro leg. Manil. 19. pro Sext. 30. Epist. Fam. x. 16. Hence Augustus was, by a decree of the senate, invested with the power of tribune for life, that he might lay any one thing he pleased before the senate every meeting, although he was not consul, Dio. liiii. 32. And the succeeding Emperors obtained from the senate the right of laying before them one, two, or more things at the same meeting; which was called jus primæ, secundæ, tertix, quartæ, et quintæ, relationis, Vopisc. et Capitol. In those times the senator who gave his opinion first, was called Primæ sententia senator, Ibid.

It was not lawful for the consuls to interrupt those that spoke, although they introduced in their speech many things foreign to the subject; which they sometimes did, that they might waste the day in speaking, (ut diem dicendo eximerent, consumerent v. tollerent), Cic. Verr. 2, 39. For no new reference could be made after the tenth hour, i. e. four o'clock afternoon, according to our manner of reckoning; Senec. de Tranquill. An. c. ult. nor a decree passed after sunset, A. Gell. xiv. 7.

Hence Cicero, in blaming the decrees of Antony, calls them SCITA VESPERTINA, Phil. iii. 10. We read, however, of the senate's being assembled at midnight, upon the arrival of an express from one of the consuls, Sp. Furius, that he was besieged by the Æqui and Volsci, A. U. 290. Dionys. ix. 63. so iii. 26. and of a person haranguing till it was so late that lights were called for, (nocte illatis lucernis), Plin. Ep. iv. 9.

Those who grossly abused this right of speaking without interruption, were sometimes forced to give over speaking, (perorare), by the noise and clamour of the other senators, Cic. ad Att. iv. 2.

Sometimes magistrates, when they made a disagreeable motion, were silenced in this manner. Thus Captum est referri de inducendo Scto, i. e. delendo vel expungendo; ab omni senatu reclamatum est, Cic. pro Dom. 4. Ejus orationi vehementer ab omnibus reclamatum est, Id. Fam. i. 2. So when a senator threw out abusive language against any one, as Catiline did against Cicero and others, the whole senate bawled out against him, (obstreperere omnes,) Sall. Cat. 31.

This used also to happen under the Emperors. Thus Pliny, speaking of himself after the death of Domitian, says, Finio. Incipit respondere Vejento; nemo patitur; obterbatur, obstrepitur; adeo quidem ut diceret; Rogo, PATRES C. NE ME COGATIS IMPLORARE AUXILIUM TRIBUNORUM. Et statim Murena tribunus. PERMITTO TIBI, VIR CLARISSIME VEJENTO, DICERE. Tunc quoque reclamatur, Ep. ix. 13. The title of CLARISSIMUS was at this time given to all the senators, but formerly only to the leading men.

Sometimes the speeches of senators were received with shouts of applause; thus, Consurgenti ad censendum acclamatum est, quod solet residentibus, Plin. Ep. iv. 9. And the most extravagant expressions of approbation were bestowed on the speakers; Non fere quisquam in senatu fuit, qui non me complecteretur, exoscularetur, certatimque laude cumlaret, Id. ix. 43. The consul, or presiding magistrate, seems to have exercised different powers in the senate at different times, Cic. Orat. iii. 1. When Cato one day, to prevent a decree from being passed, attempted to waste the day in speaking, Cæsar, then consul, ordered him to be led to prison; whereupon the house rose to follow him, which made Cæsar recall his order, Gell. iv. 10.

If any one in delivering his opinion had included several distinct articles, some of which might be approved and others rejected, it was usual to require that the opinion might be divided, and that each particular might be proposed apart; and therefore any senator might say, DIVIDE, Cic. Fam. i. 2. Senec. Ep. 21. Ascon. in Cic. Mil. 6.

In matters of very great importance, the senators sometimes delivered their opinions upon oath, (jurati,) Liv. xxvi. 33. xxx. 40. xlii. 21. Tacit. Annal. iv. 21.

Several different questions might be referred to the senate by different magistrates in the same meeting, Cic. Phil. vii. 1. Liv. xxx. 21.

When any magistrate made a motion, he was said, VERBA FACERE; REFERRE VEL DEFERRE AD SENATUM, or CONSULERE SENATUM DE ALIQUA RE, Cic. in Pis. 13, and the senators, if they approved of it, RELATIONEM ACCIPERE, Liv. ii. 39.

When different opinions were delivered, the senators expressed their assent, some to one and some to another, variously, by their looks, by nodding with their heads, by stretching out their hands, &c. Tacit. Hist. iv. 4.

The senators who spoke usually addressed themselves to the whole house, by the title of PATRES CONSCRIPTI, Cic. et Liv. passim; sometimes to the consul or person who presided, Cic. Phil. viii. 1. sometimes to both, Liv. vi. 15. They commonly concluded their speeches in a certain form: QUARE EGO ITA CENSEO; or PLACET IGITUR, &c. Sallust. Cat. li. 52. QUOD C. PANSA VERBA FECIT DE —DE EA RE ITA CENSEO; or QUE CUM ITA SINT; or QUAS OB RES, ITA CENSEO, Cic. Phil. iii. 15. v. 4. ix. 7. Sometimes they used to read their opinion, (de scripto dicere,) Cic. Fam. x. 13. and a decree of the senate was made according to it, (in sententiam alicujus, vel ita ut ille censebat.)

When a senator did not give an entire assent to the opinion of any one, but thought that something should be added, he said, SERVILIO ASSENTIOR, ET HOC AMPLIUS CENSEO! Cic. Phil. xiii. 21. which was called addere sententiæ, vel in sententium, Sall. Cat. 51.

6. The Manner of making a Decree of the Senate.

WHEN several different opinions had been offered, and each supported by a number of senators, the consul or magistrate presiding might first put to the vote which opinion he pleased, (sententiam primam pronunciare, ut in eam discessio fieret;) Cic. Ep. Fam. i. 2. x. 12. or suppress altogether (negare se pronunciaturum) what he disapproved, Cæs. de Bell. Civili, i. 1. And herein consisted the chief power of the consul in the senate. But even this was sometimes contested by the tribunes, (antè se oportere discessionem facere, quàm consules,) Cic. Fam. i. 2.

A decree of the senate was made by a separation (per discessionem) of the senators to different parts of the house. He who presided said, "Let those who are of such an opinion pass over to that side; those who think differently to this." (QUI HOC CENSETIS, ILLUC TRANSITE. QUI ALIA OMNIA, IN HANC PARTEM.) Hence Ire pedibus in sententiam alicujus, to agree to any one's opinion; and Discedere v. transire in alia omnia, for Contrarium sentire, Plin. Ep. viii. 14. Frequentes ierunt in alia omnia, a great majority went into the contrary opinion, Cic. Fam. i. 2. Frequens senatus in alia omnia iit, Id. viii. 13. discessit, x. 12. The phrase QUI ALIA OMNIA, was used instead of QUI NON CENSETIS, sc. hoc, from a motive of superstition, (ominis causâ,) Festus.

Those senators who only voted, but did not speak, or, as some say, who had the right of voting, but not of speaking, were called PÉDARJI, Festus, A. Gell. iii. 18. Cic. ad Att. i. 19. 20. because they signified their opinion by their feet, and not by their tongues: or, according to others, because, not having borne a curule magistracy, they went to the senate on foot, A. Gell. ibid. But, according to Pliny, anciently all the senators went to the senate on foot; and the privilege of being carried thither in a chariot was never granted to any one but Metellus, who had lost his sight in rescuing the palladium, or image of Pallas, from the temple of Vesta when in flames, Hist. Nat. vii. 43. s. 45.

He who had proposed the opinion, (qui sententiam senatui prastitisset. Cic. in Pis. 32.), or who had been the principal speaker in favour of it, the consul, or whoever it was, (PRINCEPS vel AUCTOR Sententiæ, Ovid. Post. ii. 3. 31.) first passed, and those who agreed with him followed, Plin. Epist. ii. 11. Those who differed went to a different part of the house; and into whatever part most of the senators went, the Consul, said of it, "This seems to be the majority." (HÆC PARS MAJOR VIDETUR.) Then a decree of the senate was made according to their opinion, Plin. Ep. ii. 12. and the names of those who had been most keen for the decree, were usually prefixed to it, which were called AUCTORITATES perscriptæ, vel præscriptæ, Cic. Orat. iii. 2. because they staid to see the decree made out, (scribendo adfuerunt, i. e. Senatûs consulti conficiendi testes erant.) Senatûs consultum eâ perscriptione est, of that form, to that effect, Cic. Fam. v. 2.

Anciently the letter T was subscribed, if the Tribunes did not give their negative; for at first the Tribunes were not admitted into the senate, but sat before the senate-house on benches, till the decrees of the senate were brought to them for their approbation or rejection, Val. Max. ii. 7. This however, was the case only for a very short time; for A. U. 310, we find Canuleius, one of their number, speaking in the senate, Liv. iv. 1. and Dionysius says they were admitted soon after their institution, vii. 49.

When a decree of the senate was made, without any opinions being asked or given, the fathers were said Pedibus ferre sententiam; and the decree was called SENATUS CONSULTUM PER DISCESSIONEM, A. Gell. xiv. 7. Cic. Phil. iii. 9. Suet. Tib. 31. But when the opinions of the senators were asked, it was simply called SENATUS CONSULTUM, Cic. in Pis. 8. Although it was then also made per discessionem; and if the senate was unanimous, the discessio was said to be made sine ullâ varietate, Cic. pro Sext. 34. If the contrary, in magna varietate sententiarum, Ib.

In decreeing a supplication to any general, the opinions of the senators were always asked; hence Cicero blames Antony for omitting this in the case of Lepidus, Phil. iii. 9. Before the vote was put, (ante discessionem factam.) and while the debate was going on, the members used to take their seats near that person whose opinion they approved, Plin. Ep. viii. 14. and the opinion of him who was joined by the greatest number, was called SENTENTIA MAXIME FREQUENS, Ib. ii. 11.

Sometimes the Consul brought from home in writing the decree which he wished to be passed, and the senate readily agreed to it. Cic. Phil. i. 1.

When secrecy was necessary, the clerks and other attendants were not admitted; but what passed was written out by some of the senators, Cic. pro Syll. 14. A decree made in this manner was called TACITUM, Capitol in Gordian. 12. Some think the Senatores Pedarii were then likewise excluded, from Valer. Max. ii. 2.

Julius Cæsar, when consul, directed what was done in the senate (DIURNA ACTA) to be published: Suet. Jul. 20. which also seems to have been done formerly, Cic. pro Syll. 14. But this was prohibited by Augustus, Suet. Aug. 36. An account of their proceedings, however, was always made out; and under the succeeding Emperors we find some senator chosen for this purpose. (Actis vel commentariis Senatûs conficiendis.) Tacit. Ann. v. 4.

Public registers (ACTA, i. e. tabulæ vel commentarij) were also kept of what was done in the assemblies of the people, and by courts of justice; also of births and funerals, of marriages and divorces, &c. which served as a fund of information for historians; hence DIURNA URBIS ACTA, Tacit. Annal. xiii. 31. ACTA POPULI, Suet. Jul. 20. ACTA PUBLICA, Tacit. Ann. xii. 24. Suet. Tib. v. Plin. Ep. vii. 33. URBANA, Id. ix. 15. usually called by the simple name ACTA, Cic. Fam. xii. 8. Plin. vii. 54.

SENATUS CONSULTUM and DECRETUM are used promiscuously to denote what the senate decreed; Cic. Liv. et Sal. passim. So Consulta et Decreta patrum, Horat. But they were also distinguished as a genus and species: decretum being sometimes put for a part of the Sctum, as when a province, an honour, or a supplication was decreed to any one, Festus. Decretum is likewise applied to others besides the senate; as, Decreta Consulium, Augurum, Pontificum, Decurionum, Cæsaris, Principis, Judicis, &c. So likewise consulta, but more rarely; as Consulta Sapientum, the maxims or opinions, Cic. de leg. i. 24. Consulta Belli, determinations, Sil. iv. 35. Gracchi, Id. vii. 24.

In writing a decree of the senate, the time and place were put first, then the names of those who were present at the engrossing of it; after that the motion, with the name of the magistrate who proposed it; to all which was subjoined what the senate decreed. Thus, SENATUS CONSULTI AUCTORITAS, PRIDIE KAL. OCTOB. IN ÆDE APOLLINUS, SCRIBENDO ADPUERUNT, L. DOMITIUS, &c. QUOD M. MARCELLUS COS. VERBA FECIT DE PROVINCIIS CONSULARIBUS, DE EA RE ITA CENSUIT, V. CENSUERUNT, UTI, &c. Cic. Ep. Fam. viii. 8.

Hence, we read, DE EA RE SENATUS CONSULTUS ITA CENSUIT, DECREVIT; also PLACERE SENATUI; SENATUM VELLE ET ÆQUUM CENSERE; SENATUM EXISTIMARE, ARBITRARI, ET JUDICARE; VIDERI SENATUI, Cic. Liv. Sall. &c. passim.

If the tribunes interposed, it was thus marked at the end; HUIUS SENATUS CONSULTO INTERCESSIT C. COELIUS, C. PANA, TRIB. PLEB. Cic. ibid. Sometimes the tribunes did not actually interpose, but required some time to consider of it, and thus the matter was delayed, Cic. pro Sext. 34.

When the senate ordered any thing to be done, these words were commonly added, PRIMO QUOQUE TEMPORE, as soon as possible. When they praised the actions of any persons they decreed, EOS RECTE ATQUE ORDINE VIDERI FECISSE, Liv. passim. If the contrary, EOS CONTRA REPUBLICAM FECISSE VIDERI, Id.

Orders were given to the consuls, (Negotium datum est Consulibus), not in an absolute manner, but with some exception; SI VIDERETUR, SI E REPUBLICA ESSE DUCERENT, Liv. QUOD COMMODO REIPUBLICÆ FIERI POSSET, Cæs. Ut CONSULES ALTER, AMBOVE, SI EIS VIDEATUR AD BELLUM PROFICISERENTUR, Cic. When the consuls obeyed the orders of the senate, they were said ESSE VEL FORE IN PATRUM POTESTATE; and the senators when they complied with the desires of the people, ESSE IN POPULI POTESTATE, Liv. ii. 56. &c.

When the senate asked any thing from the tribunes, the form was SENATUS CENSUIT, UT CUM TRIBUNIS AGERETUR, Liv. xxvi. 33. xxx. 41.

The decrees of the senate, when written out, were laid up in the treasury, (in Ærarium condebantur), where also the laws and other writings pertaining to the republic were kept. Liv. iii. 9. Anciently they were kept by the Ædiles in the temple of Ceres, Id. iii. 55. The place where the public records were kept was called TABULARIUM. The decrees of the senate concerning the honours conferred on Cæsar were inscribed in golden letters on columns of silver, Dio. xlv. 7. Several decrees of the senate still exist, engraven on tables of brass; particularly that recorded; Liv. xxxix. 19.

The decrees of the senate, when not carried to the treasury, were reckoned invalid, Suet. Aug. 94. Hence it was ordained, under Tiberius, that the decrees of the senate, especially concerning the capital punishment of any one, should not be carried to the treasury before the tenth day, Tacit. Ann. iii. 51. that the Emperor, if absent from the city, might have an opportunity of considering them, and, if he thought proper, of mitigating them, Dio. lvii. 20. Suet. Tib. 75.

Before the year of the city 306 the decrees of the senate were suppressed or altered at the pleasure of the consuls, Liv. iii. 55. Cicero accuses Antony of forging decrees, Phil. v. 4.

Decrees of the senate were rarely reversed. While a question was under debate, (re integrâ), every one was at freedom to express his dissent (contradicere vel dissentire); but when it was once determined (re peracta), it was looked upon as the common concern of each member to support the opinion of the majority (quod pluribus placuisset, cunctis tuendum), Plin. Ep. vi. 13.

After every thing was finished, the magistrate presiding dismissed the senate by a set form; NON AMPLIUS VOS MORAMUR, P. C. OR NEMO VOS TENET: NIHIL VOS MORAMUR: CONSUL, CITATIS NOMINIBUS, ET PERACTA DIRCESSIONE, MITTIT SENATUM, Plin. Ep. ix. 13.

7. The Power of the Senate at different Periods.

THE power of the senate was different at different times. Under the regal government, the senate deliberated upon such public affairs as the king proposed to them; and the kings were said to act according to their counsel, (ex consilio Patrum, Liv. i. 9.) as the consuls did afterwards according to their decree, (ex Scto.) Liv. ii. 2. &c.

Tarquin the Proud dropped the custom handed down from his predecessors, of consulting the senate about every thing; banished or put to death the chief men of that order, and chose no others in their room, Liv. i. 49. But this king was expelled from the throne for his tyranny, and the regal government abolished, A. U. 243.

After this the power of the senate was raised to the highest. Every thing was done by its authority. The magistrates were in a manner only its ministers. (quasi ministri gravissimi concilii, Cic. pro Sextio, 65.) No law could be passed, nor assembly of the people held, without their consent; nisi Patribus auctoribus, h. e. jubentibus v. permittentibus, Liv. vi. 42. But when the Patricians began to abuse their power, and to exercise cruelties on the Plebeians, especially after the death of Tarquin, A. U. 257. the multitude took arms in their own defence, made a secession from the city, seized on Mons Sacer, and created tribunes for themselves, who attacked the authority of the senate, and in process of time greatly diminished it by various means; first, by the introduction of the Comitia Tributa, and the exclusion of the patricians from them, Liv. ii. 60. Then, by a law, made by Lætorius the Tribune, that the Plebeian magistrates should be created at the Comitia Tributa, Liv. ii. 56 & 57. Dionys. ix. 49. Afterwards, by a law passed at the Comitia Centuriata, by the consuls Horatius and Valerius, that the laws passed at the Comitia Tributa, (Plebiscita), should also bind the Patricians, Liv. iii. 55. And lastly, by the law of Publilius the Dictator, A. U. 414. Liv. viii. 12. and of Mœnius the Tribune, A. U. 467. Cic. Brut. 14. that before the people gave their votes, the fathers should authorize whatever the people should determine at the Comitia Centuriata; (ut fierent auctores ejus rei, quam populus jussurus esset, v. in incertum eventum comitorum, Liv.) Whereas formerly, whatever the people ordered was not ratified, unless the senators confirmed it (nisi patres auctores fierent, Liv. i. 17. 22. iv. 3. 49. Cic. Planc. 3.) But the power of the senate was most of all abridged by the right of the tribunes to render the decrees of the senate of no effect by their negative, (intercedendo.) Still, however, the authority of the senate continued to be very great; for as power and majesty properly belonged to the people, so did authority, splendour, and dignity to the senate. (Potestas in populo, auctoritas in senatu, Cic. Legg. iii. 12. Locus, auctoritas, domi splendor; apud exterarum nationum nomen et gratia, Id. pro Cluent. 56.)

The senatorian order is called by Cicero, Ordo amplissimus et sanctissimus; summum Populi Romani, populorumque et gentium omnium ac Regum consilium; pro Dom. 28. And the senate-house, Templum sanctitalis, amplitudinis, mentis, consilii publici, caput urbis, ara sociorum, portus omnium gentium, &c. pro Milone, 33. Hence senators in foreign countries were treated with the highest respect, Cic. in Verr. iv. 11. And as senators were not allowed to leave Italy without permission, (sine commeatu.) Cic. Attic. viii. 15. Suet. Claud. 16 & 23. Ner. 25. unless to Sicily and Gallia Narbonensis, Dio. liii. 42. when they had occasion to travel abroad, they usually obtained the privilege of a free legation, as it was usually called sine mandatis, sine ullo reipublica munere; ut hereditates aut syngraphas suas persequerentur,) Cic. de Leg. iii. 8. Ep. Fam. xi. 1. Att. xv. 12. Suet. Tib. 31. which gave them a right to be treated every where with the honours of an ambassador. In the provinces they had lictors to attend them, Cic. Ep. Fam. xii. 21. And if they had any law-suit there, they might require that it should be remitted to Rome, ib. xiii. 26. The advantages of honour and respect were the only compensation which senators received for their attention to public affairs. Cic. Cluent. 55.

Although the supreme power at Rome belonged to the people, yet they seldom enacted any thing without the authority of the senate. In all weighty affairs, the method usually observed was, that the senate should first deliberate and decree, and then the people order. SENATUS CENSUIT V. DECREVIT, POPULUS JUSSIT, Liv. i. 17. iv. 49. x. 12. 45. xxxvii. 55. &c. But there were many things of great importance, which the senate always determined itself, unless when they were brought before the people by the intercessions of the tribunes. This right the senate seems to have had, not from any express law, but by the custom of their ancestors, Cic. de Orat. i. 52.

1. The senate assumed to themselves the guardianship of the public religion; so that no new god could be introduced, nor altar erected, nor the Sybilline books consulted, without their order, Liv. ix. 45. Cic. de Div. 48. 54.

2. The senate had the direction of the treasury, and distributed the public money at pleasure, Cic. in Vatin. 15. Liv. xxxvii. 54. They appointed stipends to their generals and officers, and provisions and clothing to their armies, Polyb. vi. 11.

3. They settled the provinces, which were annually assigned to the consuls and prætors, and when it seemed fit they prolonged their command, Cic. pro Dom. 9.

4. They nominated out of their own body all ambassadors sent from Rome, Liv. ii. 15. xxx. 26. xlii. 19. et alibi passim; and gave to foreign ambassadors what answers they thought proper, Cic. in Vatin. 15. Dom. 9. Liv. vi. 26. vii. 20. xxx. 17.

5. They decreed all public thanksgivings for victories obtained; and conferred the honour of an ovation or triumph, with the title of IMPERATOR, on their victorious generals, Cic. Phil. xiv. 4 & 5. Liv. 23. Polyb. vi. 11.

6. They could decree the title of king to any prince whom they pleased, and declare any one an enemy by a vote, Cas. Liv. et Cic. passim.

7. They inquired into public crimes or treasons, either in Rome or the other parts of Italy, Liv. xxx. 26. and heard and determined all disputes among the allied and dependent cities, Cic. Off. i. 10. Polyb. vi. 11.

8. They exercised a power, not only of interpreting the laws, but of absolving men from the obligation of them, and even of abrogating them, Cic. pro Dom. 16. 27. pro lege Manil. 21. de Legg. ii. 6. Ascon. in Cic. pro Cornel. Plin. Epist. iv. 9.

9. They could postpone the assemblies of the people, Cic. pro Mur. 25. Att. iv. 16. and prescribe a change of habit to the city, in cases of any imminent danger or calamity, Cic. pro Sext. 12. But the power of the senate was chiefly conspicuous in civil dissensions or dangerous tumults within the city, in which that solemn decree used to be passed, "That the consuls should take care that the republic should receive no harm;" Ut consulus darent operam, ne quid detrimenti respublica caperet. By which decree an absolute power was granted to the consuls, to punish and put to death whom they pleased, without a trial; to raise forces, and carry on war without the order of the people, Sallust de bello Cat. 29.

This decree was called ULTIMUM or EXTREMUM, Cas. de Bell. Civ. i. 4. and Forma SCti ultima necessitatis, Liv. iii. 4. By it the republic was said to be intrusted to the consuls, permitti v. commendari consulibus; or permitti consulibus ut rempublicam defenderent, Cic. Sometimes the other magistrates were added, Cas. ibid. Liv. vi. 19. Sometimes only one of the consuls is named, as in the commotion raised by C. Gracchus, Ut L. Opimius Consul rideret, &c. because his colleague Q. Fabius Maximus was absent, Cic. in Cat. i. 2. So Liv. iii. 4.

Although the decrees of the senate had not properly the force of laws, and took place chiefly in those matters which were not provided for by the laws; yet they were understood always to have a binding force, and were therefore obeyed by all orders. The consuls themselves were obliged to submit to them, Liv. iv. 26. xlii. 21. They could only be annulled or cancelled, (induci, i. e. deleri, poterant.) by the senate itself, Cic. pro Dom. 4. Attic. i. 17. Their force however in certain things was but temporary; and the magistrates sometimes alleged, that they were binding but for one year, Dionys. ix. 37. In the last age of the republic, the authority of the senate was little regarded by the leading men and their creatures, Cic. pro Sext. 12. who, by means of bribery, obtained from a corrupted populace what they desired, in spite of the senate, Appian. de bell. civ. ii. 433. &c. Thus Cæsar, by the Vatinian law, obtained the province of Cisalpine Gaul and Illyricum for five years from the people, and soon after Gallia Comata or Ulterior, from the senate; the fathers being afraid, lest, if they refused it, the people should grant him that too, Suet. Jul. 22. Plutarch. in vita Cæs. But this corruption and contempt of the senate at last terminated in the total subversion of public liberty.

Cicero imagined, that, in his consulship, he had established the authority of the senate on a solid basis, by uniting it with the equestrian order, Cic. Cat. iv. 10. Pis. 3. thus constituting what he calls OPTIMA RESPUBLICA; quæ sit in potestatem optimorum, i. e. nobilium et ditissimorum, de Legg. iii. 17. (ἀριστοκρατία;) and ascribes the ruin of the republic to that coalition not being preserved, Att. i. 14. 16. But it was soon after broken (ordinum concordia disjuncta est, Cic. Att. i. 13.) by the refusal of the senate to release the equites from a disadvantageous contract concerning the Asiatic revenues, Cic. Att. i. 17. which gave Cæsar, when consul, an opportunity of obliging that order, by granting their request, as he had formerly obliged the populace by an agrarian law, Suet. Cæs. 20. Cic. Att. i. 15. and thus artfully employing the wealth of the republic to enslave it, Dio. xxxviii. 1 & 7. See LEGES JULIÆ. The senate and equites had been formerly united, Sallust. Jug. 42. and were afterwards disjoined from similar motives. See LEGES SEMPRONIÆ, de judiciis.

Augustus, when he became master of the empire, retained the forms of the ancient republic, and the same names of the magistrates: but left nothing of the ancient virtue and liberty (prisci et integri moris,) Tacit. Ann. i. 3. While he pretended always to act by the authority of the senate, he artfully drew every thing to himself.

Tiberius apparently increased the power of the senate, by transferring the right of creating magistrates, and enacting laws, from the comitia to the senate, Tacit. Ann. i. 15. In consequence of which, the decrees of the senate obtained the force of laws, and were more frequently published. But this was only a shadow of power; for the senators, in giving their opinions, depended entirely on the will of the prince; and it was necessary that their decrees should be confirmed by him. An oration of the Emperor was usually prefixed to them, which was not always delivered by himself, but was usually read by one of the quæstors, who were called CANDIDATI, Suet. Tit. 6. Aug. 65. Hence what was appointed by the decrees of the senate, was said to be oratione principis cautum; and these orations are sometimes put for the decrees of the senate. To such a height did the flattery of the senators proceed, that they used to receive these speeches with loud acclamations, Plin. Paneg. 75. and never failed to assent to them; which they commonly did by crying out OMNES, OMNES, Vopisc. in Tacit. 7.

The messages of the Emperors to the senate were called EPISTOLÆ, or LIBELLI; because they were folded in the form of a letter or little book. I. Cæsar is said to have first introduced these libella, Plutarch. in Vita Cæs. Suet. Jul. 56. which afterwards came to be used almost on every occasion, Suet. Jul. 81. Aug. 53 & 84. Tacit. Annal. iv. 39.

But the custom of referring every thing to the senate (Suet. Tib. 30.) was only observed till the Romans became habituated to slavery.

After this, the Emperors gradually began to order what they thought proper, without consulting the senate; to abrogate old laws and introduce new ones; and, in short, to determine every thing according to their own pleasure; by their answer to the applications or petitions presented to them, (per RESCRIPTA ad libellos;) by their mandates and laws (per EDICTA et CONSTITUTIONES,)

&c. Vespasian appears to have been the first who made use of these rescripts and edicts. They became more frequent under Hadrian : from which time, the decrees of the senate, concerning private right, began to be more rare ; and at length under Caracalla were entirely discontinued.

The constitutions of the Emperors about punishing or rewarding individuals, which were not to serve as precedents, were called PRIVILEGIA, (quasi privæ leges.) A. Gell. x. 20. This word anciently used to be taken in a bad sense ; for a private law about inflicting an extraordinary punishment on a certain person without a trial, Cic. de Legg. iii. 19. as the law of Clodius against Cicero, Cic. pro Dom. 17. which Cicero says was forbidden by the sacred laws, and those of the twelve tables, Leges privatis hominibus irrogari : id est enim privilegium, Ibid. et pro Sext. 30.

The rights or advantages (beneficia) granted to a certain condition or class of men, used also to be called PRIVILEGIA ; Plin. x. 56. 57. 110. as the privileges of soldiers, parents, pupils, creditors, &c.

The various laws and decrees of the senate, whereby supreme power was conferred on Augustus, and which used to be repeated to succeeding Emperors upon their accession to the empire, (Tum senatus omnia.) PRINCIPIBUS SOLITA, Vespasiano decrevit, Tacit. Hist. iv. 3.) when taken together are called the Royal Law ; (LEX REGIA, vel LEX IMPERII, et AUGUSTUM PRIVILEGIUM :) probably in allusion to the law, by which supreme power was granted to Romulus, Liv. xxxiv. 5.

THE EQUITES.

THE Equites at first did not form a distinct order in the state. When Romulus divided the people into three tribes, he chose from each tribe 100 young men, the most distinguished for their rank, their wealth, and other accomplishments, who should serve on horseback, and whose assistance he might use for guarding his person. These 300 horsemen were called CELERES, (ταχῆς ἐπὶ τα ἔργα ad opera veloces, Dionys. ii. 13. vel α κελης, eques desultorius ; vel a CELERE, eorum præfecto, Festus ;) and divided into three centuries, which were distinguished by the same names with the three tribes ; namely, RAMNENSES, TATIENSES, and LUCERES.

The number of the Equites was afterwards increased, first by Tullus Hostilius, who chose 300 from the Albans, decem (turmas : TURMA, quasi terma dicta est, quod ter denis equitibus constaret, Varro et Festus) Liv. i. 30. then by Tarquinius Priscus, who doubled their number, (Numero alterum tantum adjecit ;) retaining the number and names of the centuries ; only those who were added, were called Ramnenses, Tatienses, Luceres, posteriores. But as Livy says there were now 1800 in the three centuries, Tarquin seems to have more than doubled them, Liv. i. 36.

Servius Tullius made eighteen centuries of Equites ; he chose twelve new centuries from the chief men of the state, and made six others out of the three instituted by Romulus. Ten thousand pounds of brass were given to each of them to purchase horses; and a tax was laid on windows, who were exempt from other contributions, for maintaining their horses, Liv. i. 43. Hence the origin of the Equestrian order, which was of the greatest utility in the state, as an intermediate bond between the Patricians and Plebeians.

At what particular time the Equites first began to be reckoned a distinct order, is uncertain. It seems to have been before the expulsion of the kings, Liv. ii. 1. After this all those who served on horseback were not properly called EQUITES or knights, but such only as were chosen into the equestrian order, usually by the censor, and presented by him with a horse at the public expense, and with a gold ring.

The Equites were chosen promiscuously from the Patricians and Plebeians. Those descended from ancient families were called ILLUSTRES, SPECIOSI, and SPLENDIDI. They were not limited to any fixed number. The age requisite was about eighteen years, Dio. lii. 20. and the fortune (census), at least towards the end of the republic, and under the Emperors, was 400 Sestertia, that is, about 3229*l.* sterling, Horat. Ep. i. 1. 57. Plin. Ep. i. 19. According to some, every Roman citizen, whose entire fortune amounted to that sum, was every lustrum enrolled, of course, in the list of Equites. But that was not always the case, Liv. v. 7. A certain fortune seems to have been always requisite, Liv. iii. 27.

The badges of Equites were, 1. A horse given them by the public; hence called LEGITIMUS, Ovid. Fast. iii. 130. 2. A golden ring, whence ANNULO AUREO DONARI, for inter equites legi. 3. Augustus Clavus, or Tunica angusticlavia; 4. A separate place at the public spectacles, according to the law made by L. Roscius Otho, a tribune of the people, A. U. 686, Dio. xxxvi. 25. Juvenal. iii. 159. xiv. 324. That the Equites should sit in 14 rows (in XIV. gradibus), next to the Orchestra, where the senators sat; whence SEDERE IN QUATUORDECIM, or IN EQUESTRIBUS, or SPECTARE IN EQUITES, for Equitem esse, Suet.

The office (MUNUS) of the Equites at first was only to serve in the army; but afterwards also to act as judges or jurymen, (ut judicarent), and to farm the public revenues, (VECTIGALIA CONDOCERE.) Judges were chosen from the senate till the year of the city 631, at which time, on account of the corruption of that order, the right of judging was transferred from them to the equites, by the Sempronian law, made by C. Gracchus. It was again restored to the senate by Sylla; but afterwards shared between the two orders.

The Equites who farmed the revenues were divided into certain societies, and he who presided in such a society, was called MAGISTER SOCIETATIS, Cic. Fam. xlii. 9. These farmers (PUBLICANI) were held in such respect at Rome, that Cicero calls them Homines amplissimi, honestissimi, et ornatissimi; pro lege Manil. 7.

Flos equitum Romanorum, ornamentum civitatis, firmamentum rei-publicæ, pro Plancio, 9. But this was far from being the case in the provinces, where publicans were held in detestation, Ascon. in Cic. Verr. ii. 3. especially their servants and assistants.

A great degree of splendour was added to the Equestrian order by a procession, (TRANSVECTIONE,) which they made through the city every year on the 15th day of July, (Idibus Quinctilibus,) Liv. ix. 46. from the temple of Honour, or of Mars, without the city, to the Capitol, riding on horseback, with wreaths of olive on their heads, drest in their Togæ palmata, or trabeæ, of a scarlet colour, and bearing in their hands the military ornaments, which they had received from their general, as a reward for their valour, Dionys. vi. 13. Plin. xv. 4. s. 5. At this time it was not allowable to cite them before a court of justice; such at least was the case under Augustus, Suet. Aug. 38.

Every fifth year, when this procession was made, the Equites rode up to the Censor seated in his curule chair, before the Capitol, and dismounting, led along (TRADUCEBANT) their horses in their hands before him, Cic. Cluent. 48. Quinctil. v. 11. 13. and in this manner they were reviewed, (RECOGNOSCEBANTUR.)

If any Eques was corrupt in his morals, or had diminished his fortune, or even had not taken proper care of his horse, Gell. iv. 20. the Censor ordered him to sell his horse, Liv. xxix. 37. and thus he was reckoned to be moved from the equestrian order; hence ADIMERE EQUUM, to degrade an Eques; but those whom the Censor approved, were ordered to lead along (traducere) their horses, Ovid. Trist. ii. 89.

At this time also the Censor read over a list of the Equites, and such as were less culpable (qui minore culpâ tenerentur) were degraded, (ORDINE EQUESTRI MOTI SUNT,) only by passing over their names in the recital, Suet. Cal. 16. We find it mentioned as a reward, that a person should not be obliged to serve in the army, nor to maintain a public horse, (ne invitus militaret, neve Censor ei quum publicum assignaret;) but this exemption could be granted only by the people, Liv. xxxix. 19.

The Eques whose name was first marked in the Censor's books, was called EQUESTRIS ORDINIS PRINCEPS, Plin. Ep. i. 14. or PRINCEPS JUVENTUTIS; not that in reality the Equites were all young men, for many grew old in that order, as Mæcenas and Atticus; and we find the two Censors, Livius and Nero, were Equites, Liv. xxix. 37. but because they had been generally so at their first institutions; and among the Romans, men were called Juvenes, till near fifty. Hence we find Julius Cæsar called Adolescentulus, when he stood candidate for being high-priest, although he was then thirty-six years old, Sall. Cat. 49. And Cicero calls himself Adolescens when he was Consul, Phil. ii. 5. Under the Emperors, the heirs of the empire were called Principes Juventutis, Suet. Calig. 15. vel. juvenum, Ovid. Pont. ii. 5. 41. We find this name also applied to the whole Equestrian order, Liv. xlii. 61.

THE PLEBEIAN OR POPULAR ORDER.

ALL the other Roman citizens, besides the Patricians and Equites, were called PLEBS or POPULUS. Populus sometimes comprehends the whole nation; as, CLEMENTIA ROMANI POPULI; or all the people except the senate; as, SENATUS POPULUSQUE ROMANUS. In which last sense plebs is often used; as when we say, that the Consuls were created from the Plebeians, that is, from those who were not Patricians. But plebs is usually put for the lowest common people; hence, ad populum plebemque referre, Cic. Fam. viii. 8. So Gell. x. 10.* Thus Horace, Plebs eris, i. e. unus e plebe, a Ple-

* "In every state the constitution of which has been grounded on a certain number of houses, a commonalty has grown up or subsisted by the side of the burghers or the freeholders. The members of this commonalty were not only recognized as freemen, but also as fellow-countrymen: they received like succour against foreigners, were under the protection of the laws, might acquire real property, had their votes for making by-laws and their courts, were bound to serve in time of war, but were excluded from the government, which was confined to the houses. The Roman commonalty, the plebs, arose like others out of a medley of elements. The genuine, noble, great plebs takes its rise from the formation of a domain out of the towns won from the Latins. In the accounts of the conquests made by the first kings it is stated that many of the conquered places were converted into colonies, that the others were destroyed and the inhabitants carried to Rome; where they, along with the citizens of the colonies, received the Roman franchise. Their franchise resembled that which in later times was citizenship without a vote; for a vote could not be given except in the curies: but their condition was worse than that of those who afterwards stood on this footing: for they could not intermarry with the Patricians, and all their relations with them were uniformly to their prejudice. Nevertheless these new citizens, scantily as they were endowed with rights, were not made up then, any more than in later times, merely of the lower orders: the nobles of the conquered and ceded towns were among them; as subsequently we find that the Mamilii, the Papii, the Cilnii, the Cæcine, were all Plebeians. Now, that the Plebeian commonalty arose out of the freemen thus incorporated with the state, is sufficiently proved by the tradition that Ancus assigned habitations on the Aventine to the Latins from the towns which had become subject to Rome: for this hill was afterward the site of what was peculiarly the Plebeian city. It is a gross error, which leads us to frame the most unjust judgments, to suppose that the Plebeians sprang out of the clients of the Patricians, and consequently must have been insurgent hereditary bondmen. That the clients were total strangers to the Plebeian commonalty, and did not coalesce with it until late, when the bond of servitude had been loosened, partly from the houses of their patrons dying off or sinking into decay, partly from the advance of the whole nation toward freedom, may be proved. The existence of the plebs, as acknowledgedly a free and a very numerous portion of the nation, may be traced back to the reign of Ancus: but before the time of Servius it was only an aggregate of unconnected parts, not a united regular whole. From this time forward the Roman nation consisted of the two estates, the populus, or body of burghers, and the plebs, or commonalty: both, according to the views of the legislator, equally free, but differing in degree of honour: the Patricians, as elder brothers, and moreover as each of them was the member of a far less numerous body, had the advantage of the Plebeians, as the greater houses had of the lesser. We do not aim at prying into the mysteries of the ancient theologies; thus much however is evident: that the Romans conceived every part of nature and every vital and spiritual power to be divided into two sexes and two persons; they had tellus and tellumo, anima and animus; and in like manner they probably also looked upon the nation as consisting of populus and plebs: hence the names are masculine and feminine. The use of the former word for the sovereign assembly of the centuries belongs to later; for the whole nation, to yet more recent times: and along with the second meaning the original one long continued to prevail. It is related under the year 341 that the plebs, with the beian, not an Eques, Ep. i. 1. 59. who also uses plebs for the whole people, Od. iii. 14. 1.

The common people, who lived in the country, and cultivated the ground, were called PLEBS RUSTICA, Liv. xxxv. 1. Anciently the senators also did the same, Cic. de Sen. 16. but not so in after times, Liv. iii. 26. The common people who lived in the city, merchants, mechanics, &c. Cic. Off. i. 42. were called PLEBS URBANA, Sall. Cat. 37. Both are joined, lb. Jug. 73.

THE PLEBS RUSTICA was the most respectable, (optima et modestissima, Cic. Rull. ii. 31. laudatissima, Plin. xviii. 3.) The PLEBS URBANA was composed of the poorer citizens, many of whom followed no trade, but were supported by the public and private largesses, (eos publicum malum alebat; Sallust. Cat. 37.) In the latter ages of the republic an immense quantity of corn was annually distributed among them at the public expense, five bushels monthly to each man, Sallust. fragm. edit. Cortii. p. 974. Their principal business was to attend on the tribunes and popular magistrates in their assemblies; hence they were called TURBA FORENSIS, Liv. ix. 46. and from their venality and corruption, OPERÆ CONDUCTÆ vel mercenariæ, in allusion to mercenary workmen, Cic. Sext. 17 & 27. Q. fratr. ii. 1. Att. i. 13. OPERÆ CONDUCTORUM, Sext. 50. MULTITUDO CONDUCTA, Phil. i. 9. CONCIONES CONDUCTÆ, Sext. 49 and 53. CONCIONALIS HIRUDO ararii, misera ac jejuna PLEBECULA, Att. i. 16. FAX ET SORDES URBIS, lb. 13. URBANA et perdita PLEBS, Id. vii. 3.

Cicero often opposes the populace, (populus, plebs, multitudo, tenuiores, &c.) to the principal nobility, (principes electi, Optimates et Optimalium principes, honesti, boni, locupletes, &c.) Cic. Sext. 48. 68. &c.

There were leading men among the populace, (duces multitudinum), kept in pay by the seditious magistrates, who used for hire to stimulate them to the most daring outrages, Sallust. Cat. 50. Cic. Sext. 37. 46. The turbulence of the common people of Rome, the natural effect of idleness and unbounded licentiousness, is justly reckoned among the chief causes of the ruin of the republic. Trade and manufactures being considered as servile employments, Sallust. Cat. 4. Dionys. ix. 25. they had no encouragement to industry; and the numerous spectacles which were exhibited, particularly the shows of concourse of the populus, committed the charge of investigating the murder of Postumius to the cohsuls: in this place no interpretation can attach that meaning to the word into which it has been attempted, though very mistakenly, to strain it in the saying of Appius Claudius, that the tribunes were magistrates of the plebs, not of the populus; where it is contended that populus means the people in the centuries." Niebuhr.—Ed.

Notwithstanding the authority of Niebuhr, it is impossible to receive his account of the origin of the Roman plebs as perfectly correct. Whatever part the conquered people may have had in its increase, there can be little doubt that the gradual amelioration of the condition of the clients, on successive revolts, begot this illustrious body; and that such was not only the case at Rome, but also in every other city of antiquity, in which an analogous body appears as a part of the recognized division of the political estate.—Ed.

gladiators, served to increase their natural ferocity. Hence they were always ready to join in any conspiracy against the state, Salust. Cat. 37.

OTHER DIVISIONS OF THE ROMAN PEOPLE.

I. PATRONS AND CLIENTS, NOBILES, NOVI, AND IGNOBILES ; OPTIMATES AND POPULARES.

THAT the Patricians and Plebeians might be connected together by the strictest bonds, Romulus ordained that every Plebeian should choose from the Patricians any one he pleased, as his PATRON or protector, whose CLIENT he was called, (quod eum colebat.)*

In after times, even cities and whole nations were under the protection of illustrious Roman families ; as the Sicilians under the patronage of the Marcelli, Cic. in Cæcil. 4. Verr. iii. 18. Cyprus and Cappadocia under that of Cato, Cic. Fam. xv. 4. the Allobroges under the patronage of the Fabii, Salust. Cat. 41. The Bononienses, of the Antonii, Suet. Aug. 17. Lacedæmon, of the Claudii, Id. Tib. 6.

* "How the Clientship arose does not admit of a historical exposition, any more than the origin of Rome. The Romans, and the citizens of such towns as stood in a federal relation to Rome, were mutually entitled to exchange their home for the other city, perhaps under the obligation, at all events with the right, of attaching themselves to a patron. In Greece this connexion rested only on reciprocal interest; and might be given up and altered at will. At Rome it was hereditary like vassalage. That it commonly descended from one generation to another, Dionysius is aware; only he looks on this as a voluntary prolongation. Most probably he is mistaken. Those clients, who neither gained their livelihood by trade nor had already acquired any property of their own, received grants from their Patrons of building-ground on their estates, together with two jugers of arable land; not as property, but as a precarious tenement, which the owner might resume if he felt himself injured. But all, however different in rank and consequence, were entitled to paternal protection from their Patron: he was bound to relieve their distress, to appear for them in court, to expound the law to them, civil and pontifical. On the other hand, the Clients were to be heartily dutiful and obedient to their Patron, to promote his honour, to pay his mulcts and fines, to aid him jointly with the members of his house in bearing burthens for the commonwealth and defraying the charges of public offices, to contribute toward portioning his daughters, and to ransom him or any of his family who might fall into the hands of an enemy. There was a mutual bond between the Patron and the Client, that neither should bring an accusation or bear witness against the other, or give sentence in court against him, or in favour of his enemies. The duties of the Patron toward the Client were more sacred than those toward his own kin. Whoever trespassed against his Clients, was guilty of treason, and devoted to the infernal gods; that is to say, outlawed, so that any might slay him with impunity. It is probable that the pontiff, as the viceregent of heaven, to which the cry of the injured party was raised, devoted the head of the offender. To bring a charge before a civil tribunal was impossible: its interference would have perverted and destroyed the whole relation. Among the privileges which the Romans are said to have claimed to the exclusion of the other Patricians, according to a narrative which assuredly represents their relation to the Luceres, one is that of receiving strangers as Clients. Still less then would they allow this right to the Plebeians; yet when distinguished men rose up in the latter order, who could afford protection and redress, and grant plots of ground at will, Clients attached themselves to these as well as to the Patricians. Until the Plebeians obtained a share in the consulship and in the usufruct of the domains, free foreigners, with few exceptions, must needs have applied to the first order; in which however there may have been many with scarcely a client: and so long Patres and Patrician were coextensive terms." Niebuhr.—Ed.

Thus the people of Puteoli chose Cassius and the Bruti for their patrons, Cic. Phil. ii. 41. Capua chose Cicero, Cic. Pis. 11. Fam. xvi. 11. &c. This, however, seems to have taken place also at an early period, Liv. ix. 20. &c.

Those whose ancestors or themselves had borne any Curule magistracy, that is, had been Consul, Prætor, Censor, or Curule Ædile, were called NOBILES, and had the right of making images of themselves, (JUS IMAGINUM,) which were kept with great care by their posterity, and carried before them at funerals, Plin. xxxv. 2.

These images were nothing else but the busts or the effigies of persons down to the shoulders, made of wax and painted; which they used to place in the courts of their houses, (atria), enclosed in wooden cases, and which they seem not to have brought out except on solemn occasions, Polyb. vi. 51. There were titles or inscriptions written below them, pointing out the honours they had enjoyed, and the exploits they had performed, (Juvenal. Sat. viii. 69. Plin. xxxv. 2.) Hence imagines is often put for nobilitas, Sallust. Jug. 85. Liv. iii. 58. and cera for imagines, Ovid. Amor. i. 8. 65. Anciently this right of images was peculiar to the Patricians; but afterwards the Plebeians also acquired it, when admitted to curule offices.

Those who were the first of their family that had raised themselves to any curule office, were called homines NOVI, new men or upstarts. Hence Cicero calls himself Homo per se cognitus, in Cat. i. 11.

Those who had no images of their own or of their ancestors, were called IGNOBILES.

Those who favoured the interests of the senate, were called OPTIMATES, Liv. ii. 39. and sometimes Proceres or Principes. Those who studied to gain the favour of the multitude, were called POPULARES, of whatever order they were, Cic. pro Sext. 45. This was a division of factions, and not of rank and dignity, Dionys. ix. i. The contests betwixt these two parties excited the greatest commotions in the state, which finally terminated in the extinction of liberty.

II. GENTES and FAMILIÆ; NAMES of the Romans; INGENUI and LIBERTINI, &c.

THE Romans were divided into various clans, (GENTES,) and each gens into several families, (in FAMILIAS v. Stirpes.) Thus in the Gens Cornelia were the families of the Scipiones, Lentuli, Cethegi, Dolabellæ, Cinna, Syllæ, &c. Those of the same gens were called GENTILES, and those of the same family, AGNATI, Cic. Top. c. 6. Festus in Voce GENTILIS. But relations by the father's side were also called Agnati, to distinguish them from Cognati, relations only by the mother's side. An Agnatus might also be called Cognatus, but not the contrary. Thus, Patruus, the father's brother, was both an agnatus and cognatus; but avunculus, the mother's brother, was only a cognatus, Digest.

Anciently patricians were only said to have a gens, Liv. x. 8. Hence some Patricians were said to be majorum gentium, and others minorum gentium, Cic. Fam. ix. 21. But when the Plebeians obtained the right of intermarriage with the Patricians, and access to the honours of the state, they likewise received the rights of gentes, (jura gentium, vel gentilia;) which rights were then said to be confounded by these innovations, Liv. iv. 1. &c. Hence, however, some gentes were patrician, and others plebeian; and sometimes in the same gens there were some families of patrician rank and others of plebeian, Suet. Tib. 1. Hence also sine gente, for libertinus et non generosus ignobly born, Horat. Sat. ii. 5. 15.

To mark the different gentes and familia, and to distinguish the individuals of the same family, the Romans, at least the more noble of them, had commonly three names, the Prænomen, Nomen, and Cognomen, Juvenal. v. 126. Quintil. 3. 27.

The PRÆNOMEN was put first, and marked the individual. It was commonly written with one letter; as A. for Aulus; C. Caius; D. Decimus; K. Kaso; L. Lucius; M. Marcus; M. Manius; N. Numerius; P. Publius; Q. Quintus; T. Titus; sometimes with two letters; as, Ap. Appius; Cn. Cneius; Sp. Spurius; Ti. Tiberius, and sometimes with three; as, Mam. Mamercus; Ser. Servius; Sex. Sextus.

The NOMEN was put after the Prænomen, and marked the gens, and commonly ended in ius; as, Cornelius, Fabius, Tollius, Julius, Octavius, &c.

The COGNOMEN was put last, and marked the familia; as, Cicero, Cesar, &c. Thus in Publius Cornelius Scipio, Publius is the Prænomen; Cornelius, the Nomen; and Scipio, the Cognomen.

Some gentes seem to have had no surname; as, the Marian: thus, C. Marius, Q. Sertorius, L. Mummius, Plutarch, in Mario. Gens and familia seem sometimes to be put the one for the other: thus, Fabia gens, v. familia, Liv. ii. 49.

Sometimes there was also a fourth name, called the AGNOMEN, or Cognomen, added for some illustrious action or remarkable event. Thus Scipio was named Africanus, from the conquest of Carthage and Africa. On a similar account, his brother Lucius Cornelius Scipio was named Asiaticus. So Quintus Fabius Maximus was called Cunctator, from his checking the impetuosity of Hannibal by declining battle. We find likewise a second Agnomen or Cognomen, added; thus, the latter Publius Cornelius Scipio Africanus is called Æmilianus, because he was the son of L. Æmilius Paulus, and adopted by the son of the great Scipio, who had no children of his own. But he is commonly called by authors Africanus Minor, to distinguish him from the former Scipio Africanus.

The Romans at first seem to have had but one name; as, Romulus, Remus, &c.: or two; as, Numa Pompilius, Tullus Hostilius, Ancus Martius, Tarquinius Priscus, Servius Tullius, Sextus Tarquinius. But when they were divided into tribes or clans and families, (in gentes et familias;) they began commonly to have three; as, L. Junius Brutus, M. Valerius Poplicola, &c.

The three names, however, were not always used; commonly two, and sometimes only one, namely, the surname, Sall. Cat. 17. Cic. Epist. passim. But in speaking to any one, the prænomen was generally used, as being peculiar to citizens: for slaves had no prænomen. Hence, Gaudent prænominē molles auriculæ, Hor. Sat. ii. 5. 32.

The surnames were derived from various circumstances, either from some quality of the mind; as Cato from wisdom, i. e. Catus, wise, Cic. de Sen. 2. &c. or from the habit of the body; as Calvus, Crassus, Macer, &c. Certain surnames sometimes gave occasion to jests and witty allusions; thus, Asina, Hor. Ep. i. 13. 9. So Serranus Calatinus, Cic. pro Sext. 33. Hence also in a different sense, Virgil says, Vel te sulco, Serrane, serentem, Æn. vi. 844; for Q. Cincinnatus was called SERRANUS, because the ambassadors from the senate found him sowing, when they brought him notice that he was made Dictator, Plin. xviii. 3.

The Prænomen used to be given to boys, on the 9th day, which was called dies lustricus, or the day of purification, when certain religious ceremonies were performed, Macrob. Sat. 1. 16. Suet. Ner. 6. The eldest son of the family usually got the Prænomen of the father; the rest were named from their uncles or other relations.

When there was only one daughter in a family, she used to be called from the name of the gens; thus, Tullia, the daughter of Cicero; Julia, the daughter of Cæsar; Octavia, the sister of Augustus, &c. and they retained the same name after they were married. When there were two daughters, the one was called Major and the other Minor; thus, Cornelia Major, Cornelia Minor. If there were more than two, they were distinguished by their number; thus, Prima, Secunda, Tertia, Quarta, Quinta, &c. Varro de Lat. Ling. viii. 38. Suet. Jul. 50. Or more softly, Tertilla, Quartilla, Quintilla, &c. Cic. Att. xiv. 20. Women seem anciently to have also had *prænomen*s, which were marked with inverted letters; thus, Q for Caia, Y for Lucia, &c.

During the flourishing state of the republic, the names of the gentes, and surnames of the familia always remained fixed and certain. They were common to all the children of a family and descended to their posterity. But after the subversion of liberty, they were changed and confounded.*

* The first imposition of names was founded on different views among different people: the most common was to mark the good wishes of the parents. Hence Victor, Faustus, Probus, &c. Such names are by Cicero called bona nomina, and by Tacitus fausta. The greatest part of names found in Homer are marks of distinction, given in honour of the qualities most esteemed in the heroic ages. Such were Tlepolemus, Amphimachus, Eumedes, Patroclus, &c. Hence Camden takes it for granted, that names in all nations and languages are significative. The ancient Britons generally took their names from colours. Our Christian names are derived from various languages; 1st, from the Hebrew, as David, Sampson, Daniel: 2d, from the German, as Robert, William, Henry: 3d, from the Greeks, as Peter, Andrew, George,

Those were called LIBERI, free, who had the power of doing what they pleased. Those who were born of parents who had been always free, were called INGENUI. Slaves made free were called LIBERTI and LIBERTINI. They were called Liberti in relation to their masters, and Libertini in relation to free-born citizens; thus, Libertus meus, libertus Cæsaris, and not libertinus; but libertinus homo, i. e. non ingenuus. Servus cum manu mittitur, fit libertinus, (non libertus), Quinctil. 8. 3. 27.

Some think that Libertini were the sons of the Liberti, from Suetonius, Claud. 24. who says, that they were thus called anciently: so Isidor. ix. 4. but this distinction never occurs in the classics. On the contrary, we find both words applied to the same person in writers who flourished in different ages. Plaut. Mel. Glor. iv. 1. 15. & 16. Cic. in Verr. i. 47. Those whom Cicero, de Orat. i. 9. calls Libertini, Livy makes qui servitutem servissent, 45. 15. Hence Seneca often contrasts Servi et Liberi, Ingenui et Libertini, de Vit. Beat. 24. Ep. 31. &c.

SLAVES.

MEN became slaves among the Romans by being taken in war, by sale, by way of punishment, or by being born in a state of servitude, (Servi aut nascebantur aut fiebant.)

1. Those enemies, who voluntarily laid down their arms, and surrendered themselves, retained their rights of freedom, and were called DEDITITII, Liv. vii. 31. Cæs. i. 27. But those taken in the field, or in the storming of cities, were sold by auction (sub corona, as it was termed, Liv. v. 22. &c. because they wore a crown when sold; or sub hasta, because a spear was set up where the crier or auctioneer stood.) They were called SERVI, (quod essent bello servati), Isidor. ix. 4. or MANCIPIA, (quasi manu capti), Varr. L. L. v. 8.

2. There was a continual market for slaves at Rome. Those who dealt in that trade (MANGONES vel VENALITII, Cic. Orat. 70. qui venales habebant, Plaut. Trin. iii. 2. 51.) brought them thither from various countries. The seller was bound to promise for the soundness of his slaves, and not to conceal their faults, Horat. Sat. ii. 3. 285. Hence they were commonly exposed to sale (producebantur) naked; and they carried a scroll (titulus vel inscriptio) hanging at their necks, on which their good and bad qualities were specified, Gell. iv. 2. If the seller gave a false account, he was bound to make up the loss, Cic. Off. iii. 16 & 17. or in some cases to take back the slave, Ibid. 23. Those whom the seller would not warrant,

Those brought from beyond seas had their feet whitened with chalk, (cretatis v. gypsatis pedibus, Plin. Nat. Hist. xxxv. 17 & 18. s. 58. Tibull. ii. 3. 64.) and their ears bored, (auribus perforatis,) Juvenal. i. 104. Sometimes slaves were sold on that condition, that if they did not please, they should be returned (redhiberentur) within a limited time, Cic. Off. iii. 24. Plaut. Most. iii. 2. 113. Festus. Foreign slaves, when first brought to the city, were called VENALES, or SERVI NOVICII, Cic. pro Quinct. 6. Plin. Ep. i. 21. Quintilian, i. 12. 2. viii. 2. 8. Slaves who had served long, and hence were become artful, veteratores, Terent. Heaut. v. 1. 16.

It was not lawful for free born citizens among the Romans, as among other nations, to sell themselves for slaves. Much less was it allowed any other person to sell free men. But as this gave occasion to certain frauds, it was ordained by a decree of the senate, that those who allowed themselves to be sold for the sake of sharing the price, should remain in slavery. Fathers might, indeed, sell their children for slaves, but these did not on that account entirely lose the rights of citizens. For when freed from their slavery, they were held as Ingenui, not Libertini. The same was the case with insolvent debtors, who were given up as slaves to their creditors, (inservitutem creditoribus addicti,) Quintilian. vi. 3. 26. v. 10. 60.

3. Criminals were often reduced to slavery by way of punishment. Thus those who had neglected to get themselves enrolled in the censor's books, or refused to enlist, (qui census aut militiam subterfugerant,) had their goods confiscated, and after being scourged, were sold beyond the Tiber, Cic. pro Cæcina, 24. Those condemned to the mines, or to fight with wild beasts, or to any extreme punishment, were first deprived of liberty, and by a fiction of law, termed slaves of punishment (servi pænæ fingebantur.)

4. The children of any female slave became the slaves of her master. There was no regular marriage among slaves, but their connection was called CONTUBERNIUM, and themselves, Contubernales. Those slaves who were born in the house of their masters, were called VERNÆ, or Vernaculi; hence lingua vernacula, v-aris one's mother tongue. These slaves were more petulant than others, because they were commonly more indulged, Horat. Sat. ii. 6. 66.

The whole company of slaves in one house was called FAMILIA, Nep. Att. 13. Cic. Paradox. v. 2. (Familia constat ex servis pluribus, Cic. Cæcin. 19. Quindecim liberi homines, populus est; totidem servi, familia: totidem vincti, ergastulum, Apulei. Apol.) and the slaves, Familiares, Cic. pro Cæj. 23. Plaut. Amphit. Prol. 127. Hence familia philosophorum. sects, Cic. fin. iv. 18. Divin. ii. 1. Att. ii. 16. Sententia, quæ familiam ducit, HONESTUM QUOD SIT, ID ESSE SOLUM BONUM, the chief maxim of the Stoics, Id. fin. ii. 16. Lucius familiam ducit, is the chief of the sect, Id. Phil. v. 11. Accedit etiam, quod familiam ducit, &c. is the chief ground of praise, Fam. vii. 5.

The proprietor of slaves was called DOMINUS, Terent. Eun. iii. 2. whence this word was put for a tyrant, Liv. ii. 60. On this account Augustus refused the name, Suet. Aug. 53. So Tiberius, Id. 27. Tacit. Annal. ii. 27.

Slaves not only did all domestic services, but were likewise employed in various trades and manufactures. Such as had a genius for it, were sometimes instructed in literature and the liberal arts. (artibus ingenuis, liberalibus, v. honestis, Cic.) Horat. Ep. ii. 2. 7. Some of these were sold at a great price, Plin. vii. 39. s. 40. Senec. Ep. 27. Suet. Jul. 47. Cic. Rosc. Com. 10. Hence arose a principal part of the immense wealth of Crassus, Plutarch. in vita ejus.

Slaves employed to accompany boys to and from school, were called PÆDAGOGI; and the part of the house where those young slaves staid, who were instructed in literature, (litera serviles, Senec. Ep. 88.) was called PÆDAGOGIUM, Plin. Ep. vii. 27.

Slaves were promoted according to their behaviour: as from being a drudge or mean slave in town (Mediastinus), to be an overseer in the country, (Villicus), Horat. Ep. i. 14.

The country farms of the wealthy Romans in later times were cultivated chiefly by slaves, Plin. xviii. 3. But there was also free men who wrought for hire, as among us, (MERCENARII), Cic. Off. i. 13. pro Cæcin. 59.

Among the Romans, masters had an absolute power over their slaves. They might scourge or put them to death at pleasure, Juvenal. Sat. vi. 219. This right was exercised with so great cruelty, especially in the corrupt ages of the republic, that laws were made at different times to restrain it. The lash was the common punishment; but for certain crimes they used to be branded in the forehead, and sometimes were forced to carry a piece of wood round their necks, wherever they went, which was called FURCA; and whoever had been subjected to this punishment, was ever afterwards called FURCIFER. A slave that had been often beaten, was called MASTIGIA, Ter. Adelph. v. 2. 6. or VERBERO, Id. Phorm. iv. 4. 3. A slave who had been branded, was called STIGMATIAS, v. -icus, i. e. notis compunctus, Cic. Off. ii. 7. Inscriptus, Mart. viii. 75. 9. Literatus, Plaut. Cas. ii. 6. 49. (i. e. litteris inscriptus: as, urna literata, Plaut. Rud. ii. 5. 21. ensiculus literatus, &c. Id. iv. 4. 112.) Slaves also by way of punishment were often shut up in a work-house, or bridewell, (in ergastulo v. PISTRINO), where they were obliged to turn a mill for grinding corn, Plaut. et Ter. passim. et Senec. de Benef. iv. 37.

Persons employed to apprehend and bring back (retrahere, Ter. Heaut. iv. 2. 65.) slaves who fled from their masters, (FUGITIVI, Cic. Fam. v. 9.) were called FUGITIVARII, Flor. iii. 19.

When slaves were beaten, they used to be suspended with a weight tied to their feet, that they might not move them, Plaut. Asin. ii. 2, 34. &c. Aul. iv. 4. 16. Ter. Phorm. i. 4. 43. To deter slaves from offending, a thong (habenâ) or a lash made of leather, was commonly hung on the staircase, (in scalis.) Horat. Ep. ii. 2. 15. but this was chiefly applied to younger slaves, Scholias. Ibid. Impuberes habent vel ferulâ plectebantur, Ulpian. D. i. 33. de SC. Silan. Some here join in scalis with latuit, as Cic. in Mil. 15. Phil. ii. 9.

Slaves when punished capitally were commonly crucified, Juvenal. vj. 219. Cic. in Verr. v. 3. 64. &c. but this punishment was prohibited under Constantine.

If a master of a family was slain at his own house, and the murderer not discovered, all his domestic slaves were liable to be put to death. Hence we find no less than 400 in one family punished on this account, Tacit. Ann. xiv. 43.

Slaves were not esteemed as persons, but as things, and might be transferred from one owner to another, like any other effects.

Slaves could not appear as witnesses in a court of justice, Ter. Phorm. ii. 1. 62. nor make a will, Plin. Ep. viii. 16. nor inherit any thing, Id. iv. 11; but gentle masters allowed them to make a kind of will, (quasi testamenta facere.) Plin. Ep. viii. 16; nor could slaves serve as soldiers, Id. x. 39. unless first made free, Serv. in Virg. Æn. ix. 547. except in the time of Hannibal, when, after the battle of Cannæ, 8000 slaves were armed without being freed, Liv. xxii. 57. These were called VOLONES, because they enlisted voluntarily, Festus; and afterwards obtained their freedom for their bravery, Liv. xxiv. 16.

Slaves had a certain allowance granted them for their sustenance, (DIMENSUM,) commonly four or five pecks (modii) of grain a month, and five denarii, which was called their MENSTRUUM, Donat. in Ter. Phorm. i. 1. 9. Sénec. Ep. 80. They likewise had a daily allowance, (DIARIUM, Horat. Ep. i. 14. 20.) And what they spared of this, or procured by any other means with their master's consent, was called their PECULIUM. This money, with their master's permission, they laid out at interest, or purchased with it a slave for themselves, from whose labours they might make profit. Such a slave was called Servi VICARIUS, Horat. Sat. ii. 7. 79. Cic. Verr. i. 36. Plaut. Asin. ii. 4. 27. Martial. ii. 18. 7. and constituted part of the peculium, with which also slaves sometimes purchased their freedom. Cicero says that sober and industrious slaves, at least such as became slaves from being captives in war, seldom remained in servitude above six years, Phil. viii. 11. At certain times slaves were obliged to make presents to their masters out of their poor savings, (ex eo quod de dimenso suo unciatim comparserint.) Terent. ibid. There was sometimes an agreement between the master and the slave, that when the slave should pay a certain sum, the master should be obliged to give him his liberty, Plaut. Aul. v. 3. Casin. ii. 5. 6. &c. Rud. iv. 2. 23. Tacit. xiv. 42.

Although the state of slaves in point of right was the same, yet their condition in families was very different, according to the pleasure of their masters, and their different employments. Some were treated with indulgence; some served in chains, as janitors and door-keepers, (ostiarîi;) and so in the country, catenatis cultorea, Flor. iii. 19. Vincti fossores, Lucan. vii. 402. others were confined in workhouses below ground, (in ergastulis subterraneis.) So Pliny, Vincti pedes, damnatæ, manus, inscriptique vultus, arva exercent, xviii. 3.

At certain times slaves were allowed the greatest freedom: as at the feast of Saturn in the month of December, Horat. Sat. ii. 7. 4. when they were served at table by their masters, Austin. de Fer. Rom. ii. 15. and on the Ides of August, Festus.

The number of slaves in Rome and through Italy was immense, Juvenal. iii. 140. Some rich individuals are said to have had several thousands, Seneca. de Tranq. An. viii. Wars were sometimes excited by an insurrection of the slaves, Flor. iii. 19 & 20.

There were also public slaves, who were used for various public services, Liv. i. 7. and especially to attend on the magistrates. Their condition was much more tolerable than that of private slaves. They had yearly allowances (ANNUA) granted them by the public, Plin. Epist. x. 30. 40.

There were also persons attached to the soil, (ADSCRIPTITII, vel glebæ adscripti :) concerning the state of whom, writers are not agreed.

Slaves anciently bore the prænomen of their master; thus, Marcipöres, Lucipöres, Publipöres, (quasi Marci, Lucii, Publii pueri, &c. Quinctilian, i. 4. 26.) Afterwards they got various names, either from their country, or from other circumstances; as, Syrus, Davus, Geta, Parmeno, &c. in comic writers; Tiro, Laurea, Dionysius, &c. in Cicero. But slaves are usually distinguished in the classics by their different employments; as Medici, Chirurghi, Pædagogî, Grammatici, Scribæ, Fabri, Coqui, &c.

Slaves were anciently freed in three ways, Censu, Vindicta, et Testamento, Cic. Topic. 2. seu 10.

1. Per CENSUM, when a slave, with his master's knowledge or by his order, got his name inserted in the Censor's roll, Cic. Cæcin. 34. s. 99.

2. Per VINDICTAM, when a master going with his slave in his hand to the Prætor or Consul, and in the provinces to the Proconsul or Proprætor, said, "I desire that this man be free according to the custom of the Romans;" HUNC HOMINEM LIBERUM ESSE VOLO MORE VEL JURE QUIRITUM; and the Prætor, if he approved, putting a rod on the head of the slave, Horat. Sat. ii. 7. 76. pronounced, "I say that this man is free after the manner of the Romans." Whereupon the lictor, or the master, turning him round in a circle, (which was called VERTIGO, Pers. Sat. v. 75.) and giving him a blow on the cheek, (alâpa, Isidor, ix. 4. whence, multo majoris alâpæ mecum veneunt, Liberty is sold, &c. Phædr. ii. 5. 22.) let him go, (e manu emittebat.) signifying that leave was granted him to go where he pleased. The rod with which the slave was struck, was called VINDICTA, as some think, from Vindicus or Vindex, a slave of the Vitellii, who informed the senate concerning the conspiracy of the sons of Brutus and others, to restore the Tarquins, and who is said to have been first freed in this manner, Liv. ii. 5. whence also perhaps Vindicare in Libertatem, to free. MULIER, modo quam vindicta redemit, a woman lately freed, Ovid. Art. Am. iii. 615.

3. Per TESTAMENTUM, when a master gave his slaves their liberty by his will. If this was done in express words, (Verbis directis), as for example, DAVUS SERVUS MEUS LIBER ESTO: such freed men were called ORCINI or Charonita, because they had no patron but in the infernal regions. In allusion to which, those unworthy persons, who got admission into the senate after the death of Cæsar, were by the vulgar called SENATORES ORCINI, Suet. Aug. 35. But if the Testator signified his desire by way of request, (verbis precativis), thus, ROGO HEREDEM MEUM, UT DAVUM MANUMITTAT; the heir (hæres fiduciarius) retained the rights of patronage.*

Liberty procured in any of those methods was called JUSTA LIBERTAS.

In later times slaves used to be freed in various other ways; by letter, (per epistolam;) among friends, (inter amicos), when before five witnesses a master ordered his slave to be free; or by table, (per mensam), if a master bid a slave eat at his table; Plin. Epist. vii. 16. for it was thought disgraceful to eat with slaves or mean persons, and benches (subsellia) were assigned them, not couches. Hence imi subsellii vir, a person of the lowest rank, Plaut. Stich. iii. 4. 32. There were many other methods of freeing slaves, but these did not confer complete freedom. They only discharged them from servitude, but did not entitle them to the privileges of citizens; unless afterwards the vindicta was superadded, in presence of a magistrate, Plin. Ep. vii. 16 & 32.

Anciently the condition of all freed slaves was the same; they obtained the freedom of the city with their liberty, Cic. pro Balbo, 9. according to the institution of Servius Tullius, Dionys. iv. 22. & 23. They were, however, distributed among the four city tribes, as being more ignoble, Liv. Epit. xx. But afterwards, when many worthless and profligate persons, being freed by their masters, thus invaded the rights of citizens, various laws were made to check the license of manumitting slaves. No master was allowed to free by his will above a certain proportion of the number he had; but not above 100, if he had even 20,000, which number some individuals are said to have possessed, Athen. Deipnosoph. vi. 20. Hence Seneca speaks of vasta spatia terrarum pervinctos colenda; et familia bellicosis nationibus major de Benef. viii. 10. and Pliny, of legions of slaves, so that a master needed a person to tell him their names, (nomenclator), xxxiii. 1. s. 6. So Petronius Arbiter, 37 & 117. Augustus ordained by law, called Ælia Sentia, that no slave who had ever for the sake of a crime been bound, publicly whipt, tortured, or branded in the face, although freed by his master, should obtain the freedom of the city; but should always remain in the state of the Dedititii, who were indeed free, but could not aspire to the advantages of Roman citizens, Suet. Aug. 40. The reason of this law may be gathered from Dionys. iv. 24.

Afterwards by the law called Junia Norbana, because it was passed in the consulship of L. Junius Norbanus, A. U. 771. those freed per epistolam, inter amicos, or by the other less solemn methods, did not obtain the rights of Roman citizens, but of the Latins, who were transplanted into colonies. Hence they were called LATINI JUNIANI, or simply LATINI, Plin. Ep. x. 105.

Slaves when made free, used to shave their heads in the temple of Feronia, and received a cap or hat, as a badge of liberty, Serv. ad Virg. Æn. viii. 564. Liv. xlv. 44. Hence, Ad pileum servum vocare, for ad libertatem, Liv. ibid. They also were presented with a white robe and a ring by their master. They then assumed a prænomen, and prefixed the name of their patron to their own. Thus, Marcus Tullius Tiro, the freedman of Cicero. In allusion to which, Persius says, Verterit hunc Dominus; momento turbinis exit MARCUS Dama, Sat. v. 77. Hence Tanquam habeas tria nomina, for tanquam liber sis, Juvenal. v. 120. So foreigners, when admitted to the freedom of the city, assumed the name of that person, by whose favour they obtained it, Cic. Fam. xiii. 35. 36.

Patrons retained various rights over their freedmen. If the patron was reduced to poverty, the freedman was bound, in the same manner as a son, to support him, according to his abilities. And if a patron failed to support his freedman when poor, he was deprived of the rights of patronage.

If a freedman died intestate, without heirs, the patron succeeded to his effects.

Those freedmen who proved ungrateful to their patrons, were condemned to the mines (ad lautumias;) and the Emperor Claudius, by a law, reduced them to their former slavery, (in servitulem revocavit.) Suet. Claud. 25. Liberium, qui probatus fuerit patrono delatores summississe, qui de statu ejus facerent ei quæstionem, servum patroni esse jussit, L. 5. Dig. de jure Patron.

RIGHTS of ROMAN CITIZENS, and of the different Inhabitants of the ROMAN EMPIRE.

WHILE Rome was but small and thinly inhabited, whoever fixed their abode in the city or Roman territory, obtained the rights of citizens.

To increase the number of citizens, Romulus opened an asylum or sanctuary for fugitive slaves, insolvent debtors, and malefactors, whither great numbers flocked from the neighbouring states, Liv. i. 8. because no one could be taken from thence to punishment, Id.

xxxv. 51. Tac. Ann. iii. 60.* Even vanquished enemies were transplanted to Rome, and became citizens. In this manner the freedom of the city was granted by Romulus to the Ceninenses, Camerini, Antemnates, Crustumini, and at last also to the Sabines. The example was imitated by his successors, who transplanted the Albans and other vanquished tribes to Rome, Liv. i. 29. 33. Likewise after the expulsion of the kings, the freedom of the city was given to a great many, especially after the taking and burning of the city by the Gauls; at which time, that it might be rebuilt with more splendour, new citizens were assumed from the Veientes, Capenates, and Falisci, Liv. vi. 4.

Besides those who had settled in the Roman territory, and who were divided into city and country tribes, the freedom of the city was granted to several foreign towns, which were called MUNICIPIA, and the inhabitants MUNICIPES, because they might enjoy offices at Rome, (munia v. munera capere poterant.)† When any of these fixed their abode at Rome, they became CIVES INGENUI, Cic. Brut. 75. de Legg. ii. 2. Hence it happened, that the same person might enjoy the highest honours both at Rome, and in his own free town. Thus Milo, while he stood candidate for the Consulship at Rome, was Dictator in his own native city, Lanuvium, Cic. pro Mil. 37. The free town in which one was born was called patria GERMANA, natura vel loci. Rome, (qua exceptus est), patria COMMUNIS, civitatis vel juris. Cic. de Legg. ii. 2.

But when the Roman empire was more widely extended, and the dignity of a Roman citizen of course began to be more valued, the freedom of the city (jus civitatis) was more sparingly conferred, and in different degrees, according to the different merits of the allies towards the republic. To some the right of voting (jus suffragii) was given, and to others not. The people of Cære were the first who obtained the freedom of the city without the right of voting; for having received the sacred things of the Roman people, the Vestal Virgins and priests, when they fled from the Gauls, A. Gell. xvi. 13. The freedom of the city was soon after given in this manner to the people of Capua, Fundi, Formiæ, Cumæ, and Sinuessa, Liv. viii. 14. to the inhabitants of Acerra, ibid. 17. and of Anagnia, &c.

The inhabitants of Lanuvium, Aricia, Nomentum, Pedum, received the freedom of the city, with the right of voting, Liv. viii. 14. and of Privernum. (Privernates.) c. 21. But several cities of the Hernici preferred their own laws, Liv. ix. 43. In process of time, this right was granted to all the allies of the Latin name; and after the Social or Italian war, it was communicated to all the Italians south of the river Rubicon on the upper sea, and of the city Luca on the lower sea. Afterwards the same right was granted to Cisalpine Gaul, which hence began to be called Gallia Togata. Augustus was very sparing in conferring the freedom of the city ; but the succeeding Emperors were more liberal, and at different times granted it to different cities and nations. At last Caracalla granted the freedom of Roman citizens to all the inhabitants of the Roman world.

* "Still in ancient times this rabble cannot have been conceived to have formed any considerable part of the population: for the asylum was a small inclosure on the Capitoline hill, and in its quality of asylum, could only afford protection within its precincts." Nisbahr.—ED.

Those who did not enjoy the rights of citizens were anciently called HOSTES, and afterwards PEREGRINI, Cic. Off. i. 12. After Rome had extended her empire, first over Latium, then over Italy, and lastly, over great part of the world, the rights which the subjects of that empire enjoyed, came to be divided into four kinds ; which may be called Jus Quiritium, Jus Latii, Jus Italicum, Jus Provinciarum vel Provinciale.

JUS QUIRITIUM comprehended all the rights of Roman citizens, which were different at different times. These rights were either private or public : the former were properly called Jus Quiritium, and the latter Jus Civitatis, Plin. Ep. x. 4. 6. 22. Cic. in Rull. ii. 19. as with us there is a distinction between denization and naturalization.

1. PRIVATE RIGHTS of ROMAN CITIZENS.

THE private rights of Roman citizens were, 1. Jus Libertatis, the right of liberty : 2. Jus Gentilitatis et Familiæ, the right of family ; 3. Jus Connubii, the right of marriage ; 4. Jus Patrium, the right of a father : 5. Jus Dominiæ Legitimi, the right of legal property ; 6. Jus Testamenti et Hereditatis, the right of making a will, and of succeeding to an inheritance ; and 7. Jus Tutelæ, the right of tutelage or wardship.

1. The RIGHT of LIBERTY.

This comprehended FREEDOM, not only from the power of masters, (dominorum,) but also from the dominion of tyrants, the severity of magistrates, the cruelty of creditors, and the insolence of more powerful citizens.

After the expulsion of Tarquin, a law was made by Brutus, that no one should be king at Rome ; and that whoever should form a design of making himself king, might be slain with impunity. At the same time the people were bound by an oath, that they would never suffer a king to be created.

Roman citizens were secured against the tyrannical treatment of magistrates, first, by the right of appealing from them to the people, and that the person who appealed should in no manner be punished till the people determined the matter ; but chiefly, by the assistance of the tribunes.

None but the whole Roman people in the Comitia Centuriata, could pass sentence on the life of a Roman citizen. No magistrate was allowed to punish him by stripes, or capitally. The single expression, " I AM A ROMAN CITIZEN," checked their severest decrees, Cic. in Verr. v. 54 & 57. &c. Hence, QUIRITARE dicitur, qui Quiritium fidem clamans implorat. Varro de Lat. Ling. v. 7. Cic. ad Fam. x. 32. Liv. xxix. 8. Acts xxii. 25.

By the laws of the twelve tables it was ordained, that insolvent debtors should be given up (addicerentur) to their creditors to be bound in fetters and cords, (compedibus et nervis), whence they were called NEXI, OBÆRATI, et ADDICTI. And although they did not entirely lose the rights of freemen, yet they were in actual slavery, and often treated more harshly than even slaves themselves, Liv. ii. 23.

If any one was indebted to several persons, and could not find a cautioner (vindex vel expromissor) within sixty days, his body (corpus) literally, according to some, but more probably, according to others, his effects, might be cut into pieces, (secari), and divided among his creditors, A. Gell. xx. 1. Thus sectio is put for the purchase of the whole booty of any place, or of the whole effects of a proscribed or condemned person, Cic. Phil. ii. 26. or for the booty or goods themselves, Cæs. de Bell. Gall. ii. 33. Cic. Inv. i. 45. and sectores for the purchasers, Ascon, in Cic. Verr. i. 23. because they made profit by selling them in parts; (a seco.) Hence Sectores colorum et bonorum, i. e. qui proscriptos occidebant et bona eorum emebant, Cic. Rosc. Am. 29.

To check the cruelty of usurers, a law was made, A. U. 429, whereby it was provided, that no debtors should be kept in irons or bonds; that the goods of the debtor, not his person, should be given up to his creditors, Liv. viii. 28.

But the people, not satisfied with this, as it did not free them from prison, often afterwards demanded an entire abolition of debts, which they used to call NEW TABLES. But this was never granted them. At one time, indeed, by a law passed by Valerius Flaccus, silver was paid with brass, as it is expressed, Sallust. Cat. 33. that is, the fourth part of the debt only was paid, Vell. ii. 23. an as for a sestertius, and a sestertius for a denarius; or 25 for 100, and 250 for 1000. Julius Cæsar, after his victory in the civil war, enacted something of the same kind, Cæs. Bell. Civ. iii. 1. Suet. Jul. 14.

2. The RIGHT of FAMILY.

EACH gens and each family had certain sacred rites, peculiar to itself, which went by inheritance in the same manner as effects, Liv. iv. 2. When heirs by the father's side of the same family (agnati) failed, those of the same gens (gentiles) succeeded, in preference to relations by the mother's side (cognati) of the same family (familia). No one could pass from a Patrician family to a Plebeian, or from a Plebeian to a Patrician, unless by that form of adoption, which could only be made at the Comitia Curiata. Thus Clodius, the enemy of Cicero, was adopted by a Plebeian, that he might be created a tribune of the commons, Cic. Dom. 15. Att. i. 18 & 19.

3. The RIGHT of MARRIAGE.

No Roman citizen was permitted to marry a slave, a barbarian, or a foreigner, unless by the permission of the people; as, Liv. xxxviii. 36. CONNUBIUM est matrimonium inter cives; inter servos autem, aut inter civium et peregrinæ conditionis hominem, aut servilis, non est Connubium, sed CONTUBERNIUM, Boeth. in Cic. Top. 4. By the laws of the Decemviri, intermarriages between the Patricians and Plebeians were prohibited. But this restriction was soon abolished, Liv. iv. 6. Afterwards, however, when a Patrician lady married a Plebeian, she was said Patribus enubere, and was excluded from the sacred rights of Patrician ladies, Liv. x. 23. When any woman married out of her clan, it was called Gentis enuptio; which likewise seems anciently to have been forbidden, Liv. xxxix. 19. The different kinds of marriage, &c. will be treated of afterwards.

4. The RIGHT of a FATHER.

A FATHER, among the Romans, had the power of life and death over his children. He could not only expose them when infants; which cruel custom prevailed at Rome for many ages, as among other nations, Cic. de Legg. iii. 8. Ter. Heaut. iv. 1. Suet. Octav. 65. Calig. 5. Tacit. Hist. iv. 5. Senec. de Ben. iii. 13. &c. and a newborn infant was not held legitimate, unless the father, or in his absence some persons for him, lifted it from the ground, (terrâ levâsset) and placed it on his bosom: hence tollere filium, to educate; non tollere, to expose. But even when his children were grown up, he might imprison, scourge, send them bound to work in the country, and also put them to death by any punishment he pleased, if they deserved it, Sall. Cat. 39. Liv. ii. 41. viii. 7. Dionys. viii. 79. Hence a father is called a domestic judge, or magistrate, by Seneca; and a ensor of his son, by Sueton. Claud. 16. Romulus, however, at first permitted this right only in certain cases, Dionys. ii. 15. ix. 22.

A son could acquire no property but with his father's consent; and what he did thus acquire was called his PECULIUM, as that of a slave, Liv. ii. 41. If he acquired it in war, it was called PECULIUM CASTRENSE.

The condition of a son was in some respects harder than that of a slave. A slave when sold once, became free; but a son not, unless sold three times. The power of the father was suspended, when the son was promoted to any public office, but not extinguished, Liv. ib. For it continued not only during the life of the children, but likewise extended to grandchildren, and great grandchildren. None of them became their own masters, (sui juris), till the death of their father and grandfather. A daughter by marriage passed from the power of her father under that of her husband.

EMANCIPATION and ADOPTION.

WHEN a father wished to free his son from his authority, (EMANCIPARE,) it behoved him to bring him before the Prætor, or some magistrate, (apud quem legis actio erat,) and there sell him three times, PER AS ET LIBRAM, as it was termed, to some friend, who was called PATER FIDUCIARIUS, because he was bound after the third sale to sell him back (remancipare) to the natural father. There were besides present, a LIBRIPENS, who held a brazen balance; five witnesses, Roman citizens past the age of puberty; and an antestatus, who is supposed to be so named, because he summoned the witnesses by touching the tip of their ears, Hor. Sat. i. 9. 76. In the presence of these, the natural father gave over (mancipabat, i. e. manu tradebat) his son to the purchaser, adding these words, MANCUPO TIBI HUNC FILIUM, QUI MEUS EST. Then the purchaser, holding a brazen coin, (sertertius,) said, HUNC EGO HOMINEM EX JURE QUIRITIUM MEUM ESSE AIO, ISQUE MIHI EMPTUS EST HOC AERE, ANEAQUE LIBRA: and having struck the balance with the coin, gave it to the natural father by way of price. Then he manumitted the son in the usual form. But as by the principles of the Roman law, a son, after being manumitted once and again, fell back into the power of his father; the imaginary sale was thrice to be repeated, either on the same day, and before the same witnesses, or on different days, and before different witnesses; and then the purchaser, instead of manumitting him, which would have conferred a jus patronatus on himself, sold him back to the natural father, who immediately manumitted him by the same formalities as a slave, (Librâ et ære liberatum emittebat, Liv. vi. 14.) Thus the son became his own master, (sui juris factus est,) Liv. vii. 16.

The custom of selling per as vel assem et libram, took its rise from this; that the ancient Romans, when they had no coined money, Liv. iv. 60. and afterwards, when they used asses of a pound weight, weighed their money, and did not count it.

In emancipating a daughter, or grandchildren, the same formalities were used, but only once, (unica mancipatio sufficiebat;) they were not thrice repeated, as in emancipating a son. But these formalities, like others of the same kind, in process of time came to be thought troublesome. Athanasius, therefore, and Justinian, invented new modes of emancipation. Athanasius appointed, that it should be sufficient if a father showed to a judge the rescript of the Emperor for emancipating his son; and Justinian, that a father should go to any magistrate competent, and before him, with the consent of his son, signify that he freed his son from his power, by saying, HUNC SUI JURIS ESSE PATIOR, MEAQUE MANU MITTO.

When a man had no children of his own, lest his sacred rites and name should be lost, he might assume strangers (extraneos) as his children by adoption.

If the person adopted was his own master, (sui juris,) it was called ARROGATIO, because it was made at the Comitia Curiata, by proposing a bill to the people, (per populi rogationem.) Gell. v. 19.

If he was the son of another, it was properly called ADOPTIO, and was performed before the Prætor or President of a province, or any other magistrate, (apud quem legis actio erat.) The same formalities were used as in emancipation. It might be done in any place, Suet. Aug. 64. The adopted passed into the family, and name, and assumed the sacred rites of the adopter, and also succeeded to his fortune. Cicero makes no distinction between these two forms of adoption, but calls both by the general name of Adoptio.

The RIGHT of PROPERTY.

THINGS, with respect to property among the Romans, were variously divided. Some things were said to be of DIVINE RIGHT, others of HUMAN RIGHT: the former were called sacred, (RES SACRÆ;) as, altars, temples, or any thing publicly consecrated to the gods by the authority of the pontiffs: or religious, (RELIGIOSÆ;) as, Sepulchres, &c.: or inviolable (SANCTÆ, i. e. aliqua sanctione munita;) as, the walls and gates of a city, Macrob. Sat. iii. 3.

These things were subject to the law of the pontiffs, and the property of them could not be transferred. Temples were rendered sacred by inauguration or dedication, that is, by being consecrated by the augurs, (consecrata inaugurataque.) Whatever was legally consecrated, was ever after unapplicable to profane uses, Plin. Ep. ix. 39. x. 58. 59. 76. Temples were supposed to belong to the gods, and could not be the property of a private person. Things ceased to be sacred by being unhallowed, (exauguratione, Liv. i. 55.

Any place became religious by interring a dead body in it, l. 6. § 4. D. de divisi rei.

Sepulchres were held religious because they were dedicated to the infernal gods, (Diis manibus vel inferis.) Without the permission of the pontiffs, no sepulchre could be built or repaired; nor could the property in them be transferred, but only the right of burying in them, (jus mortuum inferendi.) The walls of cities were also dedicated by certain solemn ceremonies, and therefore they were held inviolable, (sancti;) and could not be raised or repaired without the authority of the pontiffs.

Things of human right were called Profane, (RES PROFANÆ;) and were either PUBLIC and COMMON; as, the air, running water, the sea, and its shores, &c. Virg. Æn. vii. 229. Cic. Rosc. Am. 26. or PRIVATE, which might be the property of individuals.

Some make a distinction between things common and public, but most writers do not. The things, of which a whole society or corporation had the property, and each individual the use, were called RES UNIVERSITATIS, or more properly, RES PUBLICÆ, (quasi populica, a populo, the property of the people;) as, theatres, baths, highways, &c. And those things were called RES COM-

MUNES, which either could be the property of no one, as the air, light, &c. Ovid. Met. i. 135. vi. 349. or which were the joint property of more than one; as, a common wall, a common field, &c. COMMUNE, a subst. is put for the commonwealth, Cic. Verr. ii. 46. 63 & 69. Horat. Od. ii. 15. 13. Hence, in commune consulere, prodesse, conferre, metuere, &c. for the public good.

Things which properly belonged to nobody, were called RES NULLIUS; as, parts of the world not yet discovered, animals not claimed, &c. To this class was referred hereditas jacens, or an estate in the interval of time betwixt the demise of the last occupier and the entry of the successor.

Things were either MOVEABLE or IMMOVEABLE. The moveable things of a farm were called RUTA CÆSA, sc. et; i. e. Eruta et Casa; as, sand, coals, stones, &c. which were commonly expected, (recepta;) or retained by the seller, Cic. Top. 26. Orat. ii. 55.

Things were also divided into CORPOREAL, i. e. which might be touched, and INCORPOREAL; as, rights, servitudes, &c. The former Cicero calls, Res quæ sunt: the latter, Res quæ intelliguntur, Topic. 5. But others, perhaps more properly, call the former, RES, things; and the latter, JURA, rights; Quinctilian. v. 10. 116.

The division of things Horace briefly expresses thus:

*Fuit hæc sapientia quondam,
Publica privatis occernere sacra profanis.*

de Art. Poet. 396.

So Corn. Nepos. in vita Themist. 6.

Private things (RES PRIVATÆ) among the Romans, were either RES MANCIPI, or NEC MANCIPI.

RES MANCIPI were those things which might be sold and alienated, or the property of them transferred from one person to another, by a certain rite used among Roman citizens only; so that the purchaser might take them as it were with his hand (manu caperet;) whence he was called MANCEPS, and the things RES MANCIPI, vel Mancipi, contracted for Mansipii. And it behoved the seller to be answerable for them to the purchaser, to secure the possession (periculum judicii, vel auctoritatem, vel evictionem præstare, &c.) Cic. pro Muræna, 2.

NEC MANCIPI res, were those things which could not be thus transferred: whence also the risk of the thing lay on the purchaser, Plaut. Pers. iv. 3. 55, &c. Thus, mancipium and usus are distinguished; Vitaque mancipio nulli datur, in property or perpetuity, omnibus usu, Lucret. iii. 985. So mancipium and fructus, Cic. Epist. Fam. vii. 29. 30.

The RES MANCIPI were,—1. Farms, either in town or country within Italy; (Prædia urbana et rustica in solo Italico;) or in the provinces, if any city or place had obtained the jus Italicum. Other farms in the provinces were called possessionses, not prædia; and because proprietors gave in an account of their families and fortunes to the censors, they were called Prædia censui censendo, Cic. pro

Flacc. 32.—2. Slaves.—3. Quadrupeds, trained to work with back or neck, (dorso vel cervice domiti;) as, horses, oxen, asses, mules; but not wild beasts, although tamed; as, elephants, camels.—4. Pearls (margaritæ.) Plin. ix. 35. s. 60.—5. The rights of country farms, called servitutes, (SERVITUTES,) Ulpian.

The servitutes of farms in the country, were,—1. The right of going on foot through the farm of another, (ITER);—2. Of driving a beast or wagon not loaded, (ACTUS);—3. Of driving loaded wagons, (VIA);—4. Of carrying water, (AQUEDUCTUS); either by canals or loaden pipes, (per canales v. fistulas plumbeas.) Vitruv. viii. 7.—The breadth of a via, when straight, was eight feet; at a turn, (in anfractum v. in flexu), sixteen feet; the breadth of an actus, four feet; but the breadth of an iter is uncertain.

To these servitutes may be added, the drawing of water, (aqua haustus;) the driving of cattle to water, (pecoris ad aquam appulsus;) the right of feeding; of making lime, (culcis coquenda.) and of digging sand.

Farms not liable to any servitute, were called PRÆDIA LIBERA, optimo jure v. conditione optimâ: others, (quæ serviebant, servitutem debebant, vel servituti erant obnoxia.) were called PRÆDIA SERVA, Cic. in Rull. iii. 2.

Buildings in the city were called PRÆDIA URBANA, and were reckoned res mancipi, only by accession (jure fundi;) for all buildings and lands were called FUNDI; but usually buildings in the city were called Ædes; in the country, Villæ. A place in the city without buildings, was called AREA; in the country, AGER. A field with buildings was properly called FUNDUS.

The servitutes of the Prædia urbana were,—1. Servitus ONE-RIS FERENDI, when one was bound to support the house of another by a pillar or wall;—2. Servitus TIGNI IMMITTENDI, when one was bound to allow a neighbour to drive a beam, a stone, or iron into his wall; for tignum among lawyers signified all kinds of materials for building.

Anciently, for fear of fire, it was ordered that there should be an interstice left between houses of at least two feet and a half, which was called AMBITUS, (Festus.) or ANGIPORTUS, vel-um, and this was usually a thoroughfare, but sometimes not, Ter. Adolph. iv. 2. 39. For when Rome became crowded with houses, these interstices were only left between some houses. Nero, after the dreadful fire which happened in his time, restored the ancient mode of building houses distinct from one another, Tacit. Ann. xv. 43.

Houses, which were not joined by common walls with the neighbouring houses, were called INSULÆ, Festus. Sometimes domus and insula are distinguished, Suet. Ner. 16 & 38. where domus is supposed to signify the houses of the great, and insula those of the poorer citizens. But anciently this was not the case, rather the contrary; as, Insula Clodii, Luculli, &c. Cic. Under the emperors, any lodgings (hospitia) or houses to be let, (Ædes mercede locanda, vel domus conductitia.) were called insula, and the inhabitants of them, Inquilini, or Insularii; which last name is also applied to those who were appointed to guard the genii of each insula. The proprietors of the insula were called DOMINI INSULARUM, Suet. Jul. 41. Tib. 48. vel PREDIORUM. Plin. Ep. x. 44. 45. and their agents procuratores insularum. For want of room in the city, houses were commonly raised to a great height by stories, (contignationibus v. tabulatis,) which were occupied by different families, and at a great rent, Juvenal. iii. 166. The uppermost stories or garrets were called cœnacula. He who rented, (mercede conducebat) an insula, or any part of it, was called inquilinus. Hence Catiline contemptuously calls Cicero, Inquilinus civis urbis Romæ, Sallust. Cat. 31.

There was also,—3. Servitus STILLICIDII ET FLUMINIS, whereby one was obliged to let the water, which fell from his house, into the garden or area of his neighbour; or to receive the water, which fell from his neighbour's house, into his area.—4. Servitus CLOACÆ, the right of conveying a private common sewer through the property of a neighbour, into the Cloaca Maxima, built by Tarquin.—5. Servitus NON ALTIUS TOLLENDI, whereby one was bound not to raise his house above a certain height; so as not to obstruct the prospects and lights of his neighbour. The height of houses was limited by law, under Augustus to 70 feet, Strab. v. p. 162. Suet. Aug. 89. Tacit. Ann. xv. 43.—There was also a servitude, that one should not make new windows in his wall; LUMINA UTI NUNC SUNT, ITA SINT, Cic. de Orat. i. 39.

These servitudes of city properties, some annex to res mancipi, and some to res nec mancipi.

MODES of acquiring PROPERTY.

THE transferring of the property of the res mancipi, (ABALIENATIO, vel translatio domini, v. proprietas), was made by a certain act, called MANCIPIATIO, or MANCIPIUM, (Cic. Off. iii. 16. de Orat. i. 39.) in which the same formalities were observed as in emancipating a son, only that it was done but once. This Cicero calls traditio alteri nexu, Topic. 5. s. 28. thus Dare mancipio, i. e. ex forma vel lege mancipii, to convey the property of a thing in that manner; accipere, to receive it, Plaut. Curc. iv. 2. 8. Trin. ii. 4. 19. Jurat.—se fore mancipii tempus in omne tui, devoted to you, Ovid. Pont. iv. 5. 39. Sui mancipii esse, to be one's own master, to be subject to the dominion of no one, Cic. ad Brut. 16. So mancipare agrum alicui, to sell an estate to any one, Plin. Ep. vii. 18. emancipare fundos, to divest one's self of the property, and convey it to another, Id. x. 3.

Cicero commonly uses mancipium and nexum or -us, as of the same import; pro Muren. 2. pro Flacc. 32. Cæcin. 16. but sometimes he distinguishes them; as, de Harusp. 7. where mancipium implies complete property, and nexus only the right of obligation, as when one receives any thing by way of a pledge. Thus a creditor had his insolvent debtor jure nexi, but not jure mancipii, as he possessed his slave.

There were various other modes of acquiring legal property ; as 1. JURE CESSIO, or CESSIO IN JURE, Cic. Top. 5. when a person gave up his effects to any one before the prætor or president of a province, who adjudged them to the person who claimed them, (vindicanti addicebat;) which chiefly took place in the case of debtors, who, when they were insolvent, gave up their goods (bona cedebant) to their creditors.

2. USUCAPTIO vel USUCAPIO, Cic. Cæcin. 26. Legg. i. 21. and also usûs auctoritas, when one obtained the property of a thing, by possessing it for a certain time without interruption, according to the law of the twelve tables ; for two years, if it was a farm or immoveable, and for one year if the thing was moveable ; Ut usus auctoritas, i. e. jus domini, quod usu paratur, fundi biennium, cæterarum rerum annus usus esset, Plin. Ep. v. i. But this took place only among citizens. For ADVERSUS HOSTEM, i. e. peregrinum, æterna auctoritas erat ; sc. alicujus rei, Cic. Off. i. 12. i. e. res semper vindicari poterat a peregrino, et nunquam usu capi. Hence Cicero says, Nihil mortales a diis usucapere possunt. If there was any interruption in the possession, it was called USURPATIO, which, in country farms, seems to have been made by breaking off the shoot of a tree, (surculo defringendo,) Cic. de Orat. iii. 28. But afterwards a longer time was necessary to constitute prescription, especially in the provinces ; namely, ten years among those who were present, and twenty years among those who were absent. Sometimes a length of time was required beyond remembrance. This new method of acquiring property by possession, was called LONGA POSSESSIONE CAPIO, or LONGÆ POSSESSIONIS PRÆROGATIVA, vel PRÆSCRIPTIO.

3. EMITIO SUB CORONA, i. e. purchasing captives in war, who were sold with chaplets on their heads. See p. 38.

4. AUCTIO, whereby things were exposed to public sale, (hastæ, v. voci præconis subjiciebantur,) when a spear being set up, and a public crier calling out the price, (præcone pretium proclamante,) the magistrate who was present adjudged them (addicebat) to the highest bidder, Cic. Phil. ii. 26. The person who bade, held up his finger, (digitum tollebat,) Cic. Verr. i. 54. digito licitus est, iii. 11.

The custom of setting up a spear at an auction seems to have been derived from this, that at first only those things which were taken in war were sold in that manner. Hence hasta is put for a public sale, and sub hastâ venire, to be publicly sold.

The day, sometimes the hour, and the terms of the auction, used to be advertised, either by a common crier, (a præcone prædicari, v. conclamari,) Plaut. Men. v. 9. 94. or in writing, (tabulâ proscribi,) Cic. Ep. ad Fratr. ii. 6. Proscribatur, sc. (domus seu quis emere, seu conducere vellet,) Plin. Ep. vii. 27. (Ædes venales inscribit literis,) Plaut. Trin. i. 2. 131. Hence tabula is put for the auction itself, ib.—(Tabulum proscribere,) for auktionem constituere ; (proscri- bere domum v. fundum), to advertise for sale, Cic. And those whose goods were thus advertised, were said pendere, Suet. Claud. 9. and also the goods bona suspensa; because the advertisement (libellus v. tabella) was affixed to a pillar (pila v. columna), in some public place, Senec. de Benef. iv. 12. So (tabulas auctionarias proferre v. tabulam), to publish, Cic. Cat. ii. 8. Phil. ii. 29. (ad tabulam adesse), to be present at the sale, pro Quinct. 6. Thus also (sub titulum nostros misit avar lares, i. e. domum), forced me to expose my house to sale, Ovid. Reméd. Amor. 302.

It behoved the auction to be made in public, Cic. Ib. & contra Rull. i. 3, and there were courts in the Forum where auctions were made, (ATRIA AUCTIONARIA,) to which Juvenal is thought to allude, Sat. vii. 7. A money-broker (argentarius) was also present, who marked down what was bidden, and to whom the purchaser either paid down the price, or gave security for it, Cic. pro Cæcin. 6. Quinctil. ix. 2. The sale was sometimes deferred, (auctio proferebatur), Cic. ad Atticum, xiii. 12.

The seller was called AUCTOR, and was said (vendere auctiorem), Cic. pro Quinct. 5. in the same manner as a general, when he sold the whole plunder of a city, was said (vendere sectionem), Cæs. de Bell. Gall. ii. 33. The right of property conveyed to the purchaser was called AUCTORITAS; and if that right was not complete, he was said (a malo auctore emere), to buy from a person who had not a right to sell, Cic. in Verr. v. 22. Plaut. Curc. iv. 2. 12.

5. ADJUDICATIO, which properly took place only in three cases; (in familiâ, herciscundâ vel ercto ciundo), i. e. (hereditate dividenda), in dividing an inheritance among co-heirs, Cic. Orat. i. 58. Cæcin. 3. in communi dividendo, in dividing a joint stock among partners, Cic. Ep. vii. 12. in finibus regundis, in settling boundaries among neighbours, Cic. Legg. i. 21. when the judge determined any thing to any of the heirs, partners, or neighbours, of which they got immediate property; but arbiters were commonly appointed in settling bounds, Cic. Top. 10. Sometimes, however, things were said to be adjudged (adjudicari) to a person, which he obtained by the sentence of a judge from any cause whatever.

6. DONATIO. Donations which were made for some cause, were called MUNERA; as from a client or freedman to his patron, on occasion of a birth or marriage, Ter. Phorm. i. 1. 13. Things given without any obligation, were called DONA; but these words are often confounded.

At first presents were but rarely given among the Romans; but afterwards, upon the increase of luxury, they became very frequent and costly. Clients and freedmen sent presents to their patrons, Plin. Ep. v. 14. slaves to their masters, citizens to the emperors and magistrates, friends and relations to one another, and that on various occasions; particularly on the Kalends of January, called STRE-NÆ; at the feasts of Saturn, and at public entertainments, APO-PHORETA; to guests, XENIA; on birth-days, at marriages, &c. Plin. & Martial. passim.

Things acquired by any of the above-mentioned methods, or by inheritance, by adoption, (arrogatione), or by law, as a legacy, &c. were said to be IN DOMINIO QUIRITARIO, i. e. justo et legitimo; Other things were said to be IN BONIS, and the proprietors of them were called BONITARII, whose right was not so good as that of the DOMINI QUIRITARII, qui optimo jure possidere dicebantur, who were secure against lawsuits. But Justinian abolished these distinctions.

When a person had the use and enjoyment of a thing, but not the power or property of alienating, it was called USUSFRUCTUS, either in one word; thus, Ususfructum omnium bonorum suorum Cæsennæ legat, ut frueretur and cum filio, Cic. Cæcin. 4. or in two; as Usus enim ejus et fructus fundi testamento viri fuerat Cæsennæ, Ib. 7. and the person FRUCTUARIUS, or USUFRUCTUARIUS.

6. The RIGHT of TESTAMENT and INHERITANCE.

None but Roman citizens (sui juris) could make a will, or be witnesses to a testament, or inherit any thing by testament, Cic. pro Arch. 5. Dom. 32.

Anciently testaments used to be made at the Comitia Curiate, which were in that case properly called Calata, Gell. xv. 27.

The testament of a soldier just about to engage, was said to be made IN PROCINCTU, when in the camp, while he was girding himself, or preparing for battle, in presence of his fellow-soldiers, without writing, he named his heir, (nuncupavit), Cic. de Nat. D. ii. 3. de Orat. i. 53. So in procinctu carmina facta, written by Ovid at Tomos, where he was in continual danger of an attack from the Gætæ, Pont. i. 8. 10.

But the usual method of making a will, after the laws of the twelve tables were enacted, was PER ÆS ET LIBRAM, or per familia emptionem, as it was called; wherein before five witnesses, a libripens and an antestatus, the testator, by an imaginary sale, disposed of his family and fortunes to one who was called FAMILIÆ EMP-TOR, who was not the heir, as some have thought, Suet. Ner. 4. but only admitted for the sake of form, (dicis causâ), that it might appear that the testator had alienated his effects in his life-time. This act was called FAMILIÆ MANCIPIATIO; which being finished in due form, the testator, holding the testament in his hand, said, HÆC UTI IN HIS TABULIS CERISVE SCRIPTA SUNT, ITA DO ITA LEGO, ITA TESTOR, ITAQUE VOS, QUIRITES, TESTIMONIUM PRÆBITOTE. Upon which, as was usual in like cases, he gently touched the tip of the ears of the witnesses; (auriculâ tactâ antestabatur, quod in imâ aure memoriæ locus erat, Plin. xi. 45.) this act was called NUNCUPATIO TESTAMENTI, Plin. Ep. viii. 13. Hence nuncupare heredem, for nominare, scribere, or facere, Suet. & Plin. passim. But sometimes this word signifies to name one's heir vivâ voce, without writing; as Horace just before his death is said to have named Augustus. The above-mentioned formalities were not always observed, especially in later times. It was reckoned sufficient if one subscribed his will, or even named his heir viva voce, before seven witnesses. Something similar to this seems to have prevailed anciently, Cic. Verr. i. 45. whence an edict about that matter is called by Cicero, VETUS ET TRANSLATITIVUM, as being usual, Ib. 44.

Sometimes the testator wrote his will wholly with his own hand, in which case it was called holographum. Sometimes it was written by a friend or by others, Plin. Epist. vi. 26. Thus the testament of Augustus was partly written by himself, and partly by two of his freedmen, Suet. Aug. 102. Lawyers were usually employed in writing or drawing up wills, Cic. de Orat. ii. 6. Suet. Ner. 32. But it was ordained under Claudius, or Nero, that the writer of another's testament (called by lawyers testamentarius,) should not mark down any legacy for himself, Suet. Ner. 17. When a testament was written by another, the testator wrote below that he had dictated and read it over, (SE ID DICTASSE ET RECOGNOVISSE.) Testaments were usually written on tables covered with wax, because in them a person could most easily erase what he wished to alter, Quinctilian. x. 3. 31. Hence CERÆ is put for tabulæ ceratæ or tabulæ testamenti, Juvenal. i. 63. PRIMA CERA, for prima pars tabulæ, the first part of the will, Horat. Sat. ii. 5. 53. and CERA EXTREMA, or ima, for the last part, Cic. Verr. i. 36. Suet. Juvenal. 83. But testaments were called TABULÆ, although written on paper or parchment, Ulpian.

Testaments were always subscribed by the testator, and usually by the witnesses, and sealed with their seals or rings, (signis eorum obsignabantur.) Cic. pro Cluent. 13 & 14. and also with the seals of others, Cic. Att. vii. 2. Suet. Tib. c. ult. Plin. Ep. ix. 1. They were likewise tied with a thread. Hence nec mea subjectâ convicta est gemma tabellâ mendacem linis imposuisse notam, Nor is my ring, i. e. nor am I convicted of having affixed a false mark, or seal, to the thread on a forged deed or will, Ovid. Pont. ii. 9. 69. It was ordained that the thread should be thrice drawn through holes, and sealed, Suet. Ner. 17.

The testator might unseal (resignare) his will, if he wished to alter or revise it, (mutare vel recognoscere.) Sometimes he cancelled it altogether: sometimes he only erased (inducebat v. delebat) one or two names.

Testaments, like all other civil deeds, were always written in Latin. A legacy expressed in Greek was not valid, Ulpian. Fragm. xxv. 9.

There used to be several copies of the same testament. Thus Tiberius made two copies of his will, the one written by himself, and the other by one of his freedmen, Suet. Tib. c. ult.

Testaments were deposited, either privately in the hands of a friend, or in a temple with the keeper of it, (apud Æditium.) Thus Julius Cæsar is said to have intrusted his testament to the eldest of the Vestal Virgins, Suet. Jul. 83.

In the first part of a will, the heir or heirs were written thus: Ti-

TITUS MIHI HÆRES ESTO, sit v. erit; or thus, TITUM HÆREDEM ESSE JUBEO, vel volo; also, hæredem facio, scribo, instituo. If there were several heirs, their different portions were marked. If a person had no children of his own, he assumed others, not only to inherit his fortune, but also to bear his name, (nomen suum ferre), as Julius Cæsar did Augustus, (in familiam nomenque adoptavit, adscivit, Suet. Assumpsit, Plin.)

If the heir or heirs who were first appointed (instituti) did not choose to accept, (hæreditatem adire, v. cernere nollent), or died under the age of puberty, others were substituted in their room, called HÆREDES SECUNDI; secundo loco v. gradu scripti v. substituti, Cic. pro Cluent. 11. Horat. Sat. ii. 5. 45. Suet. Jul. 83.

A corporate city (respublica) could neither inherit an estate nor receive a legacy, Plin. Ep. v. 7. but this was afterwards changed.

A man might disinherit (exhæredare) his own children, one or all of them, and appoint what other persons he pleased to be his heirs; thus, TITUS FILIUS MEUS EXHÆRES ESTO, Plin. Ep. v. 1. Hence Juvenal. Sat. 10. Codice sævo hæredes vetat esse suos. Sometimes the cause (ELOGIUM, i. e. causa exhæredationis), was added, Cic. pro Cluent. 48. Quintilian. vii. 4. 40. decl. 2. A testament of this kind was called INOFFICIOSUM, and when the children raised an action for rescinding it, it was said to be done per querelam INOFFICIOSI.

Sometimes a man left his fortune in trust (fidei committebat) to a friend on certain conditions, particularly that he should give it up (ut restitueret v. redderet) to some person or persons. Whatever was left in this manner, whether the whole estate, or any one thing, as, a farm, &c. was called FIDEICOMMISSUM, a trust; and a person to whom it was thus left, was called HÆRES FIDUCIARIUS, who might either be a citizen or a foreigner, l. 8. § 4. D. de acceptil.

A testament of this kind was expressed in the form of a request or intreaty, (verbis precativis;) thus, ROGO, PETO, VELO, MANDO, FIDELI TULÆ COMMITTO, Ter. And. ii. 5. and not by way of command, (verbis imperativis;) as all testaments were, and might be written in any language.

In the last part of the will, (in tabulis secundis), tutors were appointed for one's children, and legacies (legata) left to legatees, (legatariis), all in direct and commanding words; thus, TUTOR ESTO, vel TUTORES SUNTO: TUTOREM, v. -ES DO, Cic. Ep. xiii. 61. Plin. Ep. ii. 1. And to their protection the testator recommended his children, Ovid. Trist. iii. Eleg. 14.

Legacies were left in four different ways, which lawyers have distinguished by the following names,—1. Per VINDICATIONEM; thus, DO, LEGO; also, CAPITO, SUMITO, v. HABETO, to which Virgil alludes, Æn. v. 533. This form was so called from the mode of claiming property, Cic. pro Muræn. 12.—2. per DAMNATIONEM: thus, HÆRES, MEUS DAMNAS ESTO DARE, &c. Let my heir be bound, &c. Quinctil. vii. 9. and so in the plural, DAMNAS SUNTO. By this form the testator was said, damnare hæredem, to bind his heir.

Hence damnare aliquem volis, Virgil, Æn. v. 80. Civitas damnati voti, bound to perform, Liv. v. 25. But it was otherwise expressed; thus, HÆRES MEUS DATO, FACITO; HÆREDEM MEUM DARE JUBEBO.—3. SINENDI modo: thus, HÆRES MEUS SINITO, vel DAMNAS ESTO SINERE LUCIUM TITIUM SUMERE ILLAM REM, v. SIRI HABERE.—4. Per PRÆCEPTIONEM; thus, L. TITIUS ILLAM REM PRÆCIPITO, E MEDIO, vel E MEDIA HÆREDITATE SUMITO, SIBIQUE HABETO, vel Præcipiat, &c. when any thing was left to any person, which he was to get before the inheritance was divided, or when any thing particular was left to any one of the coheirs besides his own share, to which Virgil alludes, Æn. ix. 271. Hence PRÆCIPERE, to receive in preference to others; and PRÆCEPTIO, a certain legacy to be paid out of the first part of the fortune of the deceased, Plin. Ep. v. 7. as certain creditors had a privilege to be preferred to others (PROTOPRAXIA, i. e. privilegium quo cæteris creditoribus, præponantur.) Id. x. 109. 110.

When additions were made to a will, they were called CODICILLI. They were expressed in the form of a letter, addressed to the heirs, sometimes also to trustees, (ad fideicommissarios.) It behoved them, however, to be confirmed by the testament, Plin. Ep. ii. 16.

After the death of the testator, his will was opened, Horat. Ep. i. 7. in presence of the witnesses who had sealed it, (coram signatoribus,) or a majority of them, Suet. Tib. 23. And if they were absent or dead, a copy of the will was taken in presence of other respectable persons, and the authentic testament was laid up in the public archives, that if the copy were lost another might be taken from it, (esset unde peti posset.) Horace ridicules a miser, who ordered his heirs to inscribe on his tomb the sum he left, Sat. ii. 3. 84.

It was esteemed honourable to be named in the testament of a friend or relation, and considered as a mark of disrespect to be passed over, Cic. pro Domo, 19 & 32. pro Sext. 52. Phil. ii. 16. Suet. Aug. 66.

It was usually required by the testament, that the heir should enter upon the inheritance within a certain time, in 60 or 100 days at most, Cic. ad Att. xiii. 46. de Orat. i. 22. Plin. Ep. x. 79. This act was called HÆREDITATIS CRETIO, (hæres cum constituit se heredem esse dicitur CERNERE, Varr. L. L. vi. 5.) and was performed before witnesses in these words: CUM ME MEVIUS HÆREDEM INSTITUERIT, EAM HÆREDITATEM CERNO ADEOQUE. After saying which, (dictis cretionis verbis,) the heir was said HÆREDITATEM ADISSE. But when this formality (CRETIONIS SOLEMNITAS) was not required, one became heir by acting as such, (pro hærede SE GERENDO, vel GESTIONE,) although he might also, if he chose, observe the solemn form.

If the father or grandfather succeeded, they were called hæredes ASCENDENTES; if, as was natural, the children or grandchildren, DESCENDENTES; if brothers or sisters, COLLATERALES.

If any one died without making a will, (intestatus,) his goods devolved on his nearest relations; first to his children; failing them, to his nearest relations by the father's side, (agnatis,) and, failing them, to those of the same gens (gentilibus.) At Nice, the community claimed the estate of every citizen, who died intestate, Plin. x. 88.

The inheritance was commonly divided into twelve parts, called uncia. The whole was called AS. Hence hæres ex asse, heir to one's whole fortune; hæres ex semisse, ex triente, doctrante, &c. to the half, third, three-fourths, &c.

The UNCIA was also divided into parts; the half, SEMUNCIA, the third, DUELLA, or binæ sextulæ, the fourth, SICILICUM v. -us, the sixth, SEXTULA, Cic. pro Cæcin. 6.

The RIGHT of TUTELAGE or WARDSHIP.

ANY father of a family might leave whom he pleased as guardians (tutores) to his children, Liv. i. 34. But if he died intestate, this charge devolved by law on the nearest relation by the father's side. Hence it was called TUTELA LEGITIMA. This law is generally blamed, as in later times it gave occasion to many frauds in prejudice of wards, (pupilli.) Horat. Sat. ii. 5. Juvenal. Sat. vi. 38.

When there was no guardian by testament, nor a legal one, then a guardian was appointed to minors and to women, by the prætor, and the majority of the tribunes of the people by the Atilian law, made A. U. 443. But this law was afterwards changed.

Among the ancient Romans women could not transact any private business of importance, without the concurrence of their parents, husbands, or guardians, Liv. xxxiv. 2. Cic. Flacc. 34 & 35. and a husband at his death might appoint a guardian to his wife, as to his daughter, or leave her the choice of her own guardians, Liv. xxxix. 19. Women, however, seem sometimes to have acted as guardians, Liv. xxxix. 9.

If any guardian did not discharge his duty properly, or defrauded his pupil, there was an action against him, (judicium tutelæ.) Cic. pro Q. Rosc. 6. Orat. i. 36. Cæcin. 3.

Under the emperors, guardians were obliged to give security, (satisdare,) for their proper conduct, (REM PUPILLI FORE SALVAM.) Digest. A signal instance of punishment inflicted on a perfidious guardian is recorded, Suet. Galb. 9.

II. PUBLIC RIGHTS of ROMAN CITIZENS.

These were, Jus Censûs, Militiæ, Tributorum, Suffragii, Honorum, et Sacrorum.

I. JUS CENSUS. The right of being enrolled in the censor's books. This will be treated of in another place.

II. JUS MILITIÆ. The right of serving in the army. At first none but citizens were enlisted, and not even those of the lowest class. But in after times, this was altered; and under the emperors, soldiers were taken, not only from Italy and the provinces, but also at last from barbarous nations, Zosim. iv. 30 & 31.

III. JUS TRIBUTORUM. TRIBUTUM properly was a tax publicly imposed on the people, which was exacted from each individual through the tribes in proportion to the valuation of his estate, (pro portione census.) Money publicly exacted on any other account, or in any other manner, was called VECTIGAL, Varro de Ling. Lat. iv. 36. But these words are not always distinguished.

There were three kinds of tribute; one imposed equally on each person, (in capita.) which took place under the first kings, Dionys. iv. 43. another according to the valuation of their estate; (ex censu.) Liv. i. 43. iv. 60. Dionys. iv. 8. 19. and a third, which was extraordinary, and demanded only in cases of necessity, and therefore depending on no rule, (temerarium.) Festus. It was in many instances also voluntary, Liv. xxvi. 36. and an account of it was taken, that when the treasury was again enriched, it might be repaid, as was done after the second Punic war, Id.

After the expulsion of the kings, the poor were for some time freed from the burden of taxes, until the year 349, when the senate decreed, that pay should be given from the treasury to the common soldiers in the army, who had hitherto served at their own expense; whereupon all were forced to contribute annually according to their fortune for the pay of the soldiers, Liv. iv. 59 and 60.

In the year of the city 586, annual tributes were remitted, on account of the immense sums brought into the treasury by L. Paulus Æmilius, after the defeat of Perseus, Cic. Offic. ii. 22. and this immunity from taxes continued, according to Plutarch, down to the consulship of Hirtius and Pansa.

The other taxes (VECTIGALIA) were of three kinds, Portorium, Decumæ, and Scriptura.

1. PORTORIUM was money paid at the port for goods imported and exported, the collectors of which were called PORTITORES; or for carrying goods over a bridge, where every carriage paid a certain sum to the exacter of the toll, Digest. Vid. Cæs. B. G. i. 18. et III. 1. The portoria were remitted A. U. 692, the year in which Pompey triumphed over Mithridates, Dio. 37. 51. Cic. Att. ii. 16. but were afterwards imposed on foreign merchandise by Cæsar, Suet. Jul. 43.

2. DECUMÆ, Tithes, were the tenth part of corn, and the fifth part of other fruits, which were exacted from those who tilled the public lands, either in Italy or without it. Those who farmed the tithes were called DECUMANI, and esteemed the most honourable of the publicans or farmers general, as agriculture was esteemed the most honourable way of making a fortune among the Romans, Cic. Verr. ii. 13. iii. 8. The ground from which tithes were paid was also called DECUMANUS, Cic. Verr. ii. 6. But these lands were all sold or distributed among the citizens at different times, and the land of Capua the last, by Cæsar, Suet. Jul. 2. Cic. Att. ii. 16.

3. SCRIPTURA was the tax paid from public pastures and woods, so called, because those who wished to feed their cattle there, subscribed their names before the farmer of them, (coram pecuario vel scripturario,) Varro de Re Rustica, ii. 2. 16. and paid a certain sum for each beast; Festus in SCRIPTURARIUS AGEÆ, as was likewise done in all the tithe-lands, (in agris decumanis.) Cic. Verr. iii. 52. Plaut. Truc. i. 2. 44.

All those taxes were let publicly by the censors at Rome, (locabantur sub hastâ) Cic. Rull. 1. 3. Those who farmed them (redimebant v. conducebant) were called PUBLICANI or MANCIPES, Cic. pro Domo, 10. They also gave security to the people, (Pænes,) and had partners who shared the profit and loss with them, (Socui.)

There was a long tax upon salt. In the second year after the expulsion of Tarquin, it was ordained that salt should not be sold by private persons, but should be furnished at a lower rate by the public, Liv. ii. 9. A new tax was imposed on salt in the second Punic war, at the suggestion of the censors Claudius Nero and Livius, chiefly the latter, who hence got the surname of Salinator, Liv. xxix. 37. But this tax was also dropped, although it is uncertain at what time.

There was another tax, which continued longer, called VICESIMA, i. e. the twentieth part of the value of any slave who was freed, Cic. Att. ii. 16. It was imposed by a law of the people assembled by tribes, and confirmed by the senate. What was singular, the law was passed in the camp, Liv. vii. 16. The money raised from this tax (aurum vicesimarium) used to be kept for the last exigencies of the state, Liv. xxvii. 10.

Various other taxes were invented by the emperors; as the hundredth part of things to be sold, (centesima, Tacit. i. 78.) the twenty-fifth of slaves, (vigesima quinta mancipiorum,) and the twentieth of inheritances, (vigesima hæreditatum,) by Augustus, Suet. Aug. 49. Dio. lv. 25. a tax on eatables, (pro edulibus,) by Caligula, Suet. 40. and even on urine, by Vespasian, Suet. 23, &c.

IV. JUS SUFFRAGII, the right of voting in the different assemblies of the people.

V. JUS HONORUM, the right of bearing public offices in the state. These were either priesthoods or magistracies, (sacerdotia et magistratus,) which at first were conferred only on Patricians, but afterwards were all, except a few, shared with the Plebeians.

VI. JUS SACRORUM. Sacred rites were either public or private. The public were those performed at the public expense; the private were those which every one privately observed at home. The Vestal Virgins preserved the public hearth of the city: the curiones with their curiales kept the hearths of the thirty curiæ; the priests of each village kept the fires of each village (Pagorum.) And because upon the public establishment of Christianity in the empire, when by the decrees of Constantine and his sons, the profane worship of the gods was prohibited in cities, and their temples shut, those who were attached to the old superstition fled to the country, and secretly performed their former sacred rites in the villages; hence PAGANS came to be used for Heathens, (θῆται, Gentiles,) or for those who were not Christians; as anciently among the Romans, those were called PAGANI who were not soldiers, Jurvenal. xvi. 32. Suet. Galb. 19. Plin. Ep. vii. 25. Thus, Pagani et Montani, are called Plebes Urbana by Cicero, because they were ranked among the city tribes, although they lived in the villages and mountains, pro Domo. 28.

Each gens had certain sacred rites peculiar to itself, (gentilitia, Liv. v. 52.) which they did not intermit even in the heat of a war, Liv. v. 46. Every father of a family had his own household-gods, whom he worshipped privately at home.

Those who came from the free towns, and settled at Rome, retained their municipal sacred rites, and the colonies retained the sacred rites of the Roman people.

No new or foreign gods could be adopted by the Romans, unless by public authority. Thus Æsculapius was publicly sent for from Epidaurus, and Cybèle from Phrygia, Liv. xxix. 11 & 12. Hence if any one had introduced foreign rites of himself, they were publicly condemned by the senate, Liv. iv. 30. xxv. 1. xxxix. 16. But under the emperors all the superstitions of foreign nations were transferred to Rome; as the sacred rites of Isis, Serâpis, and Anûbis from Egypt, &c.

It was a maxim among the Romans, that no one could be a citizen of Rome, who suffered himself to be made a citizen of any other city, Cic. pro Cæcim. 36. Nepos in vita Alcibi, 3. which was not the case in Greece, Cic. pro Arch. 5. And no one could lose the freedom of the city against his will, Cic. pro Dom. 29 & 30. pro Cæcim. 33. If the rights of a citizen were taken from any one, either by way of punishment, or for any other cause, some fiction always took place. Thus when citizens were banished, they did not expel them by force, but their goods were confiscated, and themselves were forbidden the use of fire and water, (is igne et aquâ, interdictum est,) which obliged them to repair to some foreign place. Augustus added to this form of banishment what was called DEPORTATIO, whereby the condemned, being deprived of their rights and fortunes, were conveyed to a certain place, without leaving it to their own choice to go where they pleased.

When any one was sent away to any place, without being deprived of his rights and fortunes, it was called RELEGATIO. Thus Ovid, Trist. ii. 137. v. 11. 21.

So captives in war did not properly lose the rights of citizens.

Those rights were only suspended, and might be recovered, as it was called, jure postliminii, by the right of restoration or return, Cic. Top. 8. de Orat. i. 40.

In like manner, if any foreigner, who had got the freedom of Rome, returned to his native city, and again became a citizen of it, he ceased to be a Roman citizen, Cic. pro Balb. 12. This was called postliminium, with regard to his own country, and rejectio civitatis, with regard to Rome.

Any loss of liberty, or of the rights of citizens, was called DIMINUTIO CAPITIS, Cic. pro Mil. 36. jus libertatis imminutum, Salust. Cat. 37. Hence Capitis minor, sc. ratione vel respectu, or capite diminutus, lessened in his state, or degraded from the rank of a citizen, Horat. Od. iii. 5. 42. The loss of liberty, which included the loss of the city, and of one's family, was called diminutio capitis maxima; banishment diminutio media; any change of family minima, Digest. ii. de capite minutis.

JUS LATII.

THE JUS LATII, or LATINITAS, Suet. Aug. 47. Cic. Att. xiv. 12. was next to the jus civitatis.

Latium anciently (Latium Vetus) was bounded by the rivers Tiber, Anio, Ufens, and the Tuscan sea. It contained the Albans, Rutuli, and Æqui. It was afterwards extended (Latium Novum) to the River Liris, by Pliny called Glanis; hence its modern name, Garrigliana; and comprehended the Oscii, Ausones, and Volsci, Plin. iii. 9. The inhabitants of Latium were called LATINI SOCII, NOMEN LATINUM, ET SOCII LATINI NOMINIS, &c. Socii et Latini Nomen, means the Italians and Latins.

The JUS LATII was inferior to the jus civitatis, and superior to the jus Italicum; but the precise difference is not ascertained.

The Latins used their own laws, and were not subject to the edicts of the Roman prætor. They were permitted to adopt some of the Roman laws, if they chose it, and then they were called POPULI FUNDI, Cic. pro Balb. 8. If any state did not choose it, it was said ei legi v. de ea lege fundus fieri nolle, i. e. auctor, subscriptor esse, v. eam probare et recipere, ib.

The Latins were not enrolled at Rome, but in their own cities, Liv. xli. 9. They might be called to Rome to give their votes about any thing, Liv. xxv. 3. But then they were not included in a certain tribe, and used to cast lots to know in what tribe they should vote, ibid. and when the consuls chose, they ordered them, by a decree of the senate, to leave the city, Cic. Brut. 26. which, however, rarely happened, Cic. pro Sextio, 15.

Such Latins as had borne a civil office in their own state, became citizens of Rome, Appian. de Bell. Civ. ii. p. 443. but could not enjoy honours before the lex Julia was made, Liv. viii. 4. xxiii. 22. by which law, the right of voting and of enjoying honours was granted to those who had continued faithful to Rome in the Social war,

A. U. 663 ; which the Latins had done. The distinction, however, betwixt the jus Latii and the jus civitatis, and the same mode of acquiring the full right of citizenship, (per Latium in civitatum vinienti) was still retained, Plin. Paneg. 37 & 38. Strab. iv. p. 186. f.

The Latins at first were not allowed the use of arms for their own defence, without the order of the people, Liv. ii. 30. iii. 19. but afterwards they served as allies in the Roman army, and indeed constituted the principal part of its strength. They sometimes furnished two-thirds of the cavalry, and also of the infantry, Liv. iii. 22. xxi. 17. et alibi passim. But they were not embodied in the legions, and were treated with more severity than Roman citizens, being punished with stripes, from which citizens were exempted by the Porcian law, Sallust. Jug. 69.

The Latins had certain sacred rites in common with Roman citizens : as the sacred rites of Diana at Rome, (instituted by Servius Tullius, Liv. i. 45. in imitation of the Amphictyones at Delphi, and of the Grecian states in Asia in the temple of Diana at Ephesus, Dionys. iv. 26.) and the Latin holy days kept with great solemnity on the Alban mountain ; first for one day, the 27th April, and afterwards for several days. The Romans always presided at the sacrifices, Liv. xxi. c. ult. xx. 1. Dionys. iv. 49. Besides these, the Latins had certain sacred rites, and deities peculiar to themselves, which they worshipped ; as Feronia at Terracina, Jupiter at Lanuvium, Liv. xxxii. 9.

They had also solemn assemblies in the grove of Ferentina, Liv. i. 50. which appear in ancient times to have been employed for political as well as religious purposes. From this convention all those were excluded who did not enjoy the jus Latii.

JUS ITALICUM.

ALL the country between the Tuscan and Adriatic seas, to the rivers Rubicon and Macra, except Latium, was called Italy. The states of Italy being subdued by the Romans in different wars, were received into alliance on different conditions. In many respects they were in the same state with the Latins. They enjoyed their own laws and magistrates, and were not subject to the Roman Prætor. They were taxed (censi) in their own cities, and furnished a certain number of soldiers according to treaty. But they had no access to the freedom of Rome, and no participation of sacred rites.

After the second Punic war, several of the Italian states, for having revolted to Hannibal, were reduced to a harder condition by the Dictator Sulpicius Galba, A. U. 550 ; especially the Bruttii, Picentini, and Lucani, who were no longer treated as allies, and did not furnish soldiers, but public slaves, A. Gell. x. 3. Capua, which a little before had been taken, lost its public buildings and territory, Liv. xxvi. 16. But after a long and violent struggle in the Social, or Marsic war, all the Italians obtained the right of voting and of enjoying honours by the Julian, and other laws. Sulla abridged these

MUNICIPIA, COLONIÆ, ET PRÆFECTURÆ.

MUNICIPIA were foreign towns which obtained the rights of Roman citizens.* Some possessed all the rights of Roman citizens, except such as could not be enjoyed without residing at Rome. Others enjoyed the right of serving in the Roman legion, (MUNERA militaria CAPERE poterant;) but had not the right of voting and of obtaining civil offices.

The Municipia used their own laws and customs, which were called LEGES MUNICIPALES; nor were they obliged to receive the Roman laws unless they chose it: (nisi FUNDI FIERI velent.) And some chose to remain as confederate states, (civitates fœderatae;) rather than to become Roman citizens; as the people of Heraclea and Naples, Cic. pro Balbo, 8.

There were anciently no such free towns except in Italy, but after-

* "Verrius Flaccus, in his great work on the signification of rare words, treated at length of the word municipes, which for a hundred years before had been used familiarly in a sense quite different from the one it bore in the old constitutional law, namely, for all such Italians as were neither settled at Rome nor in military colonies, as municipium was for their country-towns. He therefore gave a definition of municipium illustrated with examples, by a jurist of the last age of the republic; to which he added remarks of other antiquarians on the condition of the municipes. Municipium beyond doubt, like mancipium, was originally the right itself; but, as happened at least in one sense to the latter word, was transferred to the object to which the right was attached: in this instance to the class that possessed it. This class is the subject of the definition referred to, which distinguishes three kinds of municipia. The first and most ancient of these is defined with great precision: it comprised those persons who, if they came to Rome, shared all the rights and burthens of Roman citizens without being such, but were excluded from the elective franchise and from honours. Another definition, expressly ascribed to an ancient jurist, notices it as a necessary condition, that the natural country of such municipals should be a completely distinct state from the Roman: it terms them, however, according to the franchise they enjoyed, Roman citizens, though ineligible to honours. The second class of municipals is merely defined, as persons whose whole state had been united with that of Rome: this applies no less to the third class, described in a way just as unintelligible in itself, as corporations of towns and colonies, which, by their adoption into the Roman state, had become municipia. But in both cases the examples supply what is wanting to the explanation. The Cærites and Anagninians are mentioned as instances of the second class; of whom the former represent all such municipals as were incapable of holding offices at Rome, and the latter, when they were degraded by way of punishment into the class of subjects, received the name of Roman citizens. The places in the third class are all either Latin colonies or Italian towns, such as by the Julian law, or by those which followed and gave it a wider application, became municipia in the later general sense. The situation of the subject towns of the second class was that of country-towns in a canton under a sovereign city, precluded from every independent relation to others, and unconditionally subject to the will of the ruling state: but the Roman country-towns of this class were more fortunate, inasmuch as they enjoyed all the privileges of isotelty in the capital. The colonies of the ancient sort were on the same footing with these communities, subject to the same personal disabilities, and equally incapable of legislating for themselves, though the whole body of their inhabitants possessed the Roman franchise. The last class embraced those towns and Latin colonies, the freemen of which were so united with the citizens of Rome, as to enjoy the highest franchise, be admitted into Roman rustic tribes, have votes, and be eligible to offices. After so complete a union the term municipes was as ill-suited to them as to a Patrician; but the want of a word to designate a newly formed relation caused the name of an extinct one to be applied to them." Niebuhr.—Ed.

wards we find them also in the provinces. Thus Pliny mentions eight in Batrica, and thirteen in hither Spain, Hist. Nat. iii. 2.

COLONIES were cities or lands which Roman citizens were sent to inhabit. They were transplanted commonly by three commissioners, (per triumviros coloniæ deducendæ agroque dividundo, Liv. viii. 16.) sometimes by five, ten, or more. Twenty were appointed to settle the colony of Capua, by the Julian law, Dio. xxxviii. 1. The people determined in what manner the lands were to be divided, and to whom. The new colony marched to their destined place in form of an army, with colours flying, (sub vexillo.) The lands were marked round with a plough, and his own portion assigned to every one, Virg. Æn. i. 425. v. 755. All which was done after taking the auspices, and offering sacrifices, Cic. Phil. ii. 40 & 42.*

When a city was to be built, the founder, dressed in a Gabinian garb, (Gabino cinctu ornatus, v. Gabino cultu incinctus, Liv. v. 46. i. e. with his toga tucked up, and the lappet of it thrown back over the left shoulder, and brought round under the right arm to the breast; so that it girded him, and made the toga shorter and closer,) yoking a cow and bull to the plough, the coulter whereof was of brass, marked out by a deep furrow the whole compass of the city; and these two animals with other victims were sacrificed on the altars. All the people or planters followed, and turned inwards the clods cut by the plough. Where they wanted a gate to be, they took up the plough and left a space. Hence PORTA, a gate, (a

* "The colonists were mostly settled as garrisons in fortified towns taken from the enemy, with land assigned to them instead of pay and provisions. The old inhabitants were not ejected, nor was the whole mass of landed property confiscated by the ruling state. Several stories in which the ancient usage is expressed, however devoid of historical truth, prove clearly that in the case of a genuine Roman colony the general rule was for only a third of the territory of the town it occupied to be confiscated and allotted to it, and that the rest was restored to the former owners. Of course this partition extended to the domain; unless this, as the publicum, passed entire into the hands of the new body, which represented the populus of the place: and assuredly what was left to the old inhabitants was not enjoyed by them free from burthens, though the confiscation of the third might serve as a redemption of the land-tax. A state of servitude it was, after all, and doubly galling, because endured in the home that had once been free: accordingly the old citizens often attempted to expel their lords, and, not satisfied with liberating themselves, to quench their hatred with blood. These insurrections, which occur frequently in early Roman history, are absurdly related as revolts of the colonies: for the name colonia can only be applied strictly to the body of colonists; now these depended on the parent state for their preservation, and there can have been very few traitors among them. When one of these places revolted, the colony must always have been expelled. But when Rome had attained to domestic peace, an entirely opposite spirit spread likewise into the legislation of the colonies: the colonists were Romans, Latins, or Italians: all who might have taken part in the first planting were at liberty to settle in the colonies as they chose; and assuredly nothing now prevented the old inhabitants and their descendants from recovering the civic franchise in the cities of their forefathers. These were the Latin colonies that reached such a brilliant eminence under the sovereignty of Rome. It is observed, that the colonies were miniature likenesses of the Roman people: which is perfectly correct as to those of the earliest period, and those only. The colonists were the populus, the old inhabitants the commonalty: and the former was represented by a senate, perhaps of not more than thirty members." Niebuhr.—Ed.

portando aratrum.) And the towns are said to have been called UR-BES from being surrounded by the plough, (ab ORBE, vel ab URVO, i. e. buri, sive aratri curvatura, Varro de Lat. Ling. iv. 2. Festus.) The form of founding cities among the Greeks is described by Pausanias, v. 27. who says that the first city built was Lycostira in Arcadia, viii. 38.

When a city was solemnly destroyed, the plough was also drawn along (inducebatur) where the walls had stood, Horat. Od. i. 16. Hence, Et seges est, ubi Troja fuit, Ovid. Her. i. 1. 53. We read in the sacred writings of salt being sown on the ground where cities had stood, Judg. ix. 45. Mic. iii. 12.

The walls of cities were looked upon by the ancients as sacred, but not the gates, Plut. Quæst. 26. The gates, however, were reckoned inviolable, (sanctæ.)

A space of ground was left free from buildings both within and without the walls, which was called POMÆRIUM, (i. e. locus circa murum, vel post murum intus et extra,) and was likewise held sacred, Liv. i. 44. Sometimes put only for the open space without the walls, Flor. i. 9. When the city was enlarged, the pomærium also was extended; (hi consecrati fines proferebantur, Liv. ibid.)*

The ceremonies used in building cities are said to have been borrowed from the Hetrurians, ibid.

It was unlawful to plant a new colony where one had been planted before, Cic. Phil. ii. 40. but supplies might be sent.

The colonies solemnly kept the anniversary of their first settlement, (diem natalem colonizæ religiosè colebant), Cic. ad Attic. iv. 1. Sext. 63.

Some colonies consisted of Roman citizens only, some of Latins, and others of Italians, Liv. xxxix. 55. Hence their rights were different. Some think that the Roman colonies enjoyed all the rights of citizens, as they are often called Roman citizens, and were once enrolled in the censor's books at Rome, Id. xxix. 37. But most are of opinion, that the colonies had not the right of voting, nor of bearing offices at Rome, from Dio. xliii. 39 & 50. The rights of Latin colonies were more limited; so that Roman citizens who gave their names to a Latin colony, suffered a diminution of rank, Cic. pro Cæcin. 33. pro Domo, 30. The Italian colonies were in a still worse condition. The difference consisted chiefly in their different immunity from taxes.

Sulla, to reward his veterans, first introduced the custom of settling MILITARY COLONIES, which was imitated by Julius Cæsar, Augustus, and others. To those colonies whole legions were sent with their officers, their tribunes, and centurions; but this custom afterwards fell into disuse, Tacit. Annal. xiv. 72. For the sake of distinction the other colonies were called CIVILES, PLEBEIÆ or TOGATÆ, because they consisted of citizens, or, as they were afterwards named, PAGANI, or Privati, who were opposed to soldiers. See p. 76.

* "The word pomærium itself seems properly to denote nothing more than a suburb taken into the city, and included within the range of its auspices. By the statement of Tacitus, that of Romulus ran from the Forum Boarium—that is, from the neighbourhood of the Janus through the valley of the Circus; then from the Septizonium to about the beginning of the Via del Colosseo, or a little below the baths of Trajan; from thence along the top of the Velia to the chapel of the Lares; and finally by the Via Sacra to the Forum." Niebuhr.—Ed.

The colonies differed from the free towns in this, that they used the laws prescribed them by the Romans, but they had almost the same kind of magistrates. Their two chief magistrates were called DUUMVIRI, and their senators DECURIONES; because, as some say, when the colony was first planted, every tenth man was made a senator. The fortune requisite to be chosen a Decurio, under the emperors, was a hundred thousand sestertii, Plin. Ep. i. 19.

The senate, or general council of Grecian cities under the Roman empire, was called BULE, (βουλή, consilium.) Plin. Ep. x. 85. its members, BULEUTÆ, ib. 115. the place where it met at Syracuse, BULEUTERIUM, Cic. Verr. ii. 21. an assembly of the people, ECCLESIA, Plin. Ep. x. 3. In some cities, those who were chosen in the senate by their censors, paid a certain sum for their admission, (honorarium decurionatus.) ib. 114. and that even although chosen contrary to their own inclinations, ibid. In Bithynia, they were subjected to regulations with respect to the choice of senators, similar to those at Rome, ib. 83. 115. An act passed by the senate or people, was called ΠΡΕΦΙΣΜΑ, Id. x. 52. 53. It was there customary, upon a person's taking the manly robe, solemnizing his marriage, entering upon the office of a magistrate, or dedicating any public work, to invite the whole senate, with a considerable part of the commonalty, to the number of a thousand, or more, and to distribute to each of the company a dole (sportula) of one or two denarii. This, as having the appearance of an ambitious largess (diamōne) was disapproved of by Trajan, Plin. Ep. x. 117. 118.

Each colony had commonly a patron, who took care of their interests at Rome, Dionys. ii. 11.

PRÆFECTURÆ, were towns to which prefects were annually sent from Rome, to administer justice, chosen partly by the people, and partly by the prætor, Festus. Towns were reduced to this form, which had been ungrateful to the Romans; as Calatia, Liv. i. 38. Dionys. iii. 50. Capua, Liv. xxvi. 16. and others. They neither enjoyed the rights of free towns nor of colonies, and differed little from the form of provinces. Their private right depended on the edicts of their prefects, and their public right on the Roman senate, who imposed on them taxes and service in war at pleasure. Some Præfecturæ, however, possessed greater privileges than others.

Places in the country, or towns where markets were held and justice administered, were called FORA; as Forum AURELIUM, Cic. Cat. i. 9. Forum APPII, Cic. Att. ii. 10. Forum Cornelii, Julii, Livii, &c.

Places where assemblies were held and justice administered, were called CONCILIABULA, Liv. xl. 37.

All other cities which were neither Municipia, Coloniæ, nor Præ- fectura, were called Confederate States, (CIVITATES FÆDERATÆ.) These were quite free, unless that they owed the Romans certain things according to treaty. Such was Capua before it revolted to Hannibal. Such were also Tarentum, Naples, Tibur, and Præneste.

FOREIGNERS.

ALL those who were not citizens, were called by the ancient Romans, foreigners, (PEREGRINI,) wherever they lived, whether in the city or elsewhere. But after Caracalla granted the freedom of the city to all freeborn men in the Roman world, and Justinian some time after granted it also to freedmen, the name of foreigners fell into disuse; and the inhabitants of the whole world were divided into Romans and Barbarians. The whole Roman empire itself was called ROMANIA, which name is still given to Thrace, as being the last province which was retained by the Romans, almost until the taking of Constantinople by the Turks, A. D. 1453.

While Rome was free, the condition of foreigners was very disagreeable. They might indeed live in the city, but they enjoyed none of the privileges of citizens. They were also subject to a particular jurisdiction, and sometimes were expelled from the city at the pleasure of the magistrates. Thus M. Junius Pennus, A. U. 627, and C. Papius Celsus, A. U. 688. both tribunes of the people, passed a law ordering foreigners to leave the city, Cic. Off. iii. 11. Brut. 8. So Augustus, Suet. Aug. 42. But afterwards an immense number of foreigners flocked to Rome from all parts, Juv. Sat. iii. 58. Seneca ad Helv. c. 8. So that the greatest part of the common people consisted of them; hence Rome is said to be mundi fœce repleta, Lucan. vii. 405.

Foreigners were neither permitted to use the Roman dress, Suet. Claud. 25. nor had they the right of legal property, or of making a will. When a foreigner died, his goods were either reduced into the treasury, as having no heir, (quasi bona vacantia), or if he had attached himself (se applicuisset) to any person as a patron, that person succeeded to his effects, JURE APPLICATIONIS, as it was called, Cic. de Orat. i. 39.

But in the process of time these inconveniences were removed, and foreigners were not only advanced to the highest honours in the state, but some of them even made emperors.

The ASSEMBLIES of the PEOPLE.

AN assembly of the whole Roman people to give their vote about any thing, was called COMITIA, (a coeundo vel comeundo.) When a part of the people only was assembled, it was called CONCILIUM, A. Gell. xv. 27. But these words were not always distinguished, Liv. vi. 20.

In the Comitia, every thing which came under the power of the people was transacted ; magistrates were elected, and laws passed, particularly concerning the declaration of war, and the making of peace. Persons guilty of certain crimes were also tried in the Comitia, Polyb. vi. 12.

The Comitia were always summoned by some magistrate, who presided in them, and directed every thing which came before them ; and he was then said, HABERE COMITIA. When he laid any thing before the people, he was said AGERE CUM POPULO, Gell. xiii. 14. As the votes of all the people could not be taken together, they were divided into parts.

There were three kinds of Comitia : the Curiata, instituted by Romulus ; the Centuriata, instituted by Servius Tullius, the sixth king of Rome ; and the Tributa, said to have been first introduced by the tribunes of the people at the trial of Coriolanus, A. U. 263.

The Comitia Curiata and Centuriata could not be held without taking the auspices, (nisi auspicatò,) nor without the authority of the senate, but the Tributa might, Dionys. ix. 41 & 49.

The days on which the Comitia could be held were called DIES COMITIALES, (i. e. quibus cum populo agere licebat.) Liv. iii. 2. Cic. Q. Fr. i. 2. Maerob. Sat. i. 16.

As in the senate, so in the Comitia, nothing could be done before the rising nor after the setting of the sun, Dio. xxxix. fin.

The Comitia for creating magistrates were usually held in the Campus Martius ; but for making laws, and for holding trials, sometimes also in the forum, and sometimes in the capitol.

The COMITIA CURIATA.

IN the Comitia Curiata the people gave their votes, divided into thirty curiæ ; (ita dictæ quod iis rerum publicarum cura commissa sit, Fest. vel potius a κῦρᾱ sc. ἐκκλησία, conventus populi apud Græcos ad jubendum vel vetandum quod e republica censeret esset.) And what a majority of them, namely sixteen, determined, was said to be the order of the people. At first there were no other Comitia but the Curiata, and therefore every thing of importance was determined in them.

The Comitia Curiata were held, first by the kings, and afterwards by the consuls and the other greater magistrates, that is, they presided at them, and nothing could be brought before the people but by them. They met in a part of the forum, called the COMITIUM, where a pulpit or tribunal (suggestum) stood, whence the orators used to harangue the people. It was afterwards called ROSTRA, because it was adorned with the beaks of the ships taken from the Antiates, Liv. viii. 14. and also Templum, because consecrated by the augurs, Ibid. & 35. which was its usual name before the Antiates were subdued, Liv. ii. 56. The Comitium was first covered the year that Hannibal came into Italy, Liv. xxvii. 38. Afterwards it was adorned with pillars, statues, and paintings.

Those citizens only had a right to vote at the Comitia Curiata, who lived in the city, and were included in some curia, or parish. The curia which voted first, was called PRINCIPIUM, Liv. ix. 38.

After the institution of the Comitia Centuriata, and Tributa, the Comitia Curiata were more rarely assembled, and that only for passing certain laws, and for the creation of the Curio Maximus, Liv. xxvii. 8. and of the Flamines, A. Gell. xv. 27. Each curia seems to have chosen its own curio; called also magister curia, Plaut. Aul. ii. 2. 3.

A law made by the people divided into curiæ was called LEX CURIATA. Of these, the chief we read of, were,

1. The law by which military command (IMPERIUM) was conferred on magistrates, Liv. ix. 38. Without this they were not allowed to meddle with military affairs, (rem militarem attingere.) to command an army, or carry on war, Cic. Phil. v. 16. Ep. Fam. i. 9. but only had a civil power, (POTESTAS,) or the right of administering justice. Hence the Comitia Curiata were said rem militarem continere, Liv. v. 52. and the people, to give sentence twice (bis sententiam ferre, v. binis comitiis judicare) concerning their magistrates, Cic. de lege Agrar. ii. 11. But in after times, this law seems to have been passed only for form's sake, by the suffrage of the thirty lictors or sergeants who formerly used to summon the curiæ, and attend on them at the Comitia, Cic. ibid. (Populi suffragiis, ad speciem, atque ad usurpationem vetustatis, per triginta lictores auspicioꝝ causâ adumbratis, cap. 12.)

2. The law about recalling Camillus from banishment, Liv. v. 46.

3. That form of adoption called adrogatio, (see p. 58.) was made at the Comitia Curiata, because no one could change his state, or sacra, without the order of the people, Cic. pro Sext. pro Dom. 15. &c. Suet. Aug. 65. Dio. xxxvii. 51.

4. Testaments were anciently made at these Comitia. And because in time of peace they were summoned, (calata, i. e. convocata.) by a lictor, twice a year for this purpose; hence they were also called COMITIA CALATA, which name is likewise sometimes applied to the Comitia Centuriata, because they were assembled by a Cornicen, who was also called Classicus, (quod classes comitiis ad comitatum vocabat, A. Gell. xv. 27. Varro de Lat. Ling. iv. 16.)

5. What was called DETESTATIO SACRORUM, was also made here; as when it was denounced to an heir or legatee that he must adopt the sacred rites which followed the inheritance, Cic. de Legg. ii. 9. Whence an inheritance without this requisite is called by Plautus hereditas sine sacris, Captiv. iv. 1. (cum aliquid obvenit sine aliqua incommoda appendice, Festus.)

The COMITIA CENTURIATA and the CENSUS.

THE principal Comitia were the Centuriata, called also majora, Cic. post red. in Senat. 2. in which the people, divided into the centuries of their classes, gave their votes; and what a majority of centuries decreed, (quod plures centuriæ jussissent.) was considered as finally determined, (pro rato habebatur.) These Comitia were held according to the Census, instituted by Servius Tullius.

The CENSUS was a numbering of the people with a valuation of their fortunes, (astimatio, ἀστίμησις.)

To ascertain the number of the people, and the fortunes of each individual, Servius ordained that all the Roman citizens, both in town and country, should upon oath take an estimate of their fortunes, (bona sua jurati censerent, i. e. astimarent,) and publicly declare that estimate to him, (apud se profiterentur;) that they should also tell the place of their abode, the names of their wives and children, their own age, and that of their children, and the number of their slaves and freedmen; that if any did otherwise, their goods should be confiscated, and themselves scourged and sold for slaves, as persons who had deemed themselves unworthy of liberty, (qui sibi libertatem abjudicassent, Cic. pro Cæcin. 34.) He likewise appointed a festival, called PAGANALIA, to be held every year in each pagus, or village, to their tutelary gods, at which time the peasants should every one pay in the hands of him who presided at the sacrifices, a piece of money; the men a piece of one kind, the women of another, and the children of a third sort, Dionys. iv. 15.

Then, according to the valuation of their estates, he divided all the citizens into six CLASSES, and each class into a certain number of CENTURIES.

The division by centuries, or hundreds, prevailed every where at Rome; or rather, they counted by tens, from the number of fingers on both hands, Ovid. Fast. iii. 123. &c. The infantry and cavalry, the curia and tribes, were divided in this manner; and so even the land: hence CENTENARIUS AGER, Ovid. Ibid. & Festus. At first a century contained a hundred; but not so afterwards. Thus the number of men in the centuries of the different classes was without doubt very different.

The first class consisted of those, whose estates in lands and effects were worth at least 100,000 asses, or pounds of brass; or 100,000 drachmæ, according to the Greek way of computing; which sum is commonly reckoned equal to 322l. 18s. 4d. sterling; but if we suppose each pound of brass to contain 24 asses, as was the case afterwards, it will amount to 7750l.

This first class was subdivided into eighty centuries or companies of foot, forty of young men, (juniorum,) that is, from seventeen to forty-six years of age, Cic. de Sen. 17. A. Gell. x. 28. who were obliged to take the field, (ut foris bella gererent,) and forty of old men, (seniorum,) who should guard the city, (ad urbis custodiam ut præsto essent.) To these were added eighteen centuries of Equites, who fought on horseback; in all ninety-eight centuries.

The second class consisted of twenty centuries, ten of young men, and ten of old, whose estates were worth at least 75,000 asses. To these were added two centuries of artificers, (fabrum,) carpenters, smiths, &c. to manage the engines of war. These Livy joins to the first class.

It is hardly to be imagined that those artificers were composed of the members of either the first or the second class, but of their servants or dependents; for not only the mechanic arts, but likewise every kind of trade, was esteemed dishonourable among the ancient Romans.

The third class was also divided into twenty centuries; their estate was worth 50,000 asses.

The fourth class likewise contained twenty centuries; their estate was 25,000 asses. To these Dionysius adds two centuries of trumpeters, vii. 59.

The fifth class was divided into thirty centuries; their estate was 11,000 asses, but according to Dionysius, 12,500. Among these, according to Livy, were included the trumpeters and corneters, or blowers on the horn, distributed into three centuries, whom Dionysius joins as two distinct centuries to the fourth class.

The sixth class comprehended all those who either had no estates, or were not worth so much as those of the fifth class. The number of them was so great as to exceed that of any of the other classes; yet they were reckoned but as one century.

Thus the number of centuries in all the classes was, according to Livy, 191; and according to Dionysius, 193.

Some make the number of Livy to amount to 194, by supposing that the trumpeters, &c. were not included in the thirty centuries of the fifth class, but formed three distinct centuries by themselves.

Each class had arms peculiar to itself, and a certain place in the army according to the valuation of their fortunes.

By this arrangement the chief power was vested in the richest citizens, who composed the first class, which, although least in number, consisted of more centuries than all the rest put together; but they likewise bore the charges of peace and war (munia pacis et belli) in proportion, Liv. i. 42. For, as the votes at the Comitia, so likewise the quota of soldiers and taxes, depended on the number of centuries. Accordingly, the first class, which consisted of ninety-eight, or, according to Livy, of one hundred centuries, furnished more men and money to the public service than all the rest of the state besides. But they had likewise the chief influence in the assemblies of the people by centuries. For the Equites and the centuries of this class were called first to give their votes, and if they were unanimous, the matter was determined; but, if not, then the centuries of the next class were called, and so on, till a majority of centuries had voted the same thing. And it hardly ever happened that they came to the lowest, Liv. i. 43. Dionys. vii. 59.

In after times some alteration was made, as is commonly supposed, in favour of the Plebeians, by including the centuries in the tribes; whence mention is often made of tribes in the Comitia Centuriata, Liv. v. 18. Cic. in Rull. ii. 2. pro Planc. 20. In consequence of which, it is probable, that the number of centuries as well as of tribes was increased, Cic. Phil. ii. 82. But when or how this was done is not sufficiently ascertained, only it appears to have taken place before the year of the city 358, Liv. v. 18.

Those of the first class were called CLASSICI; all the rest were said to be INFRA CLASSEM, A. Gell. vii. 13. Hence classici auctores, for the most approved authors, Id. xix. 8.

Those of the lowest class who had no fortune at all, were called CAPITE CENSI, rated by the head; and those who had below a certain valuation, PROLETARII, Gell. xvi. 10. whence sermo proletarius for vilis, low, Plaut. Mild. Glor. iii. 1. 157. This properly was not reckoned a class; whence sometimes only five classes are mentioned, Liv. iii. 30. So Quinta classis videntur, of the lowest, Cic. Acad. iv. 23.

This review of the people was made (census habitus, v. actus est) at the end of every five years; first by the kings, then by the consuls; but after the year 310 by the censors, who were magistrates created for that very purpose. We do not find however that the census was always held at certain intervals of time. Sometimes it was omitted altogether, Cic. pro Arch. 5.

After the census was finished, an expiatory or purifying sacrifice (sacrificium lustrale) was made, consisting of a sow, a sheep, and a bull, which were carried round the whole assembly, and then slain: and thus the people were said to be purified (lustrari.) Hence also lustrare signifies to go round, to survey, Virg. Eccl. x. 55. Æn. viii. 231. x. 224. and circumferre, to purify, Plaut. Amph. ii. 2. 144. Virg. Æn. vi. 229. This sacrifice was called SUOVETAURILIA, or SOLITAURILIA, and he who performed it, was said CONDERE LUSTRUM. It was called lustrum a luendo, i. e. solvendo, because at that time all the taxes were paid by the farmers-general to the censors, Varr. L. L. v. 2. And because this was done at the end of every fifth year, hence LUSTRUM is often put for the space of five years; especially by the poets, Horat. Od. ii. 4. 24. iv. 1. 6. by whom it is sometimes confounded with the Greek Olympiad, which was only four years, Ovid. Pont. iv. 6. 5. Martial. iv. 45. It is also used for any period of time, Plin. ii. 48.

The census anciently was held in the forum, but after the year of the city 320, in the villa publica, which was a place in the Campus Martius, Liv. iv. 22. fitted up for public uses; for the reception of foreign ambassadors, &c. Liv. xxxiii. 9. Varro de Re Rustica, iii. 2. Lætan. ii. 196. The purifying sacrifice was always made (lustrum conditum est) in the Campus Martius, Liv. i. 44. Dionys. iv. 22. The census was sometimes held without the lustrum being performed, Liv. iii. 22.

1. The Causes of assembling the COMITIA CENTURIATA.

THE COMITIA CENTURIATA were held for creating magistrates, for passing laws, and for trials.

In these comitia were created the consuls, prætors, censofs, and sometimes a proconsul, Liv. xxvi. 18; also the decemviri, military tribunes, and one priest, namely, the rex sacrorum. Almost all laws were passed in them, which were proposed by the greater magistrates; and one kind of trial was held there, namely, for high treason, or any crime against the state, which was called JUDICIUM PERDUELLIONIS; as, when any one aimed at sovereignty, which was called crimen regni, Liv. vi. 20. or had treated a citizen as an enemy, Cic. in Ferr. i. 5.

War was also declared at these comitia, Liv. xxxi. 6 & 7. xlii. 30.

2. The Magistrates who presided at the COMITIA CENTURIATA: the Place where they were held; the manner of summoning them, and the Persons who had a right to vote at them.

THE Comitia Centuriata could be held only by the superior magistrates, i. e. the consuls, the prætor, the dictator, and interrex: but the last could only hold the comitia for creating magistrates, and not for passing laws.

The censors assembled the people by centuries; but this assembly was not properly called comitia, as it was not to vote about any thing. The prætors could not hold the comitia, if the consuls were present, without their permission; Liv. xxvii. 5. but they might in their absence, Id. xliii. 16. xlv. 21. especially the prætor urbanus; and, as in the instance last quoted, without the authority of the senate.

The consuls held the comitia for creating the consuls, and also for creating the prætors; (for the prætors could not hold the comitia for creating their successors, Cic. ad Att. ix. 9.) and for creating the censors, Liv. vii. 22. Cic. Att. iv. 2.

The consuls determined which of them should hold these comitia, either by lot or agreement (sorte vel consensu; sortiebantur vel comparabant), Liv. passim.

The comitia for creating the first consuls were held by the præfect of the city, Spurius Lucretius, Liv. i. 60. who was also interrex, Dionys. iv. 84.

When a rex sacrorum was to be created, the comitia are thought to have been held by the pontifex maximus. But this is not quite certain.

The person presiding in the comitia had so great influence, that he is sometimes said to have himself created the magistrates, who were elected, Liv. i. 60. ii. 2. iii. 54. ix. 7.

When, from contention betwixt the Patricians and Plebeians, or betwixt the magistrates, or from any other cause, the comitia for electing magistrates could not be held in due time, and not before the end of the year, the patricians met and named (sine suffragio populi auspicald prodebant) an interrex, out of their own number, Cic. pro domo, 14. & Ascon. in Cic. who governed only for five days: Liv. ix. 34. and in the same manner different persons were always created every five days, till consuls were elected, who entered immediately on their office. The comitia, were hardly ever held by the first interrex: sometimes by the second; Liv. ix. 7. x. 11. sometimes by the third; Id. v. 31. and sometimes not till the eleventh, Id. vii. 21. In the absence of the consuls, a dictator was sometimes created to hold the comitia, Id. vii. 22. viii. 23. ix. 7. xxv. 2.

The Comitia Centuriata were always held without the city, usually in the Campus Martius; because anciently the people went armed in martial order (sub signis) to hold these assemblies; and it was unlawful for an army to be marshalled in the city, Liv. xxxix. 15. Gell. xv. 27. But in latter times a body of soldiers only kept guard on the Janiculum; where an Imperial standard was erected, (vexillum positum erat;) the taking down of which denoted the conclusion of the comitia, Dio. xxxvii. 27. & 28.

The Comitia Centuriata were usually assembled by an edict. It behoved them to be summoned (edici v. indici) at least seventeen days before they were held, that the people might have time to weigh with themselves what they should determine at the comitia. This space of time was called TRINUNDINUM, or TRINUM NUNDINUM, i. e. tres nundinae, three market days, because the people from the country came to Rome every ninth day to buy and sell their commodities; Liv. iii. 35. (Nundina a Romanis nono quoque die celebrata; intermediis septem diebus occupabantur ruri, Dionys. ii. 28. vii. 58. reliquis septem rura colebant, Varro de Re Rust. præf. 11.) But the comitia were not held on the market-days, (nundinis;) because they were ranked among the feriæ or holy days, on which no business could be done with the people, Macrob. i. 16. (ne plebs rustica avocaretur, lest they should be called off from their ordinary business of buying and selling,) Plin. xviii. 3. This however was not always observed, Cic. Att. i. 14.

But the comitia for creating magistrates were sometimes summoned against the first lawful day, (in primum comitiale diem;) Liv. xxiv. 7.

All those might be present at the Comitia Centuriata, who had the full right of Roman citizens, whether they lived at Rome or in the country.

3. CANDIDATES.

THOSE, who sought preferment, were called CANDIDATI, from a white robe (a toga candida) worn by them, which was rendered shining (candens vel candida) by the art of the fuller: for all the wealthy Romans wore a gown naturally white, (toga alba.) This, however, was anciently forbidden by law, (ne cui album, i. e. cretam, in vestimentum addere, petitionis causâ liceret;) Liv. iv. 25.

The candidates did not wear tunics or waistcoats, either that they might appear more humble, or might more easily show the scars they had received on the breast or fore part of their body, (adverso corpore;) Plutarch. in Coriolano.

In the latter ages of the republic no one could stand candidate who was not present, and did not declare himself within the legal days, that is, before the comitia were summoned, Sall. Cat. 18. Cic. Fam. xvi. 12. and whose name was not received by the magistrates; for they might refuse to admit any one they pleased; (nomen accipere, vel rationem ejus habere,) but not without assigning a just cause, Liv. viii. 15. xxiv. 7 & 8. Val. Max. iii. 8. 3. Vell. ii. 92. The opposition of the consul, however, might be overruled by the senate, Liv. iii. 21.

For a long time before the election, the candidates endeavoured to gain the favour of the people by every popular art: Cic. Attic. i. 1. by going around the houses, (ambiendo,) by shaking hands with those they met; (prensando,) by addressing them in a kindly manner, and naming them; &c. on which account they commonly had along with them a monitor, or NOMENCLATOR, who whispered in their ears every body's name, Horat. Ep. i. 6. 50. &c. Hence Cicero calls candidates natio officiosissima, in Pis. 23. On the market-days they used anciently to come into the assembly of the people, and take their station on a rising ground; (in colle consistere,) whence they might be seen by all, Macrob. Sat. 1. 16. When they went down to the Campus Martius at certain times, they were attended by their friends and dependents, who were called DEDUCTORES. Cic. de pet. cons. 9. They had persons likewise to divide money among the people, (DIVISORES, Cic. Att. i. 17. Suet. Aug. 3.) For this, although forbidden by law, was often done openly, and once against Cæsar, even with the approbation of Cato, Suet. Jul. 19. There were also persons to bargain with the people for their votes, called INTERPRETES, and others in whose hands the money promised was deposited, called SEQUESTRES, Cic. Att. in Verr. i. 8 & 12; sometimes the candidates formed combinations (coitiones) to disappoint (ut dejicerent) the other competitors, Cic. Att. ii. 18. Liv. iii. 35.

Those who opposed any candidate were said ei refragari, and those who favoured him, suffragari vel suffragatores esse: hence suffragatio, their interest, Liv. x. 13. Those who got one to be elected, were said, ei præturam gratiâ campestri capere, Liv. vii. 1. or eum trahere; thus, Pervicit Appius, ut dejecto Fabio, fratrem traheret, Liv. xxxix. 32. Those, who hindered one from being elected, were said, a consulatu repellere, Cic. in Cat. i. 10.

4. The Manner of proposing a Law, and of naming a Day for one's Trial.

WHEN a law was to be passed at the Comitia Centuriata, the magistrate who was to propose it, (laturus v. rogaturus,) having consulted with his friends and other prudent men, whether it was for the advantage of the republic, and agreeable to the customs of their ancestors, wrote it over at home; and then having communicated it to the senate, by their authority, (ex Senatûs consulto,) he promulgated it, that is, he pasted it up in public, (publicè v. in publico proponerat; promulgabat, quasi, divulgabat, Festus,) for three market-days; that so the people might have an opportunity of reading and considering it. Cic. Verr. 5. 69. In the meantime he himself, (legislator vel inventor legis, Liv. ii. 56.) and some eloquent friend, who was called AUCTOR legis, or SUASOR, every market-day read it over, (recitabat,) and recommended it to the people, (suadebat,) while others who disapproved it, spoke against it (dissuadebant.) But in ancient times all these formalities were not observed: thus we find a law passed the day after it was proposed, Liv. iv. 24.

Sometimes the person who proposed the law, if he did it by the authority of the senate, and not according to his own opinion, spoke against it, Cic. Att. i. 14.

In the same manner, when one was to be tried for treason, (cum dies perduellionis dicta est, cum actio perduellionis intendebatur, Cic. vel cum aliquis capitis v. -te anquireretur, Liv.) it behoved the accusation to be published for the same space of time, (promulgatur rogatio de mea pernicie, Cic. pro Sext. 20.) and the day fixed when the trial was to be, (proditâ die, qua judicium futurum sit, Cic.) In the meantime the person accused (REUS,) changed his dress, laid aside every kind of ornament, let his hair and beard grow, (promittebat,) and in this mean garb (sordidatus,) went round and solicited the favour of the people, (homines prensabat.) His nearest relations and friends did the same, Liv. passim. This kind of trial was generally capital, Liv. vi. 20. but not always so, Id. xliii. 16. Cic. pro Dom. 32. See Lex Porcia.

5. The Manner of taking the Auspices.

ON the day of the comitia, he who was to preside at them, (qui iis præfuturus erat,) attended by one of the augurs, (augure adhibito,) pitched a tent, (tabernaculum cepit,) without the city, to observe the omens, (ad auspicia captanda, vel ad auspicandum.) These Cicero calls AUGUSTA CENTURIARUM AUSPICIA, pro Mil. 16. Hence the Campus Martius is said to be consularibus auspiciis consecratus, Cic. in Cat. iv. 1. and the comitia themselves were called AUSPICATA, Liv. xxvi. 2.

If the TABERNACULUM, which perhaps was the same with templum or arx, the place which they chose to make their observations, (ad inaugurandum, Liv. i. 6. s. 7 & 18.) had not been taken in due form, (parum rectè captum esset,) whatever was done at the comitia was reckoned of no effect, (pro irritò habebatur,) Liv. iv. 7. Hence the usual declaration of the augurs, (augurum solennis pronuntiatio;) VITIO TABERNACULUM CAPTUM; VITIO MAGISTRATUS CREATOS vel VITIOSOS; VITIO LEGEM LATAM; VITIO DIEM DICTAM, Cic. & Liv. passim. And so scrupulous were the ancient Romans about this matter, that if the augurs, at any time afterwards, upon recollection, declared that there had been any informality in taking the auspices, (vitium obvenisse, Cic. in auspicio vitium fuisse, Liv.) the magistrates were obliged to resign their office, (utpote vitiosi v.

vicio creati, as having been irregularly chosen,) even several months after they had entered upon it, Liv. ibid. Cic. de Nat. Deor. ii. 4.

When there was nothing wrong in the auspices, the magistrates were said to be SALVIS AUSPICIIS creati, Cic. Phil. ii. 33.

When the consul asked the augur to attend him, (in auspiciū adhibebat,) he said, Q. FABI, TE MIHI IN AUSPICIO ESSE VOLO. The augur replied, AUDIVI, Cic. de Divin. ii. 34.

There were two kinds of auspices which pertained to the Comitia Centuriata. The one was, observing the appearances of the heavens, (servare de celo, vel calum,) as, lightning, thunder, &c. which was chiefly attended to. The other was the inspection of birds. Those birds which gave omens by flight, were called PRÆPETES: by singing, OSCINES: hence the phrase, si avis occinerit, Liv. vi. 41. x. 40. When the omens were favourable, the birds were said, ADDICERE vel ADMITTERE; when unfavourable, ABDICERE, NON ADDICERE, vel REFRAGARI.

Omens were also taken from the feeding of chickens. The person who kept them was called PULLARIUS. If they came too slowly out of the cage, (ex caveâ,) or would not feed, it was a bad omen; Liv. vi. 41. but if they fed greedily, so that something fell from their mouth, and struck the ground, (terram paviret, i. e. feriret;) it was hence called TRIPUDIUM SOLISTIMUM, (quasi terripavium vel terripudium, Cic. div. ii. 34. Festus in PULS.;) Liv. x. 40. Plin. x. 21. s. 24. and was reckoned an excellent omen, (auspiciū egregium vel optimum,) ibid.

When the augur declared that the auspices were unexceptionable, (omni vicio carere,) that is, that there was nothing to hinder the comitia from being held, he said, SILENTIUM ESSE VIDETUR: Cic. de Div. ii. 34. but if not, he said, ALIO DIE, Cic. de Legg. ii. 12. on which account the comitia could not be held that day. Thus, Papirio legem ferenti triste omen diem diffidit, i. e. Rem in diem posterum rejicere coegit, Liv. ix. 38.

This declaration of the augur was called NUNTIATIO, or obnuntiatio. Hence Cicero says of the augurs, NOS NUNTIATIONEM SOLUM HABEMUS; ET CONSULES ET RELIQUI MAGISTRATUS ETIAM SPECTIIONEM, v. inspectionem; Cic. Phil. ii. 32. but the contrary seems to be asserted by Festus; (in voce SPECTIO,) and commentators are not agreed how they should be reconciled. It is supposed there should be a different reading in both passages, Vid. Abram. in Cic. & Scaliger. in Fest.

Any other magistrate, of equal or greater authority than he who presided, might likewise take the auspices; especially if he wished to hinder an election, or prevent a law from being passed. If such magistrate therefore declared, SE DE COELO SERVASSE, that he had heard thunder or seen lightning, he was said OBNUNTIARE, (augur auguri, consul consuli obnuntiavisi, al. nuntiasti, Cic. Phil. ii. 33.) which he did by saying, ALIO DIE; whereupon, by the Lex Ælia et Fusia, the comitia were broken off; (dirimebantur,) and deferred to another day. Hence obnuntiare concilio aut comitiis, to prevent, to adjourn; and this happened, even if he said that he had seen what he did not see, (si auspicia ementitus esset), because he was thought to have bound the people by a religious obligation, which must be expiated by their calamity or his own, Cic. Phil. ii. 33. Hence, in the edict, whereby the comitia were summoned, this formula was commonly used, NE QUIS MINOR MAGISTRATUS DE COELO SERVASSE VELIT: which prohibition Clodius, in his law against Cicero, extended to all the magistrates, Dio. xxxviii. 13.

The comitia were also stopped, if any person, while they were holding, was seized with the falling sickness or epilepsy; which was hence called MORBUS COMITIALIS; or if a tribune of the commons interceded by the solemn word, VETO; Liv. vi. 35. or any magistrate of equal authority with him, who presided, interposed; by wasting the day in speaking, or by appointing holy days; &c. Cic. ad Frat. ii. 6. and also if the standard was pulled down from the Janiculum; as in the trial of Rabirius, by Metullus the prætor, Dio. Lib. xxxvii. 27.

The comitia were also broken off by a tempest arising; but so, that the election of those magistrates, who were already created, was not rendered invalid, (ut jam creati non vitiosi redderentur.) Liv. xl. 59. Cic. de Divin. ii. 18. unless when the comitia were for creating censors.

6. The Manner of holding the COMITIA CENTURIATA.

WHEN there was no obstruction to the comitia, on the day appointed, the people met in the Campus Martius. The magistrate, who was to preside, sitting in his curule chair on a tribunal (pro tribunali), Liv. xxxix. 32. used to utter a set form of prayer, before he addressed the people, Liv. xxxix. 15. the augur repeating over the words before him, (augure verba præunte, Cic.) Then he made a speech to the people about what was to be done at the comitia.

If magistrates were to be chosen, the names of the candidates were read over. But anciently, the people might choose whom they pleased, whether present or absent, although they had not declared themselves candidates, Liv. passim.

If a law was to be passed, it was recited by a herald, while a secretary dictated it to him, (subjiciente, scribâ), and different persons were allowed to speak for and against it, Liv. xl. 21. A similar form was observed at trials, because application was made to the people about the punishment of any one, in the same manner as about a law. Hence, irrogare pœnam, vel mulctam, to inflict or impose.

The usual beginning of all applications to the people, (omnium rogationum), was VELITIS, JUBEATIS, QUIRITES; and thus the people were said to be consulted, or asked, (consuli vel rogari); and the consuls to consult or ask them; Cic. & Liv. passim. Hence, jubere legem vel rogationem, also DECERNERE, to pass it; Sall. Jug. 40. vetare, to reject it; rogare magistratus, to create or elect, Sall. Jug. 29. Rogare quæsitores, to appoint judges or inquisitors, ib. 40. So justa et velita populi in jubendis v. sciscendis legibus, Cic. de Legg. ii. 4. Quibus sc. Silano et Murænsis, consulatus, me rogante, i. e. præside, datus est, Id. pro Mur. 1. Then the magistrate said, SI VOBIS VIDETUR, DISCEDITE, QUIRITES; OR, ITE IN SUFFRAGIUM, BENE JUVANTIBUS DIIS, ET, QUÆ PATRES CENSUERUNT, VOS JUBETE, Liv. xxxi. 7. Whereupon the people, who, as usual, stood promiscuously, separated, every one to his own tribe and century, Ascon. in Cic. pro Corn. Balbo. Hence, the magistrate was said mittere populum in suffragium; and the people, inire vel ire suffragium, Cic. & Liv. passim.

Anciently, the centuries were called to give their votes according to the institution of Servius Tullius; first, the Equites, and then the centuries of the first class, &c. but afterwards, it was determined by lot, (SORTITIO fiebat.) in what order they should vote. When this was first done is uncertain. The names of the centuries were thrown into a box, (in sitellam; sitella defertur, Cic. N. D. i. 38. Sitella allata est, ut sortirentur, Liv. xxv. 3.) and then the box being shaken, so that the lots might lie equally, (sortibus æqualis.) the century which came out first gave its vote first, and hence was called PRÆROGATIVA, Liv. v. 18. Those centuries, which followed next, were called PRIMO VOCATÆ, Liv. x. 15 & 22. The rest JURE VOCATÆ, Liv. xxvii. 6. But all the centuries are usually called jure vocatæ, except the prærogativa. Its vote was held of the greatest importance, (ut nemo unquam prior eam tulerit, quin renunciatus sit, Cic. pro Planc. 20. Divin. ii. 40. Mur. 18.) Liv. xxvi. 22. Hence PRÆROGATIVA is put for a sign or pledge, a favourable omen or intimation of any thing future; Supplicatio est prærogativa triumphi, Cic. Fam. xv. 5. so i. Act. Verr. 9. Plin. vii. 16. xxxvii. 9. s. 46. for a precedent or example, Liv. iii. 51. a choice; Id. xxi. 3. or favour, Id. xxviii. 9. and among later writers for a peculiar or exclusive privilege.

When tribes are mentioned in the Comitia Centuriata, Liv. x. 13. it is supposed, that after the centuries were included in the tribes, the tribes first cast lots; and that tribe which first came out, was called PRÆROGATIVA TRIBUS; and then, that the centuries of that tribe cast lots which should be the prærogativa centuria. Others think, that, in this case, the names of tribes and centuries are put promiscuously, the one for the other. But Cicero calls centuria, pars tribûs; and that, which is remarkable, in the Comitia Tributa, pro Planc. 20.

Anciently the citizens gave their votes vivâ voce; and in creating magistrates, they seem each to have used this form; CONSULES, &c. NOMINO VEL DICO, Liv. xxiv. 8 & 9. in passing laws; UTI ROGAS, VOLO VEL JUBEO, Cic. de Legg. ii. 10. The will or command of the people was expressed by VELLE, and that of the senate by CESSERE, Sall. Jug. 21. hence leges magistratusque ROGARE, to make, Liv. 1. 17.

Sometimes a person nominated to be consul, &c. by the prærogative century, declined accepting, Liv. v. 18. xxvi. 22. or the magistrate presiding disapproved of their choice, and made a speech to make them alter it. Whereupon the century was recalled by a herald to give its vote anew; (in suffragium revocata; thus, REDITUM IN SUFFRAGIUM, Liv. ibid.) and the rest usually voted the same with it, (auctoritatem prerogativæ secutæ sunt; eosdem consules cetera centuriæ sine variatione ulla dixerunt.) Liv. xxiv. 8 & 9. In the same manner after a bill had been rejected by almost all the centuries, on a subsequent day, (alteris comitiis), we find it unanimously enacted; as about declaring war on Philip, AB HAC ORATIONE IN SUFFRAGIUM MISSI, UT ROGARAT, BELLUM JUSSERUNT, Liv. xxxi. 8.

But in later times, that the people might have more liberty in voting, it was ordained, by various laws, which were called LEGES TABELLARIÆ, that they should vote by ballot; first in conferring honours, by the Gabinian law, made A. U. 614. Cic. de Amic. 12. Plin. Ep. iii. 20. two years after, at all trials, except for treason, by the Cassian law; Cic. Brut. 25 and 27. in passing laws, by the Papirian law, A. U. 622. and lastly, by the Cælian law, A. U. 630. also in trials for treason, which had been excepted by the Cassian law, Cic. de Legg. iii. 16. The purpose of these laws was to diminish the influence of the nobility, Ibid. & Cic. Planc. 6.

The centuries being called by a herald in their order, moved from the place where they stood, and went, each of them, into an enclosure, (SEPTUM vel OVILE), which was a place surrounded with boards, (locus tabulatis inclusus), and near the tribunal of the consul. Hence they were said to be intro vocatæ, sc. in ovile, Liv. x. 13. There was a narrow passage to it raised from the ground, called PONS or PONTICULUS, by which each century went up one after another. Suet. Jul. 80. Hence old men at sixty (SEXAGENARIJ) were said, DEPONTE DEJICI; and were called DEPONTANI, because, after that age, they were exempted from public business, Varro & Festus; to which Cicero alludes, Rosc. Am. 35. But a very different cause is assigned for this phrase, both by Varro and Festus.

There were probably as many Pontes and Septa, or Ovilia, as there were tribes and centuries. Hence Cicero usually speaks of them in the plural; thus, Pontes lex Maria fecit angustos, de Legg. iii. 17. Opera Clodiana pontes occuparunt, Attic. i. 14. Cæpio cum bonis viris impetum facit, pontes dejicit, ad Herenn. i. 12. Cum Clodius in septa irruisset, pro Mil. 15. So misera maculavit ovilia Romæ, Lucan. Pharsal. ii. 197.

Some think that each tribe and century voted in its own ovile, Serv. in Virg. Ecl. i. 34. But this does not seem consistent with what we read in other authors.

At the entrance of the pons, each citizen received from certain officers, called DIRIBITORES, or distributores, ballots, (tabulæ vel tabellæ), on which, if magistrates were to be created, were inscribed the names of the candidates, not the whole names, but only the initial letters, Cic. pro Dom. 43. and they seem to have received as many tablets as there were candidates. We read of other tables being given in, that were distributed, which must have been brought from home, Suet. Jul. 80. but as no regard was paid to them, this seldom happened. The same thing took place also under the Emperors, when the right of electing magistrates was transferred from the people to the senate, Plin. Ep. iv. 25.

If a law was to be passed, or any thing to be ordered, as in a trial, or in declaring war, &c. they received two tablets; on the one were the letters U. R. i. e. UTI ROGAS, sc. volo vel jubeo, I am for the law; and on the other A. for ANTIQUO, i. e. Antiqua probo, nihil novi statui volo; I like the old way, I am against the law. Hence antiquare legem, to reject it.

Of these tablets every one threw which he pleased into a chest, (in cistam) at the entrance of the ovile, which was pointed out to them by the ROGATORES, who asked for the ballots, and anciently for the votes, when they were given vivâ voce, Cic. de Divin. i. 17. ii. 35. Nat. D. ii. 4. Then certain persons, called CUSTODES, who observed that no fraud should be committed in casting lots and voting, (in sortitione et suffragiis) took out (educebant) the ballots, and counted the votes by points marked on a tablet, which was called DIRIMERE suffragia, or DIREMPTIO suffragiorum, Lucan. v. 393. whence omne punctum ferre, for omnibus suffragiis renunciari, to gain every vote; and what pleased the majority, was declared by a herald to be the votes of that century. The person who told to the consul the vote of his century, (qui centuriam suam rogavit, et ejus suffragium retulit; vel Consules a centuriâ suâ creatos renunciavit, retulit) was called ROGATOR, Cic. ib. & de Orat. ii. 64. Thus all the centuries were called one after another, till a majority of centuries agreed in the same opinion; and what they judged was held to be ratified.

The Diribitores, Rogatores, and Custodes, were commonly persons of the first rank, and friends to the candidates, or favourers of the law to be passed, who undertook these offices voluntarily; Cic. in Pis. 15. post. red. in Sen. 11. Augustus is supposed to have selected 900 of the equestrian order to be Custodes or Rogatores, (ad custodiendas cistas suffragiorum,) Plin. xxxiii. 2. s. 7.

If the points of any century were equal, its vote was not declared; but was reckoned as nothing, except in trials, where the century, which had not condemned, was supposed to have acquitted.

The candidate, who had most votes, was immediately called by the magistrate who presided; and after a solemn prayer, and taking an oath, was declared to be elected (renunciatus est) by a herald, Cic. pro leg. Manil. 1. pro Muran. 1. in Rull. ii. 2. Vell. ii. 92. Then he was conducted home by his friends and dependents with great pomp.

It was esteemed very honourable to be named first, Cic. pro leg. Manil. 1.

Those who were elected consuls, usually crowned the images of their ancestors with laurel, Cic. Mur. 41.

When one gained the vote of a century, he was said ferre centu- viam, and non ferre vel perdere, to lose it; so ferre repulsam, to be rejected; but ferre suffragium vel tabellam, to vote; thus, Meis comitiis non tabellam vindicem tacita libertatis, sed vocem vivam tulistis, Cic. in Rull. ii. 2.

The magistrates created at the Comitia Centuriata, were said fieri, creari, declarari, nominari, dici, renunciari, designari, rogari, &c.

In creating magistrates this addition used to be made, to denote the fulness of their right: UT QUI OPTIMA LEGE FUERINT; OPTIMO JURE; EO JURE, QUO QUI OPTIMO, Festus in OPTIMA LEX. Cic. in Rull. i. 11. Phil. xi. 12. Liv. ix. 34.

When a law was passed, it was said PERFERRI; the centuries which voted for it, were said LEGEM JUBERE, V. ROGATIONEM ACCIPERE, Liv. ii. 57. iii. 15. 63. & alibi passim; those who voted against it, ANTIQUARE, VETARE, V. NON ACCIPERE. Lex rogatur, dum fertur; ABROGATUR, dum tollitur; DEROGATUR, legi, v. de lege, cum per novam legem aliquid veteri legi detrahitur; SUBROGATUR, cum aliquid adjicitur; OBROGATUR, cum novâ lege infirmatur, Ulpian and Festus. Ubi duæ contrariæ leges sunt, semper antiqua abrogat nova, the new law invalidates the old, Liv. ix. 34.

Two clauses commonly used to be added to all laws: 1. SI QUID NON LICUERIT ROGARI, UT EJUS HAC LEGE NIHIL ESSET ROGATUM: 2. SI QUID CONTRA ALIAS LEGES EJUS LEGIS ERGÔ LATUM ESSET, UT EI, QUI EAM LEGEM ROGASSET, IMPUNE ESSET, Cic. Att. iii. 23. which clause (caput) Cicero calls TRANSLATITIUM, in the law of Clodius against himself, because it was transferred from ancient laws, ibid.

This sanction used also to be annexed, NE QUIS PER SATURAM ABROGATO; i. e. per legem in qua conjunctim multis de rebus unâ rogatione populus consulebatur, Festus. Hence Exquirere sententias per saturam, i. e. passim, sine certo ordine, by the gross or lump, Sall. Jug. 29. In many laws this sanction was added, QUI ALITER VEL SECUS FAXIT V. FECERIT, SACER ESTO; i. e. ut caput ejus, cum bonis vel familiâ, alicui deorum consecraretur v. sacrum esset: that it might be lawful to kill the transgressor with impunity, Liv. ii. 8. iii. 55. Cic. pro Balb. 14.

When a law was passed, it was engraved on brass, and carried to the treasury. It used also to be fixed up in public, in a place where it might be easily read, (unde de plano, i. e. from the ground, legi posset.) Hence In capitolio legum ara liquefacta, Cic. Cat. iii. 8. Nec verba mimacia fixo ære legebantur, Ovid. Met. i. 3. Fixit leges pretio atque refixit, made and unmade, Virg. Æn. v. 622. Cic. Phil. xiii. 3. Fam. xii. 1.

After the year of the city 598, when the consuls first began to enter on their office on the first day of January, the comitia for their election were held about the end of July, or the beginning of August, unless they were delayed by the intercession of the magistrates, or by inauspicious omens. In the time of the first Punic war, the consuls entered on their office on the ides of March, and were created in January or February, Liv. passim. The prætors were always elected after the consuls, sometimes on the same day, Liv. x. 22. or the day after, or at the distance of several days, Id. From the time of their election, till they entered on their office, they were called DESIGNATI.

The comitia for enacting laws or for trials, might be held on any legal day.

COMITIA TRIBUTA.

In the Comitia Tributa the people voted, divided into tribes, according to their regions or wards, (ex regionibus et locis), A. Gell. xv. 27.

The name of tribes was derived either from their original number three, (a numero ternario), or from paying tribute (a tribulo), Liv. i. 43. or, as others think, from τριτὸς, tertia pars tribus apud Athenienses, Æolicè τριττός, unde TRIBUS.

The first three tribes were called RAMNENSES, or Ramnes, TATIENSES or Titienses, and LUCERES. The first tribe was named from Romulus, and included the Roman citizens who occupied the Palatine hill; the second from Titus Tatius, and included the Sabines, who possessed the Capitoline hill; and the third from one Lucumo, a Tuscan, or rather from the grove, (a luco) which Romulus turned into a sanctuary, (asylum retulit, Virg. Æn. viii. 342.) and included all foreigners, except the Sabines. Each of these tribes at first had its own tribune or commander, (Tribunus vel præfectus), Dionys. iv. and its own augur, Liv. x. 6.

Tarquinius Priscus doubled the number of tribes, retaining the same names; so that they were called Ramnenses primi and Ramnenses secundi, or posteriores, &c.

But as the Luceres in a short time greatly exceeded the rest in number, Servius Tullius introduced a new arrangement, and distributed the citizens into tribes, not according to their extraction, but from their local situation.

He divided the city into four regions or wards, called PALATINA, SUBERRANA, COLLINA, and ESQUILINA, the inhabitants of which constituted as many tribes, and had their names from the wards which they inhabited. No one was permitted to remove from one ward to another, that the tribes might not be confounded, Dionys. iv. 14. On which account certain persons were appointed to take an account where every one dwelt, also of their age, fortune, &c. These were called city tribes, (TRIBUS URBANÆ), and their number always remained the same.

Servius at the same time divided the Roman territory into fifteen parts, (some say sixteen, and some seventeen,) which were called country tribes, (TRIBUS RUSTICÆ), Dionys. iv. 15.

In the year of the city 258, the number of tribes was made twenty-one, Liv. ii. 21. Here, for the first time, Livy directly takes notice of the number of tribes, although he alludes to the original institution of three tribes, x. 6. Dionysius says, that Servius instituted 31 tribes, iv. 15. But in the trial of Coriolanus, he only mentions 21 as having voted, vii. 64. the number of Livy, viii. 64.

The number of tribes was afterwards increased on account of the addition of new citizens at different times, Liv. vi. 5. vii. 15. viii. 17. ix. 20. x. 9. Epit. xix. to thirty-five, Liv. xxiii. 13. Ascon. in Cic. Verr. i. 5. which number continued to the end of the republic, Liv. i. 43.

After the admission of the Italian states to the freedom of the city, eight or ten new tribes are said to have been added, but this was of short continuance; for they were all soon distributed among the thirty-five old tribes.

For a considerable time, according to the institution of Servius Tullius, a tribe was nothing else but the inhabitants of a certain region or quarter in the city or country; but afterwards this was altered; and tribes came to be reckoned parts not of the city or country, but of the state, (non urbis sed civitatis.) Then every one leaving the city tribes wished to be ranked among the rustic tribes. This was occasioned chiefly by the fondness of the ancient Romans for a country life, and from the power of the censors, who could institute new tribes, and distribute the citizens, both old and new, into whatever tribes they pleased, without regard to the place of their habitation. But on this subject writers are not agreed. In the year 449, Q. Fabius separated the meaner sort of people from all the tribes through which they had been dispersed by App. Claudius, and included them in the four city tribes, Liv. ix. 46. Among these were ranked all those whose fortunes were below a certain valuation, called PROLETARII: and those who had no fortune at all, CAPITE CENSI, Gell. xvi. 10. From this time, and perhaps before, the four city tribes began to be esteemed less honourable than the thirty-one rustic tribes; and some of the latter seem to have been thought more honourable than others, Cic. pro Balbo, 25. Plin. xvii. 3. Hence, when the censors judged it proper to degrade a citizen, they removed him from a more honourable to a less honourable tribe, (tribu movebant;) and whoever convicted any one of bribery, upon trial, obtained by law as a reward, if he chose, the tribe of the person condemned, Cic. ibid.

The rustic tribes had their names from some place; as, Tribus Aniensis, Arniensis, Cluvia, Crustumina, Falerina, Lémonia, Macia, Pomptina, Quirina, Romilia, Scaptia, &c. or from some noble family; as, Aimilia, Claudia, Cluentia, Cornelia, Fabia, Horatia, Julia, Minucia, Papiria, Sergia, Terentina, Veturia, &c.

Sometimes the name of one's tribe is added to the name of a person, as a surname; thus, L. Albius Sex. F. Quirina, Cic. Quint. 6. M. Oppius, M. F. Terentina, Cic. Fam. viii. 8. Att. iv. 16.

The Comitia Tributa began first to be held two years after the creation of the tribunes of the people, A. U. 263, at the trial of Coriolanus, Dionys. vii. 59. But they were more frequently assembled after the year 282, when the Publilian law was passed, that the Plebeian magistrates should be created at the Comitia Tributa, Liv. ii. 56.

The Comitia Tributa were held to create magistrates, to elect certain priests, to make laws, and to hold trials.

At the Comitia Tributa were created all the inferior city magistrates, as the Ædiles, both Curule and Plebeian, the tribunes of the commons, quæstors, &c. ; all the provincial magistrates, as the proconsuls, proprætors, &c. ; also commissioners for settling colonies, &c. ; the Pontifex Maximus, and after the year 650, the other pontifices, augures faciales, &c. by the Domitian law, Suet. Ner. 2. For, before that, the inferior priests were all chosen by their respective colleges, (a collegiis suis cooptabantur.) But at the election of the pontifex maximus, and the other priests, what was singular, only seventeen tribes were chosen by lot to vote, and a majority of them, namely nine, determined the matter, Cic. Rull. ii. 7.

The laws passed at these comitia were called PLEBISCITA, (quæ plebs suo suffragio sine patribus jussit, plebeio magistratu rogante, Festus,) which at first only bound the Plebeians, but after the year 306, the whole Roman people, Liv. iii. 55.

Plebiscita were made about various things: as about making peace, Liv. xxxiii. 10. about granting the freedom of the city, about ordering a triumph when it was refused by the senate, Liv. iii. 63. about bestowing command on generals on the day of their triumph, Liv. xxvi. 21. about absolving from the laws, which in later times the senate assumed as its prerogative, Ascon. in Cic. ad Cornel. &c.

There were no capital trials at the Comitia Tributa; these were held only at the Centuriata: but about imposing a fine; Liv. iv. 41. And if any one accused of a capital crime did not appear on the day of trial, the Comitia Tributa were sufficient to decree banishment against him, (id ei justum exilium esse scivit plebs,) Liv. xxvi. 3. xxv. 4.

All those might vote at the Comitia Tributa, who had the full right of Roman citizens, whether they dwelt at Rome or not. For every one was ranked in some tribe, in which he had a right to vote, Liv. xlv. 15. Some had two tribes; one in which they were born, and another, either by right of adoption, as Augustus had the Fabian and Scaptian tribes, Suet. Aug. 40. or as a reward for accusing one of bribery, (legis de ambitu præmio,) Cic. pro Balbo. 25.

At the Comitia Tributa the votes of all the citizens were of equal force, and therefore the patricians hardly ever attended them. On which account, as some think, they are said to have been entirely excluded from them, Liv. ii. 56 & 60. But about this writers are not agreed.

The comitia, for creating tribunes and plebeian ædiles, were held by one of the tribunes, to whom that charge was given, either by lot or by the consent of his colleagues; Liv. iii. 64. but for creating curule ædiles and other inferior magistrates, by the consul, dictator, or military tribunes; for electing priests, by the consul only, Cic. ad Brut. 5.

The Comitia Tributa, for passing laws and for trials, were held by the consuls, prætors, or tribunes of the commons. When the consul was to hold them, he by his edict summoned the whole Roman people; but the tribunes summoned only the plebeians, Gell. xv. 17. Hence they are sometimes called comitia populi, and sometimes concilium plebis: in the one the phrase was populus jussit, in the other plebs scivit. But this distinction is not always observed.

The Comitia Tributa, for electing magistrates, were usually held in the Campus Martius; Cic. Att. i. 1. iv. 3. Ep. Fam. vii. 30. but for passing laws and for trials, commonly in the forum; sometimes in the capitol; Liv. xxxiii. 10. and sometimes in the circus Flaminius, Liv. xxvii. 21. anciently called prata Flaminia, or circus Apollinaris; Id. iii. 63. where also Q. Furius, the Pontifex Maximus, held the comitia for electing the tribunes of the commons, after the expulsion of the Decemviri, Liv. iii. 54.

In the forum, there were separate places for each tribe, marked out with ropes, Dionys. vii. 59.

In the Campus Martius, Cicero proposed building, in Cæsar's name, marble enclosures (septa marmorea), for holding the Comitia Tributa, Cic. Att. iv. 16. which work was prevented by various causes, and at last entirely dropped upon the breaking out of the civil wars; but it was afterwards executed by Agrippa, Dio. liii. 23. Plin. xvi. 40.

The same formalities almost were observed in summoning and holding the Comitia Tributa as in the other comitia, only it was not requisite for them to have the authority of the senate, or that the auspices should be taken. But if there had been thunder or lightning, (si tonuisset aut fulgurisset), they could not be held that day. For it was a constant rule from the beginning of the republic, Jovis fulgente, cum populo agi nefas esse, Cic. in Vatin. 8. Comitorium solum vitium est fulmen, Id. de Div. ii. 18.

The Comitia Tributa for electing magistrates, after the year 598, were held about the end of July, or the beginning of August; for electing priests, when there was a vacancy, and for laws and trials on all comitial days.

Julius Cæsar first abridged the liberty of the comitia. He shared the right of creating magistrates with the people; so that, except the competitors for the consulship, whose choice he solely determined himself, the people chose one half, and he nominated (edebat) the other. This he did by billets dispersed through the several tribes to this effect, CÆSAR DICTATOR ILLI TRIBUL. COMMENDO VOBIS ILLUM, ET ILLUM, UT VESTRO SUFFRAGIO SUAM DIGNITATEM TENEANT, Suet. Cæs. 41.

Augustus restored this manner of election, after it had been dropped for some time during the civil wars which followed Cæsar's death, Suet. Aug. 40. Dio. liii. 21.

Tiberius deprived the people altogether of the right of election, Juvenal. x. 77. and assuming the nomination of the consuls to himself, Ovid. Pont. iv. 9. 67. he pretended to refer the choice of the other magistrates to the senate, but in fact determined the whole according to his own pleasure; Tacit. Ann. i. 15. Dio. Cass. lviii. 20. Caligula attempted to restore the right of voting to the people, but without any permanent effect, Suet. Calig. 16. The comitia, however, were still for form's sake retained. And the magistrates, whether nominated by the senate or the prince, appeared in the Campus Martius, attended by their friends and connexions, and were appointed to their office by the people, with the usual solemnities, Plin. Paneg. 63.

But the method of appointing magistrates under the Emperors, seems to be involved in uncertainty, Suet. Cæs. 40. 76. 80. Aug. 40. 56. Ner. 43. Vit. 11. Vesp. 5. Dom. 10. Tacit. Ann. i. 15. Hist. i. 77. as indeed Tacitus himself acknowledges, particularly with respect to the consuls, Annal. i. 81. Sometimes, especially under good emperors, the same freedom of canvassing was allowed, and the same arts practised to ensure success, as under the republic, Plin. Ep. vi. 6. 9. viii. 23. Trajan restrained the infamous largesses of candidates by a law against bribery, (ambitus lege;) and by ordaining, that no one should be admitted to sue for an office, who had not a third part of his fortune in land, which greatly raised the value of estates in Italy, Id. vi. 19. When the right of creating magistrates was transferred to the senate, it at first appointed them by open votes; (apertis refragiis) but the noise and disorder which this sometimes occasioned, made the senate, in the time of Trajan, adopt the method of balloting, (ad tacita suffragia decurrere;) Plin. Ep. iii. 20. which also was found to be attended with inconveniences, which Pliny says, the Emperor alone could remedy, Id. iv. 25. Augustus followed the mode of Julius Cæsar at the Comitia, Dio. liii. 21. although Mæcenas; whose counsel he chiefly followed, advised him to take this power altogether from the people, Dio. liii. 30. As often as he attended at the election of magistrates, he went round the tribes, with the candidates whom he recommended, (cum suis candidatis;) and solicited the votes of the people in the usual manner. He himself gave his vote in his own tribe, as any other citizen, (ut unus e populo;) Suet. Aug. 56.

ROMAN MAGISTRATES.

Different forms of Government, and different Magistrates at different times.

ROME was first governed by kings; but Tarquin, the 7th king, being expelled for his tyranny, A. U. 244, the regal government was abolished, and two supreme magistrates were annually created in place of a king, called CONSULS. In dangerous conjunctures a DICTATOR was created with absolute authority; and when there was a vacancy of magistrates, an INTERREX was appointed to elect new ones.

In the year of the city 301, Liv. iii. 33. or, according to others, 302, in place of consuls, ten men (DECENVIRI) were chosen to draw up a body of laws, (ad leges scribendas.) But their power lasted only two years; and the consular government was again restored.

As the consuls were at first chosen only from the Patricians, and the Plebeians wished to partake of that dignity; after great contests it was at last determined, A. U. 310. that instead of consuls, six supreme magistrates should be annually created; three from the Patricians, and three from the Plebeians; who were called MILITARY TRIBUNES, (Tribuni militum consulari potestate.) Dionys. xi. 60. There were not, however, always six tribunes chosen; sometimes only three, Liv. iv. 6. 16. 25 and 42. sometimes four, ib. 31. 35 & 44. and sometimes even eight, Id. v. 1. Nor was one half always chosen from the Patricians, and another half from the Plebeians. They were, on the contrary, usually all Patricians; Id. iv. 25. 44. 50. &c. seldom the contrary, Liv. v. 12. 13. 18. vi. 30. For upwards of seventy years, sometimes consuls were created, and sometimes military tribunes, as the influence of the Patricians or Plebeians was superior, or the public exigencies required; till at last the Plebeians prevailed, A. U. 387. that one of the consuls should be chosen from their order; and afterwards that both consuls might be Plebeians; which however was rarely the case, but the contrary. From this time the supreme power remained in the hands of the consuls till the usurpation of Sylla, A. U. 672, who, having vanquished the party of Marius, assumed to himself absolute authority under the title of Dictator, an office which had been disused above 120 years. But Sylla having voluntarily resigned his power in less than three years, the consular authority was again restored, and continued, till Julius Cæsar, having defeated Pompey at the battle of Pharsalia, and having subdued the rest of his opponents, in imitation of Sylla, caused himself to be created perpetual dictator, and oppressed the liberty of his country, A. U. 706. After this the consular authority was never again completely restored. It was indeed attempted, after the murder of Cæsar, in the senate-house on the ides of March, A. U. 710. by Brutus and Cassius and the other conspirators; but M. Antonius, who desired to rule in Cæsar's room, prevented it. And Hirtius and Pansa, the consuls of the following year, being slain at Mutina, Octavius, who was afterwards called Augustus, Antony, and Lepidus, shared between them the provinces of the republic, and exercised absolute power under the title of TRIUMVIRI reipublicæ constituendæ.

The combination between Pompey, Cæsar, and Crassus, commonly called the first triumvirate, which was formed by the contrivance of Cæsar, in the consulship of Metellus and Afranius, A. U. 693. Vell. Pat. ii. 44. Horat. Odd. ii. 1. is justly reckoned the original cause of this révolution, and of all the calamities attending it. For the Romans, by submitting to their usurped authority, showed that they were prepared for servitude. It is the spirit of a nation alone which can preserve liberty. When that is sunk by general corruption of morals, laws are but feeble restraints against the encroachments of power. Julius Cæsar would never have attempted what he effected, if he had not perceived the character of the Roman people to be favourable to his designs.

After the overthrow of Brutus and Cassius at the battle of Philippi, A. U. 712. Augustus on a slight pretext deprived Lepidus of his command, and having vanquished Antony in a sea-fight at Actium, became sole master of the Roman empire, A. U. 723. and ruled it for many years, under the title of PRINCE or EMPEROR, (Princeps vel Imperator.) The liberty of Rome was now entirely extinguished; and, although Augustus endeavoured to establish a civil monarchy, the government perpetually tended to a military despotism, equally fatal to the characters and happiness of prince and people.

In the beginning of the republic, the consuls seem to have been the only stated magistrates, Liv. iv. 4.; but as they, being engaged almost in continual wars, could not properly attend to civil affairs, various other magistrates were appointed at different times, prætors, censors, ædiles, tribunes of the ceremonies, &c. ib. Under the emperors, various new magistrates were instituted.

Of MAGISTRATES in General.

A MAGISTRATE is a person invested with public authority, Magistratus est, qui præsit, Cic. de Legg. iii. 1. Dicitur magistratus a magistro. Magister autem est, qui plus aliis potest, Festus.)

The office of a magistrate in the Roman republic was different from what it is among us. The Romans had not the same discrimination betwixt public employments that we have. The same person might regulate the police of the city, and direct the affairs of the empire, propose laws, and execute them, act as a judge or a priest, and command an army, Liv. x. 29. et alibi passim. The civil authority of a magistrate was called magistratus or potestas, his judicative power jurisdictio, and his military command imperium. Anciently all magistrates, who had the command of an army, were called PRÆTORES; (vel quod cæteros præirent, vel quod aliis præessent, Ascon. in Cic.)

MAGISTRATUS either signifies a magistrate; as, Magistratus jussit; or a magistracy; as, Tiùo magistratus datus est, Festus. So POTESTAS; as Habere potestatem, gerere potestates, esse in v. cum potestate, to bear an office; Gabiorum esse potestas, to be a magistrate of Gabii, Juvenal x. 99. Jurisdictionem tantum in urbe delegari magistratibus solitam, etiam, per provincias, POTESTATIBUS demandavit, Suet. Claud. 24. MAGISTRATUS was properly a civil magistrate or magistracy in the city; and POTESTAS in the provinces (Magistratus, vel is, qui in potestate aliqua sit, ut putâ pro-consul, vel prætor, vel alii, qui provincias regunt, Ulpian.) But this distinction is not always observed, Sallust. Jug. 63.

When a magistrate was invested with military command by the people, in whose power only it was, he was said esse in v. cum imperio, in iusto v. summo imperio. (Cum imperio esse dicitur cui nominatum est a populo mandatum imperium, Festus.) Thus, Abstinentiam neque in imperiis, neque in magistratibus præstitit, i. e. neque cum exercitui præesset & jus belli gerendi haberet, neque cum munera civilia in urbe gerret, Suet. Cæs. 54. Nentine cum imperio (military command) aut magistratu (civil authority,) tendente quòquam, quin Rhodum diverteret, Id. Tib. 12. So magistratus & imperia capere, to enjoy offices civil and military, Id. Cæs. 75. But we find Esse in imperio, simply for Esse consulem, Liv. iv. 7. and all those magistrates were said Habere imperium, who held great authority and power : (qui et coercere aliquem possent, et jubere in carcerem duci, Paull. l. 2. ff. de in jus vocando,) as the dictators, consuls, and prætors. Hence they were said to do any thing pro imperio, Liv. ii. 56. to which Terence alludes, Phorm. i. 4. 19. whereas the inferior magistrates, the tribunes of the commons, the ædiles, and quæstors, were said esse sine imperio, and to act only pro potestate, Liv. ii. 56. iv. 26. Sometimes potestas and imperium are joined : thus, Togatus in republicâ cum potestate imperioque versatus est, Cic. Phil. i. 7.

Division of MAGISTRATES.

THE Roman magistrates were variously divided ; into ordinary and extraordinary, greater and less, curule and not curule ; also, into patrician and plebeian, city and provincial magistrates.

THE MAGISTRATUS ORDINARII were those, who were created at stated times, and were constantly in the republic ; the EXTRAORDINARII not so.

THE MAGISTRATUS MAJORES were those who had, what were called, the greater auspices, (quæ minoribus magistrata essent, Gell. xiii. 15.) The magistratus majores ordinarii were the consuls, prætors, and censors, who were created at the Comitia Centuriata : The extraordinarii were the dictator, the master of the horse, (magister equitum), the interrex, the prefect of the city, &c.

THE MAGISTRATUS MINORES ORDINARII were the tribunes of the commons, the ædiles, and quæstors : EXTRAORDINARII, the præfectus annonæ, duumviri navales, &c.

THE MAGISTRATUS CURULES were those, who had the right of using the sella curulis or chair of state, namely, the dictator, the consuls, prætors, censors, and curule ædiles. All the rest, who had not that right, were called NON CURULES, (Curules magistratus appellati sunt, quia curru vehebantur, Festus : In quo curru sella curulis erat, supra quam considerent, Gell. iii. 18.) The sella curulis was anciently made of ivory, or at least adorned with ivory ; hence Horace calls it, curule ebur, Ep. i. 6. 53. The magistrates sat on it in their tribunal on all solemn occasions.

In the beginning of the republic, the magistrates were chosen only from the Patricians, but in process of time also from the Plebeians, except the interrex alone, (quem et ipsum patricium esse, et a patri- cūs prodi, necesse, erat, Cic. pro Domo. 14.) The Plebeian magistrates were the ædiles and tribunes of the commons.

Anciently there was no certain age fixed for enjoying the different offices, Cic. Phil. v. 17. A law was first made for this purpose (LEX ANNALIS) by L. Villius, or (L. Julius), a tribune of the commons, A. U. 573, whence his family got the surname of ANNALES, Liv. xl. 43. although there seems to have been some regulation about that matter formerly, Id. xxv. 2. What was the year fixed for enjoying each office is not fully ascertained. See p. 12. It is certain that the prætorship used to be enjoyed two years after the ædileship, Cic. Famil. x. 25. and that the 43d was the year fixed for the consulship, Cic. Phil. v. 17. If we are to judge from Cicero, who frequently boasts that he had enjoyed every office in its proper year, (se suo quemque magistratum anno gessisse), the years appointed for the different offices by the lex Villia were, for the quæstorship thirty-one, for the ædileship thirty-seven, for the prætorship forty, and for the consulship forty-three. But even under the republic, popular citizens were freed from these restrictions, ibid. and the emperors granted that indulgence (annos remittebant) to whomsoever they pleased, Plin. Ep. vii. 16. or the senate to gratify them, Dio. liiii. 28. The lex annalis, however, was still observed, Plin. Ep. iii. 20.

It was ordained by the law of Romulus, that no one should enter on any office, unless the birds should give favourable omens: and by the CORNELIAN LAW, made by Sulla, A. U. 673. that a certain order should be observed in obtaining preferments; that no one should be prætor before being quæstor, nor consul before being prætor: nor should enjoy the same office within ten years, nor two different offices in the same year, Appian. de Bell. Civ. i. p. 412. Liv. xxxii. 7. Cic. Phil. xi. 5. Liv. viii. 40. But these regulations also were not strictly observed.

All magistrates were obliged, within five days after entering on their office, to swear that they would observe the laws, (in leges jurare;) Liv. xxxi. 5. and after the expiration of their office, they might be brought to a trial, if they had done any thing amiss, Liv. xxxvii. 57. Suet. Jul. 23.

KINGS.

ROME was at first governed by kings, not of absolute power nor hereditary, but limited and elective. They had no legislative authority, and could neither make war nor peace without the concurrence of the senate and people, Dionys. ii. 13. Sallust. Catilin. 6.

The kings of Rome were also priests, and had the chief direction of sacred things, Dionys. ii. 14. as among the Greeks. Virg. Æn. iii. 80. Cic. Divin. i. 40.

The badges of the kings were the Trabea, i. e. a white robe adorned with stripes of purple, or the toga prætexta, a white robe fringed with purple, a golden crown, an ivory sceptre, the sella curulis, and twelve lictors, with the fasces and secures, i. e. carrying each of them a bundle of rods, with an axe stuck in the middle of them.

The badges of the Roman magistrates were borrowed from the Tuscans, Liv. i. 8. Flor. i. 5. Sall. Cat. 51. fn. Dionys. iii. 61. Strab. v. p. 220.

According to Pliny, Romulus used only the trabea. The toga prætexta was introduced by Tullus Hostilius, and also the latus clavus, after he had conquered the Tuscans, Plin. ix. 39. s. 63. viii. 48. s. 74.

The regal government subsisted at Rome for 243 years, under seven kings, Romulus, Numa Pompilius, Tullus Hostilius, Ancus Marcius, L. Tarquinius Priscus, Servius Tullius, and L. Tarquinius, surnamed SUPERBUS, from his behaviour: all of whom, except the last, so reigned, that they are justly thought to have laid the foundations of the Roman greatness, Liv. ii. 1. Tarquin being universally detested for his tyranny and cruelty, was expelled the city with his wife and family, on account of the violence offered by his son Sextus to Lucretia, a noble lady, the wife of Collatinus. This revolution was brought about chiefly by means of L. Junius Brutus.

The haughtiness and cruelty of Tarquin inspired the Romans with the greatest aversion to regal government, which they retained ever afterwards. Hence regiè facere, to act tyrannically, regiè spiritus, regia superbia, &c.

The next in rank to the king was the TRIBUNUS, or PRÆFECTUS CELERUM, who commanded the horse under the king, as afterwards the magister equitum did under the dictator.

When there was a vacancy in the throne, (INTERREGNUM,) which happened for a whole year after the death of Romulus, on account of a dispute betwixt the Romans and Sabines, about the choice of a successor to him, the senators shared the government among themselves. They appointed one of their number, who should have the chief direction of affairs, with the title of INTERREX, and all the ensigns of royal dignity for the space of five days; after him another, and then another, till a king was created, Liv. i. 17. Dionys. ii. 57.

Afterwards under the republic an interrex was created to hold the elections, when there were no consuls or dictator; Liv. iii. 55. which happened either by their sudden death, or when the tribunes of the commons hindered the elections by their intercession, Liv. vi. 35.

ORDINARY MAGISTRATES.

I. CONSULS.

1. The first Creation, different names, and badges of CONSULS.

AFTER the expulsion of the kings, A. U. 244. two supreme magistrates were annually created with equal authority; that they might restrain one another, and not become insolent by the length of their command, Cic. post red. in Sen. 4. Eutrop. i. 9.

They were anciently called PRÆTORES, Liv. iii. 55. Festus ; also IMPERATORES, Sallust. Cat. 6. or JUDICES, Varro. de Lat. Ling. v. 7. Liv. iii. 55. afterwards CONSULES, either from their consulting for the good of the state, (a reipublica consulendo,) Cic. Pis. 10. Flor. i. 9. or from consulting the senate, (a consulendo senatum,) Cic. de Legg. iii. 3. and people, Varr. L. L. iv. 14. or from their acting as judges, (a judicando,) Quinctilian. i. 9. From their possessing supreme command, the Greeks called them ἸΙΙΑΤΟΙ.

If one of the consuls died; another was substituted (subrogatus vel suffectus est,) in his room, for the rest of the year ; but he could not hold the comitia for electing new consuls, Liv. xli. 18.

The insignia of the consuls were the same with those of the kings, except the crown ; namely, the toga prætexta, sella curulis, the sceptre or ivory staff, (scipio eburneus,) and twelve lictors with the fascēs and secures.

Within the city the lictors went before one of the consuls, Liv. ii. 1. and that commonly for a month alternately (mensibus alternis). A public servant, called accensus, went before the other consuls, and the lictors followed ; which custom, after it had been long disused, Julius Cæsar restored in his first consulship, Suet. Jul. 20. He who was eldest, or had most children, or who was first elected, or had most suffrages, had the fascēs first, Gell. ii. 15. Liv. ix. 8. According to Dionysius the lictors at first preceded both consuls, and were restricted to one of them by the law of Valerius Poplicola, lib. v. 2. We read in Livy, of 24 lictors attending the consuls, ii. 55. but this must be understood without the city.

2. The Power of the CONSULS.

As the consuls at first had almost the same badges with the kings, so they had nearly the same power, Liv. ii. 1. But Valerius, called POPLICOLA, (a populo colendo,) took away the securis from the fascēs (securim fascibus ademit,) i. e. he took from the consuls the power of life and death, and only left them the right of scourging, at least within the city, Dionys. v. 19. for without the city, when invested with military command, they still retained the securis, i. e. the right of punishing capitally, Liv. xxiv. 9. Dionys. v. 59.

When the consuls commanded different armies, each of them had the fascēs and securis ; but when they both commanded the same army, they commonly had them for a day alternately, alternis imperitabant,) Liv. xxii. 41.

Poplicola likewise made a law, granting every one the liberty of appealing from the consuls to the people ; and that no magistrate should be permitted to punish a Roman citizen who thus appealed ; Liv. ii. 8. which law was afterwards once and again renewed, and always by persons of the Valerian family, Id. iii. 55. x. 9. But this privilege was also enjoyed under the kings, Liv. i. 26. viii. 35.

Poplicola likewise ordained, that, when the consuls came into an assembly of the people, the lictors should lower the fasces in token of respect; Liv. ii. 7. and also that, whoever usurped an office without the consent of the people, might be slain with impunity, Dionys. v. 19. But the power of the consuls was chiefly diminished by the creation of the tribunes of the commons; who had a right to give a negative to all their proceedings, (omnibus actis intercedere.) Still, however, the power of the consuls was very great, and the consulship was considered as the summit of all popular preferment, (honorum populi finis.) Cic. pro Planc. 25.

The consuls were at the head of the whole republic, Cic. pro Mur. 32. All the other magistrates were subject to them, except the tribunes of the commons. They assembled the people and the senate, laid before them what they pleased, and executed their decrees. The laws which they proposed and got passed, were commonly called by their name. They received all letters from the governors of provinces, and from foreign kings and states, and gave audience to ambassadors. The year was named after them, as it used to be at Athens from one of the Archons, Cic. de Fat. 9. Thus, M. Tullio Cicerone et L. Antonio Consulibus, marked the 690th year of Rome. Hence numerare multos consules, for annos, Sen. Ep. 4. Bis jam pane tibi consul trigesimus instat, You are near sixty years old, Martial. i. 16. 3. And the consuls were said, Aperire annum, fastosque reserare, Plin. Pan. 58.

He who had most suffrages was called CONSUL PRIOR, and his name was marked first in the calendar, (in fastis.) He also had the fasces first, and usually presided at the election of magistrates for the next year.

Every body went out of the way, uncovered their heads, dismounted from horseback, or rose up to the consuls, as they passed by, Sen. Ep. 64. If any one failed to do so, and the consul took notice of it, he was said to order the lictor ANIMADVERTERE, Liv. xxiv. 44. Suet. Jul. 80. Acilius the consul ordered the curule chair of Lucullus the Prætor to be broken in pieces, when he was administering justice, because he had not risen up to him when passing by, Dio. xxxvi. 10 & 24. When a Prætor happened to meet a consul, his lictors always lowered their fasces, Dionys. viii. 44.

In the time of war, the consuls possessed supreme command. They levied soldiers, and provided what was necessary for their support. They appointed the military tribunes, or tribunes of the legions, (in part; for part was created by the people. See Lex Attilia.) the centurions and other officers, Cic. de Legg. iii. 3. Polyb. vi. 34.

The consuls had command over the provinces, Cic. Phil. iv. 4. and could, when authorized by the senate, call persons from thence to Rome, (Romam evocare, excire, v. accire.) and punish them, Cic. in Verr. i. 33. Liv. iii. 4. xxix. 15. They had so great authority, that kings, and foreign nations, in alliance with the republic, were considered to be under their protection, Cic. pro Sext. 30.

In dangerous conjunctures, the consuls were armed with absolute power by the solemn decree of the senate, UT VIDERENT, vel DARENT, OPERAM, &c. Liv. iii. 4. vi. 19. See p. 26. In any sudden tumult or sedition, the consuls called the citizens to arms in this form: QUI REMPUBLICAM SALVAM ESSE VELIT, NE SEQUATUR, Cic. pro Rabir. 7. Tusc. Quæst. iv. 23.

Under the emperors, the power of the consuls was reduced to a mere shadow; their office then only was to consult the senate, and lay before them the ordinances, (placita) of the emperors; to appoint tutors, to manumit slaves, to let the public taxes; which had formerly belonged to the censors; Ovid. Pont. iv. 5. 18. & Ep. ix. 47. to exhibit certain public games, and shows, which they also sometimes did under the republic; Cic. Off. ii. 17. to mark the year by their name, &c. They retained, however, the badges of the ancient consuls, and even greater external pomp. For they wore the toga picta or palmata, and had their fasces wreathed with laurel, which used formerly to be done only by those who triumphed. They also added the securis to the fasces.

3. The day on which the CONSULS entered on their Office.

In the beginning of the republic, the consuls entered on their office at different times; at first, on the 23d or 24th February, (VII. vel VI. Kal. Mart.) the day on which Tarquin was said to have been expelled, Ovid. Fast. ii. 685. which was held as a festival, and called REGIFUGIUM, Festus; afterwards, on the first of August, (Kal. Sext.) which was at that time the beginning of the year, (i. e. of the consular, not of the civil year, which always began with January,) Liv. iii. 6. In the time of the Decemviri, on the 15th of May, (Id. Maii.) Id. 36. About fifty years after, on the 15th December, (Id. Decemb.) Liv. iv. 37. v. 11. Then on the first of July, (Kal. Quinctil.) Liv. v. 32. viii. 20. which continued till near the beginning of the second Punic war, A. U. 530, when the day came to be the 15th March, (Id. Mart.) At last, A. U. 598, or 600, (Q. Fulvio & T. Annio. Coss.) it was transferred to the first of January, (in Kal. Jan.) which continued to be the day ever after, (DIES SOLENNIS magistratibus ineundis,) Liv. Epit. 47. Ovid. Fast. i. 81. iii. 147.

After this, the consuls were usually elected about the end of July or the beginning of August. From their election to the 1st of January, when they entered on their office, they were called CONSULES DESIGNATI; and whatever they did in public affairs, they were said to do it by their authority, not by their power; (Quod potestate nondum poterat, obtinuit auctoritate,) Cic. in Pis. 4. Sext. 32. They might however propose edicts, and do several other things pertaining to their office, Dio. xl. 66. Among other honours paid to them, they were always first asked their opinion in the senate. See p. 17.—The interval was made so long, that they might have time to become acquainted with what pertained to their office; and that inquiry might be made whether they had gained their election by bribery. If they were convicted of that crime upon trial, they were deprived of the consulship, and their competitors, who accused them, were nominated in their place, Cic. pro Syll. 17 & 32. They were also, besides being fined, declared incapable of bearing any office, or of coming into the senate, by the Calpurnian and other laws; Cic. pro Cornel. Muren. 23. &c. as happened to Autronius and Sylla, Sall. Cat. 18. Cicero made the punishment of bribery still more severe by the Tullian law, which he passed by the authority of the senate, with the additional penalty of a ten years' exile, pro Mur. 32. in Vatin. 15. pro Sext. 94.

The first time a law was proposed to the people, concerning bribery, was A. U. 397. by C. Pætilius, a tribune of the commons, by the authority of the senate, (auctoribus patribus; ut novorum maxime hominum ambitio, qui nundinas et conciliabula obire soliti erant, comprimeretur.) Liv. vii. 15.

On the first of January, the senate and people waited on the new consuls (salutabant), at their houses, (which in after times was called OFFICIUM, Plin. Ep. ix. 37.) whence being conducted with great pomp, (which was called PROCESSUS CONSULARIS,) to the capitol, they offered up their vows, (vota nuncupabant), and sacrificed, each of them, an ox to Jupiter; and then began their office (munus suum auspicabantur), by holding the senate, consulting it about the appointment of the Latin holidays, and about other things concerning religion, Ovid. Pont. iv. 4 & 9. Liv. xxi. 63. xxii. 1. xxvi. 26. Cic. post red. ad Quir. 5. Rull. ii. 34. Dio. Fragm. 120. Within five days they were obliged to swear to observe the laws, Liv. xxxi. 50. as they had done when elected, Plin. Pan. 64. 65. And in like manner, when they resigned their office, they assembled the people, and made a speech to them about what they had performed in their consulship, and swore that they had done nothing against the laws, ibid. But any one of the tribunes might hinder them from making a speech, and only permit them to swear, as the tribune Metellus did to Cicero, Dio. xxxvii. 38. whereupon Cicero instantly swore with a loud voice, that he had saved the republic and the city from ruin: which the whole Roman people confirmed with a shout, and with one voice cried out, that what he had sworn was true; and then conducted him from the forum to his house, with every demonstration of respect, Cic. in Pis. 3. Ep. Fam. v. 2.

4. The Provinces of the CONSULS.

DURING the first days of their office the consuls cast lots, or agreed among themselves about their provinces (provincias inter se sortiebantur, aut parabant, vel comparabant: provincias partiti sunt.) Liv. ii. 40. iii. 10. 22. 57. et alibi passim. A province (PROVINCIA,) in its general acceptation, is metaphorically used to signify the office or business of any one, whether private or public; thus, O Geta, provinciam cepisti duram, Ter. Phorm. i. 2. 22. So Heaut. iii. 2. 5. Before the Roman empire was widely extended, the province of a consul was simply a certain charge assigned him, as a war to be carried on, &c. or a certain country in which he was to act during his consulship, Liv. ii. 40. 54. 58. iii. 10. 22. 25. v. 32. vii. 6. 12. viii. 1. 29. ix. 41. x. 12. xxvi. 29. xliii. 14 & 15. Flor. i. 11.

Anciently these provinces used to be decreed by the senate, after the consuls were elected, or had entered on their office, Liv. xxxii. 8. xxxiii. 29. et alibi passim. Sometimes the same province was decreed to both consuls, Id. x. 32. xxxiv. 42. xl. 1. &c. Thus both consuls were sent against the Samnites, and made to pass under the yoke by Pontius, general of the Samnites, at the Furca Caudina, Liv. ix. 1. &c. So Paulus Æmilius, and Terentius Varro, were sent against Hannibal, at the battle of Cannæ, Id. xxii. 40. & xxv. 3: xxvii. 22. &c.

But by the Sempronian law, passed by C. Sempronius Gracchus, A. U. 631, the senate always decreed two provinces for the future consuls, before their election, Cic. pro Dom. 9. de Prov. Cons. 2. Sall. Jug. 27. which they, after entering on their office, divided by lot or agreement, (sorte vel comparatione partiti sunt.) In latter times the province of a consul was some conquered country, reduced to the form of a province, (see p. 65.) which each consul, after the expiration of his office, should command; for, during the time of their consulship, they usually remained in the city. Hence Cicero says, Tum bella gerere nostri duces incipiunt, cum auspicia, i. e. consulatum et præturam, posuerunt, Nat. D. ii. 3. For proprætors and proconsuls had not the right of taking the auspices, (auspicia non habebant.) Cic. Divin. ii. 36.

The provinces decreed to the consuls, were called PROVINCIAE CONSULARES; to the prætors, PRÆTORIÆ.

Sometimes a certain province was assigned to some one of the consuls; as Etruria to Fabius, both by the decree of the senate, and by the order of the people, Liv. x. 24. Sicily to P. Scipio, xxviii. 38. Greece, and the war against Antiochus, to L. Scipio, by the decree of the senate, Id. xxxvii. 1. This was said to be done extra ordinem, extra sortem vel sine sorte, sine comparatione, Id. iii. 2. vi. 30. &c.

It properly belonged to the senate to determine the provinces of the consuls and prætors. In appointing the provinces of the prætors, the tribunes might interpose their negative; but not in those of the consuls, Cic. de Prov. Cons. 8. Sometimes the people reversed what the senate had decreed concerning the provinces. Thus the war against Jugurtha, which the senate had decreed to Metellus, was given by the people to Marius, Sall. Jug. 73. And the attempt of Marius, by means of the tribune Sulpicius, to get the command of the war against Mithridates transferred from Sylla to himself by the suffrage of the people, gave occasion to the first civil war at Rome, Plutarch. in Mar. & Syll. Appian. de Bell. Civ. 1. and in fact gave both the occasion and the example to all the rest that followed. So when the senate, to mortify Cæsar, had decreed as provinces to him and his colleague Bibulus, the care of the woods and roads, Suet. Jul. 19. Cæsar, by means of the tribune Vatinius, procured from the people, by a new and extraordinary law, the grant of Cisalpine Gaul, with the addition of Illyricum, for the term of five years, Ibid. 22. Cic. pro Dom. 9. in Vatin. 15. and soon after also Transalpine Gaul from the senate, Suet. ib. Dio. xxxviii. 8. which important command was afterwards prolonged to him for other five years, by the Trebonian law; Liv. Epit. 105. Cic. de Prov. Cons. 8. Epist. Fam. i. 7. (See page 26.)

No one was allowed to leave his province without the permission of the senate; Liv. xxix. 19. which regulation, however, was sometimes violated upon extraordinary occasions, Liv. x. 18. xxvii. 43.

If any one had behaved improperly, he might be recalled from his province by the senate; but his military command could only be abolished (abrogari) by the people, Liv. xxix. 19.

The senate might order the consuls to exchange their provinces, Liv. xxvi. 29. and even force them to resign their command, Id. v. 32.

Pompey, in his third consulship, to check bribery, passed a law that no one should hold a province till five years after the expiration of his magistracy, Dio. xl. 46. and that for these five years, while the consuls and prætors were disqualified, the senators of consular and prætorian rank, who had never held any foreign command, should divide the vacant provinces among themselves by lot. By which law, the government of Cilicia fell to Cicero against his will, Cic. Ep. Fam. iii. 2. Cæsar made a law, that the prætorian provinces should not be held longer than a year, nor the consular more than two years. But this law, which is much praised by Cicero, was abrogated by Antony, Cic. Phil. i. 8.

5. From what Order the CONSULS were created.

THE consuls were at first chosen only from the patricians, but afterwards also from the plebeians. This important change, although in reality owing to weightier causes, was immediately occasioned by a trifling circumstance. M. Fabius Ambustus, a nobleman, had two daughters, the elder of whom was married to Sulpicius, a patrician, and the younger to C. Licinius Stolo, a plebeian. While the latter was one day visiting her sister, the lictor of Sulpicius, who was then military tribune, happened to strike the door with his rod, as was usual when that magistrate returned home from the forum. The younger Fabia, unacquainted with that custom, was frightened at the noise, which made her sister laugh, and express surprise at her ignorance. This stung her to the quick; and upon her return home, she could not conceal her uneasiness. Her father, seeing her dejected, asked her if all was well; but she at first would not give a direct answer; and it was with difficulty he at last drew from her a confession, that she was chagrined at being connected with a man who could not enjoy the same honours with her sister's husband. For, although it had been ordained by law that the military tribunes should be created promiscuously from the patricians and plebeians, Liv. iv. 6. yet for forty-four years after their first institution, A. U. 311. to A. U. 355. no one plebeian had been created, Liv. v. 12. vi. 37. and very few afterwards, Liv. v. 13. 18. vi. 30. Ambustus, therefore, consoled his daughter with assurances, that she should soon see the same honours at her own house which she saw at her sister's. To effect this, he concerted measures with his son-in-law, and one L. Sextius, a spirited young man of plebeian rank, who had every thing but birth to entitle him to the highest preferments.

Licinius and Sextius being created tribunes of the commons, Liv. vi. 35. got themselves continued in that office for ten years, ibid. 42. for five years they suffered no curule magistrates to be created, ibid. 35. and at last prevailed to get one of the consuls created from among the plebeians, ibid. 42.

L. SEXTIUS was the first plebeian consul, Liv. vii. 1. and the second year after him, C. Licinius Stolo, ibid. 2. from whom the law ordaining one of the consuls to be a plebeian, was called LEX LICINIA, ibid. 21. Sometimes both consuls were plebeians, Id. xxiii. 31. which was early allowed by law, vii. 42. But this rarely happened: the patricians for the most part engrossed that honour; Liv. vii. 18. 19. et alibi passim, Sall. Jug. 63. Cic. in Rull. ii. 1. The Latins once required, that one of the consuls should be chosen from among them, Liv. viii. 4 & 5. as did afterwards also the people of Capua, Id. xxxiii. 6. but both these demands were rejected with disdain.

The first foreigner who obtained the consulship, was Cornelius Balbus, Plin. viii. 43. s. 44. Vell. ii. 51. a native of Cadiz; who became so rich, that at his death, he left each of the citizens residing at Rome, 25 drachmæ, or denarii, i. e. 16s. 1d. 3q. Dio. xlviii. 32.

6. The legal Age, and other Requisites for enjoying the Consulship.

THE legal age for enjoying the consulship (Ætas CONSULARIS) was forty-three, Cic. Phil. v. 17. and whoever was made consul at that age, was said to be made in his own year, (suo anno.) Cic. in Rull. ii. 2.

Before one could be made consul, it was requisite to have gone through the inferior offices of quæstor, ædile, and prætor. It behoved candidates for this office to be present, and in a private station, (see p. 14.) and no one could be created consul a second time, till after an interval of ten years, Liv. vii. 42. x. 13.

But these regulations were not always observed. In ancient times there seem to have been no restrictions of that kind, and even after they were made, they were often violated. Many persons were created consuls in their absence, and without asking it, Cic. Amic. 3. and several below the legal age: thus, M. Valerius Corvus, at twenty-three, Liv. vii. 26. Scipio Africanus the elder, at twenty-eight;

Id. xxv. 2. xxvi. 18. xxviii. 38. and the younger at thirty-eight; Id. Epit. xlix. T. Quinctius Flaminius, when not quite 30; Plutarch. Pompey, before he was full thirty-six years old; (Ex. S. C. legibus solutus consul antè fiebat quàm illum magistratum per leges capere licuisset, i. e. before by law he could be made ædile; which was the first office properly called Magistratus, although that title is often applied also to the quæstorship and tribuneship, Cic. pro leg. Manil. 21.)

To some the consulship was continued for several years without intermission; as to Marius, Liv. Epit. 67. who was seven times consul, and once and again created in his absence, ibid. et 68 & 80. Several persons were made consuls without having previously borne any curule office; Liv. xxv. 42. xxxii. 7. Dio. xxxvi. 23. Many were re-elected within a less interval than of ten years, Liv. passim. And the refusal of the senate to permit Cæsar to stand candidate in his absence, or to retain his province, gave occasion to the civil war betwixt him and Pompey, which terminated in the entire extinction of liberty, Cæs. de bell. civ. i. 2 & 3.

7. Alterations in the Condition of the CONSULS under the Emperors.

JULIUS CÆSAR reduced the power of the consuls to a mere name. Being created perpetual dictator, Suet. 76. all the other magistrates were subject to him. Although the usual form of electing consuls was retained, he assumed the nomination of them entirely to himself, Cic. Phil. ii. 32. Suet. Jul. 41 & 76. He was dictator and consul at the same time, Dio. xliii. 7. as Sylla had been before him; but he resigned the consulship when he thought proper, and nominated whom he chose to succeed him. When about to set out against the Parthians, he settled the succession of magistrates for two years to come, (Consules et tribunos plebis in biennium, quos voluit), Cic. Att. xiv. 6. Dio. xliii. 51. He introduced a custom of substituting consuls at any time, for a few months or weeks; sometimes only for a few days, or even hours, Lucan. v. 397. Suet. Jul. 76. Cic. Fam. vii. 30. Dio. xliii. 36. that thus the prince might gratify a greater number with honours. Under Commodus, there were twenty-five consuls in one year, Lamprid. 6. The usual number in a year was twelve. But the consuls who were admitted on the first day of January, gave name to the year, and had the title of ORDINARIII, the others being styled SUFFECTI, or Minores, Dio. xlvi. 35.

The consuls, when appointed by the emperor, Plin. Ep. ix. 13. did not use any canvassing, but went through almost the same formalities in other respects as under the republic, Plin. Pan. 63. 64. 65. 69. 77. 92. In the first meeting of the senate after their election, they returned thanks to the emperor in a set speech, Plin. Ep. iii. 13. 18. Paneg. 2. 90. 91. 93. when it was customary to expatiate on his virtues; which was called, HONORE, vel IN HONOREM PRINCIPIS CENSERE, Id. Pan. 54. because they delivered this speech when they were first asked their opinion as consuls elect. (See p.

23. & Plin. Ep. vi. 27.) Pliny afterwards enlarged on the general heads, which he used on that occasion, and published them under the name of PANEGYRICUS, (i. e. λογος πανηγυρικός, oratio in conventu habita, a πανηγυρις, conventus, Cic. Att. i. 14.) Nerva Tragano Augusto dictus.

Under the emperors, there were persons dignified merely with the title, without enjoying the office of consuls, (CONSULES HONORARI;) as, under the republic, persons who had never been consuls or prætors, on account of some public service, obtained the right of sitting and speaking in the senate, in the place of those who had been consuls or prætors, (loco consulari, vel prætorio, Cic. Phil. i. 6. v. 17. Liv. Epit. 118.) which was called auctoritas vel sententia consularis aut prætoris, Cic. in Vatin. 7. in Balb. 25. So Allectus inter prætorios, Plin. Ep. i. 14. Pallanti senatus ornamenta prætoris decrevit, Id. vii. 29. viii. 6.

Those who had been consuls were called CONSULARES, Cic. Fam. xii. 4. &c. as those who had been prætors, were called PRÆTORII; ædiles, ÆDILITII; quæstors, QUÆSTORII.

Under Justinian, consuls ceased to be created, and the year, of consequence, to be distinguished by their name, A. U. 1293. But the emperors still continued to assume that office the first year of their sovereignty. Constantine created two consuls annually; whose office it was to exercise supreme jurisdiction, the one at Rome, and the other at Constantinople.

II. PRÆTORS.

1. Institution and Power of the PRÆTOR.

THE name of PRÆTOR (is qui præit jure et exercitu, Varro ὑπαρχητος), was anciently common to all the magistrates, Liv. iii. 55. Ascon. in Cic. Thus the dictator is called Prætor Maximus, Liv. vii. 3. But when the consuls, being engaged in almost continual wars, could not attend to the administration of justice, a magistrate was created for that purpose, A. U. 389, to whom the name of PRÆTOR was thenceforth appropriated. He was at first created only from the Patricians, as a kind of compensation for the consulship being communicated to the Plebeians; but afterwards, A. U. 418. also from the Plebeians, Liv. viii. 15. The prætor was next in dignity to the consuls, and was created at the Comitia Centuriata with the same auspices as the consuls; whence he was called their colleague, Liv. vii. 1. viii. 32. Gell. xiii. 14. Plin. Pan. 77. The first prætor was Sp. Furius Camillus, son to the great M. Furius Camillus, who died the year that his son was prætor, Liv. vii. 1.

When one prætor was not sufficient, on account of the number of foreigners, who flocked to Rome, another prætor was added, A. U. 510. to administer justice to them, or between citizens and them, (qui inter cives Romanos et peregrinos jus diceret, Liv. Epit. xix.—xxii. 35.) hence called PRÆTER PEREGRINUS.

The two prætors, after their election, determined, by casting lots, which of the two jurisdictions each should exercise.

The prætor who administered justice only between citizens, was called PRÆTOR URBANUS, and was more honourable; whence he was called PRÆTOR HONORATUS, Ovid. Fast. i. 52. MAJOR, Festus in voce MAJOR CONSUL; and the law derived from him and his edicts is called JUS HONORARIUM. In the absence of the consuls, he supplied their place, (munus consulare sustinebat.) Cic. Fam. 10. 12. He presided in the assemblies of the people, and might convene the senate; but only when something new happened, Cic. Fam. xii. 28. He likewise exhibited certain public games, as, the Ludi Apollinares; Liv. xxvii. 23. the Circensian and Megalensian games; Juvenal. xi. 192. and therefore had a particular jurisdiction over players, and such people; at least under the emperors, Tacit. Ann. i. 77. When there was no censor, he took care, according to a decree of the senate, that the public buildings were kept in proper repair, (sarta tecta exigebat.) Cic. in Verr. i. 50. On account of these important offices he was not allowed to be absent from the city above ten days, Cic. Phil. ii. 13.

The power of the prætor in the administration of justice was expressed in these three words, DO, DICO, ADDICO. Prætor DABAT actionem et judices; the prætor gave the form of a writ for trying and redressing a particular wrong complained of, and appointed judges or a jury to judge in the cause; DICEBAT jus, pronounced sentence; ADDICEBAT bona vel damna, adjudged the goods of the debtor to the creditor, &c.

The days on which the prætor administered justice were called DIES FASTI, (a fando, quod is diebus hæc tria verba fari licebat.) Those days on which it was unlawful to administer justice, were called NEFASTI.

Ille NEFASTUS erit, per quem TRIA VERBA silentur : FASTUS, erit, per quem lege licebit agi.

Ovid. Fast. l. 47.

2. EDICTS of the PRÆTOR.

THE Prætor Urbanus, when he entered on his office, after having sworn to the observance of the laws, published an edict (EDICTUM,) or system of rules, (Formula,) according to which he was to administer justice for that year; whence it is called by Cicero, LEX ANNUA, Cic. in Verr. i. 42. Having summoned an assembly of the people, he publicly declared (EDICEBAT) from the Rostra, (cum in concionem adscendisset,) what method he was to observe, (qua observaturus esset,) in administering justice, Cic. de Fin. ii. 22. This edict, he ordered not only to be recited by a herald, Plaut. in Prolog. Pænuli 11. but also to be publicly pasted up in writing, (Scriptum in ALBO,) i. e. in tabula de albata, vel, ut alii dicunt, (albis literis notatâ), publicè proponi, unde de PLANO, (i. e. de humo,) recte legi posset; in large letters, (literis majusculis) Suet. Calig.

41. These words used commonly to be prefixed to the edict, BO-NUM FACTUM, Suet. Jul. 80. Vitell. 14. Plaut. ibid.

Those edicts which the prætor copied from the edicts of his predecessors, were called TRALATITIA; those which he framed himself, were called NOVA; and so any clause or part of an edict, CAPUT TRALATITIUM vel NOVUM, Cic. in Verr. i. 45. But as the prætor often, in the course of the year, altered his edicts through favour or enmity, Cic. in Verr. i. 41. 46. this was forbidden, first by a decree of the senate; A. U. 585. and afterwards, A. U. 686. by a law which C. Cornelius got passed to the great offence of the nobility, UT PRÆTORES EX EDICTIS SUIS PERPETUIS JUS DICERENT, i. e. that the prætors, in administering justice, should not deviate from their form, which they prescribed to themselves in the beginning of their office, Ascon. in Orat. Cic. pro Corn.—Dio. Cass. 36. c. 22 & 23. From this time the law of the prætors, (JUS PRÆTORIUM,) became more fixed, and lawyers began to study their edicts with particular attention; Cic. de Legg. i. 5. some also to comment on them, Gell. xiii. 10. By order of the Emperor Hadrian, the various edicts of the prætors were collected into one, and properly arranged by the lawyer Salvius Julian, the great grandfather of the Emperor Didius Julian; which was thereafter called EDICTUM PERPETUUM, or JUS HONORARIUM, and no doubt was of the greatest service in forming that famous code of the Roman laws called the CORPUS JURIS, compiled by order of the emperor Justinian.

Besides the general edict, which the prætor published when he entered on his office, he frequently published particular edicts as occasion required, (EDICTA PECULIARIA ET REPENTINA,) Cic. in Verr. iii. 14.

An edict published at Rome was called EDICTUM URBANUM, ibid. 43. in the provinces, PROVINCIALE, ibid. 46. Siciliense, 45. &c.

Some think that the Prætor Urbanus only published an annual edict, and that the Prætor Peregrinus administered justice, either according to it, or according to the law of nature and nations. But we read also of the edict of the Prætor Peregrinus, Cic. Fam. xiii. 59. And it appears that in certain cases he might even be appealed to for relief against the decrees of the Prætor Urbanus, Cic. Verr. i. 46. Ascon. in Cic. Cæs. de Bell. Civ. iii. 20. Dio. xlii. 22.

The other magistrates published edicts as well as the prætor; the kings, Liv. i. 32 & 44. the consuls, Liv. ii. 24. viii. 6. the dictator, Liv. ii. 30. viii. 34. the censor, Liv. xliii. 14. Nep. in Cat. 1. Gell. xv. 11. the curule ædiles, Cic. Phil. ix. 7. Plaut. Captiv. iv. 2. 43. the tribunes of the commons, Cic. in Verr. ii. 41. the quæstors, ibid. iii. 7. So the provincial magistrates, Cic. Epist. passim; and under the emperors, the præfect of the city, of the prætorian cohorts, &c. So likewise the priests, as the pontifices and decemviri sacrorum, Liv. xl. 37. the augurs, Valer. Max. viii. 2. 1. and in particular, the pontifex maximus, Tacit. Hist. ii. 91. Gell.

ii. 28. All these were called HONORATI, Liv. xv. 5. Ovid. Pont. iv. 5. or Honore honestati, Sall. Cat. 35. honoribus honorati, Vellei. ii. 124. honore vel honoribus usi, Flor. i. 13. Cic. Flacc. 19. and therefore the law which was derived from their edicts was also called Jus HONORARIUM. But of all these, the edicts of the prætor were the most important.

The orders and decrees of the emperors were sometimes also called edicta, but usually rescripta. See p. 28.

The magistrates, in composing their edicts, took the advice of the chief men of the state; thus, Consules cum viros primarios atque amplissimos civitatis multos in consilium advocassent, de consilii sententia pronunciârunt, &c. Cic. Verr. iii. 7. and sometimes of one another; thus, Cum collegium prætorium tribuni pleb. adhibuissent, ut res nummaria de communi sententia constitueretur; conscripserunt communiter edictum, Cic. Off. iii. 20. Marius quod communiter compositum fuerat, solus edixit, ibid.

The summoning of any one to appear in court, was likewise called Edictum. If any person did not obey the first summons, it was repeated a second and third time; and then what was called a peremptory summons was given, (EDICTUM PEREMPTORIUM datur, quod disceptationem perimeret, i. e. ultra tergiversari non pateretur, which admitted of no farther delay;) and if any one neglected it, he was called contumacious, and lost his cause. Sometimes a summons of this kind was given all at once, and was called UNUM PRO OMNIBUS, or UNUM PRO TRIBUS. We read of the senators being summoned to Rome from all Italy, by an edict of the prætor, Liv. xliii. 11.

Certain decrees of the prætor were called INTERDICTA; as, about acquiring, retaining, or recovering the possession of a thing; Cic. Cæcin. 3. 14. 31. Orat. i. 10. to which Cicero alludes, Urbanitatis possessionem quibusvis INTERDICTIS defendamus, Fam. vii. 32. also about restoring, exhibiting, or prohibiting a thing; whence Horace, Sat. ii. 3. 217. INTERDICTO huic (sc. insano) omne adimat jus prætor, i. e. bonis interdicat, the prætor would take from him the management of his fortune, and appoint him a curator, Id. Epist. i. 1. 102. according to a law of the Twelve Tables, (quæ furiosis et male rem gerentibus bonis INTERDICI jubebat), Cic. de Senect. 7.

3. The INSIGNIA of the PRÆTOR.

THE prætor was attended by two lictors in the city, who went before him with the fasces, Plaut. Epid. i. 1. 26. and by six lictors without the city. He wore the toga prætexta, which he assumed, as the consuls did, on the first day of his office, after having offered up vows, (votis nuncupatis), in the capitol.

When the prætor heard causes, he sat in the Forum or Comitium, on a TRIBUNAL, (in, or oftener pro tribunali), which was a kind of stage or scaffold, (suggestum v. -us), in which was placed the Sella Curulis of the prætor, Cic. Verr. iii. 38. Mart. xi. 99. and a sword and a spear (GLADIUS et HASTA) were set upright before him. The Tribunal was made of wood, and moveable, Cic. in Vat. 14. Suet. Cæs. 84. so large as to contain the ASSESSORES, or counsel, of the prætor, Cic. de Orat. i. 37. and others, Brut. 84. in the form of a square, as appears from ancient coins. But when spacious halls were erected round the Forum, for the administration of justice, called BASILICÆ, or Regiæ sc. ades vel porticus, Suet. Aug. 31. Calig. 37. Stat. Silv. i. 1. 29. (Βασιλικὰ εὐαί) Zosim. v. 2. Joseph. A. xvii. 11. from their largeness and magnificence, the Tribunal in them seems to have been of stone; and in the form of a semicircle, Vitruv. v. 1. the two ends of which were called Cornua, Tacit. Annal. i. 75. or Partes Primores, Suet. Tib. 33. The first Basilica at Rome appears to have been built by M. Porcius Cato, the censor, A. U. 566. hence called Porcia, Liv. xxxix. 44.

The JUDICES or jury appointed by the Prætor, sat on lower seats, called SUBSELLIA, Cic. Rosc. Am. 11. as also did the advocates, Id. de Orat. i. 62. the witnesses, Id. Flacc. 10. and hearers, Brut. 84. Suet. Aug. 56. Whence Subsellia is put for the act of judging, Suet. Ner. 17. or of pleading, Cic. de Orat. i. 8. ii. 33. thus, Versatus in utrisque subselliis cum summa fama et fide; i. e. judicem et patronum egit, Cic. Fam. xiii. 10. A subselliis Alienus, &c. i. e. causidicus, a pleader, in Cæcil. 15. For such were said habitare in subselliis, Orat. i. 62. A subselliis in otium se conferre, to retire from pleading, Id. Orat. ii. 33.

The inferior magistrates, when they sat in judgment (judicia exercebant.) did not use a Tribunal, but only subsellia; as the tribunes, plebeian ædiles, and quæstors, &c. Ascon. in Cic. Suet. Claud. 23.

The benches on which the senators sat in the senate-house were likewise called subsellia, Cic. in Cat. i. 7. Hence longi subselliis judicatio, the slowness of the senate in decreeing, Cic. Fam. iii. 9. And so also the seats in the theatres, circus, &c. thus, senatoria subsellia, Cic. pro Corn. 1. Bis subtena sepsellia, the seats of the Equites, Mart. v. 28.

In matters of less importance, the prætor judged and passed sentence without form, at any time, or in any place, whether sitting or walking; and then he was said COGNOSCERE, interloqui, discutere E vel DE PLANO; or, as Cicero expresses it, ex æquo loco, Fam. iii. 8. Cæcin. 17. de Orat. 6. non pro, vel e tribunali, aut ex superiore loco; which expressions are opposed to the former: So Suet. Tib. 33. But about all important affairs, he judged in form on his tribunal: whence atque hæc agebantur in conventu palam, de sellâ ac de loco superiore, Cic. Verr. 4. 40.

The usual attendants (MINISTRI vel apparitores) of the prætor, besides the lictors, were the SCRIBÆ, who recorded his proceedings, (qui acta in tabulas referrent.) Cic. Verr. iii. 78 & 79. and the ACCENSI, who summoned persons, and proclaimed aloud when it was the third hour, or nine o'clock before noon; when it was midday, and when it was the ninth hour, or three o'clock after noon, Varr. de ling. Lat. v. 9.

4. The number of PRÆTORS at different times:

WHILE the Roman empire was limited to Italy, there were only two prætors. When Sicily and Sardinia were reduced to the form of a province, A. U. 526, two other prætors were added to govern them, Liv. Epit. 20. and two more when Hither and Farther Spain were subdued, Id. xxxii. 27 & 28. In the year 571, only four prætors were created by the Bæbian law, which ordained that six prætors and four should be created alternately; Liv. xl. 44. but this regulation seems not to have been long observed.

Of these six prætors, two only remained in the city; the other four, immediately after having entered on their office, set out for their provinces. The prætors determined their province, as the consuls, by casting lots, or by agreement, Liv. passim.

Sometimes one prætor administered justice both between citizens and foreigners, Liv. xv. 3. xxvii. 38. xxxi. 1. xxxv. 41. and in dangerous conjunctures, none of the prætors were exempted from military service, Id. xxiii. 32.

The prætor Urbanus and Peregrinus administered justice only in private or lesser causes; but in public or important causes, the people either judged themselves, or appointed persons, one or more, to preside at the trial, (que questioni præsent, Cic. pro Cluent. 29. quærent, quæstiones publicas vel judicia exercerent, Liv. iv. 51. xxxviii. 55. Sallust. Jug. 40.) who were called QUÆSITORES, or Quæstores paricidii, whose authority lasted only till the trial was over. Sometimes a dictator was created for holding trials, Liv. ix. 26. But A. U. 604. it was determined, that the Prætor Urbanus and Peregrinus should continue to exercise their usual jurisdictions; and that the four other prætors should during their magistracy also remain in the city, and preside at public trials: one at trials concerning extortion, (de repetundis;) another, concerning bribery, (de ambitu;) a third, concerning crimes committed against the state, (de majestate;) and a fourth, about defrauding the public treasury, (de peculatu.) These were called QUESTIONES PERPETUÆ, Cic. Brut. 26. because they were annually assigned (mandabantur), to particular prætors, who always conducted them for the whole year, (qui perpetuè exercerent,) according to a certain form prescribed by law: so that there was no need, as formerly, of making a new law, or of appointing extraordinary inquisitors to preside at them, who should resign their authority when the trial was ended. But still, when any thing unusual or atrocious happened, the people or senate judged about the matter themselves, or appointed inquisitors to preside at the trial; and then they were said extra ordinem quære: as in the case of Clodius, for violating the sacred rites of the Bona Dea, or Good Goddess, Cic. Att. i. 13. 14 & 16. and of Milo, for the murder of Clodius, Cic. pro Mil. &c.

L. Sulla increased the number of the questiones perpetuas, by adding those de FALSO, vel de crimine falsi, concerning forgers of wills or other writs, coiners or makers of base money, &c. de SICARIIS et VENEFICIS, about such as killed a person with weapons or poison; et de PARRICIDIS, on which account he created two additional prætors, A. U. 672; some say four. Julius Cæsar increased the number of prætors, first to ten, A. U. 707. Dio. xlii. 51. then to fourteen, Id. xliii. 47. afterwards to sixteen, ib. 49. Tacit. Hist. iii. 37. Under the triumviri, there were 67 prætors in one year, Dio. xlviii. 43. 53. Augustus reduced the number to twelve, Dio. says ten; xliii. 32. but afterwards made them sixteen, Pompon. de orig. jur. ii. 28. According to Tacitus, there were no more than twelve at his death, Annal. i. 14. Under Tiberius, there were sometimes fifteen and sometimes sixteen, Dio. lviii. 20. Claudius added two prætors for the cognizance of trusts, (qui de fideicommissis jus dicerent.) The number then was eighteen; but afterwards it varied.

Upon the decline of the empire, the principal functions of the prætors were conferred on the præfectus prætorio, and other magistrates instituted by the emperors. The prætors of course sunk in their importance: under Valentinian their number was reduced to three; and this magistracy having become an empty name, (inane nomen.) Boeth. de consol. philos. iii. 4. was at last entirely suppressed, as it is thought, under Justinian.

III. CENSORS.

Two magistrates were first created, A. U. 312, for taking an account of the number of the people, and the value of their fortunes, (censui agendo;) whence they were called CENSORES, Liv. et Fest. (CENSOR, ad cujus censuram, id est arbitrium, censeretur populus, Varr. L. L. iv. 14.) As the consuls, being engaged in wars abroad, or commotions at home, had no leisure for that business, (non consulibus operæ erat, sc. pretium, i. e. iis non vacabat id negotium agere;) the census had been intermitted for 17 years, Liv. iii. 12. iv. 8.

The censors at first continued in office for five years, Ibid. But afterwards, lest they should abuse their authority, a law was passed by Mamercus Æmilius the dictator, ordaining, that they should be elected every five years; but that their power should continue only a year and a half, (Ex quinquenniali annua ac semestris censura facta est.) Liv. iv. 24. ix. 33.

The censors had all the ensigns of the consuls, except the lictors.

The censors were usually chosen from the most respectable persons of consular dignity; at first only from the patricians, but afterwards likewise from the plebeians. The first plebeian censor was C. Marcus Rutilus, A. U. 404. who also had been the first plebeian dictator, Liv. vii. 22. Afterwards a law was made, that one of the censors should always be a plebeian. Sometimes both censors were plebeians, Liv. Epit. 59. and sometimes those were created censors, who had neither been consuls nor prætors, Liv. xvii. 6 and 11. but not so after the second Punic war.

The last censors, namely, Paulus and Plancus, under Augustus, are said to have been private persons, (PRIVATI,) Dio. liv. 2. not that they had never borne any public office before, but to distinguish them from the Emperor; all besides him being called by that name, Vell. ii. 99. Suet. Tacit. et Plin. passim.

The power of the censors at first was small; but afterwards it became very great. All the orders of the state were subject to them, (ensoribus subjecti, Liv. iv. 24.) Hence the censorship is called, by Plutarch, the summit of all preferments (omnium honorum apex, vel fastigium), in Cat. Maj. and by Cicero, majestra pudoris et modestiæ, in Pis. 4. The title of Censor was esteemed more honourable than that of Consul; as appears from ancient coins and statues: and it was reckoned the chief ornament of nobility to be sprung from a censorian family, Valer. viii. 13. Tacit. Ann. iii. 28. Hist. iii. 9.

The office of the censors was chiefly to estimate the fortunes, and to inspect the morals, of the citizens, Cic. de leg. iii. 3.

The censors took the census in the Campus Martius. Seated in their curule chairs, and attended by their clerks and other officers, they ordered the citizens, divided into their classes and centuries, and also into their tribes, Liv. xxix. 37. to be called (citari) before them by a herald, and to give an account of their fortunes, family, &c. according to the institution of Servius Tullius (See p. 74.) At the same time, they reviewed the senate and equestrian order, supplied the vacant places in both, and inflicted various marks of disgrace (notas inurebant) on those who deserved it. A senator they excluded from the senate-house, (senatu movebant, vel ejiciebant), (see p. 14.) an eques they deprived of his public horse, (equum adimebant), (see p. 32.) and any other citizen they removed from a more honourable to a less honourable tribe, (tribu movebant;) or deprived him of all the privileges of a Roman citizen, except liberty, (ærarium faciebant, Liv. Qui per hoc non esset in albo centuriæ suæ, sed ad hoc esset civis tantum, ut pro capite suo tributi nomine serra penderet, Ascon. in Cic.) or, as it is otherwise expressed, in tabulas Cæritum, vel inter Cærites referrebant, i. e. jure suffragii privabant; Gell. xvi. 13. Strab. v. p. 220. Hence Cærite cerû digni, worthless persons, Horat. Ep. i. 6. 63. But this last phrase does not often occur. Cicero and Livy almost always use Ærarium facere; in vel inter ærarios referre. This mark of disgrace was also inflicted on a senator or an eques, and was then always added to the mark of disgrace peculiar to their order; thus, Censores Mamercum, qui fuerat dictator, tribu moverunt, octuplicatoque censu, (i. e. having made the valuation of his estate eight times more than it ought, that thus he might be obliged to pay eight times more tribute,) ærarium fecerunt, Liv. iv. 24. Omnes, quos senatu moverunt, quibusque equos ademerunt, ærarios fecerunt, et tribu moverunt, xlii. 10. The censors themselves did not sometimes agree about their powers in this respect ; Claudius negabat, Suffragii lationem injussu populi censorem cuiquam homini adimere posse. Neque enim si tribu movere posset, quod sit nihil aliud quam mutare jubere tribum, ideo omnibus v. et xxx. tribubus emovere posse : id est, civitatem libertatemque eripere, non ubi censeatur finire, sed censu excludere. Hac inter ipsos disceptata, &c. Liv. xlv. 15.

The censors could inflict these marks of disgrace upon what evidence, and for what cause, they judged proper ; but, when they expelled from the senate, they commonly annexed a reason to their censure, Liv. xxxix. 42. which was called SUBSCRIPTIO CENSORIA, Cic. pro Cluent. 43 & 44. Sometimes an appeal was made from their sentence to the people, Plutarch. in T. Q. Flamin.

The censors not only could hinder one another from inflicting any censure, (ut alter de senatu moveri velit, alter retineat ; ut alter in ærarios referri, aut tribu moveri jubeat, alter vetet, Cic. ibid. Tres ejecti de senatu ; retinuit quosdam Lepidus a collega præteritos, Liv. xl. 51.) but they might even stigmatize one another, Liv. xxix. 37.

The citizens in the colonies and free towns were there enrolled by their own censors, according to the form prescribed by the Roman censors, (ex formula ab Romanis censoribus data,) and an account of them was transmitted to Rome, Liv. xxix. 15. So that the senate might see at one view the wealth and condition of the whole empire, ibid. 37.

When the censors took an estimate of the fortunes of the citizens, they were said, censum agere vel habere ; CENSERE populi civitates, soboles, familias, pecuniasque, Cic. legg. iii. 3. Referre in censum, Liv. xxxix. 44. Flor. i. 6. or, censui ascribere, Tacit. Annal. xiii. 51. The citizens, when they gave in to the censors an estimate of their fortunes, &c. were said CENSERI modum agri, mancipia, pecunias, &c. sc. secundum vel quod ad, Cic. Flacc. 32. s. 80. Profiteri ; in censum deferre vel dedicare, Id. Arch. 4. Senec. Ep. 95. annos deferre vel censeri : thus, CL. annos census est Claudii Cæsaris censurâ T. Fullonius Bononiensis ; idque collatis censibus quos ante detulerat, verum apparuit, Plin. vii. 49. s. 50. Sometimes also censere ; thus, Prædia censere, to give in an estimate of one's farms, Cic. Flacc. 32. Liv. xlv. 15. Prædia censui censendo, sc. apta ; i. e. quorum census censeri, pretium æstimari ordinis et tribuli causâ potest ; farms, of which one is the just proprietor, ibid. Hence censeri, to be valued or esteemed, to be held in estimation ; Cic. Arch. 6. Val. Max. v. 3. 3. Ovid. Am. ii. 15. 2. Senec. Ep. 76. Plin. Pan. 15. De quo censeris, amicus, from whom or on whose account you are valued, Ovid. Pont. ii. 5. ult. Privatus illis CENSUS erat brevis, their private fortune was small, Horat. Od. ii. 15. 13. exiguus, Ep. i. 1. 43. tenuis, Id. 7. 76. Equestris, v. -ter, the fortune of an Eques ; CCCC. millia nummum, 400,000 sesterces, Plin. Ep. i. 19. Senatorius, of a senator, Suet. Vesp. 17. Homo sine censu, Cic. Flacc. 52. Ex sensu tributa conferre, Id. Verr. ii. 63. Cultus major censu, Horat. Sat. ii. 3. 323. Dat census honores, Ovid. Amor. iii. 8. 56. Census partus per vulnera, a fortune procured in war, ibid. 9. Demittere censum in viscera, i. e. bona obliquirare, to eat up, Id. Met. viii. 846. Romani census populi, the treasury, Lucan. iii. 157. Brevēs extendere census, to make a small fortune go far, Martial. xii. 6.

The censors divided the citizens into classes and centuries, according to their fortunes. They added new tribes to the old, when it was necessary, Liv. x. 9. Epit. 19. They let the public lands and taxes, (see p. 62.) and the regulations which they prescribed to the farmers-general (mancipibus v. publicanis) were called Leges vel Tabulæ Censoria, Cic. Vell. iii. 6. in Rull. i. 2. Polyb. vi. 15^p

The censors agreed with undertakers about building and repairing the public works, such as temples, porticos, &c. (opera publica ædificanda et reficienda REDEMPTORIBUS locabant;) which they examined when finished (probaverunt, i. e. rectè et ex ordine facta esse pronuntiaverunt;) and caused to be kept in good repair, (sarta tecta exigebant, sc. et.) Liv. iv. 22. xl. 51. xlii. 3. xlv. 15. The expenses allowed by the public for executing these works, were called ULTROTRIBUTA, Liv. xxxix. 44. xliii. 16. Senec. Benef. iv. 1. Hence Ultributa locare, to let them, or to promise a certain sum for executing them; conducere, to undertake them, ibid.

The censors had the charge of paving the streets, and making the public roads, bridges, aquæducts, &c. Liv. ix. 29 & 43. xli. 27. They likewise made contracts about furnishing the public sacrifices, Plutarch. in Cat. and horses for the use of the curule magistrates, Liv. xxiv. 18. Fest. in voc. EQUI CURULES; also about feeding the geese which were kept in the capitol, in commemoration of their having preserved it, when the dogs had failed to give the alarm, Cic. pro Rosc. Am. 20. Plin. x. 22. s. 26. xxix. 4. s. 14.

They took care that private persons should not occupy what belonged to the public, Liv. iv. 8. And if any one refused to obey their sentence, they could fine him, and distrain his effects till he made payment, Liv. xliii. 16.

The imposing of taxes is often ascribed to the censors; but this was done by a decree of the senate and the order of the people; without which the censors had not even the right of laying out the public money, nor of letting the public lands, Liv. xxvii. 11. xl. 46. xli. 27. xlv. 16. Polyb. vi. 10. Hence the senate sometimes cancelled their leases, (locationes inducebant.) when they disapproved of them, Id. xxxix. 44. For the senate had the chief direction in all these matters, ibid.

The censor had no right to propose laws, to lay any thing before the senate or people, unless by means of the consul or prætor, or a tribune of the commons, Plin. Hist. Nat. xxxv. 17. Liv. loc. cit.

The power of the censors did not extend to public crimes, or to such things as came under the cognizance of the civil magistrate, and were punishable by law; but only to matters of a private nature, and of less importance; as, if one did not cultivate his ground properly, Gell. iv. 12. if an eques did not take proper care of his horse, which was called INCURIA or Impolitia, ibid. if one lived too long unmarried, (the fine for which was called ÆS UXORIUM, Festus;) or contracted debt without cause, &c. Valer. Max. ii. 9. and particularly, if any one had not behaved with sufficient bravery in war; Liv. xxiv. 18. or was of dissolute morals, Cic. Cluent. 47; above all, if a person had violated his oath, Liv. ibid. et Cic. Off. iii. 31. Gell. vii. 18.

The accused were usually permitted to make their defence, (causam dicere.) Liv. loc. cit.

The sentence of the censors, (ANIMADVERSIO CENSORIA vel judicium censoris.) only affected the rank and character of persons. It was therefore properly called IGNOMINIA, (quod in nomine tantum, i. e. dignitate versabatur.) and in later times had no other effect, than of putting a man to the blush, (nihil fere damnato afferebat præter ruborem, Cic.)

It was not fixed and unalterable, as the decision of a court of law, (non pro re judicatâ habebatur;) but might be either taken off by the next censors or rendered ineffectual by the verdict of a jury, or by the suffrages of the Roman people. Thus we find C. Gæta, who had been extruded the senate by the censors, A. U. 639, the very next lustrum himself made censor, Cic. pro Cluent. 42. See p. 14. Sometimes the senate added force to the feeble sentence of the censors, (inerti censoriæ notæ.) by their decree, which imposed an additional punishment, Liv. xxiv. 18.

The office of censor was once exercised by a dictator, Liv. xxiii. 22 & 23. After Sylla, the election of censors was intermitted for about 17 years, Ascon. in Cic.

When the censors acted improperly, they might be brought to a trial; as they sometimes were by a tribune of the commons, Liv. xxv. 43. xliii. 15. 16. Nay, we find a tribune ordering a censor to be seized and led to prison, Id. ix. 34. and even to be thrown from the Tarpeian rock, Id. epit. 59. Plin. vii. 44. s. 45. but both were prevented by their colleagues, ibid. 43. s. 45.

Two things were peculiar to the censors.—1. No one could be elected a second time to that office, according to the law of C. Martius Rutilus, who refused a second censorship when conferred on him, hence surnamed CENSORINUS, Valer. Max. iv. 1.—2. If one of the censors died, another was not substituted in his room; but his surviving colleague was obliged to resign his office, Liv. xxiv. 43. xxvii. 6.

The death of a censor was esteemed ominous, because it happened that a censor died, and another was chosen in his place, in that lustrum in which Rome was taken by the Gauls, Liv. v. 31. vi. 27.

The censors entered on their office immediately after their election. It was customary for them, when the comitia were over, to sit down on their curule chairs in the Campus Martius, before the temple of Mars, Liv. xl. 45. Before they began to execute their office, they swore that they would do nothing through favour or hatred, but that they would act uprightly ; and when they resigned their office, they swore that they had done so. Then going up to the treasury, (in ararium ascendentes.) they left a list of those whom they had made ararii, Liv. xxix. 37.

A record of the proceedings of the censors (memoria publica re-censionis, tabulis publicis impressa) was kept in the temple of the nymphs, Cic. pro Mil. 27. and is also said to have been preserved with great care by their descendants, Dionys. i. 74.

One of the censors to whom it fell by lot, Varr. Lat. L. v. 9. after the census was finished, offered a solemn sacrifice (instrum condidit) in the Campus Martius. See p. 77.

The power of the censors continued unimpaired to the tribuneship of Clodius, A. U. 695. who got a law passed, ordering that no senator should be degraded by the censors, unless he had been formally accused and condemned by both censors, Dio. xxxviii. 13. but this law was abrogated, and the powers of the censorship restored soon after by Q. Metellus Scipio, A. U. 702. Ascon. in Cic. Dio. xl. 57.

Under the emperors the office of censor was abolished : but the chief duties of it were exercised by the emperors themselves, or by other magistrates.

Julius Cæsar made a review of the people (recensum populi egit.) after a new manner, in the several streets, by means of the proprietors of the houses, (vicatim per dominos insularum.) Suet. Jul. 41. But this was not a review of the whole Roman people, but only of the poorer sort, who received a monthly gratuity of corn from the public, ibid. which used to be given them in former times, first at a low price, Liv. ii. 34. and afterwards by the law of Clodius, for nought, Cic. pro Sext. 25. Ascon. in Cic.

Julius Cæsar was appointed by the senate to inspect the morals of the citizens for three years, Dio. xliii. 14. under the title of PRÆFECTUS MORUM vel moribus, Suet. Jul. 76. Cic. Fam. ix. 15. afterwards for life, under the title of censor, Dio. xlii. 5. A power similar to this seems to have been conferred on Pompey in his third consulship, (corrigen-dis moribus delectus.) Tacit. Ann. ii. 28.

Augustus thrice made a review of the people ; the first and last time with a colleague, and the second time alone, Suet. Aug. 27.

He was invested by the senate with the same censorian power as Julius Cæsar, repeatedly for five years, according to Dio Cassius, liii. 17. liv. 2. 10 & 30. according to Suetonius for life, (recepit et morum legumque regimen perpetuum.) Suet. Aug. 27. under the title of MAGISTER MORUM, Fast. Cons. Hence Horace, Epist. ii. 1.

*Cum tot sustineas, ac tanta negotia solus,
Res Italas armis tutaris, moribus ornes,
Legibus emendes, &c.*

Augustus, however, declined the title of censor, Suet. 27. although he is so called by Macrobius, Sat. ii. 4. and Ovid says of him, sic agitur CENSURA, &c. Fast. vi. 647. Some of the succeeding emperors assumed this title, particularly those of the Flavian family, but most of them rejected it, as Trajan, Plin. Paneg. 45. after whom we rarely find it mentioned, Dio. liii. 18.

Tiberius thought the censorship unfit for his time, (non id tempus censura,) Tacit. Ann. ii. 33. It was therefore intermitted during his government; as it was likewise during that of his successor.

A review of the people was made by Claudius and L. Vitellius, the father of the emperor A. Vitellius, A. U. 800. Suet. Claud. 16. Vit. 2. by Vespasian and Titus; A. U. 827. Suet. Vesp. 8. Tit. 6. but never after. Censorinus de die nat. 18. says, that this review was made only seventy-five times during 650, or rather 630 years, from its first institution under Servius to the time of Vespasian; after which it was totally discontinued, ibid.

Decius endeavoured to restore the censorship in the person of Valerian, but without effect. The corrupt morals of Rome at that period could not bear such a magistrate. Trebell. Pollio. in Valer.

IV. TRIBUNES of the People.

THE plebeians, being oppressed by the patricians on account of debt, Liv. ii. 23, &c. at the instigation of one Sicinius, made a secession to a mountain, afterwards called Mons Sacer, three miles from Rome; A. U. 260, ibid. 32. nor could they be prevailed on to return, till they obtained from the patricians a remission of debts for those who were insolvent, and liberty to such as had been given up to serve their creditors; and likewise that the plebeians should have proper magistrates of their own to protect their rights, whose persons should be sacred and inviolable, (sacrosancti,) Liv. iii. 33 & 55. Dionys. vi. 89. They were called TRIBUNES, according to Varro, de Ling. Lat. i. iv. 14. because they were at first created from the tribunes of the soldiers.

Two tribunes were at first created, Cic. pro Corn. 1. at the assembly, by curia, who, according to Livy, created three colleagues to themselves, ii. 33. In the year 283, they were first elected at the Comitia Tributa, c. 58. and A. U. 297. ten tribunes were created; Liv. iii. 30. two out of each class, which number continued ever after.

No patrician could be made tribune, unless first adopted into a plebeian family, as was the case with Clodius, the enemy of Cicero, pro Dom. 16. Suet. Jul. 20. At one time, however, we find two patricians of consular dignity elected tribunes; Liv. iii. 65. And no one could be made tribune or plebeian ædile, whose father had borne a curule office, and was alive, Liv. xxx. 19. nor whose father was a captive, xxviii. 21.

The tribunes were at first chosen indiscriminately from the plebeians; but it was ordained by the Atinian law, some think A. U. 623, that no one should be made tribune who was not a senator, Gell. xiv. 8. Suet. Aug. 10. And we read, that when there were no senatorian candidates, on account of the powers of that office being diminished, Augustus chose them from the Equites, Suet. Aug. 40. Dio. liv. 26. 30. But others think, that the Atinian law only ordained, that those who were made tribunes should of course be senators, and did not prescribe any restriction concerning their election. See Manutius de legg. It is certain, however, that under the emperors, no one but a senator had a right to stand candidate for the tribuneship, (jus tribunatus petendi.) Plin. Ep. ii. 9.

One of the tribunes, chosen by lot, presided at the comitia for electing tribunes, Liv. iii. 64. which charge was called sors comitorum, ibid. After the abdication of the decemviri, when there were no tribunes, the Pontifex Maximus presided at their election, c. 54. If the assembly was broken up, (si comitia dirempta essent.) before the ten tribunes were elected, those who were created might choose (cooptare) colleagues for themselves to complete the number, c. 65. But a law was immediately passed by one Trebonius to prevent this for the future, which enacted, "that he who presided should continue the comitia, and recall the tribes to give their votes, till ten were elected," ibid.

The tribunes always entered on their office the 10th of December, (ante diem quartum Idus Decembris.) because the first tribunes were elected on that day, Liv. 52. Dionys. vi. 89. In the time of Cicero, however, Asconius says, it was on the 5th (nonis Decembris), in proem. Verr. 10. But this seems not to have been so; for Cicero himself on that day calls Cato tribunus designatus, pro Sext. 28.

The tribunes wore no toga prætexta, nor had they any external mark of dignity, except a kind of beadle, called viator, who went before them. It is thought they were not allowed to use a carriage, Cic. Phil. ii. 24. Plut. Quæst. Rom. 81. When they administered justice, they had no tribunal, but sat on subsellia or benches, Ascon. in Cic. They had, however, on all occasions, a right of precedence; and every body was obliged to rise in their presence, Plin. Ep. i. 23.

The power of the tribunes was at first very limited. It consisted in hindering, not in acting, Dionys. vii. 17. and was expressed by the word VETO, I forbid it. They only had the right of seizing, but not of summoning; (prehensionem, sed non vocationem habebant.) Gell. xiii. 12. Their office was only to assist the plebeians against the patricians and magistrates; (Auxiliū, non pænæ jus datum illi potestati.) Liv. ii. 35. vi. 37. Hence they were said, esse privati, sine imperio, sine magistratu, ii. 56. not being dignified with the name of magistrates, Plutarch. in Coriol. et Quæst. Rom. 81. as they were afterwards, Liv. iv. 2. Sall. Jug. 37. They were not even allowed to enter the senate. See p. 22.

But in process of time they increased their influence to such a degree, that under the pretext of defending the rights of the people, they did almost whatever they pleased. They hindered the collection of tribute, Liv. v. 12. the enlisting of soldiers, iv. 1. and the creation of magistrates, which they did at one time for five years, Liv. vi. 35. They could put a negative (intercedere) upon all the decrees of the senate and ordinances of the people; Cic. pro Mil. 6. Liv. xlv. 21. Polyb. vi. 14, and a single tribune by his VETO, could stop the proceedings of all the other magistrates, which Cæsar calls extremum jus tribunorum, de Bell. Civ. i. 4. Liv. ii. 44. iv. 6 & 48. vi. 35. Such was the force of this word, that whoever did not obey it, whether magistrate or private person, was immediately ordered to be led to prison by a viator; or a day was appointed for his trial before the people; as a violater of the sacred power of the tribunes, the exercise of which it was a crime to restrain, (in ordinem cogere.) Plin. Ep. i. 23. Liv. xxv. 3. 4. Plutarch. in Mario. They first began with bringing the chief of the patricians to their trial before the Comitia Tributa; as they did Coriolanus, Dionys. vii. 65.

If any one hurt a tribune in word or deed, he was held accursed, (sacer.) and his goods were confiscated, Liv. iii. 55. Dionys. vi. 89. vii. 17. Under the sanction of this law, they carried their power to an extravagant height. They claimed a right to prevent consuls from setting out to their provinces; Plutarch. in Crass. Dio. xxxix. 39. and even to pull victorious generals from their triumphal chariots, Cic. pro Cæl. 14. They stopped the course of justice by putting off trials, Liv. iii. 25. Cic. Phil. ii. 2. in Vatin. 14. and hindering the execution of a sentence; Cic. de prov. cons. 8. Liv. xxxviii. 60. They sometimes ordered the military tribunes, and even the consuls themselves, to prison, Liv. iv. 26. v. 9. Epit. 48. 55. Cic. in Vatin. 9 & 10. Dio. xxxvii. 50. (as the Ephori at Lacedæmon did their kings, Nep. in Paus. 3. whom the tribunes at Rome resembled, Cic. de Legg. iii. 7 & 9.) Hence it was said, Datum sub jugum tribunitiæ potestatis consulatum fuisse, Liv. iv. 26.

The tribunes usually did not give their negative to a law, till leave had been granted to speak for and against it, Liv. xlv. 21.

The only effectual method of resisting the power of the tribunes, was to procure one or more of their number, (e collegio tribunorum.) to put a negative on the proceedings of the rest, Liv. ii. 44. iv. 48. vi. 35. but those who did so, might afterwards be brought to trial before the people by their colleagues, Liv. v. 29.

Sometimes a tribune was prevailed on by entreaties or threats, to withdraw his negative, (intercessione desistere.) or he demanded time to consider it, (noctem sibi ad deliberandum postulavit; se postero die moram nullam esse facturum.) Cic. pro Sext. 34. Attic. iv. 2. Fam. viii. 8. or the consuls were armed with dictatorial power to oppose him, Cæs. de Bell. Civ. i. 5. Cic. Phil. ii. 21 & 22. (see p. 27.) from the terror of which, M. Antonius and Q. Cassius Longinus, tribunes of the commons, together with Curio and Cælius, fled from the city to Cæsar into Gaul; and afforded him a pretext for crossing the river Rubicon, which was the boundary of his province, and of leading his army to Rome, ibid. Dio. xli. 3. Appian. Bell. Civil. ii. p. 448. Plutarch. in Cæs. p. 727. Lucan. i. 273.

We also find the senate exercising a right of limiting the power of the tribunes, which was called CIRCUMSCRIPTIO, Cic. Att. vii. 9. pro Mil. 33. Cæs. de Bell. Civ. i. 32. and of removing them from their office, (a republicâ removendi, i. e. curia et foro interdicens,) Cæs. de Bell. Civ. iii. 21. Suet. Jul. 16. as they did likewise other magistrates, ibid. & Cic. Phil. xiii. 9. On one occasion the senate even sent a tribune to prison, Dio. xl. 45. but this happened at a time when all order was violated, ibid. 46.

The tribuneship was suspended when the decemviri were created, Liv. iii. 32. but not when a dictator was appointed, vi. 38.

The power of the tribunes was confined to the city, Dionys. viii. 87. and a mile around it; (neque enim provocationem esse longius ab urbe mille passuum,) Liv. iii. 20. unless when they were sent any where by the senate and people; and then they might, in any part of the empire, seize even a proconsul at the head of his army, and bring him to Rome, (jure sacrosanctæ potestatis,) Liv. xxix. 20.

The tribunes were not allowed to remain all night (pernoctare) in the country, nor to be above one whole day out of town, except during the Feriæ Latinæ, Dionys. viii. 87. and their doors were open day, and night, that they might be always ready to receive the requests and complaints of the wretched, Gell. iii. 2. xiii. 12. Macrob. Sat. i. 3.

The tribunes were addressed by the name, TRIBUNI. Those who implored their assistance, (eos appellabant, vel auxilium implorabant,) said A VOBIS, TRIBUNI, POSTULO, UT MIHI AUXILIO SITIS. The tribunes answered, AUXILIO ERIMUS, VEL NON ERIMUS, Liv. iv. 26. xxviii. 45.

When a law was to be passed, or a decree of the senate to be made, after the tribunes had consulted together, (cum in consilium secessissent,) one of their number declared, (ex sua collegarumque sententia vel pro collegio pronuntiavit,) SE INTERCEDERE, VEL NON INTERCEDERE, aut MORAM FACERE comitiis, delectui, &c. Also, SE NON PASSUROS legem ferri vel abrogari; relationem fieri de, &c. Pronuntiant PLACERE, &c. This was called DECRETUM tribunorum, Liv. iii. 13. & alibi passim. Thus; Medio decreto jus auxilii sui expediunt, exert their right of intercession by a moderate decree, ib.

Sometimes the tribunes sat in judgment, and what they decreed was called their EDICTUM, or decretum, Cic. Verr. ii. 41. If any one differed from the rest, he likewise pronounced his decree; thus, Tib. Gracchus ita decrevit: QUO MINUS EX BONIS L. SCIPIONIS QUOD JUDICATUM SIT, REDIGATUR, SE NON INTERCEDERE PRÆTORI. L. SCIPIONEM NON PASSURUM IN CARCERE ET IN VINCULIS ESSE, MITTIQUE EUM SE JUBERE, Liv. xxxviii. 60.

The tribunes early assumed the right of holding the comitia by tribes, and of making laws (PLEBISCITA), which bound the whole Roman people, Liv. iii. 10 & 55. (See p. 91.) They also exercised the power of holding the senate, A. U. 298. Dionys. x. 31. Cic. de Legg. iii. 10, of dismissing it, when assembled by another, Appian. de Bell. Civ. ii. and of making a motion, although the consuls were present, Civ. Phil. vii. 1. pro Sext. 11. They likewise sometimes hindered the censors in the choice of the senate, Dio. xxxvii. 9.

The tribunes often assembled the people merely to make harangues to them, (concionem advocabant vel populum ad concionem;) Gell. xii. 14. By the ICILIAN law, it was forbidden, under the severest penalties, to interrupt a tribune while speaking, Dionys. vii. 17. Cic. pro Sext. 37. and no one was allowed to speak in the assemblies summoned by them, without their permission: hence concionem dare, to grant leave to speak, Cic. Alt. iv. 2. in concionem ascendere, to mount the rostra, ibid. concionem habere, to make a speech, or to hold an assembly for speaking; and so, in concionem venire, Cic. pro Sext. 40. in concionem vocare, & in concione stare; Id. Acad. iv. 47. but to hold an assembly for voting about any thing, was, habere comitia, vel AGERE cum populo, Gell. xiii. 15.

The tribunes limited the time of speaking even to the consuls themselves, Cic. pro Rabir. 2. and sometimes would not permit them to speak at all. (See p. 101.) They could bring any one before the assembly, (ad concionem vel in concione producere;) and force them to answer what questions were put to them, Cic. in Vatini. 10. Pis. 6 & 7. post red. in Sen. 6. Dio. xxxviii. 16.

The laws which excited the greatest contentions, were about dividing the public lands to the poorer citizens, (LEGES AGRARIÆ;) Liv. ii. 41. iv. 48. vi. 11. Cic. in Rull.—about the distribution of corn at a low price, or for naught, (Leges FRUMENTARIÆ vel annonariæ;) Liv. Epit. lx. lxxi. Cic. ad Herenn. i. 12. pro Sext. 25. Ascon. in Cic.—and about the diminution of interest, (de levando fœnore;) and the abolition of debts, either in whole or in part, (de novis tabulis;)—leges FOENEBRES;) Liv. vi. 27 & 35. vii. 16 & 42. xxxv. 7. Paterc. ii. 23. See p. 47.

But these popular laws were usually joined by the tribunes with others respecting the aggrandizement of themselves and their order, Liv. vi. 35 & 39. and when the latter were granted, the former were often dropped, c. 42. At last, however, after great struggles, the tribunes laid open the way for plebeians to all the offices of the state.

The government of Rome was now brought to its just equilibrium. There was no obstruction to merit, and the most deserving were promoted. The republic was managed for several ages with quiet and moderation, (placidè modèstèque.) But when wealth and luxury were introduced, and avarice had seized all ranks, especially after the destruction of Carthage, the more wealthy plebeians joined the patricians, and they in conjunction engrossed all the honours and emoluments of the state. The body of the people were oppressed; and the tribunes, either overawed or gained, did not exert their influence to prevent it; or rather perhaps their interposition was disregarded, Sallust. Jug. 41.

At last Tiberius and Caius Gracchus, the grandsons of the great

Scipio Africanus by his daughter Cornelia, bravely undertook to assert the liberties of the people, and to check the oppression of the nobility. But proceeding with too great ardour, and not being sufficiently supported by the multitude, they fell a sacrifice to the rage of their enemies. Tiberius, while tribune, was slain in the capitol, by the nobility, with his cousin Scipio Nasica, Pontifex Maximus, at their head; A. U. 620. Appian. de Bell. Civ. i. 359. Cic. Cat. i. l. and Caius, a few years after, perished by means of the consul Opimius, who slaughtered a great number of the plebeians, Sallust. Jug. 16 & 42. This was the first civil blood shed at Rome, which afterwards at different times deluged the state, Appian. ibid. i. 349. Vell. ii. 3. From this period, when arms and violence began to be used with impunity in the legislative assemblies, and laws enacted by force to be held as valid, we date the commencement of the ruin of Roman liberty.

In the Jugurthine war, when, by the infamous corruption of the nobility, the republic had been basely betrayed, the plebeians, animated by the bold eloquence of the tribune Memmius, regained the ascendancy, Ibid. 40. 65. 78 & 84. The contest betwixt the two orders was renewed; but the people being misled and abused by their favourite, the faithless and ambitious Marius, Dio. fragment. xxxiv. 64. the nobility again prevailed under the conduct of Sylla.

Sylla abridged, and in a manner extinguished, the power of the tribunes, by enacting, "That whoever had been tribune, should not afterwards enjoy any other magistracy; that there should be no appeal to the tribunes; that they should not be allowed to assemble the people, and make harangues to them, nor propose laws," Liv. Epit. 89. Appian. B. Civ. i. 413. but should only retain the right of intercession, Cæs. de Bell. Civ. i. 6. (injuriæ faciendæ potestatem ademit, auxilii ferendi reliquit.) which Cicero greatly approves, *Cic. de Legg. iii. 9.

But after the death of Sylla, the power of the tribunes was restored. In the consulship of Cotta, A. U. 670, they obtained the right of enjoying other offices, Ascon. in Cic. and in the consulship of Pompey and Crassus, A. U. 683. all their former powers; Sall. Cat. 38. Cic. in Verr. i. 15. de Legg. iii. 11. a thing which Cæsar strenuously promoted, Suet. Jul. 5.

The tribes henceforth were employed by the leading men as the tools of their ambition. Backed by a hired mob, (a conductâ plebe stipati.) they determined every thing by force. They made and abrogated laws at pleasure, Cic. in Pis. 4. pro Sext. 25. They disposed of the public lands and taxes, as they thought proper, and conferred provinces and commands on those who purchased them at the highest price, Cic. pro Sext. 6. 10. 24. 26. &c. pro Dom. 8 & 20. The assemblies of the people were converted into scenes of violence and massacre; and the most daring always prevailed, Cic. pro Sext. 35. 36. 37. 38. &c. Dio. xxxix. 7. 8. &c.

* "The tribes were first made a branch of the legislature by the Publilian law. Until then they could only pass resolutions, as every other corporation can, which merely bound their own body. On this, as on other points, Sylla, when he took away the right of proposing laws from the tribunes, was unquestionably restoring the letter of the constitution out of an age which had passed away, and which he everywhere aimed to revive." Nichols. — Ed.

Julius Cæsar, who had been the principal cause of these excesses, and had made the violation of the power of the tribunes a pretext for making war on his country; (see p. 120.) having at last become master of the republic by force of arms, reduced that power, by which he had been raised, to a mere name; and deprived the tribunes of their office (potestate privavit) at pleasure, Suet. Jul. 79. Dio. xliv. 10. Vell. ii. 68.

Augustus got the tribunitian power to be conferred on himself for life, by a decree of the senate, Dio. li. 19. the exercise of it by proper magistrates, as formerly, being inconsistent with an absolute monarch, which that artful usurper established, Suet. Aug. 27. Tacit. Ann. iii. 56. This power gave him the right of holding the senate, Dio. liv. 3. (see p. 19.) of assembling the people, and of being appealed to in all cases, Dio. li. 19. It also rendered his person sacred and inviolable; so that it became a capital crime (crimen MAJESTATIS) to injure him in word or deed, Dio. liii. 17. which, under the succeeding emperors, served as a pretext for cutting off numbers of the first men in the state, and proved one of the chief supports of tyranny, (ADJUMENTA REGNI), Tacit. Annal. iii. 38. Suet. Tib. 58 & 61. Ner. 35. Hence this among other powers used to be conferred on the Emperors in the beginning of their reign, or upon other solemn occasions; and then they were said to be Tribunitia potestate donati, Capitol. in M. Anton.—Vopisc. in Tacit. (see p. 29.) Hence also, the years of their government were called the years of their tribunitian power, Dio. liii. 17. which are found often marked on ancient coins; computed not from the first of January, nor from the 10th of December, (iv. Id. Dec.) the day on which the tribunes entered on their office; but from the day on which they assumed the empire.

The tribunes, however, still continued to be elected, although they retained only the shadow of their former power, (inanem umbram et sine honore nomen), Plin. Ep. i. 23. Paneg. 10 & 95. Tacit. i. 77. xiii. 28. and seem to have remained to the time of Constantine, who abolished this with other ancient offices.

V. ÆDILES.

THE Ædiles were named from their care of the buildings, (a cura ædium.)

The Ædiles were either plebeian or curule.

TWO ÆDILES PLEBEII were first created, A. U. 260, in the Comitia Curiata, at the same time with the tribunes of the commons, to be as it were their assistants, and to determine certain lesser causes, which the tribunes committed to them, Dionys. vi. 90.

They were afterwards created, as the other inferior magistrates, at the Comitia Tributa.

Two ÆDILES CURULES were created from the patricians, A. U. 397. to perform certain public games, Liv. vi. 42. They were first chosen alternately from the patricians and plebeians, but afterwards, promiscuously from both, Liv. vii. 1. at the Comitia Tributa, Gell. vi. 9.

The curule ædiles wore the toga prætexta, had the right of images, and a more honourable place of giving their opinion in the senate, Cic. Verr. v. 14. They used the sella curulis, when they administered justice, whence they had their name, ib. Whereas the plebeian ædiles sat on benches, Ascon. in Cic. but they were inviolable, (SACROSANCTI,) as the tribunes, Festus. Liv. iii. 55.

The office of the ædiles was to take care of the city, Cic. de Legg. iii. 3. its public buildings, temples, theatres, baths, basilicæ, porticos, aquæducts, common sewers, public roads; &c. especially when there were no censors; also of private buildings, lest they should become ruinous, and deform the city, or occasion danger to passengers. They likewise took care of provisions, markets, taverns, &c. They inspected those things which were exposed to sale in the Forum; and if they were not good, they caused them to be thrown into the Tiber, Plaut. Rud. ii. 3. 42. They broke unjust weights and measures, Juvenal. x. 101. They limited the expenses of funerals, Cic. Phil. ix. 7. Ovid. Fast. vi. 663. They restrained the avarice of usurers, Liv. x. 37. They fined or banished women of bad character, after being condemned by the senate or people, Tacit. Ann. ii. 85. Liv. x. 31. xxv. 2. They took care that no new gods or religious ceremonies were introduced, Liv. iv. 30. They punished not only petulant actions, but even words, Gell. x. 6.

The ædiles took cognizance of these things, proposed edicts concerning them, Plaut. Capt. iv. 2. v. 43. and fined delinquents.

The ædiles had neither the right of summoning nor of seizing, unless by the order of the tribunes; nor did they use lictors or viatores, but only public slaves, Gell. xiii. 12. They might even be sued at law, (in jus vocari;) by a private person, ibid. 13. It belonged to the ædiles, particularly the curule ædiles, to exhibit public solemn games, Liv. xxiv. 43. xxvii. 6. which they sometimes did at a prodigious expense, to pave the way for future preferments, Cic. Off. ii. 16. They examined the plays which were to be brought on the stage, and rewarded or punished the actors as they deserved, Plaut. Trin. iv. 2. 148. Cist. Epil. 3. They were bound by oath to give the palm to the most deserving, Id. Amphit. Prol. 72. Agrippa, when ædile under Augustus, banished all jugglers (præstigiatores) and astrologers, Dio. xlix. 43.

It was peculiarly the office of the plebeian ædiles to keep the decrees of the senate, and the ordinances of the people, in the temple of Ceres, and afterwards in the treasury, Liv. iii. 55.

Julius Cæsar added two other ædiles, called CEREALES, (æ Cerere,) to inspect the public stores of corn and other provisions, Suet. Jul. 41. Dio. xliii. 51.

The free towns also had their ædiles, Juv. iii. 179. where sometimes they were the only magistrates, as at Arpinum, Cic. Fam. xiii. 11.

The ædiles seem to have continued, but with some variations, to the time of Constantine.

VI. QUÆSTORS.

THE QUÆSTORS were so called, (a quærendo,) because they got in the public revenues, (publicas pecunias conquirebant,) Varro de L. L. iv. 4.

The institution of quæstors seems to have been nearly as ancient as the city itself. They were first appointed by the kings, according to Tacitus, Annal. xi. 22. And then by the consuls, to the year 307, when they began to be elected by the people, at the Comitia Tributa, Cic. Fam. vi. 30. Others say, that two quæstors were created by the people from among the patricians, soon after the expulsion of Tarquin, to take care of the treasury, according to a law passed by Valerius-Poplicola, Plutarch. in Poplic. Dionys. v. 34.

In the year 333, besides the two city quæstors, two others were created to attend the consuls in war, (ut consulibus ad ministeria belli præsto essent;) and from this time the quæstors might be chosen indifferently from the plebeians and patricians, Liv. iv. 43. After all Italy was subdued, four more were added, A. U. 498. about the same time that the coining of silver was first introduced at Rome, Liv. Epit. xv. Sylla increased their number to 20, (supplendo senatus, cum judicia tradiderat,) Tacit. Ann. xi. 22. and Julius Cæsar to 40, Dion. xliiii. 47. Under the emperors their number was uncertain and arbitrary.

Two quæstors only remained at Rome, and were called QUÆSTORES URBANI; the rest, PROVINCIALES or MILITARES.

The principal charge of the city quæstors was the care of the treasury, which was kept in the temple of Saturn, Suet. Claud. 24. Plut. Quæst. Rom. 40. They received and expended the public money, and entered an account of their receipts and disbursements, (in tabulas accepti et expensi referebant,) Ascon. in Cic. They exacted the fines imposed by the public, Liv. xxxviii. 60. Tacit. Ann. xiii. 28. The money thus raised was called ARGENTUM MULTATITIUM, Liv. xxx. 39.

The quæstors kept the military standards in the treasury, (which were generally of silver, Plin. xxxiii. 3. s. 19. sometimes of gold, for the Romans did not use colours, (non velis utebantur;) and brought them out to the consuls when going upon an expedition, Liv. iii. 69. iv. 22. vii. 23. They entertained foreign ambassadors; provided them with lodgings, and delivered to them the presents of the public, Valer. Max. v. 1. They took care of the funerals of those who were buried at the public expense, as Menenius Agrip- pa, Dionys. vi. fn. Sulpicius, Cic. Phil. ix. 7. They exercised a certain jurisdiction, especially among their clerks, Plut. in Cat. Min.

Commanders returning from war, before they could obtain a triumph, were obliged to swear before the quæstors, that they had written to the senate a true account of the number of the enemy they had slain, and of the citizens that were missing, Valer. Max. ii. 8.

The provinces of the quæstors were annually distributed to them by lot, Cic. pro Mur. 8. after the senate had determined into what province quæstors should be sent. Whence SORS is often put for the office or appointment of a quæstor, Cic. Verr. i. 15. Cæcil. 14. Fam. ii. 19. as of other magistrates, Id. Verr. Act. i. 8. Planc. 27. Liv. xxxv. 6. and public officers, Cic. Cat. iv. 7. or for the condition of any one, Horat. Sat. i. 1. Ep. i. 14. 11. Suet. Aug. 19. Sometimes a certain province was given to a particular quæstor by the senate or people, Liv. xxx. 33. But Pompey chose Cassius as his quæstor, and Cæsar chose Antony, of themselves, (sine sorte,) Cic. Att. vi. 6. Cic. Phil. ii. 20.

The office of the provincial quæstors was to attend the consuls or prætors into their provinces; to take care that provisions and pay were furnished to the army; to keep the money deposited by the soldiers; (nummos ad signa depositos,) Suet. Dom. 8. Veget. ii. 20. to exact the taxes and tribute of the empire; Cic. in Verr. i. 14 & 38. to take care of the money, and to sell the spoils taken in war; Liv. v. 26. xxvi. 47. Plaut. Bacch. iv. 9. v. 153. Polyb. x. 19. to return an account of every thing to the treasury; and to exercise the jurisdiction assigned them by their governors, Cic. Divin. in Cæcil. 17. Suet. Jul. 7. When the governor left the province, the quæstor usually supplied his place, Cic. ad Fam. ii. 15 & 18.

There subsisted the closest connexion between a proconsul or proprætor and his quæstor, (in parentum loco quæstoribus suis erant,) Cic. pro Planc. 11. Divinat. in Cæcil. 19. ad Fam. xiii. 10. 26. Plin. Ep. iv. 15. If a quæstor died, another was appointed by the governor in his room, called PROQUÆSTOR, Cic. in Verr. i. 15 & 36.

The place in the camp where the quæstor's tent was, and where he kept his stores, was called QUÆSTORIUM, or Quæstorium forum, Liv. x. 32. xli. 2. so also the place in the province where he kept his accounts and transacted business, Cic. pro Planc. 41.

The city quæstors had neither lictors nor viatores, because they had not the power of summoning or apprehending, Gell. xiii. 12. and might be prosecuted by a private person before the prætor, ibid. 13. Suet. Jul. 23. They could, however, hold the Comitia; and it seems to have been a part of their office in ancient times to prosecute those guilty of treason, and punish them when condemned, Dionys. viii. 77. Liv. ii. 41. iii. 24. 25.

The provincial quæstors were attended by lictors, at least in the absence of the prætor, Cic. pro Planc. 41. and by clerks, Cic. in Verr. iii. 78.

The quæstorship was the first step of preferment, (primus gradus honoris), Cic. in Verr. i. 4. which gave one admission into the senate, Cic. (see p. 12.) when he was said adire ad rempublicam, Cic. or rempublicam capessere, Vel. ii. 94. It was, however, sometimes held by those who had been consuls, Dionys. x. 23. Liv. iii. 25.

Under the emperors the quæstorship underwent various changes. A distinction was introduced between the treasury of the public (ÆRARIUM) and the treasury of the prince, (FISCUS) Suet. Aug. 102. Tacit. Annal. vi. 2. Plin. Pan. 30. Dio. liii. 16. and different officers were appointed for the management of each.

Augustus took from the quæstors the charge of the treasury, and gave it to the prætors, or to those who had been prætors; Suet. Aug. 36. Tacit. Ann. xiii. 28. Dio. liii. 2. but Claudius restored it to the quæstors, Suet. Claud. 24. Afterwards præfects of the treasury seem to have been appointed, Plin. Epist. iii. 4. Tacit. Annal. xiii. 28 & 29.

Those who had borne the quæstorship used to assemble the judges, called centumviri, and preside at their courts; but Augustus provided that this should be done by the DECEMVIRI litibus judicandis, Suet. Aug. 36. The quæstors also chose the judices, Dio. xxxix. 7. Augustus gave to the quæstors the charge of the public records, which the ædiles, or as Dio Cassius says, the tribunes had formerly exercised, l. liv. 36. But this too was afterwards transferred to præfects, Tacit. loc. cit.

Augustus introduced a new kind of quæstors, called QUÆSTORES CANDIDATI, or candidati principes vel Augusti, Suet. Aug. 56. Claud. 49; vel Cæsaris, Vell. ii. 124. who used to carry the messages of the emperor, (libellos, epistolas, et orationes), to the senate, Suet. Tib. 6. (See p. 27.) They were called candidati because they sued for higher preferments, which by the interest of the emperor they were sure to obtain: hence, Petis tanquam Cæsaris candidatus, i. e. carelessly, Quinctilian. vi. 3. 62.

Augustus ordained by an edict that persons might enjoy the quæstorship, and of course be admitted into the senate, at the age of twenty-two, Plin. Epist. x. 83 & 84.

Under the emperors, the quæstors exhibited shows of gladiators, which they seem to have done at their own expense, as a requisite for obtaining the office, Tacit. Ann. xi. 22. Suet. Domit. 4.

Constantine instituted a new kind of quæstors, called QUÆSTORES PALATII, who were much the same with what are in England called Chancellors, Zosim. v. Procop. de bell. Pers.

Other ORDINARY MAGISTRATES.

THERE were various other ordinary magistrates; as, TRIUMVIRI CAPITALES, who judged concerning slaves and persons of the lowest rank, Plaut. Aul. iii. 2. 2. and who also had the charge of the prison; Liv. xxxii. 26. and of the execution of condemned criminals, Sall. Cat. 55.

TRIUMVIRI MONETALES, who had the charge of the mint; (qui auro, argento, æri fiando, feriundo præerant, which is often marked in letters, A. A. A. F. F.) Dio. liv. 26. According to the advice of Mæcenas to Augustus, Dio. lii. 29. it appears that only Roman coins were permitted to circulate in the provinces, Matth. xxii. 20.

NUMMULARII, vel pecuniæ spectatores, assaymasters, (ad quos nummi probandi, causâ deferebantur, an probi essent, cujos auri an subarati, an æqui ponderis, an bonæ fusionas.)

TRIUMVIRI NOCTURNI, vel tresviri, who had the charge of preventing fires, (incendiis per urbem arcendis præerant.) Liv. and walking round the watches in the night time, (vigilias circumibant.) attended by eight lictors, Plaut. Amphit. i. 1. 3.

QUATUOR VIRI VIALES, vel viocuri (qui vias curabant.) ¹ α who had the charge of the streets and public roads.

All these magistrates used to be created by the people at the Comitia Tributa.

Some add to the Magistratus Ordinarii Minores, the CENTUMVIRI litibus judicandis, (vel stiltibus judicandis, for so it was anciently written,) a body of men chosen out of every tribe, (so that properly there were 105,) for judging such causes as the prætor committed to their decision; and also the DECENVIRI litibus judicandis. But these were generally not reckoned magistrates, but only judges.

New ORDINARY MAGISTRATES under the EMPERORS.

AUGUSTUS instituted several new offices; as, Curatores operum publicorum, viarum, aquarum, alvei Tiberis, sc. repurgandi, et laxioris faciendi, frumenti populo dividundi; persons who had the charge of the public works; of the roads; of bringing water to the city; of cleaning and enlarging the channel of the Tiber, and of distributing corn to the people, Suet. Aug. 37. The chief of these offices were,

1. The governor of the city, (PRÆFECTUS URBI, vel urbis,) whose power was very great, and generally continued for several years, Tacit. Ann. vi. 11.

A præfect of the city used likewise formerly to be chosen occasionally (in tempus deligebatur,) in the absence of the kings, and afterwards of the consuls. He was not chosen by the people, but appointed, first by the kings, and afterwards by the consuls, (a regebus impositi: Postea consules mandabant, Tacit. ibid.) He might, however, assemble the senate, even although he was not a senator, Gell. xiv. c. ult. and also hold the comitia, Liv. i. 59. But after the creation of the prætor, he used only to be appointed for celebrating the Feræ Latinæ, or Latin holy-days.

Augustus instituted this magistracy by the advice of Mæcenas, Dio. lii. 21. who himself in the civil wars had been entrusted by Augustus with the charge of the city and of Italy, (cunctis apud Romanam atque Italiam præpositus.) Tacit. ibid. Hor. Od. iii. 8. 17. Ibid. 29. 25. The first præfect of the city was Messala Corvinus, only for a few days: after him Taurus Statilius, and then Piso for 20 years. He was usually chosen from the principal men of the state (ex viris primariis consularibus.) His office comprehended many things, which had formerly belonged to the prætor and ædiles. He administered justice betwixt masters and slaves, freedmen and patrons: he judged of the crimes of guardians and curators; he checked the frauds of bankers and money brokers; he had the superintendance of the shambles, (carnis curam gerebat.) and of the public spectacles: in short, he took care to preserve order and public quiet, and punished all transgressions of it, not only in the city, but within a hundred miles of it, (intra centesimum ab urbe lapidem.) Dio. lii. 21. He had the power of banishing persons both from the city and from Italy; and of transporting them to any island, which the emperor named, (in insulam deportandi.) Ulpian. de off. Præf. Urb.

The præfect of the city was, as it were, the substitute (vicarius) of the Emperor, and had one under him, who exercised jurisdiction in his absence, or by his command.

The præfect of the city seems to have had the same insignia with the prætors.

II. The præfect of the prætorian cohorts, (PRÆFECTUS PRÆTORIO, vel prætoris cohortibus;) or the commander of the emperor's body guards.

Augustus instituted two of these from the equestrian order, by the advice of Mæcenas, that they might counteract one another, if one of them attempted any innovation, Dio. lii. 24. Their power was at first but small, and merely military. But Sejanus, being alone invested by Tiberius with this command, increased its influence; (vim præfectura modicum antea intendit.) by collecting the prætorian cohorts, formerly dispersed through the city, into one camp, Tacit. Ann. iv. 2. Suet. Tib. 37.

The præfect of the prætorian bands was, under the succeeding emperors, made the instrument of their tyranny, and therefore that office was conferred on none but those whom they could entirely trust.

They always attended the emperor to execute his commands: hence their power became so great, that it was little inferior to that of the emperor himself, (ut non multum abfuerit a principatu; munus proximum vel alterum ab Augusti imperio. Victor. de Cæs. 9.) Trials and appeals were brought before them; and from their sentence there was no appeal, unless by way of supplication to the emperor.

The Prætorian præfect was appointed to his office by the emperor's delivering to him a sword, Plin. Paneg. 67. Herod. iii. 2. Dio. lxxviii. 33.

Sometimes there was but one præfect, and sometimes two. Constantine created four præfecti pratorio : but he changed their office very much from its original institution ; for he made it a civil instead of a military office, and divided among them the care of the whole empire. To one he gave the command of the east ; to another of Illyricum : to a third of Italy and Africa ; and to a fourth, of Gaul, Spain, and Britain ; but he took from them the command of the soldiers, and transferred that to officers, who were called magistri equitum.

Under each of these præfecti pratorio were several substitutes (vicarii;) who had the charge of certain districts, which were called DICESESSES, and the chief city in each of these, where they held their courts, was called METROPOLIS. Each diæcesis might contain several metropoles ; and each metropolis had several cities under it. But Cicero uses DICECESIS for the part of a province ; ad Attic. v. 21. Fam. iii. 8. xiii. 53. 67. and calls himself EPISCOPUS, inspector or governor of the Campanian coast, as of a diæcesis, ad Att. vii. 11.

III. PRÆFECTUS ANNONÆ, vel rei frumentaria, who had the charge of procuring corn.

A magistrate used to be created for that purpose on extraordinary occasions under the republic ; thus L. Minutius, Liv. iv. 12. and so afterwards Pompey with greater power ; (omnis potestas rei frumentaria toto orbe in quinquennium ei data est.) Cic. Att. iv. 1. Dio. xxxix. 9. Liv. Epit. 104. Plin. Pan. 29. In the time of a great scarcity, Augustus himself undertook the charge of providing corn, (præfecturam annonæ suscepit, and ordained, that for the future two men of prætorian dignity should be annually elected to discharge that office, Dio. liv. 1. afterwards he appointed four, ibid. 17. and thus it became an ordinary magistracy. But usually there seems to have been but one præfectus annonæ ; it was at first an office of great dignity, Tacit. Ann. i. 7. xi. 31. Hist. iv. 68. but not so in after times, Boeth. de Consul. Phil. iii.

IV. PRÆFECTUS MILITARIS ÆRARIJ ; a person who had charge of the public fund, which Augustus instituted for the support of the army, (ærarium militare cum novis vectigalibus ad tuendos prosequendosque milites, Suet. Aug. 49.)

V. PRÆFECTUS CLASSIS, admiral of the fleet. Augustus equipped two fleets ; which he stationed, (constituit;) the one at Ravenna on the Hadriatic, and the other at Misena or -um on the Tuscan sea. Each of these had its own proper commander. (præfectus classis Ravennatis, Tacit. Hist. iii. 12. et præfectus classis Misensatium, Veget. iv. 32.) There were also ships stationed in other places ; as, in the Pontus Euxinus, Tacit. Hist. ii. 83. near Alexandria, Suet. Aug. 98. on the Rhine, Flor. iv. 12. and Danube, Tacit. Annal. xiii. 30. &c.

VI. PRÆFECTUS VIGILUM ; the officer who commanded the soldiers who were appointed to watch the city. Of these there were seven cohorts, one for every two wards, (una cohors binis regionibus,) composed chiefly of manumitted slaves, (libertino milite,) Suet. Aug. 25. & 30. Those who guarded adjoining houses in the night time, carried each of them a bell, (κωδων, tintinnabulum,) to give the alarm to one another when any thing happened, Dio. liv. 4.

The præfectus vigilum took cognizance of incendiaries, thieves, vagrants, and the like ; and if any atrocious case happened, it was remitted to the præfect of the city.

There were various other magistrates in the latter times of the empire, called Comites, Correctores, Duces, Magistri Officiorum, Scriniorum, &c. who were honoured with various epithets according to their different degrees of dignity ; as, Clarissimi, illustres, spectabiles, egregii, perfectissimi, &c. The highest title was, nobilissimus and gloriosissimus.

EXTRAORDINARY MAGISTRATES.

1. DICTATOR and MASTER of HORSE.

THE dictator was so called, either because he was named by the consul, (quod a consule diceretur, cui dicto omnes audientes essent, Varro de Lat. ling. iv. 14.) or rather from his publishing edicts or orders, (a dictando, quod multo diceret, i. e. ediceret ; ei homines pro legibus haberent quas diceret, Suet. Jul. 77.) He was also called magister populi, Sen. Epist. 108. and prætor maximus, Liv. vii. 3.

This magistracy seems to have been borrowed from the Albans, or Latins, Liv. i. 23. Cic. pro Mil. 10.

It is uncertain who was first created dictator, or in what year. Livy says, that T. Iartius was first created dictator, A. U. 253, nine years after the expulsion of the kings, ibid.

The first cause of creating a dictator was the fear of a domestic sedition, and of a dangerous war from the Latins. As the authority of the consuls was not sufficiently respected on account of the liberty of appeal from them, it was judged proper, in dangerous conjunctures, to create a single magistrate with absolute power, from whom there should be no appeal, Liv. ii. 18. 29. iii. 20. Cic. de Leg. iii. 3. and who should not be restrained by the interposition of a colleague, Dionys. v. 70. &c.

A dictator was afterwards created also for other causes :

As, 1. For fixing a nail (clavi figendi vel pangendi causâ) in the right side of the temple of Jupiter, which is supposed to have been done in those rude ages, (cum literæ erant raræ), to mark the number of years. This was commonly done by the ordinary magistrates ; but in the time of a pestilence, or of any great public calamity, a dictator was created for that purpose, (quia majus imperium erat,) to avert the divine wrath, Liv. vii. 3. viii. 18.

2. For holding the comitia, Liv. viii. 23. ix. 7. xxv. 2.

3. For the sake of instituting holidays, Id. vii. 28. or of celebrating games, when the prætor was indisposed, Liv. viii. 40. ix. 34.

4. For holding trials, (questionibus exercendis,) Id. ix. 26.

And 5. Once for choosing senators, (qui senatum legeret,) on which occasion there were two dictators, one at Rome, and another commanding an army, which never was the case at any other time, Liv. xxiii. 22. &c.

The dictator was not created by the suffrages of the people, as the other magistrates ; but one of the consuls, by order of the senate, named as dictator whatever person of consular dignity he thought proper ; and this he did, after having taken the auspices, usually in the dead of the night, (noctis silentio, ut mos est, dictatorem dixit,) Liv. ix. 38. viii. 23. Dionys. x. 23. (post mediam noctem,) Fest. in VOCC. SILENTIO, SINISTRUM, ET SOLIDA SELLA.

One of the military tribunes also could name a dictator, about which Livy informs us there was some scruple, iv. 31.

A dictator might be nominated out of Rome, provided it was in the Roman territory, which was limited to Italy.

Sometimes the people gave directions whom the consul should name dictator, Liv. xxvii. 6.

Sulla and Cæsar were made dictators at the comitia, an interrex presiding at the creation of the former, and Lepidus the prætor at the creation of the latter, Cic. pro Rull. iii. 2. Cæs. bel. civ. ii. 19, Dio. xli. 36.

In the second Punic war, A. U. 536, after the destruction of the Consul Flaminius and his army at the Thrasimene lake, when the other consul was absent from Rome, and word could not easily be sent to him, the people created Q. Fabius Maximus PRODICTATOR, and M. Minucius Rufus Master of horse, Liv. xxii. 8 & 31.

The power of the dictator was supreme both in peace and war. He could raise and disband armies ; he could determine on the life and fortunes of Roman citizens, without consulting the people or senate. His edict was observed as an oracle (pro numine observatum,) Liv. viii. 34. At first there was no appeal from him, till a law was passed, that no magistrate should be created without the liberty of appeal, (sine provocazione,) first by the Consuls Horatius and Valerius, A. U. 304. Liv. iii. 55. and afterwards by the Consul M. Valerius, A. U. 453. Liv. x. 9. Festus in voc. OPTIMA LEX. But the force of this law with respect to the dictator is doubtful. It was once strongly contested, Liv. viii. 33. but never finally decided.*

* "The object aimed at in instituting the dictatorship, was incontestably, to evade the Valerian laws, and to re-establish an unlimited authority over the Plebeians even within the barriers and the mile of their liberties: for the legal appeal to the commonalty was from the sentence of the consuls, not from that of this new magis-

The dictator was attended by twenty-four lictors with the fasces and secures even in the city, Liv. ii. 18. so that Livy justly calls imperium dictatoris, suo ingenio vehemens, ii. 30.

When a dictator was created, all the other magistrates abdicated their authority, except the tribunes of the commons, Polyb. iii. 87. The consuls however still continued to act, Liv. iv. 27. but in obedience to the dictator, and without any ensigns of authority in his presence, Liv. xxii. 11.

The power of the dictator was circumscribed by certain limits.

1. It only continued for the space of six months, (semestris dictatura.) Liv. ix. 34. even although the business for which he had been created was not finished; and was never prolonged beyond that time, except in extreme necessity, as in the case of Camillus, Liv. vi. 1. For Sulla and Cæsar usurped their perpetual dictatorship, in contempt of the laws of their country.

But the dictator usually resigned his command whenever he had effected the business for which he had been created. Thus Q. Cincinnatus and Mamercus Æmilius abdicated the dictatorship on the 15th day, Liv. iii. 29. iv. 34. Q. Servilius on the eighth day, Id. iv. 47. &c.

2. The dictator could lay out none of the public money, without the authority of the senate or the order of the people.

3. A dictator was not permitted to go out of Italy; which was only once violated, and that on account of the most urgent necessity, in Atilius Calatinus, Liv. Epit. xix.

4. The dictator was not allowed to ride on horseback, without asking the permission of the people, Liv. xxiii. 13. to show, as it is thought, that the chief strength of the Roman army consisted in the trate. The later Romans had only an indistinct knowledge of the dictatorship, drawn from their earlier history. As applied to the tyranny of Sylla and the monarchy of Cæsar, the title was a mere name, without any ground for such a use in the ancient constitution. Hence we can account for the error of Dion Cassius, when, overlooking the privilege of the Patricians, he expressly asserts that in no instance was there a right of appealing against the dictator, and that he might condemn knights and senators to death without a trial: as well as for that of Dionysius, who fancies he decided on every measure at will, even about peace and war. Such notions, out of which the moderns have drawn their phrase dictatorial power, are suitable indeed to Sylla and Cæsar: with reference to the genuine dictatorship they are utterly mistaken. Like ignorance as to the ancient state of things is involved in the notion of Dionysius, that, after the senate had merely resolved that a dictator was to be appointed, and which consul was to name him, the consul exercised an uncontrolled discretion in the choice: which opinion, being delivered with such positiveness, has become the prevalent one in treatises on Roman antiquities. The pontifical law-books, clothing the principles of the constitution after their manner in a historical form, preserved the true account. For what other source can have supplied Dionysius with the resolution of the senate, as it professes to be, that a citizen, whom the senate should nominate, and the people approve of, should govern for six months? The people here is the populus: it was a revival of the ancient custom for the king to be elected by the Patricians: and that such was the form is established by positive testimony. The old mode of electing the kings was restored in all its parts: the dictator after his appointment had to obtain the imperium from the curies. And thus, from possessing this right of conferring the imperium, the patricians might dispense with voting on the preliminary nomination of the senate." Niebuhr.—Ed.

infantry; or by limiting the rapidity of his movements, to restrain a spirit of ambition.

But the principal check against a dictator's abuse of power was, that he might be called to an account for his conduct when he resigned his office, Liv. vii. 4.

For 120 years before Sulla, the creation of a dictator was disused, but in dangerous emergencies the consuls were armed with dictatorial power. After the death of Cæsar, the dictatorship was for ever abolished by a law of Antony the consul, Cic. Phil. i. 1. And when Augustus was urged by the people to accept the dictatorship, he refused it with the strongest marks of aversion, (genu nixus, dejectâ ab humeris togâ, nudo pectore, deprecatus est.) Suet. Aug. 52. Possessed of the power, he wisely declined an odious appellation, Dio. liv. 1. For, ever since the usurpation of Sulla, the dictatorship was detested, on account of the cruelties which that tyrant had exercised under the title of dictator.

To allay the tumults which followed the murder of Clodius by Milo, in place of a dictator, Pompey was by an unprecedented measure made sole consul, A. U. 702, Dio. xl. 50. He, however, on the first of August, assumed Scipio, his father-in-law, as colleague, Dio. xl. 51.

When a dictator was created, he immediately nominated (dixit) a master of horse, (MAGISTER EQUITUM), usually from those of consular or prætorian dignity, whose proper office was to command the cavalry, and also to execute the orders of the dictator. M. Fabius Buteo, the dictator nominated to choose the senate, had no master of horse.

Sometimes a master of horse was pitched upon (datus vel additus est) for the dictator, by the senate or by the order of the people, Liv. vii. 12. 24. 28.

The magister equitum might be deprived of his command by the dictator, and another nominated in his room, Liv. viii. 35.

The people at one time made the master of horse, Minucius, equal in command with the dictator, Fabius Maximus, Liv. xxii. 26.

The master of horse is supposed to have had much the same insignia with the prætor, six lictors, the prætecta, &c. Dio. xlii. 27.

He had the use of a horse, which the dictator had not without the order of the people.

II. The DECEMVIRS.

THE laws of Rome, as of other ancient nations, were at first very few and simple, Tacit. Ann. iii. 26. It is thought there was for some time no written law, (nihil scripti juris.) Differences were determined (lites dirimebantur) by the pleasure of the kings, (regum arbitrio), according to the principles of natural equity, (ex æquo et bono.) Senec. Epist. 90. and their decisions were held as laws, Dionys. x. 1. The kings used to publish their commands either by pasting them up in public on a white wall or tablet, (in album relata proponere in publico.) Liv. i. 32. or by a herald, Ib. 44. Hence they were said, omnia MANU gubernare, Pompon. l. 2. § 3. D. de orig. jur. (i. e. potestate et imperio, Tacit. Agric. 9.)

The kings, however, in every thing of importance consulted the senate, and likewise the people. Hence we read of the LEGES CURIATÆ, of Romulus, and of the other kings, which were also called LEGES REGIÆ, Liv. v. 1.

But the chief legislator was Servius Tullius, (præcipuus sanctor legum.) Tac. Ann. iii. 26. all of whose laws however were abolished at once (uno edicto sublatae.) by Tarquinius Superbus, Dionys. iv. 43.

After the expulsion of Tarquin, the institutions of the kings were observed not as written law, but as customs, (tanquam mores majorum;) and the consuls determined most causes, as the kings had done, according to their pleasure.

But justice being thus extremely uncertain, as depending on the will of an individual, (in unius voluntate positum; Cic. Fam. ix. 16.) C. Terentius Arsa, a tribune of the commons, proposed to the people, that a body of laws should be drawn up, to which all should be obliged to conform, (quo omnes uti deberent.) But this was violently opposed by the patricians; in whom the whole judiciary power was vested, and to whom the knowledge of the few laws which then existed was confined, Liv. iii. 9.

At last, however, it was determined, A. U. 299, by a decree of the senate, and by the order of the people, that three ambassadors should be sent to Athens to copy the famous laws of Solon, and to examine the institutions, customs, and laws, of the other states of Greece, Liv. iii. 31. Plin. Ep. viii. 24.

Upon their return, ten men (DECENVIRI) were created from the patricians, with supreme power, and without the liberty of appeal, to draw up a body of laws, (legibus scribendis) all the other magistrates having first abdicated their office, Liv. iii. 32 & 33.*

The decemviri at first behaved with great moderation. They administered justice to the people, each every tenth day. The twelve

* "The arrangement the ruling order agreed to was, that the consulship should be suspended, and that in the mean while ten senators, like a college of interrexes, should be invested with consular, and at the same-time with legislative power. Among the ten appointed by virtue of this agreement we find both the consuls of the year 302: and as these were indemnified for the dignity they were forced to resign, so it is probable that the quæstors of blood and the warden of the city, whose offices were likewise transferred to the decemvirate, obtained seats in it. Thus the Patricians would have four deputies appointed exclusively by themselves, and one whose election they had confirmed; while five places were left open for the free choice of the centuries. As the first decemvirate represented a decury of interrexes, the supreme power was always lodged with one of their body at a time, who was called the custos urbis: he was attended by the lictors, and presided over the senate and the whole republic as warden of the city. The rest, each of whom had merely a beadle at his orders, are said to have acted as judges. There is no imaginable reason why the rotation should have followed any other law than it would have done in a decury of interrexes, where the kingly power remained five days with each: and this conjecture is favoured by Dionysius, who speaks in vague terms of a certain number of days. From its nature as an interreign their office had no other limit to its duration, than the accomplishment of the commission they had received. Their successors took their seats on the ides of May." Niebuhr.—Ed.

fascēs were carried before him who was to preside, and his nine colleagues were attended by a single officer, called ACCENSUS, Liv. iii. 33.

They proposed ten tables of laws, which were ratified by the people at the Comitia Centuriata. In composing them they are said to have used the assistance of one HERMODORUS, an Ephesian exile, who served them as an interpreter, Cic. Tusc. v. 36. Plin. xxxiv. 5. s. 10.

As two other tables seemed to be wanting, decemviri were again created for another year to make them. But these new magistrates acting tyrannically, and wishing to retain their command beyond the legal time, were at last forced to resign, chiefly on account of the base passion of Appius Claudius, one of their number, for Virginia, a virgin of plebeian rank, who was slain by her father to prevent her falling into the Decemvir's hands. The decemviri all perished, either in prison or in banishment.

But the laws of the twelve tables (LEGES DUODECEM TABULARUM) continued ever after to be the rule and foundation of public and private right through the Roman world, (Fons universi publici privatique juris, Id. 34. Finis æqui juris, Tacit. Ann. iii. 27.) They were engraved on brass, and fixed up in public, (Leges DECENVIRALES, quibus tabulis duodecim est nomen, in æs incisas in publico proposuerunt, sc. consules, Liv. iii. 57.) and even in the time of Cicero, the noble youth who meant to apply to the study of jurisprudence, were obliged to get them by heart as a necessary rhyme: (tamquam carmen necessarium.) Cic. de Legg. ii. 23. not that they were written in verse, as some have thought; for any set form of words, (verba concepta.) even in prose, was called CARMEN, Liv. i. 24 and 26. iii. 64. x. 38. or carmen compositum, Cic. pro Muræna. 12.

III. TRIBUNI MILITUM CONSULARI POTESTATE.

THE cause of their institution has already been explained, (see p. 93.) They are so called, because those of the plebeians, who had been military tribunes in the army, were the most conspicuous. Their office and insignia were much the same with those of the consuls.

IV. INTERREX.

CONCERNING the causes of creating this magistrate, &c. (see p. 97.)

Other EXTRAORDINARY MAGISTRATES of less Note.

THERE were several extraordinary inferior magistrates; as, DUMVIRI perduellionis judicandi causâ, Liv. 1. 26. vi. 20. Duum- viri navales, classis ornandæ reficiendæque causâ, Id. ix. 30. xl. 18. 26. xli. 1. Duumviri ad ædem Junoni Monetæ faciundam, Id. vii. 28.

TRIUMVIRI colonix deducendæ, Liv. iv. 11. vi. 26. viii. 16. ix. 28. xxi. 25. xxxi. 49. xxxii. 29. Triumviri bini, qui citra et ultra quinquagesimum lapidem in pagis forisque et conciliabulis omnem copiam ingenuorum inspicerent, et idoneos ad arma ferenda conquirerent, militesque facerent, Id. xxv. 5. Triumviri bini; uni sacris conquirendis donisque per signandis; alteri reficiendis ædibus sacris, Id. xxv. 7. Triumviri mensarii, facti ob argenti penuriam, Liv. xxiii. 21. xxiv. 18. xxvi. 36.

QUINQUEVIRI, agro Pomptino dividendo, Liv. vi. 21. Quinqueviri, ab dispensatione pecuniæ MENSARII appellati, Id. vii. 21. Quinqueviri muris turribusque reficiendis, Id. xxv. 7. minuendis publicis sumptibus, Plin. Ep. ii. 1. Pan. 62.

DECEMVIRI agri inter veteranos milites dividendis, Liv. xxxi. 4.

Several of these were not properly magistrates. They were all, however, chosen from the most respectable men of the state. Their office may in general be understood from their titles.

PROVINCIAL MAGISTRATES.

THE provinces of the Roman people were at first governed by prætors, (see p. 111.) but afterwards by proconsuls and proprætors, to whom were joined quæstors and lieutenants.

The usual name is PROCONSUL and PROPÆTOR; but sometimes it is written pro consule and pro prætor, in two words: so likewise pro quæstore, Cic. Acad. 4. 4. Ver. 1. 15 & 38.

Anciently those were called proconsuls, to whom the command of consul was prolonged (imperium prorogatum) after their office was expired; Liv. viii. 22 and 26. ix. 42. x. 16. or who were invested with consular authority, either from a subordinate rank, as Marcellus, after being prætor; (ex prætura), Liv. xxiii. 30. and Gellius, Cic. Legg. i. 20. or from a private station, as Scipio. xxvi. 18. xxviii. 38. This was occasioned by some public exigence, when the ordinary magistrates were not sufficient. The same was the case with proprætors, Cic. Phil. v. 16. Suet. Aug. 10. Sall. Cat. 19. The first proconsul mentioned by Livy, was T. Quinctius, A. U. 290. Liv. iii. 4. But he seems to have been appointed for the time. The first to whom the consular power was prolonged, was Pubilius, Liv. viii. 23 & 26. f. The name of Proprætor was also given to a person whom a general left to command the army in his absence, Sallust. Jug. 36. 103.

The names of consul and proconsul, prætor and proprætor, are sometimes confounded, Suet. Aug. 3. And we find all governors of provinces called by the general name of proconsules, as of præsides, ibid. 36.

The command of consul was prolonged, and proconsuls occasionally appointed by the Comitia Tributa, Liv. x. 24. xxix. 13. xxx.

27. except in the case of Scipio, who was sent as proconsul into Spain by the Comitia Centuriata, xxvi. 18.

But after the empire was extended, and various countries reduced to the form of provinces, magistrates were regularly sent from Rome to govern them, according to the Sempronian law, (see p. 102.) without any new appointment by the people. Only military command was conferred on them by the Comitia Curiata. (See p. 74.)

At first the provinces were annual, i. e. a proconsul had the government of a province only for one year; and the same person could not command different provinces. But this was violated in several instances; especially in the case of Julius Cæsar, Suet. Jul. 22 & 24. Cic. Fam. i. 7. (See p. 102.) And it is remarkable that the timid compliance of Cicero with the ambitious views of Cæsar, in granting him the continuation of his command, and money for the payment of his troops, with other immoderate and unconstitutional concessions, de Provinci. Consul & pro Balbo. 27. although he secretly condemned them, Fam. i. 7. Attic. ii. 17. x. 6. proved fatal to himself as well as to the republic.

The prætors cast lots for their provinces, (provincias sortiebantur;) or settled them by agreement (inter se comparabant;) in the same manner with the consuls; Liv. xxvii. 36. xxxiv. 54. xlv. 16 & 17. But sometimes provinces were determined to both by the senate or people, Id. xxxv. 20. xxxvii. 1.

The senate fixed the extent and limits of the provinces, the number of soldiers to be maintained in them, and money to pay them; likewise the retinue of the governors, (COMITATUS vel cohors;) and their travelling charges, (VIATICUM.) And thus the governors were said, ORNARI, i. e. instrui, to be furnished, Cic. in Rull. ii. 13. What was assigned them for the sake of household furniture, was called VASARIUM, Cic. in Pis. 35. So vasa, furniture, Liv. i. 24.

A certain number of lieutenants was assigned to each proconsul and proprætor, who were appointed usually by the senate; Cic. Fam. i. 7. or with the permission of the senate by the proconsul himself; Id. xii. 55. Nep. Attic. 6. who was then said, aliquem sibi legare, Id. vi. 6. or very rarely by an order of the people. Cic. in Vat. 15. The number of lieutenants was different according to the rank of the governor or the extent of the province, Cic. Phil. ii. 15. Thus, Cicero in Cilicia had four, Cæsar in Gaul ten, and Pompey in Asia fifteen. The least number seems to have been three. Quintus, the brother of Cicero, had no more in Asia Minor, Cic. ad Q. fr. i. 1. 3.

The office of a legatus was very honourable; and men of prætorian and consular dignity did not think it below them to bear it: Thus Scipio Africanus served as legatus under his brother Lucius, Liv. xxxvii. 1. &c. Gell. iv. 18.

The Legati were sometimes attended by lictors, Liv. xxix. 9. as the senators were, when absent from Rome, jure liberæ legationis, (see p. 26.) but the person, under whom they served, might deprive them of that privilege, Cic. Fam. xii. 30.

In the retinue of a proconsul were comprehended his military officers, (Præfecti;) and all his public and domestic attendants, Cic. Verr. ii. 10. Among these were young noblemen, who went with him to learn the art of war, and to see the method of conducting public business; who, on account of their intimacy, were called CONTUBERNALES, Cic. pro Cæl. 30. pro Planc. 11. From this retinue, under the republic, women were excluded, but not so under the emperors, Tacit. Ann. iii. 33 & 34. Suet. Octav. 34.

A proconsul set out for his province with great pomp. Having offered up vows in the capitol, (voſis in capitolie nuncupatis;) dressed in his military robe, (paludatas;) with twelve lictors going before him, carrying the fascēs and secures, and with the other ensigns of command, he went out of the city with all his retinue. From thence he went either straightway to the province, or if he was detained by business, by the interposition of the tribunes, or by bad omens, Plutarch in Crasso; Cic. Divin. i. 16. ii. 9. Flor. iii. 11. Dio. xxxvii. 50. he staid for some time without the city, for he could not enter it while invested with military command. His friends, and sometimes the other citizens, out of respect accompanied him, (officii causâ, proſequabantur;) for some space out of the city with their good wishes, Liv. xlii. 49. xlv. 59. When he reached the province, he sent notice of his arrival to his predecessor, that by an interview with him, he might know the state of the province; for his command commenced on the day of his arrival; and by the CORNELIAN law, the former proconsul was obliged to depart within thirty days after, Cic. Fam. iii. 6.

A proconsul in his province had both judicial authority and military command, (poſtſtatem vel jurisdictionem et imperium.) He used so to divide the year, that he usually devoted summer to military affairs, Bel. l. or going through the province; and the winter to the administration of justice, Cic. Att. v. 14. Verr. 5. 12. He administered justice much in the same way with the prætor at Rome, according to the laws, which had been prescribed to the province when first subdued, or according to the regulations which had afterwards been made concerning it by the senate or people at Rome; or finally according to his own edicts, which he published in the province concerning every thing of importance, Cic. Att. vi. 1. These, if he borrowed them from others, were called TRANSLATITIA vel Tralatitia, v. -icia; if not, NOVA. He always published a general edict before he entered on his government, as the prætor did at Rome.

The proconsul held assizes or courts of justice, (forum vel conventus agebat;) in the principal cities of the province, so that he might go round the whole province in a year. He himself judged in all public and important causes; but matters of less consequence he referred to his quæstor or lieutenants, Cic. Flac. 21. in Cæcil.

17. Verr. ii. 18. Suet. Jul. 7. and also to others, Cic. Att. v. 21. ad Q. frat. i. 1. 7.

The proconsul summoned these meetings, (conventus indicēbat), by an edict on a certain day, when such as had causes to be determined should attend, Liv. xxxi. 29. To this, Virgil is thought to allude, Æn. v. 758. Indicēque forum, &c.

The provinces were divided into so many districts, called CONVENTUS, or circuitus, (νομα, Plin. Ep. x. 5.) the inhabitants of which went to a certain city to get their causes determined, and to obtain justice, (disceptandi et juris obtinendi causā conveniebant.) Thus Spain was divided into seven circuits, (in septem conventus), Plin. iii. 3. The Greeks called conventus agere, διοικῶν ἀγων, sc. ἡσπας. So in Act. Apost. xix. 30. διοικῶν ἀγωνται, &c. conventus aguntur sunt proconsules; in jus vocent se invicem. Hence conventus circumire, Suet. Jul. 7. percurrere, Cæs. viii. 46. for urbes circumire, ubi hi conventus agebantur.

The proconsul chose usually twenty of the most respectable men of the province, who sat with him in council, (qui ei in consilio aderant, assidebant), and were called his council, CONSILIUM, Consiliarii, ASSESSORES, et Recuperatores. Hence Consilium cogere, in consilium advocare, adhibere; in consilio esse, adesse, assidere, habere; in consilium ire, mittere, dimittere, &c. The proconsul passed sentence according to the opinion of his council, (de consilii sententia decrevit, pronuntiavit), &c.

As the governors of provinces were prohibited from using any other language than the Latin; in the functions of their office, Val. Max. ii. 2. 2. they were always attended by interpreters, Cic. Verr. iii. 37. Fam. xiii. 54. The judges were chosen differently in different places, according to the rank of the litigants, and the nature of the cause, Cic. Verr. ii. 13. 15. 17.

The proconsul had the disposal (curatio) of the corn, of the taxes; and, in short, of every thing which pertained to the province. Corn given to the proconsul by way of present, was called HONARIUM, Cic. in Pis. 35.

If a proconsul behaved well, he received the highest honours, Cic. Att. v. 21. as, statues, temples, brazen horses, &c. which through flattery used indeed to be erected of course to all governors, though ever so corrupt and oppressive.

Festival days used also to be appointed; as in honour of Marcellus (MARCELLEA, -orum), in Sicily, and of Q. Mucius Sævola (MUCEA) in Asia, Cic. Verr. ii. 21. 10. 13.

If a governor did not behave well, he might afterwards be brought to his trial: 1. for extortion, (REPETUNDARUM), if he had made unjust exactions, or had even received presents, Plin. Ep. iv. 9.—2. for peculation, (PECULATUS), if he had embezzled the public money; hence called PECULATOR, or DEPECULATOR, Ascen. in Cic. Verr. Act. i. 1.—and, 3. for what was called crimen MAJESTATIS, if he had betrayed his army or province to the enemy, or led the army out of the province ; and made war on any prince or state without the order of the people, or the decree of the senate.

Various laws were made to secure the just administration of the provinces, but these were insufficient to check the rapacity of the Roman magistrates. Hence the provinces were miserably oppressed by their exactions. Not only the avarice of the governor was to be gratified, but that of all his officers and dependents ; as, his lieutenants, tribunes, præfects, &c. and even of his freedmen and favourite slaves, Juvenal. viii. 87.—130.

The pretexes for exacting money were various. The towns and villages, through which the governors passed, were obliged by the JULIAN law to supply them and their retinue with forage and wood for firing, Cic. Att. v. 16. The wealthier cities paid large contributions for being exempted from furnishing winter-quarters to the army. Thus the inhabitants of Cyprus alone paid yearly on this account 200 talents, or about 40,000*l.* sterling, Cic. Att. v. 21.

Anciently a proconsul, when he had gained a victory, used to have golden crowns sent him, not only from the different cities of his own province, but also from the neighbouring states, Liv. xxxviii. 37. 14. which were carried before him in his triumph, Id. xxxvii. 58. xxxix. 5. 7. 29. xl. 43. Dio. xlii. 49. Afterwards the cities of the province, instead of sending crowns, paid money on this account, which was called AURUM CORONARIUM, and was sometimes exacted as a tribute, Cic. in Pis. 37.

A proconsul, when the annual term of his government was elapsed delivered up the province and army to his successor, if he arrived in time, and left the province within thirty days ; but first he was obliged to deposite in two of the principal cities of his jurisdiction, an account of the money which had passed through his own or his officers' hands, stated and balanced, (apud duas civitates, quæ maximæ viderentur, rationes confectas et consolidatas depondere,) Cic. Fam. v. 20. If his successor did not arrive, he nevertheless departed, leaving his lieutenant, or more frequently his quæstor, to command in the province, Cic. Fam. ii. 15. Att. vi. 5. 6.

When a proconsul returned to Rome, he entered the city as a private person, unless he claimed a triumph ; in which case he did not enter the city, but gave an account of his exploits to the senate assembled in the temple of Bellona, or in some other temple without the city. Liv. iii. 63. xxxviii. 45. Dio. xlix. 15. In the meantime he usually waited near the city till the matter was determined, whence he was said ad urbem esse, Sall. Cat. 30. and retained the title of IMPERATOR, which his soldiers had given him upon his victory, with the badges of command, his lictors, and fascæ, &c. Appian says that in his time no one was called imperator, unless 10,000 of the enemy had been slain, De Bell. Civ. ii. p. 455. When any one had pretensions to a triumph, his fascæ were always wreathed with laurel, Cic. Fam. ii. 16. Att. x. 10. as the letters were, which he sent to the senate concerning his victory, Cic. in Pis. 17. Sometimes when the determination was long delayed, he retired to some distance from Rome. Cic. Att. vii. 15.

If he obtained a triumph, a bill was proposed to the people, that he should have military command (ut ei imperium esset) on the day of his triumph, Liv. xlv. 35. Cic. Att. iv. 16. for without this no one could have military command within the city.

Then he was obliged by the JULIAN law, within thirty days to give in to the treasury an exact copy of the accounts which he had left in the province, (easdem rationes totidem verbis referre ad ærarium.) Cic. Att. v. 20. At the same time he recommended those who deserved public rewards for their services, (in beneficiis, ad ærarium detulit.) Cic. ibid. et pro Arch. 5.

What has been said concerning a proconsul, took place with respect to a proprætor; unless that a proconsul had twelve lictors, and a proprætor only six. The army and retinue of the one were likewise commonly greater than that of the other. The provinces, to which proconsuls were sent, were called PROCONSULARES; proprætors, PRÆTORIÆ, Dio. liii. 14.

PROVINCIAL MAGISTRATES under the EMPERORS.

AUGUSTUS made a new partition of the provinces. Those which were peaceable and less exposed to an enemy, he left to the management of the senate and people; but of such as were more strong, and open to hostile invasions, and where, of course, it was necessary to support greater armies, he undertook the government himself, (regendas ipse suscepit.) Suet. Aug. 47. This he did under pretext of easing the senate and people of the trouble, but in reality to increase his own power, by assuming the command of the army entirely to himself.

The provinces under the direction of the senate and people, (PROVINCIAE SENATORIAE et POPULARES vel Publica.) at first were Africa propria, or the territories of Carthage, Numidia, Cyrène; Asia, (which, when put for a province, comprehended only the countries along the Propontis and the Ægean Sea, namely, Phrygia, Myria, Caria, Lydia, Cic. pro Flacc. 27.) Bithynia and Pontus, Græcia and Epirus, Dalmatia, Macedonia, Sicilia, Sardinia, Creta, and Hispania Bætica, Dio. liii. 12.

The provinces of the emperor (PROVINCIAE IMPERATORIAE, vel Cæsarium.) were Hispania Tarraconensis and Lusitania, Gallia, Calosyria, Phœnicia, Cilicia, Cyprus, Egyptus, to which others were afterwards added. But the condition of these provinces were often changed; so that they were transferred from the senate and people to the emperor, and the contrary, Dio. liii. 12. liv. 4. 3. Strabo, xvii. fin. The provinces of the emperor seem to have been in a better state than those of the senate and people, Tacit. Annal. i. 76.

The magistrates sent to govern the provinces of the senate and people were called PROCONSULES, although sometimes only of prætorian rank, Dio. liii. 13. The senate appointed them by lot, (sortiis mittebant.) out of those who had borne a magistracy in the city at least five years before, Suet. Aug. 36. Vesp. 4. Plin. Ep. ii. 12. Dio. liii. 14. They had the same badges of authority as the proconsuls had formerly; but they had only a civil power, (potestas vel jurisdictio.) and no military command (imperium.) nor disposal of the taxes. The taxes were collected, and the soldiers in their provinces commanded by officers appointed by Augustus. Their authority lasted only for one year, and they left the province immediately when a successor was sent, Dio. ibid.

Those whom the emperor sent to command his provinces were called LEGATI CÆSARIS pro Consule, Propratores, vel pro præ-tore, Dio. liii. 13. Consulares Legati, Suet. Tib. 41. Consulares Rectores, Suet. Vesp. 8. or simply, Consulares, Suet. Tib. 32. Tacit. Hist. ii. 97. and Legati, Suet. Vesp. 4. also Præsidēs, Præfecti, Correctores, &c.

The governor of Egypt was usually called PRÆFECTUS, Suet. Vesp. 6. or Præfectus Augustalis, Digest. and was the first imperial legate that was appointed.

There was said to be an ancient prediction concerning Ægypt, that it would recover its liberty when the Roman fascēs and præ-texta should come to it, Cic. Fam. i. 7. Trebell. Poll. in Æmilian. Augustus artfully converting this to his own purpose, claimed that province to himself, and discharging a senator from going to it without permission, Dio. li. 17. he sent thither a governor of equestrian rank, without the usual ensigns of authority, Tacit. Ann. ii. 59. Suet. Tib. 52. To him was joined a person to assist in administering justice, called JURIDICUS ALEXANDRINÆ CIVITATIS, Pandect. (ὁ δικαστορας, Strabo, xvii. p. 797.)

The first præfect of Ægypt was Cornelius Gallus, celebrated by Virgil in his last eclogue, and by Ovid, Amor. i. 15. 29. (Hunc primum Ægyptus Romanum judicem habuit, Eutrop. vii. 7.) Suet. Aug. 66. Dio. li. 17.

The legates of the emperor were chosen from the senators, but the præfect of Ægypt only from the Equites, Tacit. xii. 60. Dio. liii. 13. Tiberius gave that charge to one of his freedmen, Dio. lviii. 40. The Legati Cæsaris wore a military dress and a sword, and were attended by soldiers instead of lictors. They had much greater powers than the proconsuls, and continued in command during the pleasure of the emperor, Dio. liii. 13.

In each province, besides the governor, there was an officer called PROCURATOR CÆSARIS, Tacit. Agric. 15. or curator, and in later times, rationalis, who managed the affairs of the revenue, (qui res fisci curabat; publicos reditus colligebat et erogabat.) and also had a judicial power in matters that concerned the revenue, Suet. Claud. 12. whence that office was called procuratio amplissima, Suet. Galb. 15. These Procurators were chosen from the Equites, and sometimes from freedmen, Dio. lii. 25. They were sent not only into the provinces of the emperor, but also into those of the senate and people, Dio. liii. 15.

Sometimes a Procurator discharged the office of a governor, (vice præsidis fungebatur,) especially in a small province, or in a part of a large province, where the governor could not be present; as Pontius Pilate did, who was procurator or præpositus (Suet. Vesp. 4.) of Judæa, which was annexed to the province of Syria, Tacit. Annal. xii. 23. Hence he had the power of punishing capitally, ibid. xv. 44. which the procuratores did not usually possess, ib. iv. 15.

To all these magistrates and officers Augustus appointed different salaries, according to their respective dignity, Dio. liii. 15. Those who received 200 sestertia were called Lucenarii; 100, Centenarii; 60, Sexagenarii, &c. Capitolin. in Pertinac. c. 2. A certain sum was given them for mules and tents; which used formerly to be afforded at the public expense, Suet. Aug. 36.

All these alterations and arrangements were made in appearance by public authority, but in fact by the will of Augustus.

RE-ESTABLISHMENT of MONARCHY under AUGUSTUS: TITLES, BADGES, and POWERS of the EMPERORS.

THE monarchical form of government established by Augustus, although different in name and external appearance, in several respects resembled that which had prevailed under the kings. Both were partly hereditary, and partly elective. The choice of the kings depended on the senate and people at large; that of the emperors, chiefly on the army. When the former abused their power, they were expelled; the latter were often put to death: but the interests of the army being separate from those of the state, occasioned the continuation of despotism. According to Pomponius, de origine juris, D. i. 2. 14. REGES OMNEM POTESTATEM HABUISSE, their rights were the same. But the account of Dionysius and others is different. (See p. 97.)

As Augustus had become master of the republic by force of arms, he might have founded his right to govern it on that basis, as his grand uncle and father by adoption, Julius Cæsar, had done. But the apprehension he always entertained of Cæsar's fate made him pursue a quite different course. The dreadful destruction of the civil wars, and the savage cruelty of the Triumviri, had cut off all the keenest supporters of liberty, Tacit. Ann. i. 2. and had so humbled the spirit of the Romans, that they were willing to submit to any form of government rather than hazard a repetition of former calamities, (tuta et presentia quam vetera et periculosa malebant, ibid.) The empire was now so widely extended, the number of those who had a right to vote in the legislative assemblies so great, (the Romans having never employed the modern method of diminishing that number by representation,) and the morals of the people so corrupt, that a republican form of government was no longer fitted to conduct so unwieldy a machine. The vast intermixture of inhabitants which composed the capital, and the numerous armies requisite to keep the provinces in subjection, could no longer be controlled but by the power of one. Had Augustus possessed the magnanimity and wisdom to lay himself and his successors under proper restraints against the abuse of power, his descendants might have long enjoyed that exalted station to which his wonderful good fortune, and the abilities of others, had raised him. Had he, agreeably to his repeated declarations, wished for command only to promote the happiness of his fellow-citizens, he would have aimed at no more power than was necessary for that purpose. But the lust of dominion, although artfully disguised, appears to have been the ruling passion of his mind, (specie recusantis flagrantissime cupiverat.) Tacit. Ann. i. 2. 3. 10.

Upon his return to Rome after the conquest of Egypt, and the death of Antony and Cleopatra, A. U. 725, he is said to have seriously deliberated with his two chief favourites, Agrippa and Mæcenas, about resigning his power, and restoring the ancient form of government. Agrippa advised him to do so, but Mæcenas dissuaded him from it. In the speeches which Dio Cassius makes them deliver on this occasion, the principal arguments for and against a popular and monarchical government, are introduced, lii. The advice of Mæcenas prevailed, ib. 41. Augustus, however, in the following year, having corrected the abuses which had crept in during the civil wars, Suet. Aug. 32. and having done several other popular acts, assembled the senate, and in a set speech pretended to restore every thing to them and to the people. But several members, who had been previously prepared, exclaimed against this proposal; and the rest, either prompted by opinion, or overawed by fear, all with one voice conjured him to retain the command. Upon which, as if unequal to the load, he appeared to yield a reluctant compliance; and that only for ten years; during which time he might regulate the state of public affairs, (republicam ordinaret;) thus seeming to rule, as if by constraint, at the earnest desire of his fellow-citizens; which gave his usurpation the sanction of law.

This farce he repeated at the end of every ten years, Dio. liii. 46. but the second time, A. U. 736, he accepted the government only for five years, saying that this space of time was then sufficient, Id. liv. 12. and when it was elapsed, for five years more, Id. liii. 16. but after that, always for ten years, Id. lv. 6. He died in the first year of the fifth decennium, the 19th of September, (xiv. Kal. Sept.) A. U. 787. aged near 76 years; having ruled alone near 44 years. The succeeding emperors, although at their accession they received the empire for life, yet at the beginning of every ten years, used to hold a festival, as if to commemorate the renewal of the empire, Dio. liii. 10.

As the senate by their misconduct, (see p. 123,) had occasioned the loss of liberty, so by their servility to Augustus, they established tyranny, (Ruere in servitute consules, patres, eques, as Tacitus says upon the accession of Tiberius, Annal. i. 7.) Upon his feigned offer to resign the empire, they seem to have racked their invention to contrive new honours for him. To the names of IMPERATOR, Dio. xliii. 44. CÆSAR, Id. xli. 47. and PRINCE, (PRINCIPES Senatus) liii. 1. which they had formerly conferred, they added those of AUGUSTUS, (venerandus v. -abilis, ab augur, quasi inauguratus vel consecratus; ideoque Diis carus; cultu divino afficiendus, σεβασος; Pausan. iii. 11. vel ab augeo; quam sua Jupiter auget ope, Ovid. Fast. i. 612. Suet. Aug. 7.) Dio. liii. 16. and Father of his country, (PATER PATRIÆ.) Suet. 58. Ovid. Fast. ii. 127. Pont. iv. 9. ult. Trist. iv. 4. 13. &c. This title had been first given to Cicero by the senate, after his suppression of Catiline's conspiracy; ROMA PATREM PATRIÆ CICERONEM LIBERA DIXIT, Juvenal. viii. 244. Plin. vii. 30. by the advice of Cato, Appian. B. civ. ii. 431. Plut. in Cic. or of Catulus, as Cicero himself says, Pis. 3. It was next decreed to Julius Cæsar, Suet. 76. Dio. xli. 4. and some of his coins are still extant with that inscription. Cicero proposed that it should be given to Augustus, when yet very young, Phil. xiii. 11. It was refused by Tiberius, Suet. 67. as also the title of IMPERATOR, Id. 26. and DOMINUS, 37. Dio. lviii. 2. but most of the succeeding emperors accepted it, Tacit. Ann. xi. 25.

The title of PATER PATRIÆ denoted chiefly the paternal affection which it became the emperors to entertain towards their subjects; and also that power, which, by the Roman law, a father had over his children, Dio. liii. 18. Senec. Clem. i. 14.

CÆSAR was properly a family title, Dio. ibid. Suet. Galb. 1. According to Dio, it also denoted power, xliii. 44. In later times, it signified the person destined to succeed to the empire, or assumed into a share of the government, during the life of the emperor, who himself was always called AUGUSTUS, Spartian. in Ælio Vero, 2. which was a title of splendour and dignity, but not of power, Dio. liii. 18.

Augustus is said to have first desired the name of ROMULUS, that he might be considered as a second founder of the city; but perceiving that thus he should be suspected of aiming at sovereignty, he dropt all thoughts of it, Dio. liii. 16. and accepted the title of AUGUSTUS, the proposer of which in the senate was Munatius Plancus, Suet. Aug. 7. Vell. ii. 91. Servius says, that Virgil, in allusion to this desire of Augustus, describes him under the name of QUIRINUS, Æn. i. 296. G. iii. 27.

The chief title, which denoted command, was IMPERATOR, Dio. xliii. 44. By this the successors of Augustus were peculiarly distinguished. It was equivalent to REX, Dio. liii. 17. In modern times it is reckoned superior.

The title of Imperator, however, continued to be conferred on victorious generals as formerly; but chiefly on the emperors themselves, as all generals were supposed to act under their auspices, Horat. Od. iv. 14. 32. Ovid. Trist. ii. 173. Under the republic the appellation of Imperator was put after the name; as CICERO IMPERATOR, Cic. Ep. passim. but the titles of the emperors usually before, as a prænomen, Suet. Tib. 26. Thus the following words are inscribed on an ancient stone, found at Ancyra, now An- gouri, (in lapide Ancyrano,) in Asia Minor ; IMP. CÆSAR. DIVI. F. AUG. PONT. MAX. COS. XIV. IMP. XX. TRIBUNIC. POTES. XXXVIII. The Emperor Cæsar, the adopted son of (Julius Cæsar, called) Divus, (after his deification ;) Augustus the high-priest, (an office which he assumed after the death of Lepidus, A. U. 741. Dio. liv. 27.) fourteen times Consul, twenty times (saluted) Imperator (on account of his victories). Dio says, he obtained this honour in all 21 times, lii. 41. Thus Tacitus, Nomen IMPERATORIS semel atque vicies partum, (Ann. i. 9.) in the 38th year of his tribunitian power, (from the time when he was first invested with it by the senate, A. U. 724, Dio. li. 19.) So that this inscription was made above five years before his death.

The night after Cæsar was called AUGUSTUS, the Tiber happened to overflow its banks, so as to render all the level parts of Rome navigable, Dio. liii. 20. Tacit. Annal. i. 76. to which Horace is supposed to allude, Od. i. 2. This event was thought to prognosticate his future greatness. Among the various expressions of flattery then used to the emperor, that of Pacuvius, a tribune of the commons, was remarkable ; who in the senate devoted himself to Cæsar after the manner of the Spaniards, Val. Max. ii. 6. 11. and Gauls (DEVOTOS illi SOLDURIOS appellant, Cæs. Bell. Gall. iii. 22.) and exhorted the rest of the senators to do the same. Being checked by Augustus, he rushed forth to the people, and compelled many to follow his example. Whence it became a custom for the senators when they congratulated any emperor on his accession to the empire, to say that they were devoted to his service, Dio. ibid.

Macrobius informs us that it was by means of this tribune, (Pacuvio tribuno plebem rogante,) that an order of the people (plebiscitum) was made, appointing the month Sextilis to be called AUGUST, Sat. i. 12.

The titles given to Justinian in the Corpus Juris, are, in the Institutes, SACRATISSIMUS PRINCEPS, and IMPERATORIA MAJESTAS ; in the Pandects, DOMINUS NOSTER SACRATISSIMUS PRINCEPS ; and the same in the Codex, with this addition, PERPETUUS AUGUSTUS. These titles are still retained by the Emperor of Germany.

The powers conferred on Augustus as emperor were, to levy armies, to raise money, to undertake wars, to make peace, to command all the forces of the republic, to have the power of life and death within, as well as without, the city ; and to do every thing else which the consuls and others invested with supreme command had a right to do, Dio. liii. 17.

In the year of the city 731, the senate decreed that Augustus should be always proconsul, even within the city ; and in the provinces should enjoy greater authority than the ordinary proconsuls, Dio. liii. 32. Accordingly, he imposed taxes on the provinces, rewarded and punished them as they had favoured or oppressed his cause, and prescribed such regulations to them as he himself thought proper, Dio. liv. 7. 9 & 25.

In the year 735, it was decreed, that he should always enjoy consular power, with 12 lictors, and sit on a curule chair between the consuls. The senators at the same time requested that he would undertake the rectifying of all abuses, and enact what laws he thought proper: offering to swear that they would observe them, whatever they should be. This Augustus declined, well knowing, says Dio, that they would perform what they cordially decreed without an oath; but not the contrary, although they bound themselves by a thousand oaths, Dio. liv. 10.

The multiplying of oaths always renders them less sacred, and nothing is more pernicious to morals, than the too frequent exaction of oaths by public authority without a necessary cause. Livy informs us, that the sanctity of an oath (fides et jusjurandum) had more influence with the ancient Romans, than the fear of laws and punishments, (proximo legum et panarum, metu.) Liv. i. 21. ii. 45. They did not, he says, as in after times, when a neglect of religion prevailed, by interpretations adapt an oath and the laws to themselves, but conformed every one his own conduct to them, Liv. iii. 20. ii. 32. xxii. 61. Cic. Off. iii. 30 & 31. See also, Polyb. vi. 54 & 56.

Although few of the emperors accepted the title of Censor, (see p. 117.) yet all of them in part exercised the rights of that office, as also those of Pontifex Maximus and tribune of the Commons, Dio. liii. 17. See p. 124.

The emperors were freed from the obligation of the laws, (legibus soluti.) so that they might do what they pleased, Dio. liii. 18 & 28. Some, however, understand this only of certain laws: for Augustus afterwards requested of the senate, that he might be freed from the Voconian law, Dio. lvi. 32. but a person was said to be (legibus solutus.) who was freed only from one law, Cic. Phil. ii. 13.

On the first of January, every year, the senate and people renewed their oath of allegiance, Tacit. Ann. xvi. 22. or, as it was expressed, confirmed the acts of the emperors by an oath; which custom was first introduced by the Triumviri, after the death of Cæsar, Dio. xlvii. 18. repeated to Augustus, Id. li. 20. liii. 28. and always continued under the succeeding emperors. They not only swore that they approved of what the emperors had done, but that they would in like manner confirm whatever they should do, Id. lvii. 8. lviii. 17. In this oath the acts of the preceding emperors who were approved of, were included; and the acts of such as were not approved of, were omitted, as of Tiberius, Id. lix. 9. of Caligula, lx. 4. &c. Claudius would not allow any one to swear to his acts, (in acta sua jurare;) but not only ordered others to swear to the acts of Augustus, but swore to them also himself, Id. lx. 10.

It was usual to swear by the genius, the fortune, or safety of the emperor; which was first decreed in honour of Julius Cæsar, Dio. xlv. 6. and commonly observed, Id. 50. so likewise by that of Augustus, even after his death, Id. lvii. 9. To violate this oath was esteemed a heinous crime, Ibid. & Tacit. Ann. i. 73. Codex. iv. 1. 2. ii. 4. 41. Dio. xii. 2. 13. and more severely punished than real perjury, Tertull. Apol. 18. It was reckoned a species of treason, (majestatis.) and punished by the bastinado, D. xii. 2. 13. sometimes by cutting out the tongue, Gothofred in loc. So that Minutius Felix justly says, c. 29. Est iis, (sc. Ethnicū,) tutius per Jovis genium pegerare quam regis. Tiberius prohibited any one from swearing by him, Dio. lvii. 8. lviii. 12. but yet men swore, not only by his fortune, but also by that of Sejanus, Id. lviii. 2. 6. After the death of the latter, it was decreed that no oath should be made by any other but the emperor, Ibid. 12. Caligula ordained that to all oaths these words should be added; NEQUE ME, NEQUE MEOS LIBEROS CHARIORES HABEO, QUAM CAIUM ET SORORES EJUS. Suet. 15. Dio. lix. 3. 9. and that the women should swear by his wife Drusilla, ibid. 11, as he himself did, in his most public and solemn aseverations, Suet. 24. So Claudius, by Livia, Dio. lx. 5. Suet. Claud. 11.

In imitation of the temple and divine honours appointed by the Triumviri to Julius Cæsar, Dio. xlvii. 18. and confirmed by Augustus, Id. li. 20. altars were privately erected to Augustus himself, at Rome, Virg. Ecl. i. 7. Horat. Ep. ii. 1. 16. Ovid. Fast. i. 13. and particularly in the provinces, but he permitted no temple to be publicly consecrated to him, unless in conjunction with the city, ROME; AUGUSTO ET URBI ROMÆ; and that only in the provinces, Tacit. Ann. iv. 37. for in the city they were strictly prohibited, Suet. 52. After his death they were very frequent, Tacit. Ann. i. 11. 73. Dio. lvi. 46.

It was likewise decreed in honour of Augustus, that when the priests offered up vows for the safety of the people and senate, they should do the same for him, Dio. li. 19. so for the succeeding emperors; Tacit. Ann. iv. 17. particularly at the beginning of the year, Id. xvi. 22. on the 3d of January: Dio. lix. 24.—also, that in all public and private entertainments, libations should be made to him with wishes for his safety, Dio. li. 19. Ovid. Fast. ii. 637. Pont. ii. 3. ult. as to the Lares and other gods, Horat. Od. iv. 5. 33.

On public occasions the emperors wore a crown and a triumphal robe, Dio. li. 20. Tacit. Annal. xiii. 8. They also used a particular badge, of having fire carried before them, Herodian. i. 8. 8. i. 16. 9. ii. 5. Marcus Antoninus calls it a lamp, i. 17. probably borrowed from the Persians, Xenoph. Cyrop. viii. iii. p. 215. Ammian. xxiii. 6. Something similar seems to have been used by the magistrates of the municipal towns; prunæ batillus, v. -um, a pan of burning coals, or a portable hearth, (focus portabilis.) in which incense was burnt; a perfumed stove, Horat. Sat. i. 5. 36.

Dioclesian introduced the custom of kneeling to the emperors, (adorari se jussit, cùm ante eum cuncti salutarentur, Eutrop. ix. 16. Aurelius Victor. de Cæs. c. 39. says, that the same thing was done to Caligula and Domitian. So Dio. lix. 4. 27. 28.

Augustus, at first, used the powers conferred on him with great moderation; as indeed all the first emperors did in the beginning of their government, Dio. lvii. 8. lix. 4. In his lodging and equipage he differed little from an ordinary citizen of distinguished rank, except being attended by his prætorian guards. But after he had gained the soldiers by donatives, the people by a distribution of grain, and the whole body of citizens by the sweetness of repose, he gradually increased his authority; (insurgere paulatim), and engrossed all the powers of the state, (munia senatûs, magistratum, legum in se transferre.) Tacit. Ann. i. 2. Such of the nobility as were most compliant, (quanto quis servilio promptior), were raised to wealth and preferment. Having the command of the army and treasury, he could do every thing. For although he pretended to separate his own revenues from those of the state, yet both were disposed of equally at his pleasure, Dio. liii. 16.

The long reign and artful conduct of Augustus, so habituated the Romans to subjection, that they never afterwards so much as made one general effort to regain their liberty, nor even to mitigate the rigour of tyranny. In consequence of which, their character became more and more degenerate. After being deprived of the right of voting, they lost all concern about public affairs; and were only anxious, says Juvenal, about two things, bread and games, (PANEM ET CIRCENSES, i. e. largesses and spectacles,) Juvenal. x. 80.—Hence from this period their history is less interesting, and, as Dio observes, less authentic; because, when every thing was done by the will of the prince, or of his favourites and freedmen, the springs of action were less known than under the republic, Dio. liii. 19. It is surprising, that though the Romans at different times were governed by princes of the most excellent dispositions, and of the soundest judgment, who had seen the woful effects of wicked men being invested with unlimited power, yet none of them seem ever to have thought of new-modelling the government, and of providing an effectual check against the future commission of similar enormities. Whether they thought it impracticable, or wished to transmit to their successors, unimpaired, the same powers which they had received; or from what other cause we know not. It is at least certain that no history of any people shows more clearly the pernicious effects of an arbitrary and elective monarchy, on the character and happiness of both prince and people, than that of the ancient Romans. Their change of government was indeed the natural consequence of that success with which their lust of conquest was attended. For the force employed to enslave other nations, being turned against themselves, served at first to accomplish, and afterwards to perpetuate, their own servitude. And it is remarkable, that the nobility of Rome, whose rapacity and corruption had so much contributed to the loss of liberty, were the principal sufferers by this change; for on them, those savage monsters, who succeeded Augustus, chiefly exercised their cruelty. The bulk of the people, and particularly the provinces, were not more oppressed than they had been under the republic. Thus Tacitus observes, Neque provinciæ illum rerum statum abnuebant, suspecto senatûs populique imperio ob certamina potentium, et avaritiam magistratum; invalido legum auxilio, quæ vi, ambitu, postremò pecuniâ turbabantur, Annal. i. 2.

PUBLIC SERVANTS of the MAGISTRATES.

THE public servants (ministri) of the magistrates, were called by the common name of APPARITORES, Liv. i. 8. because they were at hand to execute their commands (quod iis apparebant, i. e. præsto erant ad obsequium, Serv. ad Virg. Æn. xii. 850.) and their service or attendance APPARITIO, Cic. Fam. xiii. 54. These were,

I. SCRIBÆ, Notaries or clerks, who wrote out the public accounts, the laws, and all the proceedings (acta) of the magistrates. Those who exercised that office were said scriptum facere, Liv. xi. 46. Gell. vi. 9. from scriptus, -ûs. They were denominated from the magistrates whom they attended; thus, Scribæ quæstorii, ædiliti, prætorii, &c. and were divided into different decuriæ; whence decuriam emere, for munus scribæ emere, Cic. Verr. iii. 79. This office was more honourable among the Greeks than the Romans, Nep. Eum. 1. The scribæ at Rome, however, were generally composed of free-born citizens; and they became so respectable, that their order is called by Cicero honestus (quod eorum fidei tabulæ publicæ, periculaque magistratum committuntur.) Cic. Verr. iii. 79.

There were also actuarii or notarii, who took down in short-hand what was said or done, (notis excipiebant,) Suet. Jul. 55. These were different from the scribæ, and were commonly slaves or freedmen, Dio. lv. 7. The scribæ were also called librarii, Festus. But librarii is usually put for those who transcribe books, Cic. Att. xii. 6. Suet. Domit. 10. for which purpose the wealthy Romans, who had a taste for literature, sometimes kept several slaves, Nep. Att. 13.

The method of writing short-hand is said to have been invented by Mæcenas, Dio. lv. 7. according to Isidore, by Tiro, the favourite slave and freedman of Cicero, Isid. i. 22. Senec. Ep. 90.

II. PRÆCONES, heralds or public criers, who were employed for various purposes.

1. In all public assemblies they ordered silence, (silentium indicabant vel imperabant: EXSURGE, PRÆCO, FAC POPULO AUDIENTIAM, Plaut. Pæn. prol. 11.) by saying, SILETE vel TACETE; and in sacred rites by a solemn form, FAVETE LINGUIS, Horat. Od. iii. 1. ORE FAVETE OMNES, Virg. Æn. v. 71. Hence SACRUM silentium for allissimum or maximum, Horat. Od. ii. 13. 29. Ore favent, they are silent; Ovid. Amor. iii. 13. 29.

2. In the comitia they called the tribes and centuries to give their votes: they pronounced the vote of each century: they called out the names of those who were elected, Cic. Verr. v. 15. (See p. 86.) When laws were to be passed, they recited them to the people, (p. 84.) In trials they summoned the judices, the persons accused, their accusers, and the witnesses.

Sometimes heralds were employed to summon the people to an assembly, Liv. i. 59. iv. 32. and the senate to the senate-house, iii. 38. (see p. 15.) also the soldiers, when encamped, to hear their general make a speech, Liv. i. 28.

3. In sales by auction, they advertised them (auktionem conclamabant vel prædicabant;) Plaut. Men. fin. Cic. Verr. iii. 16. Off. iii. 13. Horat. de Art. Poet. 419. they stood by the spear, and called out what was offered. See p. 54.

4. In the public games, they invited the people to attend; they ordered slaves and other improper persons to be removed from them; Cic. de resp. Har. 12. Liv. ii. 37. they proclaimed (prædicabant) the victors and crowned them; Cic. Fam. v. 12. they invited the people to see the secular games which were celebrated only once every 110 years, by a solemn form; CONVENITE AD LUDOS SPECTANDOS, QUOS NEC SPECTAVIT QUISQUAM, NEC SPECTATURUS EST, Suet. Claud. 21. Herodian. iii. 8.

5. In solemn funerals, at which games sometimes used to be exhibited, Cic. de legg. ii. 24. they invited people to attend by a certain form: EXSEQUIAS CHREMETI, QUIBUS EST COMMODUM, IRE JAM TEMPUS EST, OLLUS EFFERTUR, Ter. Phorm. v. 8. 38. Hence these funerals were called FUNERA INDICTIVA. Festus in QUIRITES, Suet. Jul. 84. The præconis also used to give public notice when such a person died; thus, OLLUS QUIRIS LETO DATUS EST, Festus. ibid.

6. In the infliction of capital punishment, they sometimes signified the orders of the magistrate to the lictor; Liv. xxvi. 15. LICTOR, VIRO forti ADDE VIRGAS, ET IN EUM LEGE primum AGE, ibid. 16.

7. When things were lost or stolen, they searched for them, Plaut. Merc. iii. 4. v. 78. Petron. Arbit. c. 57. where an allusion is supposed to be made to the custom abolished by the Æbutian law.

The office of a public crier, although not honourable, was profitable, Juvenal. vii. 6. &c. They were generally free-born, and divided into decuriæ.

Similar to the præcones were those who collected the money bidden for goods at an auction from the purchaser, called COACTORES, Hor. Sat. i. 6. 86. Cic. pro Cluent. 64. They were servants (ministri) of the money-brokers, who attended at the auctions: Hence exactiones argentarias facilitare, to exercise the trade of such a collector, Suet. Vesp. 1. They seem also to have been employed by bankers to procure payment from debtors of every kind. But the collectors of the public revenues were likewise called COACTORES, Cic. pro Rab. Post. 11.

III. LICTORES. The lictors were instituted by Romulus, who borrowed them from the Etruscans. They are commonly supposed to have their name, Liv. i. 8. (a ligando), from their binding the hands and legs of criminals before they were scourged, Gell. xii. 3. They carried on their shoulders rods (virgas ulmeas, Plaut. Asin. ii. 2. r. 74. iii. 2. v. 29. Viminæi fasces virgarum, Id. Epid. i. 1. 26. vel ex betula, Plin. xvi. 18. s. 30.) bound with a thong in the form of a bundle, (bacillos loro colligatos in modum fascis), and an axe jutting out in the middle of them. They went before all the greater magistrates, except the censors, one by one in a line, Liv. xxiv. 44. He who went foremost was called PRIMUS LICTOR, Cic. ad Fatr. i. 1. 7. he who went last, or next to the magistrates, was called PROXIMUS LICTOR, Liv. ibid. Sallust. Jug. 12. or Postremus, Cic. Divin. i. 28. i. e. the chief lictor, summus lictor, who used to receive and execute the commands of the magistrate.

The office of the lictors was,

1. To remove the crowd (ut turbam summovent), Liv. iii. 11. 48. viii. 33. Hor. Od. ii. 16. 10. by saying, CEDITE CONSUL VENIT; DATE VIAM, VEL LOCUM CONSULI; SI VOBIS VIDETUR, DISCEDITE, QUIRITES, Liv. ii. 56. or some such words, (solennis ille lictorum et prænunciatus clamor, Plin. Pan. 61.) whence the lictor is called summotor aditus, Liv. xlv. 29. This sometimes occasioned a good deal of noise and bustle, Liv. passim. When the magistrate returned home, a lictor knocked at the door with his rod, (forem, uti mos est, virgâ percussit), Liv. vi. 34. which he also did when the magistrate went to any other house, Plin. vii. 30. s. 31.

2. To see that proper respect was made to the magistrates, (ANIMADVERTERE, ut debitus honos iis redderetur), Suet. Jul. 80. What this respect was, Seneca informs us, Epist. 64. namely, dismounting from horseback, uncovering the head, going out of the way, and also riding up to them, &c. Suet. Jul. 78.

3. To inflict punishment on those who were condemned, which they were ordered to do in various forms: I, LICTOR, COLLIGA MANUS; I, CAPUT OBNUBE HUIUS; ARBORI INFELICI SUSPENDE; VERBERATO VEL INTRA POMERIUM vel extra POMERIUM, Liv. i. 26. I, LICTOR, DELIGA AD PALUM, Id. viii. 7. ACCEDE, LICTOR, VIRGAS ET SECURES EXPEDI, Id. viii. 32. IN EUM LEGE AGE, i. e. securi percutite, vel feri, xxvi. 16.

The lictors were usually taken from the lowest of the common people, Liv. ii. 55. and often were the freedmen of him on whom they attended. They were different from the public slaves, who waited on the magistrates, Cic. in Verr. i. 26.

IV. ACCENSI. These seem to have had their name from summoning (ab acciando) the people to an assembly, and those who had lawsuits, to court, (in jus.) One of them attended on the consul who had not the fasces, Suet. Jul. 20. Liv. iii. 33. Before the invention of clocks, one of them called out to the prætor in court, when it was the third hour, or nine o'clock, before noon; when it was mid-day, and the ninth hour, or three o'clock afternoon, Varro de Lat. Ling. v. 9. Plin. vii. 60. They were commonly the freedmen of the magistrate on whom they attended; at least in ancient times, Cic. ad Fatr. i. 1. 4. The Accensi were also an order of soldiers, called Supernumerarii, because not included in the legion, Verg. ii. 19. Ascon. in Cic. Verr. i. 28. Liv. viii. 8 & 10.

V. VIATORES. These were properly the officers who attended on the tribunes, Liv. ii. 56. and ædiles, xxx. 39. Anciently they used to summon the senators from the country, where they usually resided; whence they had their name, (quod sæpe in viâ essent), Cic. de Sen. 16. Columell. Præf. 1.

VI. CARNIFEX. The public executioner or hangman, who executed (supplicio afficiebat) slaves and persons of the lowest rank; for slaves and freedmen were punished in a manner different from free-born citizens, Tacit. Annal. iii. 50. The carnifex was of servile condition, and held in such contempt, that he was not permitted to reside within the city, Cic. pro Rabir. 5. but lived without the Porta Metia, or Esquilina, Plaut. Pseud. i. 3. v. 98. near the place destined for the punishment of slaves, (juxta locum servilibus pænis sepositum, Tac. Annal. xv. 60. ii. 32.) called Sestertium, Plutarch. in Galb. where were erected crosses and gibbets, (cruces et patibula, Tac. Annal. xiv. 33.) and where also the bodies of slaves were burnt, Plaut. Cas. ii. 6. v. 2. or thrown out unburied, Por. Epod. v. 99.

Some think that the carnifex was anciently keeper of the prison under the Triumviri capitales, who had only the superintendence or care of it: hence tradere vel trahere ad carnificem, to imprison; Plaut. Rud. iii. 6. v. 19.

LAW OF THE ROMANS.

THE laws of any country are rules established by public authority, and enforced by sanctions, to direct the conduct, and secure the rights of its inhabitants. (LEX justis iniquisque regula, Senec. de benef. iv. 12. LEGES quid aliud sunt, quam minus mixta præcepta? Id. Epist. 94.)

The laws of Rome were ordained by the people, upon the application of a magistrate, (rogante magistratu.) See p. 81. 83.

The great foundation of Roman law or jurisprudence, (Romani juris), was that collection of laws called the law, Liv. xxxiv. 6. or laws of the Twelve Tables, compiled by the decemviri, and ratified by the people, (see p. 137.) a work, in the opinion of Cicero, superior to all the libraries of philosophers, (omnibus omnium philosophorum bibliothecis anteposendum), de Orat. i. 44. Nothing now remains of these laws but scattered fragments.

The unsettled state of the Roman government, the extension of the empire, the increase of riches, and consequently of the number of crimes, with various other circumstances, gave occasion to a great many new laws, (corruptissimâ republica plurimæ leges, Tacit. Annal. iii. 27.)

At first those ordinances only obtained the name of laws, which were made by the Comitia Centuriata, (POPULISCITA), Tacit. Annal. iii. 58. but afterwards, those also which were made by the Comitia Tributa, (PLEBISCITA,) when they were made binding on the whole Roman people; first by the Horatian law, (ut quod tributum plebes jussisset, populum teneret,) Liv. iii. 55. and afterwards more precisely by the Publilian and Hortensian laws, (ut plebescita OMNIS QUIRITES tenerent,) Liv. viii. 12. Epit. xi. Plin. xvi. 10. s. 15. Gell. xv. 27.

The different laws are distinguished by the name (nomen gentis) of the persons who proposed them, and by the subject to which they refer.

Any order of the people was called LEX, whether it respected the public, (jus publicum vel sacrum,) the right of private persons, (jus privatum vel civile,) or the particular interest of an individual. But this last was properly called PRIVILEGIUM, Gell. x. 20. Ascon. in Cic. pro Mil.

The laws proposed by a consul were called CONSULARES, Cic. Sext. 64. by a tribune, TRIBUNITIÆ, Cic. in Rull. ii. 8. by the decemviri, DECEMVIRALES, Liv. iii. 55. 56 & 57.

Different Significations of JUS and LEX, and the different SPECIES of the ROMAN LAW.

THE words Jus and Lex are used in various senses. They are both expressed by the English word LAW.

Jus properly implies what is just and right in itself, or what from any cause is binding upon us, Cic. de Offic. iii. 21. Lex is a written statute or ordinance: (LEX, quæ scripto sancit, quodd vult, aut jubendo, aut vetando, Cic. de Legg. l. 6. a LEGENDO, quodd legi solet, ut innotescat, Varro. de Lat. ling. v. 7. legere leges propositas jussere, Liv. iii. 34. vel a delectu, Cic. de Legg. i. 6. a justo et jure legendo, i. e. eligendo, from the choice of what is just and right, Id. ii. 5. LEX, justorum injustorumque distinctio, ibid.—Græco nomine appellata, Nepos, a suum cuique tribuendo, Id. i. 6.)

Jus is properly what the law ordains, or the obligation which it imposes; (est enim JUS quod LEX constituit, That is law, or, That is binding, which the law ordains, Cic. de Legg. i. 15. ad Herenn. ii. 13.) Or, according to the Twelve Tables, QUODCUNQUE POPULUS JUSSIT, ID JUS ESTO, Liv. vii. 17. ix. 33. QUOD MAJOR PARS JUDICARIT, ID JUS RATUMQUE ESTO, Cic.

But jus and lex have a different meaning, according to the words with which they are joined; thus,

Jus NATURÆ vel NATURALE, is what nature or right reason teaches to be right; and jus GENTIUM, what all nations esteemed to be right: both commonly reckoned the same, Cic. Sext. 42. Harusp. resp. 14.

Jus civium vel CIVILE, is what the inhabitants of a particular country esteem to be right, either by nature, custom, or statute, Cic. Topic. 5. Off. iii. 16. 17. de Orat. i. 48. Hence, constituere, jus, quo omnes utantur, pro Dom. cui subjecti sint, pro Cæcin. So jus Romanum, Anglicum, &c. When no word is added to restrict it, JUS CIVILE is put for the civil law of the Romans. Cicero sometimes opposes jus civile to jus naturale, Sext. 42. and sometimes to what we call Criminal law (jus publicum), Verr. i. 42. Cæcin. 2. in Cæcil. 5.

Jus COMMUNE, what is held to be right among men in general, or among the inhabitants of any country, Cic. Cæcin. 4. Digest. et Institut.

Jus PUBLICUM et PRIVATUM, what is right with respect to the people (quasi jus populi), or the public at large, and with respect to individuals; political and civil law, Liv. iii. 34. Cic. Fam. iv. 14. Plin. Epist. i. 22. But jus publicum is also put for the right which the citizens in common enjoyed, (jus commune), Terent. Phorm. ii. 2. 65.

Jus SENATORIUM, (pars juris publici), what related to the rights and customs of the senate; what was the power of those, who might make a motion in the senate; (quæ potestas referentibus), (see p. 18.) what the privilege of those who delivered their opinion, (quid consentibus jus;) what the power of the magistrates, and the rights of the rest of the members, &c. Plin. Ep. viii. 14.

Jus DIVINUM et HUMANUM, what is right with respect to things divine and human, Liv. i. 18. xxxix. 16. Tacit. Annal. iii. 26. 70. vi. 26. Hence fas et jura sinunt, laws divine and human, Virg. G. i. 269. Contra jus fasque, Sall. Cat. 15. Jus fasque exuere, Tacit. Hist. iii. 5. Omne jus et fas delere, Cic. Quo jure, quæve injuria, right or wrong, Terent. And. i. 3. 9. Per fas et nefas, Liv. vi. 14. Jus et injuriæ, Sall. Jug. 16. Jure fieri, jure cæsus, Suet. Jul. 76.

Jus PRÆTORIUM, what the edicts of the prætor ordained to be right, Cic. de Offic. i. 10. Ver. i. 44.

Jus HONORARIUM. See p. 108.

Jus FLAVIANUM, ÆLIANUM, &c. the books of law composed by Flavius, Liv. ix. 46. Ælius, &c. URCANUM, i. e. CIVILE privatum, ex quo jus dicit prætor urbanus, Cic. Ver. Act. i. 1.

Jus PRÆDIATORIUM. The law observed with respect to the goods (Prædia vel prædia bona, Ascen. in Cic.) of those who were sureties (prædes) for the farmers of the public revenues, or undertakers of the public works, (mancipes), which were pledged to the public, (publico obligata vel pignori opposita), and sold if the farmer or undertaker did not perform his bargain, Cic. pro Balb. 20. Verr. i. 54. Fam. v. 20. Suet. Claud. 9. Hence PRÆDIATOR, a person who laid out his money in purchasing these goods, Cic. Att. xii. 14. 17. and who, of course, was well acquainted with what was right or wrong in such matters, (juris prædiatorii peritus), Id. Balb. 20.

Jus FÆCIALE, the law of arms or heraldry, Cic. Offic. i. 11. or the form of proclaiming war, Liv. i. 32.

Jus LEGITIMUM, the common or ordinary law, the same with jus civile, Cic. pro Dom. 13. 14. but jus legitimum exigere, to demand one's legal right, or what is legally due, Fam. viii. 6.

Jus CONSUETUDINIS, what long use hath established, opposed to LEGE jus or jus scriptum, statute or written law, Cic. de Invent. ii.

22. 54. Jus civile, constat aut ex scripto aut sine scripto, l. 6. D. de jussit. et jur.

Jus PONTIFICUM vel SACRUM, what is right with regard to religion and sacred things, much the same with what was afterwards called Ecclesiastical Law, Cic. pro Dom. 12. 13. 14. de legibus, ii. 18. &c. Liv. i. 20. So Jus religionis, augurum cæremoniærum, auspiciarum, &c.

Jus BELLICUM vel BELLI, what may be justly done to a state at war with us, and to the conquered: Cæs. de Bell. G. i. 27. Cic. Off. i. 11. iii. 29. Liv. i. 1. v. 27. Hence Leges silent inter arma, Cic. in Mil. 4. Ferre jus in armis. Liv. v. 3. Facere jus ense, Lucan. iii. 821. viii. 642. ix. 1073. Jusque datum sceleri, a successful usurpation, by which impunity and a sanction were crimes, Id. i. 2.

JURIS, disciplina, the knowledge of law, Cic. Legg. i. 5. intelligentia, Phil. ix. 5. interpretatio, Off. i. 11. STUDIOSI JURIS, i. e. jurisprudentiæ, Suet. Ner. 32. Gell. xii. 13. Consulti periti, &c. Lawyers, Cic.

JURE et legibus, by common and statute law, Cic. Verr. i. 42. 44. So Horace, Vir bonus est quis? Qui consulta patrum, qui leges, juraque servat, &c. Epist. i. xvi. 40. Jura dabat legesque viris, Virg. Æn. i. 509.

But JURA is often put for laws in general; thus, Nova jura condere, Liv. iii. 33. JURE inventa metu injusti fateare necesse est, Horat. Sat. I. iii. 111. Arc. P. 122. 398. civica jura respondere, Ep. i. 3. 23.

JUS and ÆQUITAS are distinguished, Cic. Off. iii. 16. Virg. ii. 426. jus and justitia; jus civile and leges, Phil. ix. 5. So Æquum et bonum, is opposed to callidum versutumque jus, an artful interpreter of a written law, Cæcin. 23. Summum jus, the rigour of the law, summa injuria, Off. i. 11. Summo jure agere, contendere, experiri, &c. to try the utmost stretch of law.

JUS vel JURA Quiritium, civium, &c. See p. 42. &c.

JURA sanguinis, cognationis, &c. necessitudo, v. jus necessitudinis, relationship, Suet. Calig. 26.

Jus regni, a right to the crown, Liv. i. 49. Honorum, to preferments, Tacit. xiv. 5. Quibus per fraudem jus fuit, power or authority, Sallust. Jug. 3. Jus luxuriæ publicæ datum est, a license, Senec. Epist. 18. Quibus fallere ac furari jus erat, Suet. Ner. 16. In jus et dittonem vel potestatem alicujus venire, concedere, Liv. & Sall. Habere jus in aliquem; sui juris esse ac mancipii, i. e. sui arbitrii et nemini parere, to be one's own master, Cic. In controverso jure est, it is a point of law not fixed or determined, Liv. iii. 55.

Jus dicere vel reddere, to administer justice. Dare jus gratiæ, to sacrifice justice to interest, Liv.

Jus is also put for the place where justice is administered; thus, IN JUS EAMUS, i. e. ad prætoris sellam, Donat. in Ter. Phorm. v. 7. 43 & 88. In jure, i. e. apud prætorem, Plaut. Rud. iii. 6. 28. Men. iv. 2. 19. De jure currere, from court, Cic. Quint. 25.

LEX is often taken in the same general sense with JUS: thus,

Lex est recta ratio imperandi atque prohibendi, a numine deorum tracta; justorum injustorumque distinctio; æternum quiddam, quod unversum mundum regit;—Consensio omnium gentium lex natura putanda est; non scripta, sed nata lex:—Salus populi suprema lex esto; fundamentum libertatis, fons equitatis, &c. Cic. de Legg.—pro Cluent. 53.

LEGES is put, not only for the ordinances of the Roman people, but for any established regulations: thus, of the free towns, LEGES MUNICIPALES, Cic. Fam. vi. 18. of the allied towns, Verr. ii. 49. 50. of the provinces, ibid. 13.

When LEX is put absolutely, the law of the Twelve Tables is meant; as, LEGE hæreditas ad gentem Minuciam veniebat, Cic. Verr. i. 45. Ea ad nos redibat LEGE hæreditas, Ter. Hecyr. i. 2. 97.

LEGES CENSORIÆ, forms of leases or regulations made by the censors, Cic. Verr. i. 55. iii. 7. Prov. Cons. 5. Rabir. Perd. 3. ad Q. Fr. i. 12. LEX mancipii vel mancipium, the form and condition of conveying property, de Orat. i. 39. Cic. Off. iii. 16.

LEGES venditionis, vel venalium vendendorum, agrum vel domum possidendi, &c. Rules or conditions, Cic. de Orat. i. 58. Horat. Epist. ii. 2. v. 18. Hence Emere, vendere hac vel illa lege, i. e. sub hac conditione vel pacto, Suet. Aug. 21. Ea lege (i. e. ex pacto et conventu) exierat, Cic. Att. vi. 3. Hac lege atque omine, Ter. And. i. 2. 29. Heaut. v. 5. 10. Lex vitæ, qua nati sumus, Cic. Tusc. 16. mea lege utar, I will observe my rule, Ter. Phorm. iii. 2. ult.

LEGES historia, poematum, versuum, &c. Rules observed in writing, Cic. de Legg. i. 1. de Orat. iii. 49. Thus we say, the laws of history, of poetry, versifying, &c. and in a similar sense, the laws of motion, magnetism, mechanics, &c.

In the Corpus Juris, LEX is put for the Christian religion; thus, LEX Christiana, Catholica, venerabilis, sanctissima, &c. But we in a similar sense use the word law for the Jewish religion; as the Law and the Gospel; or for the Books of Moses; as, the Law and the Prophets.

JUS ROMANUM, or Roman law, was either written or unwritten law, (JUS SCRIPTUM aut NON SCRIPTUM.) The several species which constituted the jus scriptum, were, laws, properly so called, the decrees of the senate, the edicts or decisions of magistrates, and the opinions or writings of lawyers. Unwritten law; (jus non scriptum,) comprehended natural equity and custom. Anciently jus scriptum only comprehended laws properly so called, Digest. de orig. jur. All these are frequently enumerated, or alluded to by Cicero, who calls them FONTES ÆQUITATIS, Topic. 5. &c. ad Herenn. ii. 13.

LAW OF THE DECEMVIRI, or, The XII TABLES.

VARIOUS authors have endeavoured to collect and arrange the fragments of the Twelve Tables. Of these, the most eminent is Godfrey, (Jacobus Gothofredus.)

The I. table is supposed to have treated of lawsuits; the II. of thefts and robberies ; III. of loans, and the right of creditors over their debtors ; IV. of the right of fathers of families ; V. of inheritance and guardianship ; VI. of property and possession ; VII. of trespasses and damages ; VIII. of estates in the country ; IX. of the common rights of the people ; X. of funerals, and all ceremonies relating to the dead ; XI. of the worship of the gods, and of religion ; XII. of marriages, and the rights of husbands.

Several ancient lawyers are said to have commented on these laws, Cic. de legg. ii. 23. Plin. xiv. 13. but their works are lost.

The fragments of the Twelve Tables have been collected from various authors, many of them from Cicero. The laws are in general very briefly expressed ; thus,

SI IN JUS VOCET, ATQUE (i. e. statim) EAT.

SI MEMBRUM RUPSIT (ruperit), NI CUM EO PACIT (paciscatur), TALIO ESTO.

SI FALSUM TESTIMONIUM DICASSIT (dixerit) SAKO DEJICITOR.

PRIVILEGIA NE IRROGANTO ; sc. magistratus.

DE CAPITE (de vitâ, libertate, et jure) CIVIS ROMANI, NISI PER MAXIMUM CENTURIATUM (per comitia centuriata) NE FERUNTO.

QUOD POSTRËMUM POPULUS JUSSIT, ID JUS RATUM ESTO.

HOMINEM MORTUUM IN URBE NE SEPELITO, NEVE URITO.

AD DIVOS ADEUNTO CASTE : PIETATEM ADHIBENTO, OPES AMOVENTO. QUI SECUS FAXIT, DEUS IPSE VINDEK ERIT.

FERIS JURGIA AMOVENTO. EX PATRIIS RITIBUS OPTIMA COLUNTO.

PERJURII POENA DIVINA, EXITIUM ; HUMANA, DEDECUS.

IMPIUS NE AUDETO PLACARE DONIS IRAM DEORUM.

NEQUIS AGRUM CONSECËRATO, AURI, ARGENTI, EBORIS SACRANDI MODUS ESTO.

The most important particulars, in the fragments of the Twelve Tables, come naturally to be mentioned, and explained elsewhere in various places.

After the publication of the Twelve Tables, every one understood what was his right, but did not know the way to obtain it. For this they depended on the assistance of their patrons.

From the Twelve Tables were composed certain rites and forms, which were necessary to be observed in prosecuting lawsuits, (quibus inter se homines disceptarent), called ACTIONES LEGIS. The forms used in making bargains, in transferring property, &c. were called ACTUS LEGITIMI. There were also certain days on which a lawsuit could be instituted, (quando lege agi posset), or justice could be lawfully administered, (dies FASTI), and others on which that could not be done, (NEFASTI) ; and some on which it could be done for one part of the day, and not for another, (INTERCISI.) The knowledge of all these things was confined to the patricians, and chiefly to the Pontifices, for many years ; till one Cn. Flavius, the son of a freedman, the scribe or clerk of Appius Claudius Cæcus, a lawyer, who had arranged in writing these actiones and days, stole or copied the book which Appius had composed, and published it, A. U. 440. (fastos publicavit, et actiones primum edidit.)

In return for which favour he was made curule ædile by the people, and afterwards prætor. From him the book was called JUS CIVILE FLAVIANUM, Liv. ix. 46. Cic. de Orat. i. 41. Muran. 11. Att. i. 1. l. 2. § 7. D. de orig. juris, Gell. vi. 9. Valer. Max. ii. 5. 2. Plin. xxxiii. 1. s. 6.

The patricians, vexed at this, contrived new forms of process; and to prevent their being made public, expressed them in writing by certain secret marks, (NOTIS, Cic. pro Mur. 11. somewhat like what are now used in writing short-hand,) or, as others think, by putting one letter for another, (as Augustus did, Suet. Aug. 88.) or one letter for a whole word, (per SIGLAS, as it is called by later writers.) However, these forms also were published by Sextus Ælius Catus, (who for his knowledge in the civil law, is called by Ennius egregiè cordatus homo, a remarkably wise man, Cic. de Orat. i. 45.) His book was named JUS ÆLIANUM.

The only thing now left to the patricians was the interpretation of the law; which was long peculiar to that order, and the means of raising several of them to the highest honours of the state.

The origin of lawyers at Rome was derived from the institution of patronage. (See p. 34.) It was one of the offices of a patron to explain the law to his clients, and manage their lawsuits.

TITUS CORUNCANIUS, who was the first plebeian Pontifex Maximus, A. U. 500, Liv. Epit. 18. is said to have been the first who gave his advice freely to all the citizens without distinction, l. 2. § 35 & 38. D. de orig. jur. whom many afterwards imitated; as, Manilius, Crassus, Mucius Scævola, C. Aquilius, Gallus, Trebatius, Sulpicius, &c.

Those who professed to give advice to all promiscuously, used to walk across the forum, (transverso foro,) and were applied to (ad eos adibat) there or at their own houses. Cic. Orat. iii. 33. Such as were celebrated for their knowledge in law, often had their doors beset with clients before day-break, Hor. Sat. i. 1. v. 9. Epist. ii. 1. 103, for their gate was open to all, (cunctis janua patebat, Tibull. i. 4. 78.) and the house of an eminent lawyer was as it were the oracle of the whole city, Cic. de Orat. i. 45. Hence Cicero calls their power REGNUM JUDICIALE, Att. i. 1.

The lawyer gave his answer from an elevated seat, (ex solio, tanquam ex tripode,) Cic. de Legg. i. 3. Orat. ii. 33. iii. 33. The client coming up to him said, LICIT CONSULERE? Cic. pro Mur. 13. The lawyer answered, CONSULE. Then the matter was proposed, and an answer was returned very shortly; thus, QUERO AN EXISTIMES? vel, ID JUS EST NECNE?—SECUNDUM EA, QUÆ PROPONUNTUR, EXISTIMO, PLACET, PUTO, Horat. Sat. ii. 3. 192. Lawyers gave their opinions either vivâ voce, or in writing: commonly without any reason annexed, Senec. Epist. 94. but not always.

Sometimes in difficult cases, the lawyers used to meet near the temple of Apollo in the Forum, Juvenal. i. 128. and after deliberating together, (which was called DISPUTATIO FORI,) they pronounced a joint opinion. Hence what was determined by the lawyers, and adopted by custom, was called RECEPTA SENTENTIA, RECEPTUM JUS, RECEPTUS MOS, POST MULTAS VARIATIONES RECEPTUM : and the rules observed in legal transactions by their consent, were called REGULÆ JURIS.

When the laws or edicts of the prætor seemed defective, the lawyers supplied what was wanting in both from natural equity ; and their opinions in process of time obtained the authority of laws. Hence lawyers were called not only interpretes, but also CONDICTORES et AUCTORES JURIS, Digest. and their opinions, JUS CIVILE, Cic. pro Cæcin. 24. de offic. iii. 16. opposed to leges Cæcin. 26.

Cicero complains that many excellent institutions had been perverted by the refinements of lawyers, pro Mur. 12.

Under the republic, any one that pleased might profess to give advice about matters of law ; but at first this was only done by persons of the highest rank, and such as were distinguished by their superior knowledge and wisdom. By the Cincian law, lawyers were prohibited from taking fees or presents from those who consulted them ; hence, turpe reos EMPTA miseris defendere linguâ, Ovid. Amor. i. 10. 39. which rendered the profession of jurisprudence highly respectable, as being undertaken by men of rank and learning, not from the love of gain, but from a desire of assisting their fellow-citizens, and through their favour of rising to preferments. Augustus enforced this law, by ordaining that those who transgressed it, should restore fourfold, Dio. liv. 18.

Under the emperors lawyers were permitted to take fees (HONORARIUM certam justamque mercedem, Suet. Ner. 17.) from their clients ; but not above a certain sum, (capiendis pecuniis posuēt modum (sc. Claudius) usque ad dena sestertia, Tac. Annal. xi. 7.) and after the business was done, (Peratis negotiis permittebat pecunias dumtaxat decem millium dare, Plin. Epist. v. 21.) Thus the ancient connexion between patrons and clients fell into disuse, and every thing was done for hire. Persons of the lowest rank sometimes assumed the profession of lawyers, Juvenal. viii. 47. pleadings became venal, (venire advocaciones,) advocates made a shameful trade of their function by fomenting lawsuits, (in lites coire ;) and, instead of honour, which was formerly their only reward, lived upon the spoils of their fellow-citizens, from whom they received large and annual salaries, Plin. Ep. v. 14. Various edicts (edicta, libri, vel libelli) were published by the emperors to check this corruption, ibid. also decrees of the senate, Id. v. 21. but these were artfully eluded.

Lawyers were consulted, not only by private persons, but also (in consilium adhibebantur, vel assumebantur) by magistrates and judges ; Cic. Top. 17. Muran. 13. Cæcin. 24. Gell. xiii. 13. Plin. Ep. iv. 22. vi. 11. and a certain number of them attended every præconul and prætor to his province.

Augustus granted the liberty of answering questions of law, only to particular persons, and restricted the judges not to deviate from their opinion, l. 2. § ult. D. de orig. jur. that thus he might bend the laws, and make them subservient to despotism. His successors, (except Caligula, Suet. 34.) imitated this example; till Adrian restored to lawyers their former liberty, Dig. ibid. which they are supposed to have retained to the time of Severus. What alterations after that took place, is not sufficiently ascertained.

Of the lawyers who flourished under the emperors, the most remarkable were M. ANTISTHIUS LABEO, (incorrupta libertatis vir, Tacit. Annal. iii. 75. Gell. xiii. 12.) and C. ATEIUS CAPITO (cujus obsequium dominantibus magis probabatur, Tacit. ibid.) under Augustus; and these two, from their different characters and opinions, gave rise to various sects of lawyers after them: CASSIUS, under Claudius, (Cassianæ scholæ princeps.) Plin. Ep. vii. 24. SALVIUS JULIANUS, under Hadrian; POMPONIUS, under Julian; CAIUS, under the Antonines; PAPINIANUS, under Severus; ULPIANUS and PAULUS, under Alexander Severus; HERMOGENES, under Constantine, &c.

Under the republic, young men who intended to devote themselves to the study of jurisprudence, after finishing the usual studies of grammar, Grecian literature, and philosophy, (Cic. in Brut. 80. Off. i. 1. Suet. de clar. Rhet. 1 & 2. studia LIBERALIA V. HUMANITATIS, Plutarch. in Lucull. princ.) usually attached themselves to some eminent lawyer, as Cicero did to Q. Mucius Scævola, Cic. de Amic. l. whom they always attended, that they might derive knowledge from his experience and conversation. For these illustrious men did not open schools for teaching law, as the lawyers afterwards did under the emperors, whose scholars were called AUDITORES, Senec. Contr. 25.

The writings of several of these lawyers came to be as much respected in courts of justice (usu fori) as the laws themselves, l. 2. § 38. D. de orig. juris. But this happened only by tacit consent. Those laws only had a binding force, which were solemnly enacted by the whole Roman people assembled in the Comitia. Of these, the following are the chief.

LAW OF THE ROMANS made at different times.

· LEX ACILIA, 1. About transporting colonies, (de coloniis deducendis.) by the tribune C. Acilius, A. U. 556, Liv. xxxiii. 29.

2. About extortion, (de repetundis.) by Manius Acilius Glabrio, a tribune, (some say consul,) A. U. 683, That, in trials for this crime, sentence should be passed after the cause was once pleaded, (semel dictâ causâ.) and that there should not be a second hearing, (ne reus comperendinaretur.) Cic. præm. in Verr. 17. i. 9. Ascon. in Cic.

Lex ÆBUTIA, by the tribune Æbutius, prohibiting the proposer of a law concerning any charge or power, from conferring that charge or power on himself, his colleagues, or relations, Cic. in Rull. ii. 8.

Another concerning the Judices, called Centumviri, which is said to have diminished the obligation of the Twelve Tables, and to have abolished various customs which they ordained, Gell. xvi. 10. ix.

18. especially that curious custom borrowed from the Athenians, (Aristoph. in nub. v. 498. Plato, de legg. xii.) of searching for stolen goods without any clothes on but a girdle round the waist, and a mask on the face, (FURTORUM QUÆSTIO CUM LANCE ET LICIO;) Gell. ibid. Festus. in LANCE. When the goods were found, it was called FURTUM CONCEPTUM, Inst. ii. 10. 3

Lex ÆLIA et FUSIA de comitiis,—two separate laws, although sometimes joined by Cicero.—The first by Q. Ælius Pætus, consul, A. U. 586. ordained, that when the comitiis were held for passing laws, the magistrates, or the augurs by their authority, might take observations from the heavens, (de celo servarent;) and, if the omens were unfavourable, the magistrate might prevent or dissolve the assembly, (comitiis obnunciaret;) and that magistrates of equal authority with the person who held the assembly, or a tribune, might give their negative to any law, (legi intercederent;) Cic. pro Sext. 15. 53. post. red. in Sen. 5. de prov. Cons. 19. in Vatin. 9. Pis. 4. Att. ii. 9.—The second, Lex FUSIA, or FUFIA, by P. Furius, consul, A. U. 617. or by one Fufius or Fufius, a tribune, that it should not be lawful to enact laws on all the dies fasti, Cic. ibid. See p. 82.

Lex ÆLIA SENTIA, by the consuls Ælius and Sentius, A. U. 756, about the manumission of slaves, and the condition of those who were made free, Suet. Aug. 45. See p. 43.

Lex ÆMILIA, about the censors. See p. 112.

Lex ÆMILIA, Sumptuaria vel Cibaria, by M. Æmilius Lepidus, consul, A. U. 675, limiting the kind and quantity of meats to be used at an entertainment, Macrob. Sat. ii. 13. Gell. ii. 24. Pliny ascribes this law to Marcus Scaurus, viii. 57. So Aurel. Vict. de vir. illustr. 72.

Leges AGRARIÆ; Cassia, Licinia, Flaminia, Semproniana, Thoria, Cornelia, Servilia, Flavia, Julia, Mamilia.

Lex ANTIA Sumptuaria, by Antius Reatio, the year uncertain; limiting the expense of entertainments, and ordering that no actual magistrate, or magistrate elect, should go any where to sup, but with particular persons, Gell. ii. 24. Antius, seeing his wholesome regulations insufficient to check the luxury of the times, never after supped abroad, that he might not witness the violation of his own law, Macrob. ii. 13.

Leges ANTONIÆ, proposed by Antony after the death of Cæsar, about abolishing the office of dictator, confirming the acts of Cæsar, (ACTA CÆSARIS;) planting colonies, giving away kingdoms and provinces, granting leagues and immunities, admitting officers in the army among jurymen; allowing those condemned for violence and crimes against the state to appeal to the people, which Cicero calls the destruction of all laws, &c. Cic. Phil. i. 1. 9. iii. 3. 36. 37. 38. v. 34. xiii. 3. 5. Att. xiv. 12. Dio. Cass. xlv. 28. Appian. de Bell.

Cic. iii. transferring the right of choosing priests from the people to the different colleges, Dio. xlv. fin. &c.

Leges APPULEIÆ, proposed by L. Appuleius Saturninus, A. U. 653, tribune of the commons; about dividing the public lands among the veteran soldiers, Sürel. Vict. de vir. illustr. 73. settling colonies, Cic. pro Balb. 21. punishing crimes against the state (de majestate), Cic. de Orat. ii. 25. 49. furnishing corn to the poor at $\frac{1}{2}$ of an ass a bushel, (semisse et triente, i. e. dextante vel deunce: See Leges Sempronias.) Cic. ad Herenn. i. 12. de Legg. ii. 6.

Saturninus also got a law passed that all the senators should be obliged, within five days, to approve upon oath of what the people enacted, under the penalty of a heavy fine; and the virtuous Metellus Numidicus was banished, because he alone would not comply, (quod in legem vi latam jurare nollet.) Cic. pro Sext. 16. Dom. 31. Cluent. 35. Victor de Vir. illust. 62. But Saturninus himself was soon after slain for passing these laws by the command of Marius, who had at first encouraged him to propose them, Cic. pro Rabir. perd. 7. 11. and who by his artifice had effected the banishment of Metellus, Plutarch. in Mar. Appian. de Bell. Civ. i. 367.

Lex AQUILLIA, A. U. 672. about hurt wrongfully done, (de damno injuriã dato.) Cic. in Bruto, 34.—Another, A. U. 687, (de dolo malo.) Cic. de Nat. Deor. iii. 30. Off. iii. 14.

Lex ATERIA TARPEIA, A. U. 300, that all magistrates might fine those who violated their authority, but not above two oxen and thirty sheep, Dionys. x. 50. After the Romans began to use coined money, an ox was estimated at 100 asses, and a sheep at ten, Festus in PECULATUS.

Lex ATIA, by a tribune, A. U. 690. repealing the Cornelian law, and restoring the Domitian, in the election of priests, Dio. xxxvii. 37.

Lex ATILIA, de deditiõis, A. U. 543, Liv. xxvi. 33.—Another, de tutoribus, A. U. 443, That guardians should be appointed for orphans and women, by the prætor and a majority of the tribunes, Ulpian. in Fragm. Liv. xxxix. 9. See p. 60.

—Another, A. U. 443, That sixteen military tribunes should be created by the people for four legions; that is, two-thirds of the whole. For in four legions, the number which then used annually to be raised, there were twenty-four tribunes, six in each; of whom by this law four were appointed by the people, and two by the consuls. Those chosen by the people were called COMITIATI; by the consuls, RUTILI or RUFULI. At first they seem to have been all nominated by the kings, consuls, or dictators, till the year 393, when the people assumed the right of annually appointing six, Liv. vii. 5. ix. 30. Ascon. in Cic. Afterwards the manner of choosing them varied. Sometimes the people created the whole, sometimes only a part. But as they, through interest, often appointed improper persons, the choice was sometimes left, especially in dangerous junctures, entirely to the consuls, Liv. xlii. 31. xliii. 12. xlv. 21.

Lex ATINIA, A. U. 623, about making the tribunes of the commons senators, Gell. xiv. 8.—Another, That the property of things stolen could not be acquired by possession, (usucaptione ?) The words of the law were, QUOD SURREPTUM ERIT, EJUS ÆTERNA, AUCTORITAS ESTO. (See p. 54.) Gell. xvii. 7. Cic. in Verr. i. 42.

Lex AUFIDIA de ambitu, A. U. 692. It contained this singular clause, That if a candidate promised money to a tribe, and did not pay it, he should be excused; but if he did pay it, he should be obliged to pay every tribe a yearly fine of 3000 sestertii as long as he lived. Cic. Att. i. 16.

Lex AURELIA judiciaria, by L. Aurelius Cotta, prætor, A. U. 683, That judices or jurymen should be chosen from the senators, Equites and Tribunû JÆrarii, Cic. Verr. ii. 72. Phil. i. 8. Rull. i. 2.—The last were officers chosen from the plebeians, who kept and gave out the money for defraying the expenses of the army, Ascon. in Cic.—Cic. pro Planc. 8. Verr. 69. Att. i. 16. Festus.

Another, by C. Aurelius Cotta, consul, A. U. 678, That those who had been tribunes might enjoy other offices, which had been prohibited by Sulla, Ascon. in Cic.

Lex BÆBIA, A. U. 574, about the number of prætors. (See p. 111.)—Another against bribery, A. U. 571. Liv. xl. 19.

Lex CÆCILIA DIDIA, or et Didia, or Didia et Cæcilia, A. U. 655, That laws should be promulgated for three market-days, and that several distinct things should not be included in the same law, which was called ferre per saturam, Cic. Att. ii. 9. Phil. v. 3. pro Dom. 20.

—Another against bribery, Cic. pro Sull. 22. 23.

—Another, A. U. 693, about exempting the city and Italy from taxes, Dio. xxxvii. 51.

Lex CALPURNIA, A. U. 604, against extortion, by which law, the first quæstio perpetua was established, Cic. Verr. iv. 25. Off. ii. 21.

—Another, called also Acilia, concerning bribery, A. U. 686. Cic. pro Mur. 23. Brut. 27. Sall. Cat. 18.

Lex CANULEIA, by a tribune, A. U. 309, about the intermarriage of the patricians with the plebeians, Liv. iv. 6.

Lex CASSIA, That those, whom the people condemned, should be excluded from the senate, Ascon. in Cic. pro Corn. Another, about supplying the senate, Tacit. xi. 35. Another, That the people should vote by ballot, &c. See p. 83.

Lex CASSIA TERENCEIA Frumentaria, by the consuls C. Cassius and M. Terentius, A. U. 680, ordaining, as it is thought, that five bushels of corn should be given monthly to each of the poorer citizens, which was no more than the allowance of slaves, Sallust. hist. fragm. (p. 974. ed Cortii.) and that money should be annually advanced from the treasury for purchasing 800,000 bushels of wheat, (TRITICI IMPERATI), at four sestertii a bushel; and a second tenth part (alteras decumas), (see p. 67.) at three sestertii a bushel (pro DECUMANO), Cic. Verr. iii. 76. v. 21.

This corn was given to the poor by the Sempronian law, at a se- mis and triens a bushel; and by the Clodian law, gratis. In the time of Augustus, we read that 200,000 received corn from the public, Dio. l. v. 10. Suet. Aug. 40. 42. Julius Cæsar reduced them from 320,000 to 150,000, Suet. Jul. 41.

Lex CENTURIATA, the name of every ordinance made by the Comitia Centuriata, Cic. in Rull. ii. 11.

Lex CINZIA de donis et muneribus, hence called MUNERALIS, Plaut. apud Festum, by Cincius, a tribune, A. U. 549, That no one should take money or a present for pleading a cause, Cic. de Senect. 4. de Orat. ii. 7. Att. i. 20. Tacit. Ann. xi. 5. Liv. xxxiv. 4.

Lex CLAUDIA de navibus, A. U. 535, That a senator should not have a vessel above a certain burden. (See p. 13.) A clause is supposed to have been added to this law, prohibiting the quæstor's clerks from trading, Suet. Dom. 9.

Another, by Claudius the consul, at the request of the allies, A. U. 573, That the allies, and those of the Latin name, should leave Rome and return to their own cities. According to this law, the consul made an edict, and a decree of the senate was added, That for the future no person should be manumitted, unless both master and slave swore that he was not manumitted for the sake of changing his city. For the allies used to give their children as slaves to any Roman citizen on condition of their being manumitted, (ut libertini cives essent), Liv. xli. 8 & 9. Cic. pro Balb. 23.

—by the Emperor Claudius, That usurers should not lend money to minors, to be paid after the death of their parents, Tacit. Ann. xi. 13. supposed to be the same with what was called SENATUS-CONSULTUM MACEDONIANUM, Ulpian. enforced by Vespasian, Suet. 11. To this crime Horace alludes, Sat. i. 2. v. 14.

—by the consul Marcellus, 703, That no one should be allowed to stand candidate for an office while absent; thus taking from Cæsar the privilege granted him by the Pompeian law; (Cæsari privilegium eripiens, vel beneficium populi adimens;) also, That the freedom of the city should be taken from the colony of the Novumcomum, which Cæsar had planted, Suet. Jul. 28. Cic. Fam. xiii. 35.

Leges CLODIÆ, by the tribune P. Clodius, A. U. 695.

—1. That the corn which had been distributed to the people for six asses and a triens the bushel, should be given gratis, Cic. pro Sext. 25. Ascon. in Cic. See p. 167.

—2. That the censors should not expel from the senate, or inflict any mark of infamy, on any man, who was not first openly accused and condemned by their joint sentence, Cic. ibid.—in Pis. 5. Dio. xxxviii. 13.

—3. That no one should take the auspices, or observe the heavens, when the people were assembled on public business: and, in short, that the Ælian and Fusian law should be abrogated. (See p. 82.) Cic. Vat. 6. 7. 9. Sext. 15. 26. Prov. Cons. 19. Ascon. in Pis. 4.

—4. That the old companies or fraternities (collegia) of arti-ficers in the city, which the senate had abolished, should be restored, and new ones instituted, Cic. in Pis. 4. Suet. Jul. 42.

These laws were intended to pave the way for the following :

—5. That whoever had taken the life of a citizen uncondemned and without a trial, should be prohibited from fire and water ; by which law Cicero, although not named, was plainly pointed at ; Vell. ii. 45. and soon after, by means of a hired mob, his banishment was expressly decreed by a second law, Cic. pro Dom. 18. 19. 20. post red. in Sen. 2. 5. &c.

Cicero had engaged Ninius, a tribune, to oppose these laws, but was prevented from using his assistance by the artful conduct of Clodius, Dio. xxxviii. 15. and Pompey, on whose protection he had reason to rely, betrayed him, ibid. 17. Plutarch.—Cic. Att. x. 4. Cæsar, who was then without the walls with his army, ready to set out for his province of Gaul, offered to make him one of his lieutenants ; but this, by the advice of Pompey, he declined, Dio. xxxviii. 15. Crassus, although secretly inimical to Cicero, ibid. yet at the persuasion of his son, who was a great admirer of Cicero, Cic. Q. fr. ii. 9. did not openly oppose him, Cic. Sext. 17. 18. But Clodius declared that what he did was by the authority of the Triumviri, Cic. Sext. 16. 18. and the interposition of the senate and Equites, who, to the number of 20,000, changed their habit on Cicero's account, Cic. post red. ad Quirit. 3. was rendered abortive by means of the consuls, Piso, the father-in-law of Cæsar, and Gabinius, the creature of Pompey, Cic. Sext. 11. 12. 13. &c. Cicero, therefore, after several mean compliances, putting on the habit of a criminal, Dio. xxxviii. 14. and even throwing himself at the feet of Pompey, Cic. Att. x. 4. was at last obliged to leave the city about the end of March, A. U. 695. He was prohibited from coming within 468 miles of Rome, under pain of death to himself, and to any person who entertained him, Cic. Att. iii. 4. Dio. xxxviii. 17. He therefore retired to Thessalonica in Macedonia, Cic. Planc. 41. Red. in Senat. 14. His houses at Rome and in the country were burnt, and his furniture plundered, ibid. 7. pro Dom. 24. Cicero did not support his exile with fortitude ; but showed marks of dejection, and uttered expressions of grief, unworthy of his former character, Dio. xxxviii. 18. Cic. Att. iii. 7. 8. 9. 10. 11. 13. 15. 19. &c. He was restored with great honour, through the influence of Pompey, by a very unanimous decree of the senate, and by a law passed at the Comitia Centuriata, 4th August, the next year, Cic. Att. iv. 1. post red. ad Quir. 7. in Senat. 11. Mil. 20. Pis. 15. Dio. xxxix. 8. Had Cicero acted with as much dignity and independence, after he reached the summit of his ambition, as he did with industry and integrity in aspiring to it, he needed not to have owed his safety to any one.

—6. That the kingdom of Cyprus should be taken from Ptolemy, and reduced into the form of a province, Cic. pro Dom. 8. Vell. ii. 45. the reason of which law was to punish that king for having refused Clodius money to pay his ransom when taken by the pirates, and to remove Cato out of the way, by appointing him to execute this order of the people, that he might not thwart the unjust proceedings of the tribune, nor the views of the triumviri, by whom Clodius was supported, Cic. pro Sext. 18. 28. Dom. 25. Dio. xxxviii. 30. xxxix. 22.

—7. To reward the consuls Piso and Gabinius, who had favoured Clodius in his measures, the province of Macedonia and Greece was by the people given to the former, and Syria to the latter, Cic. ibid. 10. 24. in Pis. 16.

—8. Another law was made by Clodius to give relief to the private members of corporate towns (municipiorum), against the public injuries of their communities, Cic. pro Dom. 30.

—9. Another, to deprive the priest of Cybèle, at Pesinus in Phrygia, of his office, Cic. Sext. 26. de resp. Harusp. 13.

Lex COELIA tabellaria perduellionis, by Cœlius, a tribune. See p. 85.

Leges CORNELLÆ, enacted by L. Cornelius Sylla, the dictator, A. U. 672.

—1. De proscriptione et proscriptis, against his enemies, and in favour of his friends. Sylla first introduced the method of proscription. Upon his return into the city, after having conquered the party of Marius, he wrote down the names of those whom he doomed to die, and ordered them to be fixed up on tables in the public places of the city, with the promise of a certain reward (duo talenta) for the head of each person so proscribed. New lists (tabula proscriptionis) were repeatedly exposed, as new victims occurred to his memory, or were suggested to him. The first list contained the names of 40 senators, and 1600 equites, Appian. B. Civ. i. 409. Incredible numbers were massacred, not only at Rome, but through all Italy, Dio. Fragm. 137. Whoever harboured or assisted a proscribed person was put to death, Cic. in Verr. i. 47. The goods of the proscribed person were confiscated, Cic. pro Rosc. Amer. 43. 44. in Rull. iii. 3. and their children declared incapable of honours, Vell. Pat. ii. 28. Cic. in Pis. 2. The lands and fortunes of the slain were divided among the friends of Sylla, Sallust. Cat. 51. who were allowed to enjoy preferments before the legal time, Cic. Acad. ii. 1.

—De MUNICIPIIS, That the free towns which had sided with Marius should be deprived of their lands, and the right of citizens; the last of which Cicero says could not be done, (Quia jure Romano civitas nemini invito adimi poterat), pro Dom. 30. Cæcin. 33.

Sylla being created dictator, with extraordinary powers, by L. Valerius Flaccus, the Interrex, in an assembly of the people by centuries, Appian. B. Civ. i. 411. and having there got ratified whatever he had done, or should do, by a special law, (sive VALERIA, sive CORNELIA, Cic. pro Rosc. Am. 43.) Cic. in Rull. iii. 2. next proceeded to regulate the state, and for that purpose made many good laws.

2. Concerning the republic, the magistrates, (see p. 97.) the provinces, (see p. 66.) the power of the tribunes, (see p. 123.) That the judices should be chosen only from the senators: That the priests should be elected by their respective colleges, Ascon. ad Cic. Divin. in Verr. 3.

3. Concerning various crimes:—de MAJESTATE, Cic. in Pis. 21. pro Cluent. 35. ad Fam. iii. 11. (see p. 141.)—de REPETUNDIS, Cic. pro Rabir. 3. (see p. 111.)—de SICARIIS et VENEVICIS, those who killed a person with weapons, or poison; also, who took away the life of another by false accusation, &c.—One, accused by this law, was asked whether he chose sentence to be passed on him by voice or by ballot; (palam an clam.) Cic. pro Cluent. 20.—de INCENDIARIIS, who fired houses;—de PARRICIDIS, who killed a parent or relation; de FALSO, against those who forged testaments or any other deed; who debased or counterfeited the public coin, (qui in aurum vitii quid addiderint vel adulterinos nummos fecerint.) &c. Hence this law is called by Cicero, CORNELIA TESTAMENTARIA, NUMMARIA, in Verr. i. 42.

The punishment annexed to these laws was generally aquæ et ignis interdictio, implying banishment.

Sylla also made a sumptuary law, limiting the expense of entertainments, Gell. ii. 24. Macrob. Sat. ii. 13.

There were other leges CORNELIÆ, proposed by Cornelius, the tribune, A. U. 686: That the prætors in judging should not vary from their edicts. (See p. 108.) That the senate should not decree about absolving any one from the obligation of the laws, without a quorum of at least two hundred, Ascon. in Cic. pro Cornel.

Lex CURIA, by Curius Dentatus, when tribune, A. U. 454. That the senate should authorize the comitia for electing plebeian magistrates, Aur. Vict. 37. Cic. de Orat. Oral. 14.

Leges CURIATÆ, made by the people assembled by curiæ. See p. 73.

Lex DECIA, A. U. 443, That Duumviri navales should be created for equipping and refitting a fleet, Liv. ix. 30.

Lex DIDIA, sumptuaria, A. U. 610, limiting the expense of entertainments, and the number of guests: That the sumptuary laws should be extended to all the Italians; and not only the master of the feast, but also the guests, should incur a penalty for their offence, Macrob. Sat. ii. 13.

Lex DOMITIA de sacerdotiis, the author, Cn. Domitius Ahenobarbus, a tribune, A. U. 650, That priests, (i. e. the pontifices, augures, and decemviri sacris faciendis.) should not be chosen by the colleges, as formerly, but by the people, (see p. 90.) Suet. Ner. 2. Cic. Rull. ii. 7. The Pontifex Maximus and Curio Maximus were, in the first ages of the republic, always chosen by the people, Liv. xxv. 5. xxvii. 8.

Lex DUILIA, by Duilius, a tribune, A. U. 304, That whoever left the people without tribunes, or created a magistrate from whom there was no appeal, should be scourged and beheaded, Liv. iii. 35.

Lex FABIA de plagio vel plagiariis, against kidnapping, or stealing away and retaining freedmen or slaves, Cic. pro Rabir, perd. 3. ad Quinct. Fr. i. 2. The punishment at first was a fine; but afterwards, to be sent to the mines; and for buying or selling a freeborn citizen, death.

Literary thieves, or those who stole the works of others, were also called PLAGIARI, Martial. i. 53.

—Another, limiting the number of Spectatores that attended candidates when canvassing for any office. It was proposed, but did not pass, Cic. pro Muran. 34.

The SPECTATORES, who always attended candidates, were distinguished from the SALUTATORES, who only waited on them at their house in the morning, and then went away; and from the DUCTORES, who also went down with them to the Forum and Campus Martius; hence called by Martial, ANTAMBULONIS, ii. 81. Cic. de pet. cons. See p. 80.

Lex FLAVIA agraria, the author L. Flavius, a tribune, A. U. 695, for the distribution of lands among Pompey's soldiers; which excited so great commotions, that the tribune, supported by Pompey, had the hardiness to commit the consul Metellus to prison for opposing it, Dio. Cass. xxxvii. 50. Civ. Att. i. 18. 19. ii. 1.

Leges FRUMENTARIÆ, laws for the distribution of corn among the people, first at a low price, and then gratis; the chief of which were the Sempronian, Apuleian, Cassian, Clodian, and Ocavian laws.

Quinctilian. i. 4. 13.*) de testamentis, That no one should leave by way of legacy more than 1000 asses, and that he who took more should pay fourfold, Cic. in Verr. i. 42. pro Balb. 8. Theophil. ad Instit. ii. 22. By the law of the Twelve Tables, one might leave what legacies he pleased.

Lex FURIA ATILIA, A. U. 617, about giving up Mancinus to the Numantines, with whom he had made peace without the order of the people or senate, Cic. Off. iii. 30.

Lex FUSIA de comitiis, A. U. 691, by a prætor, That in the Comitia Tributa, the different kinds of people in each tribe should vote separately, that thus the sentiments of every rank might be known, Dio. xxxviii. 8.

Lex FUSIA vel Furia CANINIA, A. U. 751, limiting the number of slaves to be manumitted, in proportion to the whole number which any one possessed : from two to ten, the half, from ten to thirty, the third, from thirty to a hundred, the fourth part ; but not above a hundred, whatever was the number. *Vopisc. That the people of the provinces should not be allowed to borrow money at Rome from one person to pay another, (versuram facere.) Cic. Att. v. 21. vi. 2.

There is another Gabinian law, mentioned by Porcius Latro, in his declamation against Catiline, which made it capital to hold clandestine assemblies in the city, c. 19. But this author is thought to be supposititious. See Cortius on Sallust.

It is certain, however, that the Romans were always careful to prevent the meetings of any large bodies of men, (hetæria.) which they thought might be converted to the purposes of sedition, Plin. Ep. x. 43. 94. On this account, Pliny informs Trajan, that according to his directions he had prohibited the assemblies of the Christians, Id. 97. 76.

It had been prescribed by Hiero, tyrant of Syracuse, to his tenants, (is qui agros regis colerent), and was retained by the Prætor Rupilius, with the advice of his council, among the laws which he gave to the Sicilians when that country was reduced to the form of a province, Cic. Verr. iii. 8. 10. It resembled the regulations of the censors, (LEGES CENSORIÆ), in their leases and bargains, (in locationibus et pactionibus), and settled the manner of collecting and ascertaining the quantity of the tithes, Cic. Verr. v. 28.

Lex HIRTIA, A. U. 704, That the adherents of Pompey (Pompeiani) should be excluded from preferments, Cic. Phil. xiii. 16.

Lex HORTENSIA, That the nundinæ or market-days, which used to be held as feriæ or holidays, should be fasti or court days: That the country people, who came to town for market, might then get their lawsuits determined, (lites componerent), Macrob. Sat. i. 16.

Lex HORTENSIA, de plebiscitis. See p. 25. 90. 156.

Lex ICILIA, de tribunis, A. U. 261, That no one should contradict or interrupt a tribune, (interfari tribuno), while speaking to the people, Dionys. vii. 17.

—Another, A. U. 267, de Aventino publicando, That the Aventine hill should be common for the people to build upon, Id. x. 32. Liv. iii. 13. It was a condition in the creation of the decemviri, that this law, and those relating to the tribunes, (LEGES SACRATÆ), should not be abrogated, Liv. iii. 32.

Lex JULIA, de civitate sociis et Latinis dandâ; the author L. Julius Cæsar, A. U. 663, That the freedom of the city should be given to the Latins and all the Italian allies who chose to accept of it, (qui ei legi fundi fieri vellent), Cic. pro Balb. 8. Gell. iv. 4. See p. 64.

Leges JULIÆ, laws made by Julius Cæsar and Augustus:

—1. By C. Julius Cæsar, in his first consulship, A. U. 694, and afterwards when dictator:

Lex JULIA AGRARIA, for distributing the lands of Campania and Stella to 20,000 poor citizens, who had each three children or more,

Cic. pro Planc. 5. Att. ii. 16. 18. 19. Vell. ii. 44. Dio. xxxviii. 1 & 7.

When Bibulus, Cæsar's colleague in the consulate, gave his negative to this law, he was driven from the Forum by force. And next day, having complained in the senate, but not being supported, he was so discouraged, that during his continuance in office for eight months, he shut himself up at home, without doing any thing, but interposing by his edicts, (ut, quoad potestate abiret, domo abditus nihil aliud quam per edicta obnuntiaret.) Suet. Jul. 20. Dio. xxxviii. 6. by which means, while he wished to raise odium against his colleague, he increased his power, Vell. ii. 44. Metellus Celer, Cato, and his great admirer (æmulator) M. Favonius, at first refused to swear to this law; but constrained by the severity of the punishment annexed to it, which Appian says was capital, de Bell. Civil. ii. 434. they at last complied, Dio. xxxviii. 7. Plutarch. in Cato. Minor. This custom of obliging all citizens, particularly senators, within a limited time, to signify their approbation of a law by swearing to support it, at first introduced in the time of Marius, (See Leges Apuleia.) was now observed with respect to every ordinance of the people, however violent and absurd, Dio. xxxviii. 7. Cic. Sext. 28.

———de PUBLICANIS tertiâ parte pecuniæ debitæ relevandis, about remitting to the farmers-general a third part of what they had stipulated to pay, Suet. ibid. Cic. pro Planc. 14. Dio. ibid. Appian. B. Civ. ii. 435. See p. 28. When Cato opposed this law with his usual firmness, Cæsar ordered him to be hurried away to prison; but fearing lest such violence should raise odium against him, he desired one of the tribunes to interpose and free him, Plutarch. in Cæs.

Dio says that this happened when Cato opposed the former law in the senate, xxxviii. 3. So Suet. Cæs. 20. Gell. iv. 10. When many of the senators followed Cato, one of them, named M. Petreius, being reproved by Cæsar for going away before the house was dismissed, replied, "I had rather be with Cato in prison, than here with Cæsar," ibid. See p. 20.

———For the ratification of all Pompey's acts in Asia. This law was chiefly opposed by Lucullus; but Cæsar so frightened him with threatening to bring him to an account for his conduct in Asia that he promised compliance on his knees, Suet. ibid.

———de PROVINCIIS ORDINANDIS; an improvement on the Cornelian law about the provinces; ordaining that those who had been prætors, should not command a province above one year, and those who had been consuls, not above two years, Cic. Phil. 1. 8. Dio. xliii. 25. Also ordering that Achaia, Thessaly, Athens, and all Greece, should be free and use their own laws, Cic. in Pis. 16.

———de SACERDOTIS, restoring the Domitian law, and permitting persons to be elected priests in their absence, Cic. ad Brut. 5.

———JUDICIARIA, ordering the judices to be chosen only from the senators, and equites, and not from the tribuni ærarii, Suet. Jul. 41. Cic. Phil. i. 9.

—de REPETUNDIS, very severe (acerrima) against extortion. It is said to have contained above 100 heads, Cic. Fam. viii. 7. in Pis. 16. 21. 37. Sext. 64. pro Rabir. Posth. 4. Vatin. 12. ad Attic. v. 10. & 16. Suet. Jul. 43.

—de LEGATIONIBUS LIBERIS, limiting their duration to five years, (see p. 25.) Cic. Att. xv. 11. They were called liberæ quodd, cùm velis, introire, exire liceat, ibid.

—de MODO PECUNIÆ POSSIDENDÆ, that no one should keep by him in specie above a certain sum, (LX sestertia.) Dio. xli. 38. Tacit. Annal. vi. 16.

—About the population of Italy, That no Roman citizen should remain abroad above three years, unless in the army, or in public business; that at least a third of those employed in pasturage should be free-born citizens: Also about increasing the punishment of crimes, dissolving all corporations or societies, except the ancient ones, granting the freedom of the city to physicians, and professors of the liberal arts, &c. Suet. 42.

—de RESIDUIS, about bringing those to account who retained any part of the public money in their hands, Marnan. l. 4. § 3. ad leg. Jul.

—de LIBERIS PROSCRIPTORUM, That the children of those proscribed by Sylla should be admitted to enjoy preferments, Suet. Jul. 41. which Cicero, when consul, had opposed, Cic. in Pis. 2.

—SUMPTUARIA, Suet. Jul. 42. Cic. ad Att. xiii. 7. Fam. vii. 26. ix. 15. It allowed 200 HS. on the dies profesti; 300 on the kalends, nones, ides, and some other festivals; 1000 at marriage-feasts, (nuptiis et repotiis.) and such extraordinary entertainments. Gellius ascribes this law to Augustus, ii. 24. but it seems to have been enacted by both, Dio. liv. 2. By an edict of Augustus or Tiberius, the allowance for an entertainment was raised in proportion to its solemnity, from 300 to 2000 Hs. Gell. ibid.

—de veneficiis, about poisoning, Suet. Ner. 33.

2. The Leges JULIÆ made by Augustus were chiefly:

—Concerning marriage, (de maritandis ordinibus, Suet. Aug. 34. hence called by Horace LEX MARITA, Carm. Secul. v. 68.) Liv. Epit. 59. Suet. 89.

—de ADULTERIIS, et de pudicitia, Plin. Ep. vi. 31.—de ambitu, Suet. 34. against forestalling the market, (nequis contra annonam fecerit, societatemque coierit, quod annona carior fiat, Ulpian.) —de TUTORIBUS, That guardians should be appointed for orphans in the provinces, as at Rome, by the Atilian law, Justin. Inst. de Atil. tut.

Lex JULIA THEATRALIS, That those equites, who themselves, their fathers, or grandfathers, had the fortune of an eques, should sit in the fourteen rows assigned by the Roscian law to that order, Suet. Aug. 40. Plin. xxxiii. 2. s. 8.

There are several other laws called Leges Juliae, which occur only in the Corpus Juris.

Julius Cæsar proposed revising all the laws, and reducing them to a certain form. But this, with many other noble designs of that wonderful man, was prevented by his death, Suet. Jul. 44.

Lex JUNIA, by M. Junius Pennus, a tribune, A. U. 627, about expelling foreigners from the city. See p. 72. Against extortion, ordaining, that besides the litis æstimatio, or paying the estimate of the damages, the person convicted of this crime should suffer banishment, Paterc. ii. 8. Cic. pro Balb. 11.

—Another, by M. Junius Silanus, the consul, A. U. 644. about diminishing the number of campaigns which soldiers should serve, Ascon. in Cic. pro Cornel.

Lex JUNIA NORBANA, A. U. 771. concerning the manumission of slaves. See p. 44.

Lex LABIENA, A. U. 691, abrogating the law of Sylla, and restoring the Domitian law in the election of priests; which paved the way for Cæsar's being created Pontifex Maximus, Dio. xxxvii. 37. By this law, two of the colleges named the candidates, and the people chose which of them they pleased, Cic. Phil. ii. 2.

Lex AMPLA LABIENA, by two tribunes, A. U. 663. That at the Circensian games, Pompey should wear a golden crown and his triumphal robes; and in the theatre, the prætecta and a golden crown; which mark of distinction he used only once. Paterc. ii. 40.

Lex LÆTORIA, A. U. 292. That the plebeian magistrates should be created at the Comitia Tributa, Liv. ii. 56. 57.

—Another, A. U. 490. against the defrauding of minors, (contra adolescentium circumscriptionem.) Cic. Off. iii. 15. By this law the years of minority were limited to twenty-five, and no one below that age could make a legal bargain, (stipulari.) Plaut. Rud. v. 3. 25. whence it is called Lex QUINA VICENNARIA, Plaut. Pseud. i. 3. 68.

This Licinius Crassus, according to Cicero, first introduced the custom of turning his face to the Forum, when he spoke to the people, and not to the senate, as formerly, (primum instituit in forum versus agere cum populo.) ibid. But Plutarch says this was first done by Caius Gracchus, Plut. in Gracch.

—by C. Licinius Stolo, A. U. 377. That no one should pos-ness above 500 acres of land, Liv. vi. 35. nor keep more than 100 head of great, or five hundred head of small, cattle, Appian. de Bell. Civ. i. But Licinius himself was soon after punished for violating his own law, Liv. vii. 16.

In a trial for this crime, and for it only, the accuser was allowed to name (edere) the jurymen (judices) from the people in general, (ex omni populo), ibid. 17.

Lex LICINIA sumptuaria, by the consuls P. Licinius Crassus the Rich, and Cn. Lentulus, A. U. 656. much the same with the Fannian law: That on ordinary days there should not be more served up at table than three pounds of fresh and one pound of salt meat, (salsamentorum;) but as much of the fruits of the ground as every one pleased, Macrob. ii. 13. Gell. ii. 24.

U. 377. about debt, That what had been paid for the interest (quod usuris pernumeratum esset) should be deducted from the capital, and the remainder paid in three years by equal portions, Liv. vi. 35. That one of the consuls should be created from the plebeians, ibid. vi. 35. See p. 104.

Lex LICINIA JUNIA, or Junia et Licinia, by the two consuls, A. U. 691. enforcing the lex Cicilia Didia, Cic. in Vat. 14. whence both laws are often joined, Cic. Phil. v. 3. pro Sext. 64. Att. ii. 9. iv. 16.

Lex LICINIA MUSIA, A. U. 658. That no one should pass for a citizen who was not so, Cic. Off. iii. 11. pro Balb. 21. 24. which was one principal cause of the Italic or Marsic wars, Ascon. in Cic. pro Cornel.

Leges LIVIÆ, proposed by M. Livius DRUSUS, a tribune, A. U. 662, about transplanting colonies to different places in Italy and Sicily, and granting corn to poor citizens at a low price; and also that the judices should be chosen indifferently from the senators and equites, and that the allied states of Italy should be admitted to the freedom of the city.

Drusus was a man of great eloquence, and of the most upright intentions; but endeavouring to reconcile those, whose interests were diametrically opposite, he was crushed in the attempt; being murdered by an unknown assassin at his own house, upon his return from the Forum, amidst a number of clients and friends. No inquiry was made about his death. The states of Italy considered this event as a signal of revolt, and endeavoured to extort by force what they could not obtain voluntarily. Above 300,000 men fell in the contest in the space of two years. At last the Romans, although upon the whole they had the advantage, were obliged to grant the freedom of the city, first to their allies, and afterwards to all the states of Italy, Appian. de Bell. Civ. i. 373. &c. Vell. Pat. ii. 15. Liv. Epit. 71. Cic. Brut. 28. 49. 62. pro Rabir. 7. Planc. 14. Dom. 19.

This Drusus is also said to have got a law passed for mixing an eighth part of brass with silver, Plin. xxxiii. 33.

But the laws of Drusus (leges Livia.) as Cicero says, were soon abolished by a short decree of the senate, (uno versiculo senatus puncto temporis sublata sunt, Cic. de legg. ii. 6. Decrevit enim senatus Philippo cos, referente, CONTRA AUSPICIA LATAS VIDERI.)

Drusus was grandfather to Livia, the wife of Augustus, and mother of Tiberius.

Lex LUTATIA, de vi, by Q. Lutatius Catulus, A. U. 675. That a person might be tried for violence on any day, Cic. pro Cael. i. 29. festivals not excepted, on which no trials used to be held, Cic. Act. in Verr. 10.

Lex MAMILIA, de limitibus vel de regundis finibus agrorum, for regulating the bounds of farms; whence the author of it, C. Mamilius, a tribune, A. U. 642. got the surname of LIMITANUS. It ordained, That there should be an uncultivated space of five feet broad left between farms; and if any dispute happened about this matter, that arbiters should be appointed by the prætor to determine it. The law of the Twelve Tables required three, Cic. de legg. i. 21.

—Another, by the same person, for punishing those who had received bribes from Jugurtha, Sall. Jug. 40.

Lex MANILIA, for conferring on Pompey the command of the war against Mithridates, proposed by the tribune C. Manilius, A. U. 687. and supported by Cicero when prætor, de leg. Manil. and by Cæsar, from different views; but neither of them was actuated by laudable motives, Dio. xxxvi. 26.

—Another by the same, That freedmen might vote in all the tribes, Cic. pro Mur. 23. whereas formerly they voted in some one of the four city tribes only. (See p. 88.) But this law did not pass, Ascon. in Cic. pro Cornel.

Leges MANILIANÆ venalium vendendorum, not properly laws, but regulations to be observed in buying and selling, to prevent fraud, Cic. de Orat. i. 5. 58. called by Varro ACTIONES, de Re Rust. ii. 5. 11. They were composed by the lawyer Manilius, who was consul A. U. 603.

The formalities of buying and selling, were by the Romans used in their most solemn transactions; as, in emancipation and adoption, marriage and testaments, in transferring property, &c.

Lex MANLIA, by a tribune, A. U. 558. about creating the Triumviri Epulones, Liv. xxxiii. 42. Cic. de Orat. iii. 19.

Lex MARIA PORCIA, by two tribunes, A. U. 691. That those commanders should be punished, who, in order to obtain a triumph, wrote to the senate a false account of the number of the enemy slain in battle, or of the citizens that were missing: and that, when they returned to the city, they should swear before the city quæstors to the truth of the account which they had sent, Valer. Max. ii. 8. 1.

Lex MEMMIA vel REMMIA; by whom it was proposed, or in what year, is uncertain. It ordained, That an accusation should not be admitted against those who were absent on account of the public, Valer. Max. iii. 7. 9. Suet. Jul. 23. And if any one was convicted of false accusation, (calumniæ), that he should be branded on the forehead with a letter, Cic. pro Rosc. Am. 19. 20. probably with the letter K, as anciently the name of this crime was written KALUMNIA.

Lex MENENIA, A. U. 302. That in imposing fines, a sheep should be estimated at ten asses, and an ox at one hundred, Festus in PECULATUS.

Lex MENSIA, That a child should be held as a foreigner if either of the parents was so. But if both parents were Romans and married, children always obtained the rank of the father, (patrem sequuntur liberi, Liv. iv. 4.) and if unmarried, of the mother, Ulpian.

Lex METILIA, by a tribune, A. U. 516. That Minucius, master of horse, should have equal command with Fabius the dictator, Liv. xxii. 25. 26.

—Another, as it is thought by a tribune, A. U. 535. giving directors to fullers of cloth; proposed to the people at the desire of the censors, (quam C. Flaminius L. Æmilius censores dedere ad populum ferendam), Plin. xxxv. 17. s. 57.

Ann. iii. 25. 28.* The end of it was to promote population, and repair the desolation occasioned by the civil wars. It met with great opposition from the nobility, and consisted of several distinct particulars, (LEX SATURA.) Whoever in this city had three children, in the other parts of Italy four, and in the provinces five, was entitled to certain privileges and immunities. Those who lived in celibacy could not succeed to an inheritance, except of their nearest relations, unless they married within 100 days after the death of the testator: nor receive an entire legacy, (legatum omne, vel solidum capere.) And what they were thus deprived of, in certain cases fell as an escheat (caducum) to the exchequer (fisco) or prince's private purse, Juvenal. ix. 88. &c.

By these laws the method of trial was altered, and the length of them limited: Three days were allowed for the examination of witnesses, and the fourth for the sentence; on which the accuser was to have two hours only to enforce the charge; the criminal three for his defence, ibid. This regulation was considered as a restraint on eloquence, Dialog. de orator. 38.

1. TIB. GRACCHI AGRARIA, by Tib. Gracchus, A. U. 620. These laws excited great commotions, and brought destruction on the author of them. Of course they were not put in execution, ibid.

2. C. GRACCHI FRUMENTARIA, A. U. 628. That corn should be given to the poor at a triens and a semis, or at $\frac{1}{2}$ of an as, a modius, or peck; and that money should be advanced from the public treasury to purchase corn for that purpose. The granaries in which this corn was kept, were called HORREA SEMPRONIA, Cic. pro Sext. 48. Tuscul. Quæst. iii. 20. Brut. 62. Off. ii. 21. Liv. Epit. 58. 60.

the consuls every year, before their election, Cic. de Prov. Cons. 2. pro Balb. 27. Dom. 9. Fam. i. 7.

—de VIIS MUNIENDIS, about paving and measuring the public roads, making bridges, placing milestones, and, at smaller distances, stones to help travellers to mount their horses, ibid. for it appears the ancient Romans did not use stirrups; and there were wooden horses placed in the Campus Martius, where the youth might be trained to mount and dismount readily, Veget. i. 18. Thus Virgil, Corpora saltu subjiciunt in equos, Æn. xii. 288.

Caius Gracchus first introduced the custom of walking or moving about, while haranguing the people, and of exposing the right arm bare, Dio. Fragm. xxxiv. 90. which the ancient Romans, as the Greeks, used to keep within their robe, (veste continere.) Quintil. xi. 3. 138.

Lex SEMPRONIA de fanore, by a tribune, long before the time of the Gracchi, A. U. 560. That the interest of money should be regulated by the same laws among the allies and Latins as among Roman citizens. The cause of this law was to check the fraud of usurers, who lent their money in the name of the allies, (in socios nomina transcribebant.) at higher interest than was allowed at Rome, Liv. xxxv. 7.

Lex SERVILIA AGRARIA, by P. Servilius Rullus, a tribune, A. U. 690. That ten commissioners should be created with absolute power for five years, over all the revenues of the republic; to buy and sell what lands they thought fit, at what price, and from whom they chose; to distribute them at pleasure to the citizens; to settle new colonies wherever they judged proper, and particularly in Campania, &c. Leges SULPICIÆ, de ære alieno, by the tribune Serv. Sulpicius, A. U. 665. That no senator should contract debts above 2000 denarii: That the exiles who had not been allowed a trial, should be recalled: That the Italian allies, who had obtained the right of citizens, and had been formed into eight new tribes, should be distributed through the thirty-five old tribes: Also, that the manumitted slaves (cives libertini) who used formerly to vote only in the four city tribes, might vote in all the tribes: that the command of the war against Mithridates should be taken from Sylla, and given to Marius, Plutarch. in Sylla et Mario; Liv. Epit. 77. Ascon. in Cic. Paterc. ii. 18.

But these laws were soon abrogated by Sylla, who, returning to Rome with his army from Campania, forced Marius and Sulpicius, with their adherents, to fly from the city. Sulpicius, being betrayed by a slave, was brought back and slain; Sylla rewarded the slave with his liberty, according to promise; but immediately after ordered him to be thrown from the Tarpeian rock for betraying his master, ibid.

Lex VILLIA ANNALIS. See p. 96.

Lex VOCONIA, de HEREDITATIBUS mulierum, by a tribune, A. U. 384. That no one should make a woman his heir; (NE QUIS HÆREDEM VIRGINEM NEQUE MULIEREM FACERET), Cic. Verr. i. 42. NOT leave to any one by way of legacy more than to his heir or heirs, c. 43. de Senect. 5. Balb. 8. But this law is supposed to have referred chiefly to those who were rich, (qui essent CENSI, i. e. pecuniosi vel classici, those of the first class, Ascon. in Cic. Gell. vii. 13.) to prevent the extinction of opulent families.

Various arts were used to elude this law. Sometimes one left his fortune in trust to a friend, who should give it to a daughter or other female relation; but his friend could not be forced to do so unless he inclined, Cic. de Fin. ii. 17. The law itself, however, like many others, on account of its severity, fell into disuse, Gell. xx. 1.

THESE are almost all the Roman laws mentioned in the classics. Augustus, having become sole master of the empire, Tacit. Ann. i. 2. continued at first to enact laws in the ancient form, which were so many vestiges of expiring liberty, (vestigia morientis libertatis), as Tacitus calls them: but he afterwards, by the advice of Mæcenas, Dio. lii. gradually introduced the custom of giving the force of laws to the decrees of the senate, and even to his own edicts, Tacit. Annal. iii. 28. His successors improved upon this example. The ancient manner of passing laws came entirely to be dropped. The decrees of the senate, indeed, for form's sake, continued for a considerable time to be published; but at last these also were laid aside, and every thing was done according to the will of the prince.

The emperors ordained laws—1. By their answers to the applications made to them at home, or from the provinces, (per RESCRIPTA ad LIBELLOS supplices pistolas, vel preces.)

—2. By their decrees in judgment or sentences in court, (per DECRETA,) which were either INTERLOCUTORY, i. e. such as related to any incidental point of law which might occur in the process; OR, DEFINITIVE, i. e. such as determined upon the merits of the case itself, and the whole question.

—3. By their occasional ordinances, (per EDICTA vel CONSTITUTIONES,) and by their instructions (per MANDATA,) to their lieutenants and officers.

These constitutions were either general, respecting the public at large; or special, relating to one person only, and therefore properly called PRIVILEGIA, privileges; Plin. Ep. x. 56. 57. but in a sense different from that in which it was used under the republic. See p. 29.

The three great sources, therefore, of Roman jurisprudence were the laws, (LÉGES,) properly so called, the decrees of the senate, (SENATUS CONSULTA,) and the edicts of the prince, (CONSTITUTIONES PRINCIPALES.) To these may be added the edicts of the magistrates, chiefly the prætors, called JUS HONORARIUM, (see p. 109.) the opinions of learned lawyers, (AUCTORITAS vel RESPONSA PRUDENTUM, vel Juris consultorum, Cic. pro Muræna. 13. Cæcin. 24.) and custom or long usage, (CONSUETUDO vel MOS MAJORUM, Gell. xi. 18.)

The titles and heads of laws, as the titles and beginnings of books, (Ovid. Trist. i. 7. Martial. iii. 2.) used to be written with vermilion (rubricâ vel minio;) Hence RUBRICA is put for the Civil law; thus, Rubrica vetavit, the laws have forbidden, Pers. v. 90. Alii se ad ALBUM (i. e. jus prætorium, quia prætores edicta sua in albo proponerant;) ac RUBRICAS (i. e. jus civile) transtulerunt, Quinctil. xii. 3. 11. Hence Juvenal, Perlege rubras majorum leges, Sat. xiv. 193.

The Constitutions of the emperors were collected by different lawyers. The chief of these were Gregory and Hermogènes, who flourished under Constantine. Their collections were called CODEX GREGORIANUS and CODEX HERMOGENIANUS. But these books were composed only by private persons. The first collection made by public authority, was that of the emperor Theodosius the younger, published A. U. 438. and called CODEX THEODOSIANUS. But it only contained the imperial constitutions from Constantine to his own time, for little more than an hundred years.

It was the emperor JUSTINIAN that first reduced the Roman law into a certain order. For this purpose he employed the assistance of the most eminent lawyers in the empire, at the head of whom was TRIBONIAN.

Justinian first published a collection of the imperial constitutions, A. U. 529. called CODEX JUSTINIANUS.

Then he ordered a collection to be made of every thing that was useful in the writings of the lawyers before his time, which are said to have amounted to 2000 volumes. This work was executed by Tribonian and sixteen associates in three years, although they had been allowed ten years to finish it. It was published, A. D. 533. under the title of Digests or Pandects, (PANDECTÆ vel DIGESTA.) It is sometimes called, in the singular, the Digest or Pandect.

The same year were published the elements or first principles of the Roman law, composed by three men, Tribonian, Theophilus, and Dorotheus, and called the Institutes, (INSTITUTA.) This book was published before the Pandects, although it was composed after them.

As the first code did not appear sufficiently complete, and contained several things inconsistent with the Pandects, Tribonian and other four men were employed to correct it. A new code therefore was published, xvi. Kal. Dec. A. D. 534. called CODEX REPETITÆ PRÆLECTIONIS, and the former code declared to be of no further authority. Thus in six years was completed what is called CORPUS JURIS, the body of Roman law.

But when new questions arose, not contained in any of the above-mentioned books, new decisions became necessary to supply what was wanting, or correct what was erroneous. These were afterwards published under the title of Novels, (NOVELLÆ sc. constitutiones,) not only by Justinian, but also by some of the succeeding emperors. So that the Corpus Juris Romani Civilis is made up of these books, the Institutes, Pandects or Digests, Code, and Novels.

The Institutes are divided into four books, each book into several titles or chapters, and each title into paragraphs (§), of which the first is not numbered; thus, Inst. lib. i. tit. x. princip. or more shortly, I. 1. 10. pr. So, Inst. l. i. tit. x. §. 2.—or, I. 1. 10. 2.

The Pandects are divided into fifty books; each book into several titles; each title into several laws, which are distinguished by numbers; and sometimes one law into beginning (princ. for principium) and paragraphs; thus, D. 1. 1. 5. i. e. Digest, first book, first title, fifth law. If the law is divided into paragraphs, a fourth number must be added; thus, D. 48. 5. 13. pr. or 48. 5. 13. 3. Sometimes the first word of the law, not the number, is cited. The Pandects are often marked by a double f; thus, ff.

The Code is cited in the same manner as the Pandects, by Book, Title, and Law: The Novels by their number, the chapters of that number, and the paragraphs, if any; as, Nov. 115. c. 3.

The Justinian code of law was universally received through the Roman world. It flourished in the east until the taking of Constantinople by the Turks, A. D. 1453. In the west, it was in a great measure suppressed by the irruption of the barbarous nations; till it was revived in Italy, in the twelfth century, by IRNERIUS, who had studied at Constantinople, and opened a school at Bologna under the auspices of Frederick I. emperor of Germany. It still continues to be of great authority, and seems to promise, at least in point of legislation, the fulfilment of the famous prediction of the ancient Romans concerning the eternity of their empire.

JUDICIAL PROCEEDINGS of the ROMANS.

THE Judicial Proceedings (JUDICIA) of the Romans were either Private or Public, or, as we express it, Civil or Criminal: (Omnia judicia aut distrahendarum controversiarum aut puniendorum malefactorum causâ reperta sunt.) Cic. pro Cæcin. 2.

1. (JUDICIA PRIVATA,) CIVIL TRIALS.

JUDICIA PRIVATA, or Civil trials, were concerning private causes, or differences between private persons, Cic. de Orat. i. 38. Top. 17. In these at first the kings presided, Dionys. x. 1. then the consuls, Id. & Liv. ii. 27. the military tribunes, and decemviri, Id. iii. 33. but after A. U. 389, the prætor Urbanus and Peregrinus. See p. 106.

The judicial power of the Prætor Urbanus and Peregrinus was properly called JURISDICTIO, (quæ posita erat in edicto et ex edicto decretis;) and of the prætors who presided at criminal trials, QUÆSTIO, Cic. Verr. i. 40. 41. 46. 47. &c. ii. 48. v. 14. Muran. 20. Flacc. 3. Tacit. Agric. 6.

The prætor might be applied to (ADIRI POTERAT, COPIAM VEL POSTESTATEM SUI FACIEBAT) on all court days (diebus fastis); but on certain days, he attended only to petitions or requests (POSTULATIONIBUS VACABAT); so the consuls, Plin. Ep. vii. 33. and on others, to the examination of causes, (COGNITIONIBUS,) Plin. Ep. vii. 33.

On court-days, early in the morning, the prætor went to the Forum, and there, being seated on his tribunal, ordered an Accensus to call out to the people around that it was the third hour; and that whoever had any cause, (qui LEGE AGERE vellet.) might bring it before him. But this could only be done by a certain form.

1. VOCATIO in JUS, or Summoning to Court.

If a person had a quarrel with any one, he first tried to make it up (litem componere vel dijudicare) in private, (intra parietes, Cic. pro P. Quinct. 5. 11. per disceptatores domesticos vel operâ amicorum, Cæcin. 2.)

If the matter could not be settled in this manner, Liv. iv. 9. the plaintiff (ACTOR vel PETITOR) ordered his adversary to go with him before the prætor, (in jus vocabat.) by saying, IN JUS VOCO TE: IN JUS EAMUS: IN JUS VENI: SEQUERE AD TRIBUNAL: IN JUS AMBULA, or the like, Ter. Phorm. v. 7. 43. and 88. If he refused, the prosecutor took some one present to witness, by saying LICET ANTESTARI? May I take you to witness? If the person consented, he offered the tip of his ear, (auriculam opponere), which the prosecutor touched, Horat. Sat. i. 9. v. 76. Plaut. Curcul. v. 2. See p. 56. Then the plaintiff might drag the defendant (reum) to court by force (in jus rapere), in any way, even by the neck, (oborto collo), Cic. et Plaut. Pæn. iii. 5. 45. according to the law of the Twelve Tables ; SI CALVITUR (moratur) PEDEMVE STRUIT, (fugit vel fugam adornat,) MANUM ENDO JACITO, (injicito,) Festus. But worthless persons, as thieves, robbers, &c. might be dragged before a judge without this formality, Plaut. Pers. iv. 9. v. 10.

By the law of the Twelve Tables, none were excused from appearing in court ; not even the aged, the sickly, and infirm. If they could not walk, they were furnished with an open carriage, (jumentum, i. e. plaustrum vel vectabulum.) Gell. xx. 1. Cic. de legg. ii. 23. Horat. Sat. i. 9. 76. But afterwards this was altered, and various persons were exempted ; as magistrates, Liv. xlv. 37. those absent on account of the state, Val. Maxim. iii. 7. 9. &c. also matrons, Id. ii. 1. 5. boys and girls under age, D. de in jus vocand. &c.

It was likewise unlawful to force any person to court from his own house, because a man's house was esteemed his sanctuary, (tutissimum refugium et receptaculum.) But if any one lurked at home to elude a prosecution, (si fraudationis causâ latitaret, Cic. Quint. 19.) he was summoned (evocabatur) three times, with an interval of ten days between each summons, by the voice of a herald, or by letters, or by the edict of the prætor ; and if he still did not appear, (se non sisteret), the prosecutor was put in possession of his effects, (in bona ejus mittebatur.) Ibid.

If the person cited found security, he was let go ; (SI ENSRET si autem sit, (sc. aliquis,) QUI IN JUS VOCATUM VINDICIT, (vindicaverit, shall be surety for his appearance,) MITTITO, let him go.

If he made up the matter by the way, (ENDO VIA), the process was dropped. Hence may be explained the words of our Saviour, Matth. v. 25. Luke xii. 58.

II. POSTULATIO ACTIONIS, Requesting a Writ, and giving Bail.

If no private agreement could be made, both parties went before the prætor. Then the plaintiff proposed the action (ACTIONEM EDEBAT, vel dicam scribebat, Cic. Verr. ii. 15.) which he intended to bring against the defendant (QUAM IN REUM INTENDERE VELLET), Plaut. Pers. iv. 9. and demanded a writ, (ACTIONEM POSTULABAT), from the prætor for that purpose. For there were certain forms (FORMULÆ) or set words (VERBA CONCEPTA) necessary to be used in every cause, (FORMULÆ DE OMNIBUS REBUS CONSTITUTÆ), Cic. Rosc. Com. 8. At the same time the defendant requested that an advocate or lawyer should be assigned him, to assist with his counsel.

There were several actions competent for the same thing. The prosecutor chose which he pleased, and the prætor usually granted it ; (ACTIONEM vel JUDICIUM DABAT vel REDDEBAT,) Cic. pro Cæcin. 3. Quint. 22. Verr. ii. 12. 27. but he might also refuse it, ibid. et ad Herenn. ii. 13.

The plaintiff having obtained a writ from the prætor, offered it to the defendant, or dictated to him the words. This writ it was unlawful to change, (mutare formulam non licebat,) Senec. de Ep. 117.

The greatest caution was requisite in drawing up the writ, (in actione vel formulâ concipiendâ;) for, if there was a mistake in one word, the whole cause was lost, Cic. de invent. ii. 19. Herenn. i. 2. Quinctil. iii. 8. vii. 3. 17. Qui plus petebat, quam debitum est, causam perdebat, Cic. pro Q. Rosc. 4. vel formulâ excidebat, i. e. causâ cadebat, Suet. Claud. 14. Hence SCRIBERE vel SUBSCRIBERE DICAM alicui vel impingere, to bring an action against one, Cic. Verr. ii. 15. Ter. Phorm. ii. 3. 92. or cum aliquo JUDICIUM SUBSCRIBERE, Plin. Ep. v. 1. EI FORMULAM INTENDERE, Suet. Vit. 7. But DICAM vel dicas sortiri, i. e. judices dare sortitione, qui causam cognoscant, to appoint judges to judge of causes, Cic. ibid. 15. 17.

A person skilled only in framing writs and the like, is called by Cicero LEGULEIUS, præco actionum cantor formularum, auceps syllabarum, Cic. de Orat. i. 55. and by Quinctilian, FORMULARIUS, xii. 3. 11.

He attended on the advocates to suggest to them the laws and forms; as those called PRAGMATICI did among the Greeks, ibid. and as agents do among us.

Then the plaintiff required that the defendant should give bail for his appearance in court (VADES, qui sponderent cum adfuturum,) on a certain day, which was usually the third day after, (tertio die vel perendi,) Cic. pro Quinct. 7. Muræn. 12. Gell. vii. 1. and thus he was said VADARI REUM (VADES ideo dicti, quod, qui eos dederit, vadendi, id est, discedendi habet potestatem, Cic. Quinct. 6.

This was also done in a set form prescribed by a lawyer, who was said VADIMONIUM CONCIPERE, Cic. ad Fratr. ii. 15.

The defendant was said VADES DARE, vel VADIMONIUM PROMITTERE. If he did not find bail, he was obliged to go to prison, Plaut. Pers. ii. 4. v. 18. The prætor sometimes put off the hearing of the cause to a more distant day, (vadimonia differebat,) Liv. Epit. 86. Juvenal. iii. 213. But the parties (LITIGATORES) chiefly were said VADIMONIUM DIFFERRE cum aliquo, to put off the day of the trial, Cic. Att. ii. 7. Fam. ii. 8. Quinct. 14. 16. Res esse in vadimonium capiti, began to be litigated, ibid.

In the meantime the defendant sometimes made up (rem componebat et transigebat, compromised,) the matter privately with the plaintiff, and the action was dropped, Plin. Ep. v. 1. In which case the plaintiff was said, decidisse, vel pactionem fecisse cum reo, judicio reum absolvisse vel liberâsse, lite contestatâ vel judicio constituto, after the lawsuit was begun; and the defendant, litem remisit; after receiving security from the plaintiff, (cum sibi carisset vel satis ab actore accepisset,) that no further demands were to be made upon him, (AMPLIUS A SE NEMINEM PETITURUM,) Cic. Quint.

11. 12. If a person was unable or unwilling to carry on a lawsuit, he was said NON POSSE VEL NOLLE PROSEQUI, vel EXPERIRI, sc. jus vel jure, vel jure summo, ib. 7. &c.

When the day came, if either party, when cited, was not present, without a valid excuse, (sine morbo vel causâ sonicâ,) he lost his cause, Horat. Sat. i. 9. v. 36. If the defendant was absent, he was said DESERERE VADIMONIUM, and the prætor put the plaintiff in possession of his effects, Cic. pro Quint. 6 & 20.

If the defendant was present, he was said VADIMONIUM SISTERE vel OBIRE. When cited, he said, UBI TU ES, QUI ME VADATUS ES? UBI TU ES, QUI ME CITASTI? ECCE ME TIBI SISTO, TU CONTRA ET TE MIHI SISTE. The plaintiff answered, ADSUM, Plaut. Curcul. i. 3. 5. Then the defendant said, QUID AIS: The plaintiff said AIO FUNDUM, QUEM POSSIDES, MEUM ESSE; vel AIO TE MIHI DARE, FACERE, OPORTERE, or the like, Cic. Mur. 12. This was called INTENTIO ACTIONIS, and varied according to the nature of the action.

III. DIFFERENT KINDS of ACTIONS.

ACTIONS were either Real, Personal, or Mixt.

1. A real action (ACTIO IN REM,) was for obtaining a thing to which one had a real right (jus in re,) but which was possessed by another, (per quam rem nostram, quæ ab alio possidetur, petimus, Ulpian.)

2. A personal action, (ACTIO IN PERSONAM,) was against a person, to bind him to do or give something, which he was bound to do or give, by reason of a contract; or for some wrong done by him to the plaintiff.

3. A mixt action was both for the thing, and for certain personal pretensions.

I. REAL ACTIONS.

ACTIONS for a thing, or real actions, were either CIVIL, arising from some law, Cic. in Cæcil. 5. de Orat, i. 2. or PRÆTORIAN, depending on the edicts of the prætor.*

ACTIONES PRÆTORIÆ, were remedies granted by the prætor for rendering an equitable right effectual, for which there was no adequate remedy granted by statute or common law.

A civil action for a thing, (actio civilis vel legitima in rem,) was called VINDICATIO; and the person who instituted it, VINDEX.

* Actions, according to the laws of England, and our laws, are of three kinds, personal, real, and mixed. Personal actions are such whereby a man claims a debt or personal duty, or damages in lieu thereof: and likewise, whereby a man claims a satisfaction in damages for some injury done to his person or property. Real actions are such whereby the plaintiff claims title to leave any lands or tenements, rents, or other hereditaments, in fee simple, fee tail, or for term of life. Mixed actions are suits partaking of the nature of the other two, wherein some real property is demanded, and also personal damages for a wrong sustained. 3 Bl. Com. 117. 118.

But this action could not be brought, unless it was previously ascertained who ought to be the possessor. If this was contested, it was called LIS VINDICIARUM, Cic. Verr. i. 45. and the prætor determined the matter by an interdict, Cic. Cæcin. 8. 14.

If the question was about a slave, the person who claimed the possession of him, laying hands on the slave, (manum ei injiciens,) before the prætor, said, HUNC HOMINEM EX JURE QUIBITUM MEUM ESSE AIO, EJUS QUE VINDICIAS, (i. e. possessionem,) MIHI DARI POSTULO. To which Plautus alludes, Rud. iv. 3. 86. If the other was silent, or yielded his right, (jure cedebat,) the prætor adjudged the slave to the person who claimed him, (servum addicebat vindicanti,) that is, he decreed to him the possession, till it was determined who should be the proprietor, (ad exitum judicii.) But if the other person also claimed possession, (si vindicias sibi conservari postularet,) then the prætor pronounced an interdict, (interdicebat), QUI NEC VI, NEC CLAM, NEC PRECARIO POSSIDET, EI VINDICIAS DABO.

The laying on of hands (MANUS INJECTIO) was the usual mode of claiming the property of any person, Liv. iii. 43. to which frequent allusion is made in the classics, Ovid. Epist. Her. viii. 16. xii. 158. Amor. i. 4. 40. ii. 5. 30. Fast. iv. 90. Virg. Æn. x. 419. Cic. Ros. Com. 16. Plin. Epist. x. 19. In vera bona non est manûs injectio; Animo non potest injici manus, i. e. vis fieri, Seneca.

In disputes of this kind (in litibus vindiciarum), the presumption always was in favour of the possessor, according to the law of the Twelve Tables, SI QUI IN JURE MANUM CONSERUNT, i. e. apud judicem disceptant, SECUNDUM EUM QUI POSSIDET, VINDICIAS DATO, Gell. xx. 10.

But in an action concerning liberty, the prætor always decreed possession in favour of freedom, (vindicias dedit secundum libertatem,) and Appius the decemvir, by doing the contrary, (decernendo vindicias secundum servitutem vel ab libertate in servitutem contra leges vindicias dando), by decreeing that Virginia should be given up into the hands of M. Claudius, his client, who claimed her, and not to her father, who was present,) brought destruction on himself and his colleagues, Liv. iii. 47. 56. 58.

Whoever claimed a slave to be free, (VINDEX, qui in libertatem vindicabat,) was said EUM LIBERALI, CAUSA MANU ASSERERE, Terent. Adelph. ii. 1. 39. Plaut. Pæn. v. 2. but if he claimed a free person to be a slave, he was said, IN SERVITUTEM ASSERERE; and hence was called ASSERTOR, Liv. iii. 44. Hence, Hæc (sc. præsentia gaudia) utrique manu, complexuque assere toto, Martial. i. 16. 9.—ASSERO, for affirmo or assevero is used only by later writers.

The expression MANUM CONSERERE, to fight hand to hand, is taken from war, of which the conflict between the two parties was a representation. Hence VINDICIA, i. e. injectio vel correptio manûs in re præsentis, was called vis civilis et festucaria, Gell. xx. 10. The two parties are said to have crossed two rods, (festucas inter se commisisse,) before the prætor, as if in fighting, and the vanquished party to have given up his rod to his antagonist. Whence some conjecture, that the first Romans determined their disputes with the point of their swords.

Others think that vindicia was a rod, (virgula vel festuca), which the two parties (litigantes vel disceptantes), broke in a fray or mock fight before the prætor, (as a straw (stipula) used anciently to be broken in making stipulations, Isidor. v. 24.) the consequence of which was, that one of the parties might say that he had been ousted or deprived of possession, (possessione dejectus) by the other, and therefore claim to be restored by a decree (INTERDICTO) of the prætor.

If the question was about a farm, a house, or the like, the prætor anciently went with the parties (cum litigantibus) to the place, and gave possession (vindicias dabat) to which of them he thought proper. But from the increase of business, this soon became impracticable; and then the parties called one another from court (ex jure) to the spot, (in locum vel rem presentem), to a farm, for instance, and brought from thence a turf (glebam), which was also called VINDICIÆ, Festus; and contested about it as about the whole farm. It was delivered to the person to whom the prætor adjudged the possession, *Gell. xx. 10.

But this custom also was dropped, and the lawyers devised a new form of process in suing for possession, which Cicero pleasantly ridicules, pro Muræna. 12. The plaintiff (petitor) thus addressed the defendant, (eum, unde petebatur; FUNDUS QUI EST IN AGRO, QUI SABINUS VOCATUR, EUM EGO EX JURE QUIRITIUM MEUM ESSE AIO, INDE EGO TE EX JURE MANU CONSERTUM (to contend according to law) VOVO. If the defendant yielded, the prætor adjudged possession to the plaintiff. If not, the defendant thus answered the plaintiff, UNDE TU ME EX JURE MANUM CONSERTUM VOCASTI, INDE IBI EGO TE REVOCO. Then the prætor repeated his set form, (carmen compositum), UTRISQUE SUPERSTITIBUS PRAESSENTIBUS, i. e. testibus præsentibus, (before witnesses,) ISTAM VIAM DICO. INITE VIAM. Immediately they both set out, as if to go to the farm, to fetch a turf, accompanied by a lawyer to direct them, (qui ire viam doceret.) Then the prætor said, REDITE VIAM; upon which they returned. If it appeared that one of the parties had been dispossessed by the other through force, the prætor thus decreed, UNDE TU ILLUM DEJECISTI, CUM NEC

* Livery of seizin, according to the common law of England, was either in deed, or in law. Livery in deed was thus performed. The feoffer, lessor, or his attorney, together with the feoffee, lessee, or his attorney, came to the land or the house; and then, in the presence of witnesses, declared the contents of the feoffment or lease, on which livery was to be made. And then the feoffer, (if it were of land) delivered to the feoffee, all the persons being out of the ground, a clod, or turf, or a twig or bough there growing, with words to this effect: "I deliver these to you, in the name of seizin of all the lands and tenements contained in this deed." But if it were of a house, the feoffer took the ring, or latch of the door, (the house being quite empty,) and delivered it to the feoffee in the same form; and then the feoffee entered alone, shut to the door, then opened it, and let in the others. Livery in law was when the same was not made on the land, but in sight of it only; the feoffer saying to the feoffee, "I give you yonder land, enter and take possession." 2 Bl. Com. 315. 316.

Thus the practice of livery and seizin clearly appears to be a relic of Roman jurisprudence.

VI, NEC CLAM, NEC PRÆCARIO POSSIDERET EO ILLUM RESTITUAS JUREO. If not, he thus decreed. UTI NUNC POSSIDETIS, &c. ITA POSIDEATIS. VIM FIERI VETO.

The possessor being thus ascertained, the action about the right of property (de jure domini) commenced. The person ousted or outed (possessione exclusus vel dejectus, Cic. pro Cæcin. 19.) first asked the defendant, if he was the lawful possessor, (QUANDO EGO TE IN JURE CONSPICIO, POSTULO AN SIES AUCTOR? i. e. possessor, unde meum jus repetere possim, Cic. pro Cæcin. 19. et Prob. in Not.) Then he claimed his right, and in the mean time required that the possessor should give security, (SATISDARET,) not to do any damage to the subject in question, (ne nihil deterius in possessione facturum,) by cutting down trees, or demolishing buildings, &c. in which case the plaintiff was said PER PRÆDER, v.—em, vel pro præde LITIS VINDICIARUM SATIS ACCIPERE, Cic. Verr. i. 45. If the defendant did not give security, the possession was transferred to the plaintiff, provided he gave security.

A sum of money used to be deposited by both parties, called SACRAMENTUM, which fell to the gaining party after the cause was determined, Festus; Varro de Lat. ling. iv. 36. or a stipulation was made about the payment of a certain sum called SPONSIO. The plaintiff said, QUANDO NEGAS HUNC FUNDUM ESSE MEUM, SACRAMENTO TE QUINGUAGENARIO PROVOCO. SPONDESNE QUINGENTOS, sc. nummos vel asses, si MEUS EST? i. e. si meum esse probavero. The defendant said, SPONDEO QUINGENTOS, SI TUUS SIT? Then the defendant required a correspondent stipulation from the plaintiff, (restipulabatur,) thus, ET TU SPONDESNE QUINGENTOS, NI TUUS SIT? i. e. si probavero tuum non esse. Then the plaintiff said, SPONDEO, NI MEUS SIT. Either party lost his cause if he refused to give this promise, or to deposit the money required.

Festus says this money was called SACRAMENTUM, because it used to be expended on sacred rites; but others, because it served as an oath, (quod instar sacramenti vel jurisjurandi esset,) to convince the judges that the lawsuit was not undertaken without cause, and thus checked wanton litigation. Hence it was called PIGNUS SPONSIONIS, (quia violare quod quisque promittit perfidia est,) Isidor. Orig. v. 24. And hence Pignore contendere, et sacramento, is the same, Cic. Fam. vii. 32. de Orat. i. 10.

Sacramentum is sometimes put for the suit or cause itself, (pro ipsâ petitione,) Cic. pro Cæcin. 33. sacramentum in libertatem, i. e. causa et vindicta libertatis, the claim of liberty, pro Dom. 29. Mil. 27. de Orat. i. 10. So SPONSIONEM FACERE, to institute a lawsuit, Cic. Quint. 8. 26. Verr. iii. 62. Cæcin. 8. 16. Rosc. Com. 4. 5. Off. iii. 19. Sponsione lacessere, Ver. iii. 57. certare, Cæcin. 32. vincere, Quint. 27. and also vincere sponsionem, Cæcin. 31. or judicium, to prevail in the cause, Ver. i. 53. condemnari sponsionis, to lose the cause, Cæcin. 31. sponsiones, i. e. causa, prohibita judicari, causes not allowed to be tried, Cic. Verr. iii. 62.

The plaintiff was said sacramento vel sponsione provocare, rogare, querere, et stipulari. The defendant, contendere ex provocatione vel sacramento et restipulari, Cic. pro Rosc. Com. 13. Valer. Max. ii. 8. 2. Festus; Varr. de Lat. ling. iv. 36.

The same form was used in claiming an inheritance, (IN HEREDITATIS PETITIONE,) in claiming servitudes, &c. But in the last, the action might be expressed both affirmatively and negatively, thus, AIQ, JUS ESSE VEL NON ESSE. Hence it was called ACTIO CONFESSORIA ET NEGATORIA.

2. PERSONAL ACTIONS.

PERSONAL actions, called also CONDICTIONES, were very numerous. They arose from some contract, or injury done; and required that a person should do or give certain things, or suffer a certain punishment.

Actions from contracts or obligations were about buying and selling, (de emptione et venditione;) about letting and hiring, (de locatione et conductione;) locabatur vel domus, vel fundus, vel opus faciendum, vel vectigal; Ædium conductor INQUILINUS, fundi COLONUS, operis REDEMPTOR, vectigalis PUBLICANUS vel MANCEPS dicebatur,) about a commission, (de mandato;) partnership, (de societate;) a deposit, (de deposito apud sequestrem;) a loan, (de commodato vel mutuo, propriè COMMODAMUS vestes, libros, vasa, equos, et similia, quæ eadem redduntur;) MUTUO autem DAMUS ea, pro quibus alia redduntur ejusdem generis, ut nummos, frumentum, vinum, oleum, et ferè cætera, quæ pondere, numero, vel mensurâ dari solent;) a pawn or pledge, (de hypotheca vel pignore;) a wife's fortune, (de dote vel uxoria;) a stipulation, (de stipulatione,) which took place almost in all bargains, and was made in this form; AN SPONDES? SPONDEO: AN DABIS? DABO: AN PROMITTIS? PROMITTO, vel repromitto, &c. Plaut. Pseud. iv. 6. Bacchid. iv. 8.

When the seller set a price on a thing, he was said INDICARE; thus, INDICA, FAC PRETIUM, Plaut. Pers. iv. 4. 37. and the buyer, when he offered a price, LICERI, i. e. rogare quo pretio liceret auferre, Plaut. Stich. i. 3. 68. Cic. Verr. iii. 33. At an auction, the person who bade, (LICITATOR,) held up his forefinger, (index;) hence digito liceri, Cic. ib. 11. The buyer asked, QUANTI LICET? sc. habere vel auferre. The seller answered, Decem nummis licet; or the like, Plaut. Epid. iii. 4. 35. Thus some explain, De Drusi hortis, quanti licuisse, (sc. eas emere,) tu scribis, audieram: sed quanti quanti, bene emitur quod necesse est, Cic. Att. xii. 23. But most here take licere in a passive sense, to be valued or appraised; quanti quanti, sc. licent, at whatever price; as Mart. vi. 66. 4. So Venibunt quiqui licebunt (whoever shall be appraised or exposed to sale, shall be sold,) præsenti pecuniâ, for ready money, Plaut. Menæch. v. 9. 97. Unius assis non unquam pretio pluris licuisse, notante judice quo nōsti populo, was never reckoned worth more than the value of one as, in the estimation of the people, &c. Horat. Sat. i. 6. 13.

In verbal bargains or stipulations there were certain fixed forms, (STIPULATIONUM FORMULÆ, Cic. de legg. i. 4. vel SPONSIONUM, Id. Rosc. Com. 4.) usually observed between the two parties. The person who required the promise or obligation, (STIPULATOR, sibi qui promitti curabat, v. sponzionem exigebat,) asked (rogabat v. interrogabat) him who was to give the obligation, (PROMISSOR vel REPROMISSOR, Plaut. Asin. ii. 4. 48. Pseud. i. 1. 112: for both words are put for the same thing, Plaut. Curc. v. 2. 68. v. 3. 31. Cic. Rosc. Com. 13.) before witnesses, Plaut. ib. 33. Cic. Rosc. Com. 4. if he would do or give a certain thing; and the other always answered in correspondent words; thus, AN DABIS? DABO vel DABITUR, Plaut. Pseud. i. 1. 115. iv. 6. 15. Bacch. iv. 8. 41. AN SPONDES? SPONDEO, Id. Curc. v. 2. 74. Any material change or addition in the answer rendered it of no effect, § 5. Inst. de inutil. Stip. Plaut. Trin. v. 2. 34 & 39. The person who required the promise, was said to be REUS STIPULANDI; he who gave it, REUS PROMITTENDI, Digest. Sometimes an oath was interposed, Plaut. Rud. v. 2. 47. and for the sake of greater security, (ut pacta et conventa firmitiora essent,) there was a second person, who required the promise or obligation to be repeated to him, therefore called ASTIPULATOR, Cic. Quint. 18. Pis. 9. (qui arrogabat,) Plaut. Rud. v. 2. 45. and another who joined in giving it, ADPROMISSOR, Festus: Cic. Att. v. 1. Rosc. Amer. 9. FIDE JUSSOR vel SPONSOR, a surety, who said, ET EGO SPONDEO IDEM HOC, or the like, Plaut. Trin. v. 2. 39. Hence Astipulari irato consuli, to humour or assist, Liv. xxxix. 5. The person who promised in his turn usually asked a correspondent obligation, which was called RESTIPULATIO; both acts were called SPONSIO.

Nothing of importance was transacted among the Romans without the rogatio, or asking a question, and a correspondent answer, (congrua responsio:) Hence INTERROGATIO for STIPULATIO, Senec. Benef. iii. 16. Thus also laws were passed: the magistrate asked, (ROGABAT,) and the people answered, (UTI ROGAS,) sc. volumus. See p. 83. 87.

The form of MANCIPIATIO or Mancipium, per æs et libram, was sometimes added to the STIPULATIO, Cic. legg. ii. 20 & 21.

A stipulation could only take place between those who were present. But if it was expressed in writing, (si in instrumento scriptum esset,) simply that a person had promised, it was supposed that every thing requisite in a stipulation had been observed, Inst. iii. 20. 17. Paull. Recept. Sent. v. 7. 2.

In buying and selling, in giving or taking a lease, (in locatione vel conductione,) or the like, the bargain was finished by the simple consent of the parties: Hence these contracts were called CONSENSUALES. He who gave a wrong account of a thing to be disposed of, was bound to make up the damage, Cic. Off. iii. 16. Earnest (ARRHA v. ARRHABO,) was sometimes given, not to confirm, but to prove the obligation, Inst. iii. 23.—pr. Varr. L. L. iv. 36. But in all important contracts, bonds (SYNGRAPHÆ) formerly written out, signed, and sealed, were mutually exchanged between the parties. Thus Augustus and Antony ratified their agreement about the partition of the Roman provinces, after the overthrow of Brutus and Cassius at Philippi, by giving and taking reciprocally written obligations (γραμματα, syngraphæ;) Dio. xlvi. 2 & 11. A difference having afterwards arisen between Cæsar and Fulvia the wife of Antony, and Lucius his brother, who managed the affairs of Antony in Italy, an appeal was made by Cæsar to the disbanded veterans; who having assembled in the capitol, constituted themselves judges in the cause, and appointed a day for determining it at Gabii. Augustus appeared in his defence; but Fulvia and L. Antonius, having failed to come, although they had promised, were condemned in their absence; and, in confirmation of the sentence, war was declared against them, which terminated in their defeat, and finally in the destruction of Antony, Dio. xlvi. 12. &c. In like manner the articles of agreement between Augustus, Antony, and Sex. Pompeius, were written out in the form of a contract, and committed to the charge of the Vestal virgins, Dio. xlvi. 37. They were farther confirmed by the parties joining their right hands and embracing one another, Ib. But Augustus, says Dio, no longer observed this agreement, than till he found a pretext for violating it, Dio. xlvi. 45.

When one sued another upon a written obligation, he was said, agere cum eo ex SYNGRAPHÆ, Cic. Mur. 17.

Actions concerning bargains or obligations, are usually named ACTIONES empti, venditi, locati vel ex locato, conducti vel ex conducto mandati, &c. They were brought (intendebantur,) in this manner: The plaintiff said, AIO TE MIHI MUTUI COMMODATI, DEPOSITI NOMINE, DARE CENTUM OPORTERE; AIO TE MIHI EX STIPULATO, LOCATO, DARE FACERE OPORTERE. The defendant either denied the charge, or made exceptions to it, or defences, (Actoris intentionem aut negabat vel inficiabatur, aut exceptione elidebat.) that is, he admitted part of the charge, but not the whole; thus, NEGO ME TIBI EX STIPULATO CENTUM DARE OPORTERE, NISI QUOD METU, DOLO, ERRORE ADDUCTUS SPOFONDI, vel NISI QUOD MINOR XXV. ANNIS SPOFONDI. Then followed the SPOFONDI, if the defendant denied, NI DARE FACERE DEBEAT; and the RESTIPULATIO, SI DARE FACERE DEBEAT; but if he excepted, the sponsio was, NI DOLO ADDUCTUS SPOFONDERIT; and the restipulatio, SI DOLO ADDUCTUS SPOFONDERIT. To this Cicero alludes, de Invent. ii. 19. Fin. 2. 7. Att. vi. 1.

An exception was expressed by these words, SI NON, AC SI NON, AUT, SI, AUT NISI, NISI QUOD, EXTRA QUAM SI. If the plaintiff answered the defendant's exception, it was called REPLICATIO; and if the defendant answered him, it was called DUPLICATIO. It sometimes proceeded to a TRIPPLICATIO and QUADRUPPLICATIO. The exceptions and replies used to be included in the SPOFONDI, Liv. xxxix. 43. Cic. Verr. i. 45. iii. 57. 59. Cæcin. 16. Val. Max. ii. 8. 2.

When the contract was not marked by a particular name, the action was called ACTIO PRÆSCRIPTIS VERBIS, actio inserta vel incerti; and the writ (formula) was not composed by the prætor, but the words were prescribed by a lawyer, Val. Max. viii. 2. 2.

Actions were sometimes brought against a person on account of the contracts of others, and were called Adjectitiæ qualitatis.

As the Romans esteemed trade and merchandise dishonourable, especially if not extensive, Cic. Off. i. 42. instead of keeping shops themselves, they employed slaves, freedmen, or hirelings, to trade on their account, (negotiationibus præficiabant;) who were called INSTITORES, (quod negotio gerendo instabant;) and actions brought against the trader (in negotiatorem) or against the employer (in dominum;) on account of the trader's transactions, were called ACTIONES INSTITORIÆ.

In like manner, a person who sent a ship to sea at his own risk, (suo periculo navem mari immittebat;) and received all the profits, (ad quem omnes obventiones et reditus navis pervenirent;) whether he was the proprietor (dominus) of the ship, or hired it, (navem per aversionem conduxisset;) whether he commanded the ship himself, (sive ipse NAVIS MAGISTER esset;) or employed a slave or any other person for that purpose, (navi præficeret;) was called navis EXERCITOR; and an action lay against him (in eum competebat, erat, vel dabatur;) for the contracts made by the master of the ship, as well as by himself, called ACTIO EXERCITORIA.

An action lay against a father or master of a family, for the contracts made by his son or slave, called actio DE PECULO, or actio De in rem verso, if the contract of the slave had turned to his master's profit; or actio JUSSU, if the contract had been made by the master's order.

But the father or master was bound to make restitution, not to the entire amount of the contract, (non in solidum;) but to the extent of the peculium, and the profit which he had received.

If the master did not justly distribute the goods of the slave among his creditors, an action lay against him, called actio TRIBUTORIA.

An action also lay against a person in certain cases, where the contract was not expressed but presumed by law, and therefore called Obligatio QUASI EX CONTRACTU; as when one, without any commission, managed the business of a person in his absence, or without his knowledge; hence he was called NEGOTIORUM GESTOR, or VOLUNTARIUS AMICUS, Cic. Cæcin. 5. vel PROCURATOR, Cic. Brut. 4.

3. PENAL ACTIONS.

ACTIONS for a private wrong were of four kinds: EX FURTO, RAPINA, DAMNO, INJURIA; for theft, robbery, damage, and personal injury.

1. The different punishments of thefts were borrowed from the Athenians. By the laws of the Twelve Tables, a thief in the nighttime might be put to death: SI NOX (noctu) FURTUM FAXIT, SIM (si eum) ALIQUIS OCCISIT (occiderit) JURE CÆSUS ESTO, and also in the day-time, if he defended himself with a weapon: SI LUCI FURTUM FAXIT, SIM ALIQUIS ENDO (in) IPSE FURTO CAPSIT (ceperit), VERBERATOR, ILLIQUE, CUI FURTUM FACTUM ESCIT (erit) ADDICTOR, Gell. xi. ult. but not without having first called out for assistance, (sed non nisi is, qui interempturus erat, QUIRITARET, i. e. clamaret, QUIRITES, VOSTRAM FIDEM, sc. imploro, vel PORRO QUIRITES.)

The punishment of slaves was more severe. They were scourged and thrown from the Tarpeian rock. Slaves were so addicted to this crime, that they were anciently called FURES; hence, Virg. Ecl. iii. 16. Quid domini faciant, audent cum talia fures! so Horat. Ep. i. 6. 46. and theft, SERVILE PROBRUM, Tacit. Hist. i. 48.

But afterwards these punishments were mitigated by various laws, and by the edicts of the prætors. One caught in manifest theft (in FURTO MANIFESTO), was obliged to restore fourfold, (quadruplem), besides the thing stolen; for the recovery of which there was a real action (vindicatio) against the possessor, whoever he was.

If a person was not caught in the act; but so evidently guilty that he could not deny it, he was called Fur NEC MANIFESTUS, and was punished by restoring double, Gell. xi. 18.

When a thing stolen was, after much search, found in the possession of any one, it was called FURTUM CONCEPTUM, (See p. 164.) and by the law of the Twelve Tables was punished as manifest theft, Gell. ibid.; Inst. iv. 1. 4. but afterwards, as furtam nec manifestum.

If a thief, to avoid detection, offered things stolen (res furtivas vel furto ablatas) to any one to keep, and they were found in his possession, he had an action, called Actio FURTI OBLATI, against the person who gave him the things, whether it was the thief or another, for the triple of their value, ibid.

If any one hindered a person to search for stolen things, or did not exhibit them when found, actions were granted by the prætor against him, called Actiones FURTI PROHIBITI et NON EXHIBITI; in the last for double, Plaut. Pen. iii. 1. v. 61. What the penalty was in the first is uncertain. But in whatever manner theft was punished, it was always attended with infamy.

2. Robbery (RAPINA) took place only in moveable things (in rebus mobilibus.) Immoveable things were said to be invaded, and the possession of them was recovered by an interdiction of the prætor.

Although the crime of robbery (crimen raptus) was much more pernicious than that of theft, it was, however, less severely punished.

An action (actio VI BONORUM RAPTORUM) was granted by the prætor against the robber (in raptorem), only for fourfold, including what he had robbed. And there was no difference whether the robber was a freeman or a slave; only the proprietor of the slave was obliged, either to give up, (eum noxæ dedere), or pay the damage (damnum præstare).

3. If any one slew the slave or beast of another, it was called

DAMNUM INJURIA DATUM, i. e. dolo vel culpa nocentis commissum, whence ACTIO VEL JUDICIUM DAMNI INJURIA, sc. dati; Cic. Rosc. Com. 11. whereby he was obliged to repair the damage by the Aquilian law. QUI SERVUM SERVAMVE, ALIENUM ALIENAMVE, QUADRUPEDEM vel PECUDEM INJURIA OCCIDERIT, QUANTI ID IN EO ANNO FLURIMI FUTT, (whatever its highest value was for that year,) TANTUM ES DARE DOMINO DAMNAS ESTO. By the same law, there was an action against a person for hurting any thing that belonged to another, and also for corrupting another man's slave, for double, if he denied, (ADVERSUS INFICIENTEM IN DUPLUM), l. 1. princ. D. de serv. corr. There was, on account of the same crime, a prætorian action for double even against a person who confessed, l. 5. § 2. ibid.

4. Personal injuries or affronts (INJURIAE) respected either the body, the dignity, or character of individuals.—They were variously punished at different periods of the republic.

By the Twelve Tables, smaller injuries (injuria leviores) were punished with a fine of twenty-five asses or pounds of brass.

But if the injury was more atrocious; as, for instance, if any one deprived another of the use of a limb, (SI MEMBRUM RUPFIT, i. e. ruperit), he was punished by retaliation, (talione), if the person injured would not accept of any other satisfaction. (See p. 160.) If he only dislocated or broke a bone, QUI OS EX GENTALI (i. e. ex loci ubi gignitur), FUDIT, he paid 300 asses, if the sufferer was a freeman, and 150, if a slave, Gell. xx. 1. If any one slandered another by defamatory verses, (si quis aliquem publicè diffamasset, eique adversus bonos mores convicium fecisset), affronted him, vel carmen famosum in eum condidisset) he was beaten with a club, Hor. Sat. ii. 1. v. 82. Ep. ii. 1. v. 154. Cornut. ad Pers. Sat. 1. as some say, to death, Cic. apud Augustin. de civit. Dei. ii. 9 & 12.

But these laws gradually fell into disuse, Gell. xx. 1. and by the edicts of the prætor, an action was granted on account of all personal injuries and affronts only for a fine, which was proportioned to the dignity of the person and the nature of the injury. This, however, being found insufficient to check licentiousness and insolence, Sulla made a new law concerning injuries, by which, not only a civil action, but also a criminal prosecution, was appointed for certain injuries, with the punishment of exile, or working in the mines. Tiberius ordered one who had written defamatory verses against him to be thrown from the Tarpeian rock, Dioc. lvi. 22.

An action might also be instituted against a person for an injury done by those under his power, which was called ACTIO NOXALIS; as, if a slave committed theft, or did any damage without his master's knowledge, he was to be given up to the injured person, (SI SERVUS, INSCIENTE DOMINO, FURTUM FAXIT, NOXIAMVE NOXIT, (nocuerit, i. e. damnum fecerit), NOXÆ DEDITOR;) And so if a beast did any damage, the owner was obliged to offer a compensation, or give up the beast; (SI QUADRUPES PAUPERIEM (damnum) FAXIT, DOMINUS NOXÆ ESTIMIAM (damni æstimationem) OFFERTO: SI NOLIT, QUOD NOXIT DATO.)

There was no action for ingratitude, (actio ingrati) as among the Macedonians, or rather Persians; because, says Seneca, all the courts at Rome, (omnia fora, sc. tria, de Ir. ii. 9.) would scarcely have been sufficient for trying it, Senec. Benef. iii. 6. He adds a better reason; quia hoc crimen in legem cadere non debet, c. 7.

4. MIXED AND ARBITRARY ACTIONS.

ACTIONS by which one sued for a thing, (rem persequatur), were called Actiones REI PERSECUTORIÆ; but actions merely for a penalty or punishment, were called PCENALES; for both, MIXTÆ.

ACTIONS in which the judge was obliged to determine strictly, according to the convention of parties, were called Actiones STRICTI JURIS: actions which were determined by the rules of equity, (ex æquo et bono), were called ARBITRARIÆ, or BONÆ FIDEI. In the former a certain thing, or the performance of a certain thing, (certa præstatio), was required; a sponsio was made, and the judge was restricted to a certain form; in the latter, the contrary of all this was the case. Hence, in the form of actions bonæ fidei about contracts, these words were added, EX BONA FIDE; in those trusts called fiduciæ, UT INTER BONOS BENE AGIER OPORTET, ET SINE FRAUDATIONE; and in a question about recovering a wife's portion after a divorce, (in arbitrio rei uxoriæ), and in all arbitrary actions, QUANTUM vel QUID ÆQUUS, MELIUS, Cic. de Offic. iii. 14. Q. Rosc. 4. Topic. 17.

IV. DIFFERENT KINDS of JUDGES; JUDICES, ARBITRI, RECUPERATORES, et CENTUMVIRI.

AFTER the form of the writ was made out, (concepta actionis intentione), and shown to the defendant, the plaintiff requested of the prætor to appoint one person or more to judge of it, (judicem vel judicium in eam a prætore postulabat.) If he only asked one, he asked a judex, properly so called, or an arbiter: If he asked more than one, (judicium), he asked either those who were called Recuperatores or Centumviri.

1. A JUDEX judged both of fact and of law, but only in such cases as were easy and of smaller importance, and which he was obliged to determine according to an express law or a certain form prescribed to him by the prætor.

2. An ARBITER judged in those causes which were called bonæ fidei, and arbitrary, and was not restricted by any law or form, (totius rei arbitrium habuit et potestatem; he determined what seemed equitable in a thing not sufficiently defined by law, Festus), Cic. pro Rosc. Com. 4. 5. Off. iii. 16. Topic. 10. Senec. de Benef. iii. 3. 7. Hence he is called HONORARIUS, Cic. Tusc. v. 41. de Fato, 17. Ad arbitrum vel judicem ire, adire, confugere, Cic. pro Rosc. Com. 4. arbitrum sumere, ibid. capere, Ter. Heaut. iii. 1. 94. Adelph. i. 2. 43. ARBITRUM ADIGERE, i. e. ad arbitrum agere vel co- gere, to force one to submit to an arbitration, Cic. Off. iii. 16. Top. 10. Ad arbitrum vocare vel appellere, Plaut. Rud. iv. 3. 99. 104. AD VEL APUD JUDICEM, agere, experiri, litigare, petere. But arbiter and judex, arbitrium and judicium, are sometimes confounded, Cic. Rosc. Com. 4. 9. Am. 39. Mur. 12. Quint. 3. Arbiter is also sometimes put for TESTIS, Flacc. 36. Sallust. Cat. 20. Liv. ii. 4. or the master or director of a feast, arbiter bibendi, Hor. Od. ii. 7. 23. arbiter Adriæ, ruler, Id. i. 3. maris, having a prospect of, Id. Epist. i. 11. 26.

A person chosen by two parties by compromise (ex compromisso), to determine a difference without the appointment of the prætor, was also called arbiter, but more properly COMPROMISSARIUS.

3. RECUPERATORES were so called, because by them every one recovered his own, Theophil. ad Inst. This name at first was given to those who judged between the Roman people and foreign states, about recovering and restoring private things, Festus in RECUPERATIO, reprisal; and hence it was transferred to those judges who were appointed by the prætor for a similar purpose in private controversies, Plaut. Bacch. ii. 3. v. 36. Cic. in Cæcin. 1. &c. Cæcil. 17. But afterwards they judged also about other matters, Liv. xxvi. 48. Suet. Ner. 17. Domit. 8. Gell. xx. 1. They were chosen from Roman citizens at large, according to some, but more properly, according to others, from the JUDICES SELECTI, (ex albo judicum, from the list of judges,) Plin. Ep. iii. 20. and in some cases only from the senate, Liv. xliii. 2. So in the provinces (ex conventu Romanorum civium, i. e. ex Romanis civibus qui juris et judiciorum causâ in certum locum CONVENIRE solebant. See p. 141.) Cic. Verr. ii. 13. v. 5. 36. 59. 69. Cæs. de bell. Civ. ii. 20. 36. iii. 21. 29. where they seem to have judged in the same causes as the Centumviri at Rome, Cic. Verr. iii. 11. 13. 28. 59. A trial before the Recuperatores was called JUDICIUM RECUPERATORIUM, Cic. de Invent. ii. 20. Suet. Vespas. 3. cum aliquo recuperatores sumere, vel eum ad recuperatores adducere, to bring one to such a trial, Liv. xliii. 2.

4. CENTUMVIRI were judges chosen from the thirty-five tribes, three from each; so that properly there were 105, but they were always named by a round number, CENTUMVIRI, Festus. The causes which came before them (causæ centumvirales) are enumerated by Cicero, de Orat. i. 38. They seem to have been first instituted soon after the creation of the prætor Peregrinus. They judged chiefly concerning testaments and inheritances. Cic. ibid.—pro Cæcin. 18. Valer. Max. vii. 7. Quinctil. iv. 7. Plin. Ep. 8. 32.

After the time of Augustus they formed the council of the prætor, and judged in the most important causes, Tacit. de Orat. 38. whence trials before them (JUDICIA CENTUMVIRALIA) are sometimes distinguished from private trials, Plin. Ep. 1. 18. vi. 4. 33. Quinctil. iv. 1. v. 10. but these were not criminal trials, as some have thought, Suet. Vesp. 10. for in a certain sense all trials were public, (JUDICIA PUBLICA.) Cic. pro Arch. 2.

The number of the Centumviri was increased to 180, and they were divided into four councils, Plin. Ep. i. 18. iv. 24. vi. 33. Quintil. xii. 5. Hence QUADRUPLIX JUDICIUM, is the same as CENTUMVIRALE, ibid. sometimes only into two, Quintil. v. 2. xi. 1. and sometimes in important causes they judged altogether, Valer. Max. vii. 8. 1. Plin. Ep. vi. 33. A cause before the Centumviri could not be adjourned, Plin. Ep. i. 18.

Ten men (DECEMVIRI) see p. 129. were appointed, five senators and five equites, to assemble these councils, and preside in them in the absence of the prætor, Suet. Aug. 36.

Trials before the centumviri were usually held in the Basilica Julia, Plin. Ep. ii. 24. Quintil. xii. 5. sometimes in the Forum. They had a spear set upright before them, Quintil. v. 2. Hence judicium hasta, for CENTUMVIRALE, Valer. Max. vii. 8. 4. Centumviralem hastam cogere, to assemble the courts of the Centumviri, and preside in them, Suet. Aug. 36. So CENTUM GRAVIS HASTA VIROBUM, Mart. Epig. vii. 62. Cessat centeni moderatrix judicis hasta, Stat. Sylv. iv. 4. 43.

The centumviri continued to act as judges for a whole year, but the other judices only till the particular cause was determined, for which they were appointed.

The DECEMVIRI also judged in certain causes, Cic. Cacin. 33. Dom. 29. and it is thought that in particular cases they previously took cognizance of the causes which were to come before the centumviri, and their decisions were called PRÆJUDICIA, Sigontius de Judic.

V. The APPOINTMENT of a JUDGE or JUDGES.

OF the above-mentioned judges, the plaintiff proposed to the defendant (adversario FEREBAT), such judge or judges as he thought proper according to the words of the sponsio, NI ITA ESSET: Hence JUDICEM vel -es FERRE ALICUI, NI ITA ESSET, to undertake to prove before a judge, or jury, that it was so, Liv. iii. 24. 57. viii. 33. Cic. Quint. 15. de Orat. ii. 65. and asked that the defendant would be content with the judge or judges whom he named, and not ask another (ne alium PROCARET, i. e. posceret, Festus.) If he approved, then the judge was said to be agreed on, CONVENIRE, Cic. pro Q. Rosc. 15. Cluent. 43. Valer. Max. ii. 8. 2. and the plaintiff requested of the prætor to appoint him, in these words, PRÆTOR, JUDICEM ARBITRUMVE POSTULO, UT DES IN DIEM TERTIUM SIVE FERENDINUM, Cic. pro Mur. 12. Valer. Prob. in Notis, and in the same manner, recuperatores were asked, Cic. Verr. iii. 58. hence judices dare, to appoint one to take his trial before the ordinary judices, Plin. Ep. iv. 9. But centumviri were not asked, unless both parties subscribed to them, Plin. Ep. v. 1.

If the defendant disapproved of the judge proposed by the plaintiff, he said, HUNC EJERO vel NOLO, Cic. de Orat. ii. 70. Plin. Paneg. 36. Sometimes the plaintiff desired the defendant to name the judge, (UT JUDICEM DICERET), Liv. iii. 36.

The judge or judges agreed on by the parties, were appointed (DABANTUR vel ADDICEBANTUR;) by the prætor with a certain form answering to the nature of the action. In these forms the prætor always used the words, SI PARET, i. e. apparet; thus, C. ACQUILLI; JUDEX ESTO, SI PARET, FUNDUM CAPENATEM, DE QUO SERVILIUS AGIT CUM CATULO, SERVILIUS ESSE EX JURE QUIRITUM, NEQUE IS SERVILIO A CATULO RESTITUATUR, TUM CATULUM CONDEMNATA. But if the defendant made an exception, it was added to the form, thus; EXTRA QUAM SI TESTAMENTUM PRODATUR, QUO APPAREAT CATULI ESSE. If the prætor refused to admit the exception, an appeal might be made to the tribunes, Cic. Acad. Quæst. iv. 30. The prætor, if he thought proper, might appoint different judges from those chosen by the parties, although he seldom did so; and no one could refuse to act as a judex, when required, without a just cause, Sust. Claud. 15. Plin. Ep. iii. 20. x. 66.

The prætor next prescribed the number of witnesses to be called, (quibus denunciaretur testimonium;) which commonly did not exceed ten. Then the parties, or their agents (PROCURATORES), gave security, (SATISDABANT;) that what was decreed should be paid, and the sentence of the judge held ratified, (JUDICATUM SOLVI et REM RATAM HABERI.)

In arbitrary causes a sum of money was deposited by both parties, called COMPROMISSUM, Cic. pro Rosc. Com. 4. Verr. ii. 27. ad Q. Fratr. ii. 15. which word is also used for a mutual agreement, Cic. Fam. xii. 30.

In a personal action the procuratores only gave security; those of the plaintiff, to stand to the sentence of the judge; and those of the defendant, to pay what was decreed, Cic. Quint. 7. Att. xvi. 15.

In certain actions the plaintiff gave security to the defendant, that no more demands should be made upon him on the same account, (eo nomine a se NEMINEM AMPLIUS vel POSTEA PETITURUM;) Cic. Brut. 5. Rosc. Com. 12. Fam. xiii. 29.

After this followed the LITIS CONTESTATIO, or a short narration of the cause by both parties, corroborated by the testimony of witnesses, Cic. Att. xvi. 15. Rosc. Com. 11. 12. 18. Festus; Macrob. Sat. iii. 9.

The things done in court before the appointment of the judices, were properly said IN JURE FIERI, after that, IN JUDICIO; but this distinction is not always observed.

After the judex or judices were appointed, the parties warned each other to attend the third day after, (inter se in perendinum diem, ut ad judicium venirent, denunciabant;) which was called COMPERENDINATIO, or CONDUCTIO, Ascon. in Cic.—Festus; Gell. xiv. 2. But in a cause with a foreigner, the day was called DIES STATUS, Macrob. Sat. i. 16. STATUS conductus cum hoste, (i. e. cum peregrino, Cic. Off. i. 32.) DIES. Plaut. Curc. i. 1. 5. Gell. xvi. 4.

VI. The MANNER of conducting a TRIAL.

WHEN the day came, the trial proceeded, unless the judge or some of the parties, was absent from a necessary cause, (ex morbo vel causâ sontica, Festus,) in which case the day was put off, (DIFFISSUS EST, i. e. prolatus; Gell. xiv. 2.)

If the judge was present, he first took an oath that he would judge according to law, according to the best of his judgment, (EX ANIMI SENTENTIA,) Cic. Acad. Q. 47. at the altar, (aram tenens, Cic. Flacc. 36.) called PUTEAL LIBONIS, or Scribonianum, because that place being struck with thunder, (fulmine attactus,) had been expiated (procuratus) by Scribonius Libo, who raised over it a stone covering (suggestum lapideum cavum), the covering of a well, (putei operculum, vel PUTEAL,) open at the top, (superne apertum, Festus,) in the Forum; near which the tribunal of the prætor used to be, Horat. Sat. ii. 6. v. 35. Ep. i. 19. 8. and where the usurers met, Cic. Sext. 8. Ovid. de Rem. Am. 561. It appears to have been different from the Puteal, under which the whetstone and razor of Attius Navius were deposited, Cic. de Divin. i. 17. in the comitium at the left side of the senate-house, Liv. i. 36.

The Romans, in solemn oaths, used to hold a flint-stone in their right hand, saying, SI SCIENS FALLO, TUM ME DIESPITER, SALVA URBE ARCEQUE, BONIS EJICIAT, UT EGO HUNC LAPIDEM, Festus in LAPIS. Hence Jovem lapidem jurare, for per Jovem et lapidem, Cic. Fam. vii. 1. 12. Liv. xxi. 45. xxii. 53. Gell. i. 21. The formula of taking an oath we have in Plaut. Rud. v. 2. 45. &c. and an account of different forms, Cic. Acad. iv. 47. The most solemn oath of the Romans was by their faith or honour, Dionys. ix. 10. 8. 48. xi. 54.

The judex or judices, after having sworn, took their seats in the subsellia, (quasi ad pedes prætoris;) whence they were called JUDICES PEDANEI; and SEDERE is often put for COGNOSCERE, to judge, Plin. Ep. v. 1. vi. 33. SEDERE AUDITURUS, Id. vi. 31. SEDERE is also applied to an advocate while not pleading, Plin. Ep. iii. 9. f.

The judex, especially if there was but one, assumed some lawyers to assist him with their counsel, (sibi advocavit, ut in consilio adessent, Cic. Quint. 2, in consilium rogavit, Gell. xiv. 2.) whence they were called CONSILIARII, Suet. Tib. 33. Claud. 12.

If any one of the parties were absent without a just excuse, he was summoned by an edict, (see p. 109.) or lost his cause, Cic. Quint. 6. If the prætor pronounced an unjust decree in the absence of any one, the assistance of the tribunes might be implored, ibid. 20.

If both parties were present, they first were obliged to swear that they did not carry on the lawsuit from a desire of litigation, (CALUMNIAM JURARE, vel de calumnia,) Liv. xxxiii. 49. Cic. Fam. viii. 8.—1. 16. D. jurej. Quod injuratus in codicem referre noluit, sc. quia falsum erat, id jurare in litem non dubitet, i. e. id sibi deberi, jurejurando confirmare, litem obtinendæ causâ, Cic. in Rosc. Com. 1.

Then the advocates were ordered to plead the cause, which they did twice, one after another, in two different methods, Appian. de Bell. Civ. i. p. 663, first briefly, which was called CAUSÆ CONJECTIO, qua si causæ in breve coactio, Ascon. in Cic. and then in a formal oration, (justâ oratione perorabant, Gell. xvii. 2.) they explained the state of the cause, and proved their own charge (actionem) or defence (inficiationem vel exceptionem), by witnesses and writings, (testibus et tabulis), and by arguments drawn from the case itself, (ex ipsa de deductis), Cic. pro P. Quinct. et Rosc. Com.—Gell. xiv. 2. and here the orator chiefly displayed his art, Cic. de Orat. ii. 42. 43. 44. 79. 81. To prevent them, however, from being too tedious, (ne in immensum evagarentur), it was ordained by the Pompeian law, in imitation of the Greeks, that they should speak by an hour-glass, (ut ad CLEPSYDRAM dicerent, i. e. vas vitreum, graciliter fistulatum, in fundo cujus erat foramen, unde aqua guttatim efflueret, atque ita tempus metiretur; a water-glass, somewhat like our sand-glasses, Cic. de Orat. iii. 34.) How many hours were to be allowed to each advocate, was left to the judices to determine, Cic. Quint. 9. Plin. Ep. i. 20. iv. 9. ii. 11. 14. i. 23. vi. 2. 5. Dial. de Caus. Corr. Elop. 38. These glasses were also used in the army, Veget. iii. 8. Cæs. de Bell. G. v. 13. Hence dare vel petere plus clepsydram, to ask more time to speak: Quoties judico, quantum quis plurimum postulat aquæ do, I give the advocates as much time as they require, Plin. Ep. vi. 2. The clepsydræ were of a different length; sometimes three of them in an hour, Plin. Ep. ii. 11.

The advocate sometimes had a person by him to suggest (qui subjiceret) what he should say, who was called MINISTRATOR, Cic. de Orat. ii. 75. Flacc. 22. A forward noisy speaker was called RABULA, (a rabie, quasi LATRATOR), vel proclamator, a brawler or wrangler, Cic. de Orat. i. 46.

Under the emperors, advocates used to keep persons in pay, (conducti et redempti MANCIPES), to procure for them an audience, or to collect hearers, (coronam colligere, auditores v. audituros corrogare), who attended them from court to court, (ex judicio in judicium), and applauded them, while they were pleading, as a man who stood in the middle of them gave the word, (quum μισοχορος dedit signum.) Each of them for this service received his dole, (sportula) or a certain hire, (par merces, usually three denarii, near 2s. sterling;) hence they were called LAUDICENI, i. e. qui ob cœnam laudabant. This custom was introduced by one Largius Licinius, who flourished under Nero and Vespasian; and is greatly ridiculed by Pliny, Ep. ii. 14. See also, vi. 2. When a client gained his cause, he used to fix a garland of green palm (virides palmæ) at his lawyer's door, Juvenal. vii. 118.

When the judges heard the parties, they were said is OPERAM DARE, l. 18. pr. D. de judic. How inattentive they sometimes were, we learn from Macrobius, Saturnal. ii. 12.

VII. The MANNER of giving JUDGMENT.

THE pleadings being ended, (causâ utrinque peroratâ), judgment was given after mid-day, according to the law of the Twelve Tables. POST MERIDIEM PRESENTI, (etiamsi unus tantum presens sit), LITEM ADDICITO, i. e. decidito, Gell. 17. 2.

If there was any difficulty in the cause, the judge sometimes took time to consider it, diem diffindi, i. e. differrî jussit, UT AMPLIUS DELIBERARET (Ter. Phorm. ii. 4. 17.) if, after all, he remained uncertain, he said, (dixit vel juravit), MIHI NON LIQUET, I am not clear, Gell. xiv. 2. And thus the affair was either left undetermined (injudicata), Gell. v. 10. or the cause was again resumed, (secunda actio instituta est), Cic. Cæcin. 2.

If there were several judges, judgment was given according to the opinion of the majority, (sententia lata est de plurium sententiâ;) but it was necessary that they should be all present. If their opinions were equal, it was left to the prætor to determine, l. 28. 36 & 38. D. de re jud. The judge commonly retired, (secessit), with his assessors, to deliberate on the case, and pronounced judgment according to their opinion, (ex consilii sententiâ), Plin. Ep. v. 1. vi. 31.

Sentence was variously expressed; in an action of freedom, thus, VIDERI SIBI HUNC HOMINEM LIBERUM; in an action of injuries, VIDERI JURE FECISSE vel NON FECISSE; in actions of contracts, if the cause was given in favour of the plaintiff, TITUM SEIO CENTUM CONDEMNO; if in favour of the defendant, SECUNDUM ILLUM LITEM DO, Val. Max. ii. 8. 2.

An arbiter gave judgment, (arbitrium pronunciavit) thus; ARBITROR TE HOC MODO SATISFACERE ACTORI DEBERE; If the defendant did not submit to his decision, then the arbiter ordered the plaintiff to declare upon oath, at how much he estimated his damages, (quanti litem astimaret), and then he passed sentence, (sententiam tulit), and condemned the defendant to pay him that sum; thus, CENTUM DE QUIBUS ACTOR IN LITEM JURAVIT, REDDE, l. 18. D. de dolo malo.

VIII. What followed, after JUDGMENT was given.

AFTER judgment was given, and the lawsuit was determined, (lîte dijudicatâ), the conquered party was obliged to do or pay what was decreed, (JUDICATUM FACERE vel SOLVERE;) and if he failed, or did not find securities, (sponsors vel vindices), within thirty days, he was given up, (JUDICATUS, i. e. damnatus et addictus est), by the prætor to his adversary, (to which custom Horace alludes, Od. iii. 3. 23.) and led away (ABDUCTUS) by him to servitude, Cic. Flacc. 19. Liv. vi. 14. 34. &c. Plaut. Pæn. iii. 3. 94. Asin. v. 2. 87. Gell. xx. 1. These thirty days are called in the Twelve Tables, DIES JUSTI; REBUS JURE JUDICATIS, XXX. DIES JUSTI SUNTO, POST DEINDE MANUS INJECTO ESTO, IN JUS DUCTO. See p. 47.

After sentence was passed, the matter could not be altered;

hence AGERE ACTUM, to labour in vain, Cic. Amic. 22. Attic. ix. 18. Ter. Phorm. ii. 2. 72. Actum est; acta est res; perii, all is over, I am undone, Ter. Andr. iii. 1. 7. Adolph. iii. 2. 7. Cic. Fdm. xiv. 3. Actum est de me, I am ruined, Plaut. Pseud. i. 1. 83. De Servio actum rati, that all was over with Servius; that he was slain, Liv. i. 47. So Suet. Ner. 42. Actum (i. e. ratum) habebō quod egeris, Cic. Tusc. iii. 21.

In certain cases, especially when any mistake or fraud had been committed, the prætor reversed the sentence of the judges, (rem judicatam rescidit), in which case he was said damptos IN INTEGRUM RESTITUERE, Cic. Verr. v. 6. Cluent. 36. Ter. Phorm. ii. 4. 11. OR JUDICIA RESTITUERE, Cic. Verr. ii. 26.

After the cause was decided, the defendant, when acquitted, might bring an action against the plaintiff for false accusation, (ACTOREM CALUMNIÆ POSTULARE), Cic. pro Cluent. 31. HENCE CALUMNIA litium, i. e. lites per calumniam intentæ, unjust lawsuits, Cic. Mil. 27. Calumniarum metum injicere, of false accusations, Suet. Cæs. 20. Vitel. 7. Domit. 9. Ferre calumniam, i. e. calumniæ convictum esse, vel calumniæ, damnari aut de calumnia, Cic. Fam. viii. 8. Gell. xiv. 2. Calumniam non effugiet, he will not fail to be condemned for false accusation, Cic. Cluent. 59.—Injuriam existunt CALUMNIA, i. e. callidâ et malitiosâ juris interpretatione, Cic. Off. i. 10. CALUMNIA timoris, the misrepresentation of fear, which always imagines things worse than they are, Fam. vi. 7. Calumnia religionis, a false pretext of, ibid. i. 1. calumnia dicendi, speaking to waste the time, Att. iv. 2. CALUMNIA paucorum, detraction, Sall. Cat. 30. Cic. Acad. iv. 1. So CALUMNIARI, falsam litem intendere, et calumniator, &c.

There was also an action against a judge, if he was suspected of having taken money from either of the parties, or to have wilfully given wrong judgment (dolo malo vel imperitiâ). Corruption in a judge was, by a law of the Twelve Tables, punished with death, but afterwards as a crime of extortion, (repetundarum.)

If a judge from partiality or enmity (gratiâ vel inimicitâ), evidently favoured either of the parties, he was said LITEM SUAM FACERE, Ulpian. Gell. x. 1. Cicero applies this phrase to an advocate too keenly interested for his client, de Orat. ii. 75.

In certain causes the assistance of the tribunes was asked, (TRIBUNI APPELLABANTUR), Cic. Quant. 7. 20.

As there was an appeal (APPELLATIO) from an inferior to a superior magistrate, Liv. iii. 56. so also from one court or judge to another, (ab inferiore ad superius tribunal, vel ex minore ad majorem judicem, prætextu iniqui gravaminis, of a grievance, vel injustæ sententiæ), Ulpian. The appeal was said ADMITTI, RECIPi, NON RECIPi, REPUDIARI: He to whom the appeal was made, was said DE vel EX APPELLATIONE COGNOSCERE, JUDICARE, SENTENTIAM DICERE, PRONUNCIARE APPELLATIONEM JUSTAM vel INJUSTAM ESSE.

After the subversion of the republic, a final appeal was made to the emperor, both in civil and criminal affairs, Suet. Aug. 33. Dio.

lii. 33. Act. Apost. xiv. 11. as formerly (PROVOCATIO) to the people in criminal trials, Suet. Cas. 12.

At first this might be done freely, (antea vacuum id solutumque pœnâ fuerat), but afterwards under a certain penalty, Tacit. Annal. xvi. 28. Caligula prohibited any appeal to him, (magistratibus liberam jurisdictionem, et sine sui provocations concessit), Suet. Cal. 16. Nero ordered all appeals to be made from private judges to the senate, Suet. Ner. 17. and under the same penalty as to the emperor, (ut ejusdem pecuniæ periculum facerent, cujus ii, qui imperatorem appellaverent), Tacit. ibid. So Hadrian, Digest. xlv. 2. 2. Even the emperor might be requested by a petition, (LIBELLO) to review his own decree, (SENTENTIAM SUAM RETRACTARE.)

II. CRIMINAL TRIALS, (PUBLICA JUDICIA.)

CRIMINAL trials were at first held (exercebantur) by the kings, Dionys. ii. 14. with the assistance of a council, (cum concilio), Liv. i. 49. The king judged of great crimes himself, and left smaller crimes to the judgment of the senators.

Tullus Hostilius appointed two persons (DUUMVIRI) to try Horatius for killing his sister, (qui Horatio perduellionem judicarent), and allowed an appeal from their sentence to the people, Liv. i. 26. Tarquinius Superbus judged of capital crimes by himself alone, without any counsellors, Liv. i. 49.

After the expulsion of Tarquin, the consuls at first judged and punished capital crimes, Liv. ii. 5. Dionys. x. 1. But after the law of Poplicola concerning the liberty of appeal, (see p. 98.) the people either judged themselves in capital affairs, or appointed certain persons for that purpose, with the concurrence of the senate, who were called QUÆSITORES, or Quæstores paricidii, (see p. 111.) Sometimes the consuls were appointed, Liv. iv. 51. Sometimes a dictator and master of horse, Liv. ix. 26. who were then called QUÆSITORES.

The senate also sometimes judged in capital affairs, Sallust. Cat. 51. 52. or appointed persons to do so, Liv. ix. 21.

But after the institution of the Quæstiones perpetuæ, (see p. 111.) certain prætors always took cognizance of certain crimes, and the senate or people seldom interfered in this matter, unless by way of appeal, or on extraordinary occasions.

I. CRIMINAL TRIALS before the PEOPLE.

TRIALS before the people, (JUDICIA ad populum), were first held in the Comitia Curiata, Cic. pro Mil. 3. Of this, however, we have only the example of Horatius, ibid.

After the institution of the Comitia Centuriata and Tributa, all trials before the people were held in them; capital trials, in the Comitia Centuriata, and concerning a fine, in the Tributa.

Those trials were called CAPITAL, which respected the life or liberty of a Roman citizen. There was one trial of this kind held in the Comitia by tribes, namely, that of Coriolanus, Liv. ii. 35; but that was irregular, and conducted with violence, Dionys. vii. 38. &c.

Sometimes a person was said to undergo a capital trial, periculum capitis adire, causam capitis vel pro capite dicere, in a civil action, when, besides the loss of fortune, his character was at stake, (cum judicium esset de fama fortunisque,) Cic. pro Quint. 9. 13. 15. Off. i. 12.

The method of proceeding in both Comitia was the same; and it was requisite that some magistrate should be the accuser.

In the Comitia Tributa the inferior magistrates were usually the accusers; as, the tribunes or ædiles, Liv. iii. 55. iv. 21. Val. Max. vi. 1. 7. Gell. x. 6. In the Comitia Centuriata, the superior magistrates; as, the consuls or prætors, sometimes also the inferior; as, the quæstors or tribunes, Liv. ii. 41. iii. 24. 25. vi. 20. But they are supposed to have acted by the authority of the consuls.

No person could be brought to a trial, unless in a private station. But sometimes this rule was violated, Cic. pro Flacc. 3. Liv. xliii. 16.

The magistrate who was to accuse any one, having called an assembly, and mounted the Rostra, declared that he would, against a certain day, accuse a particular person of a particular crime, and ordered that the person accused (reus) should then be present. This was called DICERE DIEM, sc. accusationis vel diei dictio. In the mean time the criminal was kept in custody, unless he found persons to give security for his appearance, (SPONSORES,) eum in judicio ad diem dictam sistendi, aut mulctam, qua damnatus esset, solvendi,) who, in a capital trial, were called VADES, Liv. iii. 13. xxv. 4. and for a fine, PRÆDES; Gell. vii. 19. Auson. Eidyll. 347. (a præstando, Varr. iv. 4.) thus; Præstare aliquem, to be responsible for one, Cic. ad Q. Fr. i. 1. 3. Ego Messalam Cæsari præstabo, ib. iii. 8. So, Att. vi. 3. Plin. Pan. 83.

When the day came, the magistrate ordered the criminal to be cited from the Rostra by a herald, Liv. xxxviii. 51. Suet. Tib. 11. If the criminal was absent without a valid reason, (sine CAUSA SONTICA,) he was condemned. If he was detained by indisposition, or any other necessary cause, he was said to be excused, (EXCUSARI,) Liv. ibid. 52. and the day of trial was put off, (dies PRODUCTUS vel productus est.)

Any equal or superior magistrate might, by his negative, hinder the trial from proceeding, ibid.

If the criminal appeared, (si reus se stitisset, vel si sisteretur,) and no magistrate interceded, the accuser entered upon his charge; (accusationem instituebat) which was repeated three times, with the intervention of a day between each, and supported by witnesses, writings, and other proofs. In each charge the punishment or fine was annexed, which was called ANQUISITIO. Sometimes the punishment at first proposed, was afterwards mitigated or increased. In mulcta temperârunt tribuni; quum capitis anquisissent, Liv. ii. 52. Quam tribuni bis pecuniâ, anquisissent; tertid se capitis anquirere diceret, &c. Tum perduellionis se judicare Cn. Fulvio dixit, that he prosecuted Fulvius for treason, Liv. xxv. 3.

The criminal usually stood under the Rostra in a mean garb, where he was exposed to the scoffs and raileries, (probris et conviciis.) of the people, ibid.

After the accusation of the third day was finished, a bill (ROGATIO) was published for three market-days, as concerning a law, in which the crime and the proposed punishment or fine was expressed. This was called MULCTÆ PCENÆVE IRROGATIO: and the judgment of the people concerning it, MULCTÆ PCENÆVE CERTATIO; Cic. de legg. iii. 3. For it was ordained that a capital punishment and a fine should never be joined together, (ne pœna capitis cum pecunia conjungeretur.) Cic. pro Dom. 17. (Tribuni plebis, omissâ mulctæ certatione, rei capitalis Posthumio dixerunt.) Liv. xxv. 4.

On the third market-day, the accuser again repeated his charge; and the criminal, or an advocate (patronus) for him, was permitted to make his defence, in which every thing was introduced which could serve to gain the favour of the people, or move their compassion, Cic. pro Rabir. Liv. iii. 12. 58.

Then the Comitia were summoned against a certain day, in which the people, by their suffrages, should determine the fate of the criminal. If the punishment proposed was only a fine, and a tribune the accuser, he could summon the Comitia Tributa himself; but if the trial was capital, he asked a day for the Comitia Centuriata from the consul, or, in his absence, from the prætor, Liv. xxvi. 3. xliii. 16. In a capital trial, the people were called to the Comitia by a trumpet, (classico.) Seneca de Ira, i. 16.

The criminal and his friends in the meantime used every method to induce the accuser to drop his accusation, (accusatione desistere.) If he did so, he appeared in the assembly of the people, and said, SEMPRONIUM NIHIL MOROR, Liv. iv. 42. vi. 5. If this could not be effected, the usual arts were tried to prevent the people from voting, (see p. 82.) or to move their compassion, Liv. vi. 20. xliii. 16. Gell. iii. 4.

The criminal, laying aside his usual robe, (toga alba.) put on a sordid, i. e. a ragged and old gown, (sordidam et obsoletam.) Liv. ii. 61. Cic. Verr. i. 58. not a mourning one (pullam vel atram) as some have thought; and in this garb went round and supplicated the citizens; whence sordes or squalor is put for guilt; and sordidati or squalidi, for criminals. His friends and relations, and others who chose, did the same, Liv. iii. 58. Cic. pro Sext. 14. When Cicero was impeached by Clodius, not only the equites, and many young noblemen of their own accord, (privato consensu.) but the whole senate, by public consent, (publico consilio.) changed their habit (vestem mutabant) on his account, ibid. 11. 12. which, he bitterly complains, was prohibited by an edict of the consuls, c. 14. Pis. 8 & 18. post. redit. in Sen. 7. Dio. xxxvii. 16.

The people gave their votes in the same manner in a trial as in passing a law. (See p. 85.) Liv. xxv. 4.

If any thing prevented the people from voting on the day of the Comitia, the criminal was discharged, and the trial could not again be resumed, (si qua res illum diem aut auspiciis aut excusatione sustulit, tota causa judiciumque sublatum est.) Cic. pro Dom. 17. Thus Metellus Celer saved Rabirius from being condemned, who was accused of the murder of Saturninus forty years after it happened, Cic. pro Rabir. by pulling down the standard which used to be set up in the Janiculum, (see p. 79.) and thus dissolving the assembly, Dio. xxxvii. 27.

If the criminal was absent on the last day of his trial, when cited by the herald, he anciently used to be called by the sound of a trumpet, before the door of his house, from the citadel, and round the walls of the city, Var. de Lat. Ling. v. 9. If still he did not appear, he was banished, (exilium ei sciscebatur;) or if he fled the country through fear, his banishment was confirmed by the Comitia Tributa. See p. 90.

II. CRIMINAL TRIALS before the INQUISITORS.

INQUISITORS (QUÆSTORES) were persons invested with a temporary authority to try particular crimes. They were created first by the kings; Liv. i. 26. then by the people, usually in the Comitia Tributa; iv. 51. xxxviii. 54. and sometimes by the senate; ix. 26. xliii. 2. In the trial of Rabirius, they were, contrary to custom, appointed by the prætor, Dio. 37. 27. Suet. Cas. 12.

Their number varied. Two were usually created, (DUUM-VIRI,) Liv. vi. 20. sometimes three, Sallust. Jug. 40. and sometimes only one, Ascon. in Cic. pro Mil. Their authority ceased when the trial was over, (see p. 111.) The ordinary magistrates were most frequently appointed to be inquisitors; but sometimes also private persons, Liv. passim. There was sometimes an appeal made from the sentence of the inquisitors to the people, as in the case of Rabirius, Suet. Cas. 11. Dio. xxxvii. 27. Hence Deferre judicium a subsellis in rostra, i. e. a judicibus ad populum, Cic. Cluent. 6.

Inquisitors had the same authority, and seem to have conducted trials with the same formalities and attendants, as the prætors did after the institution of the Questiones perpetuæ. To the office of Quæstores Virgil alludes, Æn. vi. 432. Ascon. in action. in Verr.

CRIMINAL TRIALS before the PRÆTORS.

THE prætors at first judged only in civil causes; and only two of them in these, the prætors Urbanus and Peregrinus. The other prætors were sent to govern provinces. All criminal trials of importance were held by inquisitors created on purpose.

But after the institution of the Questiones perpetuæ, A. U. 604, all the prætors remained in the city during the time of their office. After their election, they determined by lot their different jurisdictions.

Two of them took cognizance of private causes, as formerly, and the rest presided at criminal trials; one at trials concerning extortion; another at trials concerning bribery, &c. Sometimes there were two prætors for holding trials concerning one crime; as, on account of the multitude of criminals, concerning violence. Cic. pro Cluent. 53. Sometimes one prætor presided at trials concerning two different crimes, Cic. pro Cal. 13. And sometimes the Prætor Peregrinus held criminal trials; as, concerning extortion, Ascon. in Cic. in tog. cand. 2; so also, according to some, the prætor Urbanus.

The prætor was assisted in trials of importance by a council of select judices or jurymen; the chief of whom was called JUDEX QUÆSTIONIS, or Princeps judicum, Cic. et Ascon. Some have thought this person the same with the prator or quæstor; but they were quite different; Cic. pro Cluent. 27. 33. 58. in Verr. i. 61. Quinctil. viii. 3. The judex quæstionis supplied the place of the prætor when absent, or too much engaged.

1. The Choice of the JUDICES or Jury.

THE JUDICES were at first chosen only from the senators; then, by the Sempronian law of C. Gracchus, only from the equites; afterwards by the Servilian law of Cæpio, from both orders; then, by the Glaucian law, only from the equites; by the Livian law of Drusus, from the senators and equites; but the laws of Drusus being soon after set aside by a decree of the senate, the right of judging was again restored to the equites alone; then, by the Plautian law of Silvanus, the judices were chosen from the senators and equites, and some of them also from the plebeians; then by the Cornelian law of Sylla, only from the senators; by the Aurelian law, of Cotta, from the senators, the equites, and tribuni ærarii; by the Julian law of Cæsar, only from the senators and equites; and by the law of Antony, also from the officers of the army. See Manutius de legg. for Sigonius, and Heineccius, who copies him, give a wrong account of this matter.

The number of the judices were different at different times; By the law of Gracchus, 300; of Servilius, 450; of Drusus, 600; of Plautius, 525; of Sylla and Cotta, 300; as it is thought from Cic. Fam. viii. 8. of Pompey, 360, Paterc. ii. 76. Under the emperors, the number of judices was greatly increased, Plin. xxxiii. 1.

By the Servilian law, the age of the judices must be above thirty, and below sixty years. By other laws it was required that they should be at least twenty-five, D. 4. 8. but Augustus ordered that judices might be chosen from the age of twenty, (a vicesimo allegit.) Suet. Aug. 32. as the best commentators read the passage.

Certain persons could not be chosen judices, either from some natural defect, as, the deaf, dumb, &c. or by custom, as, women and slaves; or by law, as those condemned upon trial of some infamous crime, (turpi et famoso judicio, e. g. calumniæ, prævaricationis, furti, vi bonorum raptorum, injuriarum, de dolo malo, pro socio, mandati, tutela, depositi, &c.) and, by the Julian law, those degraded from being senators; which was not the case formerly, Cic. Cluent. 43. See p. 14.

By the Pompeian law, the judices were chosen from persons of the highest fortune.

The judices were annually chosen by the prætor Urbanus or Peregrinus; according to Dio Cassius, by the quæstors, xxxix. 7. and their names written down in a list, (in ALBUM RELATA, vel albo descripta,) Suet. Tib. 51. Claud. 16. Domit. 8. Senec. de benef. iii. 7. Gell. xiv. 2. They swore to the laws, and that they would judge uprightly to the best of their knowledge, (de animi sententia.) The judices were prohibited by Augustus from entering the house of any one, Dio. liv. 18.

They sat by the prætor on benches, whence they were called his ASSESSORS: or CONSILIUM, Cic. Act. Verr. 10. and CONSESSORES to one another, Cic. fin. ii. 19. Sen. de benef. iii. 7. Gell. xiv. 2.

The judices were divided into DECURIAE, according to their different orders; thus, DECURIA SENATORIA JUDICUM, Cic. pro Cluent. 37. tertia, Phil. 1. 8. Verr. ii. 32. Augustus added a fourth decuria, Suet. 32. Plin. xxxiii. 7. (because there were three before, either by the law of Antony, or of Cotta,) consisting of persons of an inferior fortune, who were called DUCENARII, because they had only 200,000 sesterces, the half of the estate of an eques, and judged in lesser causes. Caligula added a fifth decuria, Suet. 16. Plin. xxxiii. 1. s. 8. Galba refused to add a sixth decuria, although strongly urged by many to do it, Suet. 14.

The office of a judex was attended with trouble, Cic. in Verr. i. 8. and therefore, in the time of Augustus, people declined it; but not so afterwards, when their number was greatly increased, Suet. et Plin. ibid.

2. THE ACCUSER IN A CRIMINAL TRIAL.

ANY Roman citizen might accuse another before the prætor. But it was reckoned dishonourable to become an accuser, unless for the sake of the republic, to defend a client, or to revenge a father's quarrel, Cic. de Off. ii. 14. Divinat. 20. Verr. ii. 47. Sometimes young noblemen undertook the prosecution of an obnoxious magistrate, to recommend themselves to the notice of their fellow-citizens, Cic. pro Cal. vii. 30. in Verr. i. 38. Suet. Jul. 4. Plutarch. in Lucullo, princ.

If there was a competition between two or more persons, who should be the accuser of any one, as between Cicero and Cæcilius Judæus, which of them should prosecute Verres, who had been prætor of Sicily, for extortion, it was determined who should be preferred by a previous trial, called DIVINATIO; because there was no question about facts, but the judices, without the help of witnesses, divined, as it were, what was fit to be done, Cic. divin. 20. Ascon. in Cic. Gell. ii. 4. He who prevailed, acted as the principal accuser, (ACCUSATOR;) those who joined in the accusation, (causæ vel accusationi subscribebant;) and assisted him, were called SUBSCRIPTORES, Cic. divin. 15. pro Mur. 24. Fam. viii. 8. ad Q. Fratr. iii. 4. hence subscribere iudicium cum aliquo, to commence a suit against one, Plin. Ep. v. 1.

It appears, however, there were public prosecutors of public crimes at Rome, Cic. pro Sext. Rosc. 20. Plin. Epist. iii. 9. iv. 9. as in Greece, Cic. de Legg. iii. 47.

Public informers or accusers (delatores publicorum criminum) were called QUADRUPLATORES, Cic. Verr. ii. 8. 9. either because they received as a reward the fourth part of the criminal's effects, or of the fine imposed upon him; or, as others say, because they accused persons, who, upon conviction, used to be condemned to pay fourfold, (quadrupli damnari;) as those guilty of illegal usury, gaming, or the like, Cic. in Cæcil. 7 & 22. et ib. Ascon. Paulus apud Festum. Tacit. Annal. iv. 20. But mercenary and false accusers (CALUMNIATORES) chiefly were called by this name, Cic. Verr. ii. 7. 8 & 9. Plaut. Pers. i. 2. 10. and also those judges, who making themselves parties in a cause, decided in their own favour, (qui in suam rem litem verterent; interceptores litis alienæ, qui sibi controversiam adjudicarent rem;) Liv. iii. 72. Cic. Cæcin. 23. Seneca calls those who for small favours sought great returns, Quadruplatores beneficiorum suorum, overrating or overvaluing them, de benef. vii. 25.

3. MANNER of MAKING the ACCUSATION.

THE accuser summoned the person accused to court, (in jus vocabat;) where he desired (postulabat) of the inquisitor that he might be allowed to produce his charge, (nomen deferre;) and that the prætor would name a day for that purpose, Cic. Fam. viii. 6. Hence Postulare aliquem de crimine, to accuse; LIBELLUS POSTULATIONUM, a writing containing the several articles of a charge, a libel, Plin. Ep. x. 85.

This postulatio or request was sometimes made in the absence of the defendant, Cic. ad frat. iii. 1. 5. There were certain days on which the prætor attended to these requests, when he was said POSTULATIONIBUS VACARE, Plin. Epist. vii. 33.

On the day appointed, both parties being present, the accuser first took (concipiebat) a solemn oath, that he did not accuse from malice, (CALUMNIUM JURABAT;) and then the charge was made (delatio nominis fiebat;) in set form: thus, DICO vel AIO, TE IN PRÆTURA SPOLIASSE SICULOS CONTRA LEGEM CORNELIAM, ATQUE EO NOMINE SESTERTIUM MILLIES A TE REPETO, Cic. Divin. 5.

If the criminal was silent or confessed, an estimate of damages was made out (lis ei vel ejus aestimabatur), and the affair was ended; but if he denied, the accuser requested (postulavit) that his name might be entered in the roll of criminals, (ut nomen inter reos reciperetur, i. e. ut in tabulam inter reos referretur), and thus he was said REUM facere, lege v. legibus interrogare, postulare: MULCTAM aut pœnam petere et repetere. These are equivalent to nomen deferre, and different from causam agere, which properly signifies to substantiate or prove the charge; the same with causam agere, and opposed to defendere, Quintilian, v. 13. 3. Cic. Cœl. 3. Dio. xxxix. 7. Digest. l. 10. de jure patroni.

If the prætor allowed his name to be enrolled, (for he might refuse it, Cic. Fam. viii. 8.) then the accuser delivered to the prætor a scroll or tablet, (LIBELLUS), accurately written, mentioning the name of the defendant, his crime, and every circumstance relating to the crime; which the accuser subscribed, Plin. Ep. i. 20. v. 1. or another for him, if he could not write; at the same time binding himself to submit to a certain punishment or fine, if he did not prosecute or prove his charge; (cavebat se in crimine perseveraturum usque ad sententiam.)

There were certain crimes which were admitted to be tried in preference to others, (extra ordinem), as, concerning violence or murder, Plin. Ep. iii. 9. And sometimes the accused brought a counter charge of this kind against his accuser, to prevent his own trial, Cic. Fam. viii. 8. Dio. xxxix. 18.

Then the prætor appointed a certain day for the trial, usually the tenth day after, Cic. ad Q. Fratr. ii. 13. Ascon. in Cornel. Sometimes the 30th, as by the Licinian and Julian laws, Cic. in Vat. 14. But in trials for extortion, the accuser required a longer interval. Thus Cicero was allowed 110 days, that he might go to Sicily in order to examine witnesses, and collect facts to support his indictment against Verres, although he accomplished it in fifty days, Ascon. in loc. Cic. Verr. Act. prim. 2.

In the mean time the person accused changed his dress, (see p. 81.) and sought out persons to defend his cause.

Of defenders (DEFENSORES) Asconius mentions four kinds; PATRONI vel oratores, who pleaded the cause; ADVOCATI, who assisted by their counsel and presence; (the proper meaning of the word, Liv. ii. 55.) PROCURATORES, who managed the business of a person in his absence; and COGNITORES, who defended the cause of a person when present, Ascon. in divin. in Cæcil. 4. Festus. But a cognitor might also defend the cause of a person when absent, Cic. Verr. 2. 43. Horat. Sat. ii. 5. v. 28. Cic. Rosc. Com. 18. hence put for any defender, Liv. xxxix. 5. The procuratores, however, and cognitores, were used only in private trials; the patroni and advocati, also in public. Before the civil wars, one rarely employed more than four patrons or pleaders, but afterwards often twelve, Ascon. in Cic. pro Scaur.

4. MANNER of CONDUCTING the TRIAL.

ON the day of trial, if the prætor could not attend, the matter was put off to another day. But if he was present, both the accuser and defendant were cited by a herald. If the defendant was absent, he was exiled. Thus Verres, after the first oration of Cicero against him, called actio prima, went into voluntary banishment; for the five last orations, called libri in Verrem, were never delivered, Ascon. in Verr. Verres is said to have been afterwards restored by the influence of Cicero, Senec. Suas. vi. 6. and, what is remarkable, perished together with Cicero in the proscription of Antony, on account of his Corinthian vessels, which he would not part with to the Triumvir, Plin. xxxiv. 2. Lactant. ii. 4.

If the accuser was absent, the name of the defendant was taken from the roll of criminals, (de reis exemptum est.) Ascon. in Cic.

But if both were present, the judices or jury were first chosen, either by lot or by naming, (per SORTITIONEM vel EDITIONEM,) according to the nature of the crime, and the law by which it was tried. If by lot, the prætor or judex questionis put into an urn the names of all those who were appointed to the judices for that year, and then took out by chance (sorte educebat) the number which the law prescribed. After which the defendant and accuser were allowed to reject (rejicere) such as they did not approve, and the prætor or judex questionis substituted (subsortiebatur) others in their room, till the legal number was completed, Cic. in Verr. Act. i. 7. Ascon. in Cic.

Sometimes the law allowed the accuser and defendant to choose the judices; in which case they were said JUDICES EDERE, and the judices were called EDITITII, Cic. pro Muræn. 23. Planc. 15. 17. Thus by the Servilian law of Glaucia against extortion, the accuser was ordered to name from the whole number of judices an hundred, and from that hundred the defendant to choose fifty. By the Licinian law, de sodalitiis, the accuser was allowed to name the jury from the people at large, Cic. pro Planc. 17.

The judices or jury being thus chosen, were cited by a herald. Those who could not attend produced their excuse, which the prætor might sustain (accipere) or not, as he pleased, Cic. Phil. v. 5.

When they were all assembled, they swore to the laws, and that they would judge uprightly, Cic. pro Rosc. Am. 3. hence called JURATI HOMINES, Cic. 1. Act. in Verr. 13. The prætor himself did not swear, ibid. 9. Then their names were marked down in a book, (libellis consignabantur.) and they took their seats, (subsella occupabant.) Ascon. in Verr. act. i. 6.

The trial now began, and the accuser proceeded to prove his charge, which he usually did in two actions, (duabus actionibus.) In the first action, he produced his evidence or proofs, and, in the second, he enforced them.

The proofs were of three kinds, the declaration of slaves extorted by torture, (QUÆSTIONES,) the testimony of free citizens, (TESTES,) and writings, (TABULÆ.)

1. QUÆSTIONES. The slaves of the defendant were demanded by the prosecutor to be examined by torture in several trials, chiefly for murder and violence. But slaves could not be examined in this manner against their master's life, (in caput domini;) except in the case of incest, or a conspiracy against the state, Cic. Topic. 34. Mil. 22. Dejot. 1. Augustus, in order to elude this law, and subject the slaves of the criminal to torture, ordered that they should be sold to the public, or to himself, Dio. iv. 5. Tiberius, to the public prosecutor; MANCIPARI PUBLICO ACTORI JUBET, Tacit. Annal. ii. 30. iii. 67. but the ancient law was afterwards restored by Adrian and the Antonines, D. xlviii. 18. de quæst.

The slaves of others, also, were sometimes demanded to be examined by torture; but not without the consent of their master, and the accuser giving security, that if they were maimed or killed during the torture, he would make up the damage, ibid.

When slaves were examined by torture, they were stretched on a machine, called ECULEUS, or Equuleus, having their legs and arms tied to it with ropes, (fidiculis, Suet. Tib. 62. Cal. 33.) and being raised upright, as if suspended on a cross, their members were distended by means of screws, (per cochleas;) sometimes till they were dislocated, (ut ossium compago resolveretur;) hence Eculeo longior factus, Senec. epist. 8. To increase the pain, plates of red hot iron, (laminæ candentes;) pincers, burning pitch, &c. were applied to them. But some give a different account of this matter.

The confessions of slaves extorted by the rack, were written down on tables, which they sealed up till they were produced in court, Cic. Phil. 22. Private persons also sometimes examined the slaves by torture, Cic. pro Cluent. 63. 66.

Masters frequently manumitted their slaves, that they might be exempted from this cruelty, Liv. viii. 15. Cic. Mil. 21. for no Roman citizen could be scourged or put to the rack, Cic. Verr. v. 63. But the emperor Tiberius subjected free citizens to the torture, Dio. lvii. 19.

2. TESTES. Free citizens gave their testimony upon oath, (jurati.) The form of interrogating them was, SEXTE TEMPANI, QUÆRO EX TE, ARBITRERISNE, C. Sempronium in tempore pugnam in-isse? Liv. iv. 40. The witness answered ARBITROR VEL NON ARBITROR, Cic. Acad. iv. 47. pro Font. 9.

Witnesses were either voluntary or involuntary, Quinctil. v. 7. 9. With regard to both, the prosecutor, (actor vel accusator;) was said, TESTES DARE, adhibere, citare, colligere, edere proferre, subornare, vel PRODUCERE, Cic. Verr. i. 18. v. 63. Fin. ii. 19. Juvenal xvi. 29. &c. TESTIBUS UTI, Cic. Rosc. Am. 36. With regard to the latter, IS TESTIMONIUM DENUNCIARE to summon them under a penalty, as in England, and among us, by a writ called SUBPOENA, Cic. ibid. 38. in Verr. i. 19. INVITOS EVOCARE, Plin. Ep. iii. 9. The prosecutor only was allowed to summon witnesses against their will, Quinctil. v. 7.

9. Plin. Ep. v. 20. vi. 5. and of these a different number by different laws, Val. Max. viii. 1. Frontin de limit. 5. usually no more than ten, D. de testib.

Witnesses were said TESTIMONIUM DICERE, dare, perhibere, præbere, also pro testimonio audiri, Suet. Claud. 15. The phrase DEPOSITIONES testium, is not used by the classics, but only in the civil law. Those previously engaged to give evidence in favour of any one, were called ALLIGATI, Cic. ad Fratr. ii. 3. Isidor. v. 23. if instructed what to say, SUBORNATI, Cic. Rosc. Com. 17. Plin. Ep. iii. 9.

Persons might give evidence, although absent, by writing, (per tabulas;) but it was necessary that this should be done voluntarily, and before witnesses, (præsentibus SIGNATORIBUS,) Quinctil. v. 7.

The character and condition of witnesses were particularly attended to, (diligenter expendebantur,) Cic. pro Flacc. 5.

No one was obliged to be a witness against a near relation or friend, by the Julian law, l. 4. D. de Testib. and never (more majorum) in his own cause, (de re sua,) Cic. Rosc. Am. 36.

The witnesses of each party had particular benches in the Forum, on which they sat, Cic. pro Q. Rosc. 13. Quinctil. v. 7.

Great dexterity was shown in interrogating witnesses, Cic. pro Flacc. 10. Donat. in Teren. Eunuch. iv. 4. v. 33. Quinctil. v. 7.

Persons of an infamous character were not admitted to give evidence (testes non adhibiti sunt,) and therefore were called INTESTABILES, Plaut. Curcul. i. 5. v. 30. Horat. Sat. ii. 3. v. 181. Gell. vi. 7. vii. 18. as those likewise were, who being once called as witnesses, (antestati, v. in testimonium adhibiti,) afterwards refused to give their testimony, Gell. xv. 13. Women anciently were not admitted as witnesses, Gell. vi. 7. but in after times they were, Cic. Verr. i. 37.

A false witness, by the law of the Twelve Tables, was thrown from the Tarpeian rock, Gell. xx. 1. but afterwards the punishment was arbitrary, l. 16. D. de Testib. et SENT. v. 25. § 2. except in war, where a false witness was beaten to death with sticks by his fellow-soldiers, Polyb. vi. 35.

3. TABULÆ. By this name were called writings of every kind, which could be of use to prove the charge; particularly account-books, (tabulæ accepti et expensi,) letters, bills or bonds, (syngraphæ,) &c.

In a trial for extortion, the account-books of the person accused were commonly sealed up, and afterwards at the trial delivered to the judges for their inspection, Cic. Verr. i. 23. 61. Balb. 5. The ancient Romans used to make out their private accounts, (tabulæ sc. accepti et expensi confidere vel domesticas rationes scribere,) and keep them with great care. They marked down the occurrences of each day first in a note-book, (ADVERSARIA, -orum,) which was kept only for a month, (menstrua erant;) and then transcribed them into what we call a Ledger, (codex vel tabulæ,) which was preserved for ever, Cic. Quinct. 2. but many dropped this custom after the laws ordered a man's papers to be sealed up when he was accused of certain crimes, and produced in courts as evidences against him, Cic. Verr. i. 23. 39. Rosc. Com. 2. Cal. 7. Att. xii. 5. Tusc. v. 33. Suet. Cas. 47.

The prosecutor having produced these different kinds of evidence, explained and enforced them in a speech, sometimes in two or more speeches, Cic. in Verr. Then the advocates of the criminal replied; and their defence sometimes lasted for several days, Ascon. in Cic. pro Cornel. In the end of their speeches (in epilogo vel peroratione), they tried to move the compassion of the judices, and for that purpose often introduced the children of the criminal, Cic. pro Sext. 69. In ancient times only one counsel were allowed to each side, Plin. Ep. i. 20.

In certain causes, persons were brought to attest the character of the accused, called LAUDATORES, Cic. pro Balb. 18. Cluent. 69. Fam. i. 9. Fin. ii. 21. Suet. Aug. 56. If one could not produce at least ten of these, it was thought proper to produce none, (quàm illum quasi legitimum numerum consuetudinis non explere), Cic. Verr. v. 22. Their declaration, or that of the towns from which they came, was called LAUDATIO, ibid. & Fam. 3. 8. 6. which word commonly signifies a funeral oration delivered from the Rostra in praise of a person deceased, by some near relation, Cic. de Orat. ii. 84. Liv. v. 50. Suet. Cas. vi. 84. Aug. 101. Tib. 6. Tacit. Annal. v. 1. xvi. 6. by an orator or chief magistrate, Plin. Ep. ii. 1.

Each orator, when he finished, said DIXI; and when all the pleadings were ended, a herald called out, DIXERUNT, vel -ERE, Ascon. in Cic. Donat. in Ter. Phorm. ii. 3. 90. & sc. 4.

Then the prætor sent the judices to give their verdict, (in consilium mittebat, ut sententiam ferrent vel dicerent), Cic. Verr. i. 9. Cluent. 27. 30. upon which they rose and went to deliberate for a little among themselves, ibid. Sometimes they passed sentence (sententias ferebant) vivâ voce in open court, but usually by ballot. The prætor gave to each judex three tablets: on one was written the letter C, for condemno, I condemn; on another, the letter A, for absolvo, I acquit; and on a third, N. L. non liquet, sc. mihi, I am not clear, Cas. B. Civ. iii. 83. Each of the judices threw which of these tablets he thought proper into an urn. There was an urn for each order of judges; one for the senators, another for the equites, and a third for the tribuni ærarii, Cic. ad Q. Fratr. ii. 6.

The prætor, having taken out and counted the ballots, pronounced sentence according to the opinion of the majority, (ex plurimum sententia), in a certain form. If a majority gave in the letter C, the prætor said VIDETUR FECISSE, i. e. guilty, Cic. Verr. v. 6. Acad. iv. 47. If the letter A. NON VIDETUR FECISSE, i. e. not guilty. If N. L. the cause was deferred (CAUSA AMPLIATA EST). Ascon. in Cic.

The letter A was called LITERA SALUTARIS, and the tablet on which it was marked, TABELLA ABSOLUTORIA, Suet. Aug. 33. and C, litera TRISTIS, Cic. Mil. 6. the tablet, DAMNATORIA, Suet. ibid. Among the Greeks, the condemning letter was Θ, because it was the first letter of θάνατος, death: hence called mortiferum, Martial. vii.

36. and nigrum, Pers. Sat. 4. v. 13. Their acquitting letter is uncertain.

It was anciently the custom to use white and black pebbles (lapilli vel calculi) in voting at trials; Mos erat antiquis niveis atrisque lapillis, His damnare reos, illis absolvere culpâ, Ovid. Met. xv. 41. Hence causa paucorum calculorum, a cause of small importance, where there were few judges to vote, Quinctil. viii. 3. 14. Omnis calculus immitem demittitur ater in urnam, i. e. he is condemned by all the judges, Ovid. ibid. 44. Reportare calculum deteriolem, to be condemned; meliolem, to be acquitted, Corp. Juris.—Errori album calculum adjicere, to pardon or excuse, Plin. Ep. i. 2. To this Horace is thought to allude, Sat. ii. 3. 246. Cretâ an carbone notandi? are they to be approved or condemned? and Persius, Sat. v. 108. but more probably to the Roman custom of marking in their kalendar unlucky days with black, (carbone, with charcoal; whence dies atri for infausti.) and lucky days with white, (cretâ vel cressâ notâ, with chalk, Horat. Od. i. 36. 10. called CRETA, or terra Cressa vel Cretica, because it was brought from that island;) Hence notare vel signare diem lacteâ gemmâ vel albâ, melioribus lapillis, vel albis calculis, to mark a day as fortunate, Martial. viii. 45. ix. 53. xi. 37. Pers. Sat. ii. 1. Plin. Ep. vi. 11. This custom is said to have been borrowed from the Thracians, or Scythians, who every evening, before they slept, threw into an urn or quiver, a white pebble, if the day had passed agreeably; but if not, a black one: and at their death, by counting the pebbles, their life was judged to have been happy or unhappy, Plin. vii. 40. To this Martial beautifully alludes, xii. 34.

The Athenians, in voting about the banishment of a citizen, who was suspected to be too powerful, used shells, (ὄστρακα testæ vel testula), on which those who were for banishing him wrote his name, and threw each his shell into an urn. This was done in a popular assembly; and if the number of shells amounted to 6000, he was banished for ten years, (testarum suffragiis) by an OSTRACISM, as it was called, Nep. in Themist. 8. Aristid. I. Cim. 3. Diodorus says, for five years, xi. 55.

When the number of judges who condemned, and of those who acquitted, was equal, the criminal was acquitted, Cic. Cluent. 27. Plutarch. in Mario. (See p. 86.) CALCULO MINERVÆ, by the vote of Minerva, as it was termed; because when Orestes was tried before the Areopagus at Athens for the murder of his mother, and the judges were divided, he was acquitted by the determination (sententiâ) of that goddess, Cic. pro Mil. 3. et ibi Lambin. Æschyl. Eumenid. v. 738. In allusion to this, a privilege was granted to Augustus, if the number of the judices who condemned, was but one more than those that acquitted, of adding his vote to make an equality; and thus of acquitting the criminal, Div. li. 19.

While the judices were putting the ballots into the urn, the criminal and his friends threw themselves at their feet, and used every method to move their compassion, Valer. Max. viii. 1. 6. Ascon. in Cic. pro M. Scauro.

The prætor, when about to pronounce a sentence of condemnation, used to lay aside his toga prætexta, Plutarch. in Cic.—Senec. de Ira. 1. 16.

In a trial for extortion, sentence was not passed after the first action was finished; that is, after the accuser had finished his pleading, and the defender had replied; but the cause was a second time resumed, (causa iterum dicebatur vel agebatur.) after the interval of a day, or sometimes more, (especially if a festival intervened, as in the case of Verres, Cic. Verr. i. 7.) which was called COMPERENDINATIO, or -atus, -tûs, Cic. Verr. i. 9. et ibi, Ascon. &c. Then the defender spoke first, and the accuser replied; after which sentence was passed. This was done, although the cause was perfectly clear, by the Glaucian law; but before that, by the Scilian law, criminals were condemned after one hearing, (semel dictâ causâ, semel auditis testibus.) ibid.

When there was any obscurity in the cause, and the judices were uncertain whether to condemn or acquit the criminal, which they expressed by giving in the tablets, on which the letters N. L. were written, and the prætor, by pronouncing AMPLIUS, Cic. ibid. the cause was deferred to any day the prætor chose to name. This was called AMPLIATIO, and the criminal or cause was said ampliari; which sometimes was done several times, and the cause pleaded each time anew, Cic. Brut. 22. Bis ampliatus, tertîâ absolutus est reus, Liv. xliii. 2. So iv. 44. Causa L. Cottæ septies ampliata, et ad ultimum octavo judicio absoluta est, Valer. Max. viii. 1. 11. Sometimes the prætor, to gratify the criminal or his friends, put off the trial till he should resign his office, and thus not have it in his power to pass sentence (ne diceret jus) upon him, Liv. xli. 22.

If the criminal was acquitted, he went home and resumed his usual dress (sordido habitu posito, albam togam resumebat). If there was ground for it, he might bring his accuser to trial for false accusation, (CALUMNIÆ), or for what was called PRÆVARICATIO; that is, betraying the cause of one's client, and by neglect or collusion assisting his opponent, Cic. Topic. 36. Plin. Epist. i. 20. iii. 9. Quinctil. ix. 2.

PRÆVARICARI, comp. of præ et varico, v. -or (from varus, bow-or bandy-legged, crura incurva habens.) signifies properly to straddle, to stand or walk wide, with the feet too far removed from one another, not to go straight, (arator, nisi incurvus, prævaricatur, i. e. non rectum sulcum agit, vel a recto sulco divertit, Plin.) Hence, to shuffle, to play fast and loose, to act deceitfully, (in contrariis causis quasi varie esse positus, Cic. ibid.)

If the criminal was condemned, he was punished by law according to the nature of his crime.

Under the emperors most criminal causes were tried in the senate, Dio. lvii. 16. alibi passim, who could either mitigate or extend the rigour of the laws, (mitigare leges et intendere.) Plin. Ep. ii. 11. iv.

9. although this was sometimes contested; (aliis cognitionem senatus lege conclusam, aliis liberam solutamque dicentibus,) id.

If a person was charged with a particular crime, comprehended in a particular law, select judges were appointed; but if the crimes were various, and of an atrocious nature, the senate itself judged of them, Plin. ii. 10. as the people did formerly; whose power, Tiberius, by the suppression of the Comitia, transferred to the senate, Tacit. Annal. i. 15. When any province complained of their governors, and sent ambassadors to prosecute them, (legatos vel inquisitores mittebant, qui in eos inquisitionem postularent,) the cause was tried in the senate; who appointed certain persons of their own number to be advocates, Plin. Ep. ii. 11. iii. 9. commonly such as the province requested, ibid. iii. 4.

When the senate took cognizance of a cause, it was said suscipere vel recipere cognitionem, and dare inquisitionem, Plin. Ep. vi. 29. when it appointed certain persons to plead any cause, DARE ADVOCATOS, v. PATRONOS, Id. ii. 11. iii. 4. vi. 29. vii. 6. 33. So the emperor, Id. vi. 22. When several advocates either proposed or excused themselves, it was determined by lot who should manage the cause, (nomina in urnam coniecta sunt,) Id. x. 20.

When the criminal was brought into the senate-house by the licitors, he was said, esse inductus, Id. ii. 11. 12. v. 4. 13. So the prosecutors, Id. v. 20.

When an advocate began to plead, he was said descendere ut acturus, ad agendum vel ad accusandum, Id. v. 13. because perhaps he stood in a lower place than that in which the judges sat, or came from a place of ease and safety, to a place of difficulty and danger; thus (descendere in aciem, v. prælium, in campum, v. forum, &c.) to go on and finish the cause, causam peragere v. perferre, ib. If an advocate betrayed the cause of his client, (si prævaricatus esset,) he was suspended from the exercise of his profession, (ei advocacionibus, interdictum est,) or otherwise punished, ibid.

An experienced advocate commonly assumed a young one in the same cause with him, to introduce him at the bar, and recommend him to notice, (producere, ostendere famæ, et assignare famæ, Plin. Ep. vi. 23.)

After the senate passed sentence, criminals used to be executed without delay. But Tiberius caused a decree to be made, that no one condemned by the senate should be put to death within ten days; that the emperor, if absent from the city, might have time to consider their sentence, and prevent the execution of it if he thought proper, Dio. lvii. 20. lviii. 27. Tacit. Annal. iii. 51. Suet. Tib. 75. Senec. tranq. an. 14.

5. DIFFERENT KINDS of PUNISHMENTS among the ROMANS.

PUNISHMENTS among the Romans were of eight kinds.

1. MULCTA vel damnum, a fine, which at first never exceeded two oxen and thirty sheep, or the valuation of them. See Lex ATRIA, Liv. iv. 30. But afterwards it was increased.

2. VINCULA, bonds, which included public and private custody; public, in prison, into which criminals were thrown after confession or conviction, Cic. de Divin. i. 25. Tacit. iii. 51. and private, when they were delivered to magistrates, or even to private persons, to be kept at their houses, (in libera custodia, as it was called,) till they should be tried, Sallust. Cat. 47. Liv. xxxix. 14. Tacit. vi. 3.

A prison (CARCER) was first built by Ancus Martius, Liv. i. 33. and enlarged by Servius Tullius; whence that part of it below ground built by him, was called TULLIANUM, Sallust. Cat. 55. Varr. de Lat. ling. iv. 32. or LAUTUMIÆ, i. e. loca ex quibus lapides excisi sunt, Fest. in voce. Liv. xxvi. 27. xxxii. 26. xxxvii. 5. xxxix. 44. in allusion to a place of the same kind built by Dionysius at Syracuse, Cic. Verr. v. 27. 55. Another part, or, as some think, the same part, from its security and strength, was called ROBUR, or rob, Festus. in voce. Liv. xxxviii. 59. Valer. Max. vi. 3. 1. Tacit. Annal. iv. 29.

Under the name of vincula were comprehended catenæ, chains; compedes vel pedicæ, fetters or bonds for the feet: manicæ, manacles or bonds for the hands; NERVUS, an iron bond or shackle for the feet or neck, Festus in voce; also a wooden frame with holes, in which the feet were put and fastened, the stocks; sometimes also the hands and neck; called likewise COLUMBÆ, Plaut. Rud. iii. 6. 30. Liv. viii. 28. Boiæ, leathern thongs, and also iron chains, for tying the neck or feet, Plaut. Asin. iii. 3. 5.

3. VERBERA, beating or scourging, with sticks or staves (fustibus); with rods, (virgis); with whips or lashes, (flagellis.) But the first were in a manner peculiar to the camp, where the punishment was called FUSTUARIUM, and the last to slaves, Horat. Epod. 4. Cic. Robur. perd. 4. Juvenal. x. 109. Cic. Verr. iii. 29. Rods only were applied to citizens, and the use of these too were forbidden by the Porcian law, Liv. x. 9. Sallust. Cat. 51. Cic. ib. But under the emperors citizens were punished with these, and more severe instruments, as with whips loaded with lead, (palumbatis.) &c.

4. TALIO, (similitudo supplicii vel vindictæ, hostimentum), a punishment similar to the injury, an eye for an eye, a limb for a limb, &c. But this punishment, although mentioned in the Twelve Tables, seems very rarely to have been inflicted, because by law the removal of it could be purchased by a pecuniary compensation, (talio vel pœna redimi poterat.) Gell. xx. 1.

5. IGNOMINIA vel Infamia. Disgrace or infamy was inflicted (inurebatur vel irrogabatur), either by the censors, or by law, and by the edict of the prætor. Those made infamous by a judicial sentence, were deprived of their dignity, and rendered incapable of enjoying public offices; sometimes also of being witnesses, or of making a testament; hence called INTESTABILES, Digest.

6. EXILIUM, banishment. This word was not used in a judicial sentence, but AQUÆ ET IGNIS INTERDICTIO, forbidding one the use of fire and water, whereby a person was banished from Italy, but might go to any other place he chose. Augustus introduced two new forms of banishment, called DEPORTATIO, perpetual banishment to a certain place: RELEGATIO, either a temporary or perpetual banishment of a person to a certain place, without depriving him of his rights and fortunes. See p. 63. Sometimes persons were only banished from Italy (ius Italiæ interdictum) for a limited time, Plin. Ep. iii. 9.

7. SERVITUS, slavery. Those were sold as slaves who did not give in their names to be enrolled in the censor's books, or refused to enlist as soldiers; because thus they were supposed to have voluntarily renounced the rights of citizens, Cic. Cæcin. 34. See p. 63.

8. MORS, death, was either civil or natural. Banishment and slavery were called a civil death. Only the most heinous crimes were punished by a violent death.

In ancient times it seems to have been most usual to hang malefactors, (infelici arbori suspendere,) Liv. i. 26. afterwards to scourge, (virgis cædere) and behead them, (securi percutere,) Liv. iii. 5. vii. 19. xxvi. 15. to throw them from the Tarpeian rock, (de saxo Tarpeio dejicere,) Id. vi. 20. or from that place in the prison called ROBURA, Festus. Valer. Max. vi. 31. also to strangle them (laqueo gulam, guttur, vel cervicem frangere) in prison, Id. v. 4. 7. Sallust. Cat. 55. Cic. Vatin. 11. Lucan. ii. 154.

The bodies of criminals, when executed, were not burnt or buried; but exposed before the prison, usually on certain stairs, called GEMONIÆ sc. scalæ, vel GEMONII gradus (quoddam gemitus locus esset); and then dragged with a hook, (unco tracti,) and thrown into the Tiber, Suet. Tib. 53. 61. 75. Vitell. 17. Tacit. Hist. iii. 74. Plin. vii. 40. s. 61. Valer. Max. vi. 3. 3. Juvenal. x. 66. Sometimes, however, their friends purchased the right of burying them.

Under the emperors, several new and more severe punishments were contrived; as, exposing to wild beasts, (ad bestias damnatio,) burning alive, (vivicomburium,) &c. When criminals were burnt, they were dressed in a tunic besmeared with pitch and other combustible matter; called TUNICA MOLESTA, Senec. Ep. 14. Juvenal. viii. 235. i. 155. Martial. x. 25. 5. as the Christians are supposed to have been put to death, Tacit. Annal. xv. 44. Pitch is mentioned among the instruments of torture in more ancient times, Plaut. Capt. iii. 4. 65. Lucret. iii. 1030.

Sometimes persons were condemned to the public works, to engage with wild beasts, or fight as gladiators, Plin. Ep. x. 40. or were employed as public slaves in attending on the public baths, in cleansing common sewers, or repairing the streets and highways, Id.

Slaves, after being scourged (sub furcâ cæsi), were crucified (in crucem acti sunt,) usually with a label or inscription on their breast, intimating their crime or the cause of their punishment, Dio. liv. 3. as was commonly done to other criminals when executed, Suet. Cal. 32. Dom. 10. Thus Pilate put a title or superscription on the cross of our Saviour, Matt. xxvii. 37. John xix. 19. The form of the cross is described by Dionysius, vii. 69. Vedius Pollio, one of the friends of Augustus, devised a new species of cruelty to slaves, throwing them into a fish pond, to be devoured by lampreys, (murænae,) Plin. ix. 23. s. 39. Dio. liv. 23.

A person guilty of parricide, that is, of murdering a parent or any near relation, after being severely scourged, (sanguineis virgis cæsus,) was sewed up in a sack, (culeo insatus,) with a dog, a cock, a viper, and an ape, and then thrown into the sea or a deep river, Cic. pro Rosc. Amer. ii. 25. 26. Senec. Clem. i. 23.

RELIGION of the HEATHEN.—ORIGIN of POLYTHEISM.

THIS is a very extensive subject, and would require of itself a volume. We can only give a few general sketches, interspersing some hints, which will show the necessity and propriety of seeking further information from other sources. Some have supposed the groupe of Heathen Deities to have taken rise from the custom introduced by the Poets, and practised both by Philosophers and Orators, of personifying the VIRTUES and VICES of the human heart; and no doubt there is some foundation for this opinion. If the deities of the nations, their various characteristics and attributes, be considered, it will immediately appear that their numbers have been increased, their characters embellished, and their exploits emblazoned by this circumstance. We cannot, consistently with our plan, give many instances of the truth of this observation. One or two must suffice. MINERVA is the goddess of wisdom, and she sprung from the brain of Jupiter, by the stroke of Vulcan's hammer. May we not clearly interpret this generation of wisdom's goddess, upon well known and obvious principles? Wisdom has always been supposed to be seated in the head; it is the fruit of much labour and application; it cannot be acquired in a high degree without great mental exertions; and it proceeds, as does every good gift, from the Most High. Hence the fiction of MINERVA'S being generated from the head of JUPITER, the king of the gods, by the stroke of VULCAN, the most laborious and industrious among the deities. VENUS is the goddess of beauty, and said to be produced from the foam of the sea, near the island of Cythera. Beauty is a female quality, highly prized; though a dangerous and precarious accomplishment. The splendour and instability of froth, as well as its emptiness, are fit emblems of beauty. The GRECIAN islands are to this day famous for producing beautiful women; and the sea is a most dangerous element to man.

2. Others have conceived the deities of the heathens to be no other than the great men and heroes of the earth: and their exploits, to be only their history, adorned and embellished by the Orators and Poets. Facts almost innumerable will justify this hypothesis. BELUS was an Assyrian monarch, and was worshipped after his decease as a god, under the name of BEL. JUPITER was the king of the gods, and born in Crete. A person of that name was really king there, exercised his sovereignty over that beautiful island, and was deified.

3. Others have supposed that many of the deities took their origin from the perversion or misapprehension of Scripture passages, faintly handed down by tradition. Thus the character of BACCHUS has been thought to be formed from those of Noah, Moses, and Joshua : and, surely, if we examine scripture accounts, and compare them with the character of BACCHUS, we shall find some ground for this supposition. BACCHUS was the god of wine ; bore a spear entwined with vine-leaves ; was the conqueror of India ; always young ; and performed many miraculous exploits. NOAH planted a vineyard, and was intoxicated with the fruit of the vine. The thyrsus and youth of BACCHUS, and the rod and perpetual vigour of Moses ; as well as the conquests and youth of Joshua, and those of Bacchus, bear a strong resemblance. Thus, also, HERCULES has been taken for the SAMSON of the Bible. It is needless to state the parallel in detail, the general resemblance must strike us very forcibly : both of them were remarkable for their great strength, displayed in the destruction of wild beasts ; both of their lives were subject to continual disquiet and danger ; both were slaves to female caprice, and remarkable for their attachment to women : and a woman was eventually the ruin of both. A detailed comparison between Moses and Bacchus shows still more clearly the justice of the remark, that scripture history (misrepresented or perverted,) has furnished materials for forming the characters of the heathen gods. Various derivations have been assigned to the name JUPITER, otherwise written JOVIS PATER, or DIISPATER, the father and king of the gods ; and it appears clear, that the word will admit of different etymologies, according to the view in which it is considered, and the language whence it may be supposed to spring. The word Jupiter, may be easily formed from the two Greek words Ζεὺς and πατήρ, in the vocative case, or state of invocation, Ζεῦ πάτερ, and its meaning or signification may be then readily discovered : Ζεὺς, Ζαῖ, Ζῆς, or Ζην, being clearly derived from Zaw vivo, and the proper meaning will then be, father of life. Again, Jovis pater, another of the names by which this god is distinguished is a compound word, the first part of which is commonly found in the oblique cases only, and may be derived from the Hebrew הָיָה. JAH or JEHOVAH, I am, or I am that I am ; pointing out the self-sufficiency, immutability, eternity, and incomprehensibility of the Deity. From which it appears, that the name and attributes of the true God, perverted or misapprehended by tradition, have given occasion to the various characters and worship applied to Jupiter.

4. The Trinity of the Scriptures, which in itself is a mystery incomprehensible by reason, has, in like manner, doubtless, given birth to the tryad of Plato, of the Persians, Indians, and other nations ; and the attempts to explain the doctrine of the Trinity, from principles of reason, have probably given rise to the immense multitude of heathen deities.

5. Others, with great appearance of reason, have derived the origin of many of the heathen deities from the heavenly bodies; which were first the subjects of admiration, and afterwards the objects of worship, on account of the extensive benefits derived from them to mankind. Thus PHŒBUS, ($\Phi\alpha\iota\beta\omicron\varsigma$,) otherwise called APOLLO, from $\phi\omega\varsigma$, was the god of the sun, sometimes also called SOL. DIANA on earth, was LUNA in heaven. CASTOR and POLLUX, ANDROMEDA, and others, were stars, and TELLUS, the goddess of the earth. For the same reason, viz. for the benefits, real or supposed, to be derived from them to man, adoration was paid to the deities of rivers, lakes, fountains, &c.

6. Still further: ALLEGORY has been sometimes successfully applied to account for the worship of many of the heathen deities. Thus MATTER, and its various modifications, are supposed to have been contemplated, especially by the Pythagoreans, under the names and characters of various gods. Thus the SATURNUS of the Romans, who was the Seater of the Saxons, and $\chi\epsilon\gamma\omega\varsigma$ of the Greeks, is supposed to mean original matter, or the hidden secret state of matter, out of which all visible forms are generated, and into which they sink again: whence this deity is said to have devoured his own children; and because this decay of forms is the work of time, he is called $\chi\epsilon\gamma\omega\varsigma$. He is fabled to have been married to OPS, because matter when united to form becomes visible: and OPS is called the mother of the gods, because the elements which they deified, were no objects of worship, till they were in a formed state, and became visible.

In confirmation of this sentiment, the Saxon Idol Seater, was represented by symbols expressive of this physiological character.

PROTEUS, also, who had the faculty of transforming himself into all shapes, has been supposed to represent the same first or primordial matter, which is capable of all forms. The SATYRS, whose name and signification are nearly allied to Saturn, are therefore said to have hid themselves in $\nu\lambda\eta$, which is an equivocal term, and signifies either wood or matter. It may be remarked, though rather foreign to our purpose, that Woden or Goden, (the letters W and G being convertible, and frequently used the one for the other, as in GALLIA and WALLIA,) was one of the Saxon gods, the god of war, and in very high estimation among the ancient Germans; and that our term for the Deity, viz. GOD, is borrowed from the Saxon, omitting the termination. The adjective, good, may have the same etymology.

We need not be surprised, therefore, to find that the gods of the Romans, hereafter mentioned, were very numerous: for they readily adopted the gods of the nations which they conquered; and sometimes conveyed their statues or images, with great ceremony, and at a vast expense, from foreign parts. So pliable was the spirit of Polytheism, that the worship of different deities seldom occasioned any feuds or animosities among their devotees.

The very idea of the existence of a multiplicity of gods, naturally relaxes the severity of religious sentiment ; the homage paid is merely external ; it does not engage the heart ; and the mind, distracted by unlimited variety, and without any fixed and determinate object of worship, readily distributes a portion of its regard, to gratify the partiality of a neighbour or friend.

For these reasons, although the senate considered themselves the guardians of the public religion, and particular officers, called ædiles, were annually appointed, whose duty it was, among other things, to prevent the introduction of new gods, or of new religious ceremonies ; so loose were the religious principles of the Romans, that the introduction or rejection of foreign deities rarely excited any alarm, and never produced any dangerous commotion.

The Christian system, on the contrary, not only because it combated their prejudices, and opposed the deep-rooted and favourite corruptions and passions of the human heart ; but because it narrowed the basis of religious homage, and condemned both the principles and practices of Pagan worship, raised the most violent resentment, and occasioned fierce and bloody persecutions.

The Jewish religion, if its professors had not been despised for their obscurity, the smallness of their number, and their bigoted attachment to their own ceremonies, which were by these ignorant idolaters supposed to be either unnecessary or ridiculous, would undoubtedly have been attended with the same effects.

RELIGION OF THE ROMANS.

1. The GODS whom they worshipped.

THESE were very numerous, and divided into Dii Majorum gentium, and Minorum gentium, Cic. Tusc. i. 13. in allusion to the division of senators. See p. 10.

The DII MAJORUM GENTIUM were the great celestial deities, and those called DII SELECTI.

The great celestial deities were twelve in number: *Dionys. vii. 72.

* These deities are generally considered to be the same as the twelve principal gods of the Greeks, from which people the Romans are too generally supposed to have received their notions of religion, their religious ceremonies, and their gods. It is not to be doubted, that after the beginning of the historic ages of Rome, the worship of the Grecian deities was in some degree introduced into Italy, and that their whole Olympus became subsequently naturalized in that country, after the works of Virgil, &c. and more especially the metamorphoses of Ovid, had yielded up to them the governance of the universe taken from the earlier gods of their native country. It should, however, be remarked, that the religious age had long been past ; and that almost as soon as we escape from the traditionary ages of the Roman people to that which may be depended upon as historical, we pass also from the period when the spirit of religion mingled with the constitution of society ; attaining to that in which its forms become the primary object of care to the people and the government, and when the religious establishment usurps the place of religion itself. All the mingling,

1. JUPITER, (Ζεὺς Πάρις, voc. Ζεὺ Πάρις,) the king of Gods and men; the son of Saturn and Rhea or Ops, the goddess of the earth; born and educated in the island of Crete; supposed to have dethroned his father, and to have divided his kingdom with his brothers; so that he himself obtained the air and earth, Neptune the sea, and Pluto the infernal regions;—usually represented as sitting on an ivory throne, holding a sceptre in his left hand, and a thunderbolt (fulmen) in his right, with an eagle; and Hebe, the daughter of Juno, and goddess of youth, or the boy Ganymēdes, the son of Tros, his cup-bearer, (pincerna vel pocillator,) attending on him; called JUPITER FERETRIUS, (a ferendo, quōd ei spolia opima afferebantur ferulo vel feretro gesta, Liv. i. 10. vel a feriendo, Plutarch, in Romulo; Omīne quōd certo dux ferit ense ducem, Propert. iv. 11. 46. Dionys. i. 34.) ELICIUS, (quōd se illum certo carminē e celo elicere posse credebant, Ovid. Fast. iii. 327. ut edoceret, quomodo prodigia fulminibus, aliove quo-viso missa, curarentur vel expiarentur, ibid. & Liv. i. 20.) STATOR CAPITOLINUS, and TONANS, which two were different, and had different temples, Dio. liv. 4. Suet. Aug. 29 & 91. TARPEIUS, LATIALIS, DIESPITER, (diēi et lucis pater) OPTIMUS MAXIMUS, OLYMPICUS, SUMMUS, &c. Sub Jove frigido, sub dio, under the cold air, Horat. Od. i. 1. 25. ii. 3. 23. Dextro Jove, by the favour of Jupiter, Pers. v. 114. Incolūmi Jove, i. e. Capitolio, ubi Jupiter colebatur, Horat. Od. iii. 5. 12.

2. JUNO, the wife and sister of Jupiter, queen of the gods, the goddess of marriage and of child-birth;—called JUNO REGINA vel regia: PRONUBA, (quōd nubentibus præesset, Serv. in Virg. Æn. iv. 166. Ovid. Ep. vi. 43. Sacris præfecta maritis, i. e. nuptialibus solemnitatibus, ib. xii. 65.) MATRONA, LUCINA, (quōd lucem nascentibus daret.) MONETA, (a monendo, because, when an earthquake happened, a voice was uttered from her temple, advising the Romans to make expiation by sacrificing a pregnant sow, Cic. divin. i. 45. ii. 32.) represented in a long robe (stola) and magnificent dress: sometimes sitting or standing in a light car, drawn by peacocks, attended by the AURÆ, or air nymphs, and by IRIS, the goddess of the rainbow. Junone secundā, by the favour of, Virg. Æn. iv. 45.

therefore, of religion in the constitution of the Roman state and people, bears the traces of the first Roman, Etruscan, or Italian superstitions and worship, without any other connexion with the mythology of Greece than that pervading principle which may be traced, according to Vico, in the infant institutions of all the early, and, if we may so express ourselves, contemporarily primeval people of antiquity. Even the supreme Twelve, so universally acknowledged to be common to Greece and Rome, and which probably did not become so till by degrees the traditions concerning those of the former country had been slowly transferred to those of the latter, were not recognized in the two countries by the same appellations. Indeed, there can be committed no greater error than to suppose the same religion to have sprung up spontaneously in two countries so little connected, even at a late period of antiquity, by the intercourse of either peace or war. Nor is any thing gained by the supposition, unsupported of itself, that the religion of one country was transplanted at an early period into the other; as the very exactness of the subsequent relation renders it impossible, that, if the naturalization had taken place at a period beyond the reach of history, the modifications, both in the form of worship and the traditional narrative, should not have been greater.—Ed.

3. MINERVA or PALLAS, the goddess of wisdom ; hence said to have sprung (cum clypeo prosiluisse, Ovid. Fast. iii. 841.) from the brain of Jupiter, by the stroke of Vulcan ; Ter. Heaut. v. 4. 13. also of war and of arms ; said to be the inventress of spinning and weaving, (lanificii et texturæ) of the olive, and of warlike chariots ; Ovid. ibid.—called Arripötens, Tritonia virgo, because she was first seen near the lake Tritónis in Africa ; Attica vel Cercopia, because she was chiefly worshipped at Athens ;—represented as an armed virgin, beautiful, but stern and dark-coloured, with azure or sky-coloured eyes, (glaucis oculis, γλαυκῶπις Ἀθηνῆς), shining like the eyes of a cat or an owl, (γλαυζ, -κος, noctua), Gell. ii. 26. having an helmet on her head, and a plume nodding formidably in the air ; holding in her right hand a spear, and in her left a shield covered with the skin of the goat Amalithæa, by which she was nursed, (hence called ÆGIS,) given her by Jupiter, whose shield had the same name, Virg. Æn. viii. 454. & ibi Serv. in the middle of which was the head of the Gorgon Medusa, a monster with snaky hair, which turned every one who looked at it into stone, ibid.

There was a statue of Minerva, (PALLADIUM), supposed to have fallen from heaven, which was religiously kept in her temple by the Trojans, and stolen from thence by Ulysses and Diomædes. Tolerare colo vitam tenuique Minervâ, i. e. lanificio non quæstuoso, by spinning and weaving, which bring small profit. Virg. Æn. viii. 409. Invitâ Minerva, i. e. adversante et repugnante naturâ, against nature or natural genius. Cic. Off. i. 31. Agere aliquid pingui Minervâ, simply, bluntly, without art, Columell. 1. pr. 33. xi. 1. 32. Abnormis sapiens, crassâque Minervâ, a philosopher without rules, and of strong rough common sense, Horat. Sat. ii. 2. Sus Minervam, sc. docet, a proverb against a person, who pretends to teach those who are wiser than himself, or to teach a thing of which he himself is ignorant, Cic. Acad. i. 4. Festus.—Pallas is also put for oil, Ovid. Ep. xix. 44. because she is said first to have taught the use of it.

4. VESTA, the goddess of fire. Two of this name are mentioned by the poets ; one the mother, and the other the daughter of Saturn, who are often confounded : but the latter chiefly was worshipped at Rome. In her sanctuary was supposed to be preserved the Palladium of Troy, (fatale pignus imperii Romani), Liv. xxvi. 27. and a fire kept continually burning by a number of virgins, called the Vestal Virgins ; brought by Æneas from Troy, Virg. Æn. ii. 297. hence hic locus es Vestæ, qui PALLADA servat et ignem, Ovid. Trist. iii. 1. 39. near which was the palace of Numa, ib. 40. Orat. Od. i. 2. 16.

5. CERES, the goddess of corn and husbandry, the sister of Jupiter ; worshipped chiefly at Eleusis in Greece, and in Sicily : her sacred rites were kept very secret.—She is represented with her head crowned with ears of corn or poppies, and her robes falling down to her feet, holding a torch in her hand. She is said to have wandered over the whole earth with a torch in her hand, which she lighted at Mount Ætna : (Hinc Cereris sacris nunc quoque læda da- tur, Ovid. Fast. iv. 494.) in quest of her daughter Proserpina, who was carried off by Pluto.—PLUTUS, the god of riches, is supposed to be the son of Ceres.

Ceres is called Legifera the lawgiver, because laws were the effect of husbandry, Plin. viii. 56. and Arcana, because her sacred rites were celebrated with great secrecy, Horat. Od. iii. 2. 27. and with torches; whence, et per lædifera mystica sacra Dea, Ovid. Ep. ii. 42. particularly at Eleusis in Attica, (sacra Eleusinia), from which, by the voice of a herald, the wicked were excluded; and even Nero, while in Greece, dared not to profane them, Suet. Ner. 34. Whoever entered without being initiated, although ignorant of this prohibition, was put to death, Lib. xxxi. 14. Those initiated were called MYSTÆ, Ovid. Fast. iv. 356. (α μυσ, premo,) whence mysterium. A pregnant sow was sacrificed to Ceres, because that animal was hurtful to the corn fields, Ovid. Pont. ii. 9. 30. Met. xv. 111. And a fox was burnt to death at her sacred rites, with torches tied around it; because a fox wrapt round with stubble and hay set on fire, being let go by a boy, once burnt the growing corn of the people of Carse, a town of the Æqui, Ovid. Fast. iv. 681. to 712. as the foxes of Samson did the standing corn of the Philistines, Judg. xv. 4.

Ceres is often put for corn or bread; as, Sine Cerere et Baccho friget Venus, without bread and wine love grows cold, Terent. Eun. iv. 5. 6. Cic. Nat. D. ii. 23.

6. NEPTUNE, (a nando, Cic. Nat. D. ii. 26. vel quodd mare terras obnubit, ut nubes cælum; a nuptu, id est, opertione; unde nuptiæ, Varr. L. L. iv. 10.) the god of the sea, and brother of Jupiter; —represented with a trident in his right hand, and a dolphin in his left; one of his feet resting on part of a ship: his aspect majestic and serene: sometimes in a chariot drawn by sea-horses, with a triton on each side; called Ææxus, Virg. Æn. iii. 74. because worshipped at Æge, a town in the island of Eubœa, Homer. Il. v. 20. Uterque Neptunus, the mare superum and inferum, on both sides of Italy: or Neptune who presides over both salt and fresh water, (liquentibus stagnis mariquæ salso), Catull. xxix. 3. Neptunia arva vel regna, the sea, Virg. Æn. viii. 695. Neptunius dux, Sex. Pompeius, Horat. Epod. ix. 7. who, from his power at sea, called himself the son of Neptune, Div. xlviii. 19. Neptunia Pergama vel Troja, because its walls are said to have been built by Neptune and Apollo, Ovid. Fast. i. 5. 5. Virg. Æn. ii. 625. at the request of Laomedon, the father of Priam, who defrauded them of their promised hire, (pacta mercede destituit), Horat. Od. iii. 3. 22. that is, he applied to that purpose the money which he had vowed to their service, Serv. in Virg. On which account Neptune was ever after hostile to the Trojans; Virg. Æn. ii. 610. and also to the Romans, Id. G. i. 502. Apollo was afterwards reconciled by proper atonement; being also offended at the Greeks for their treatment of Chryseis, the daughter of his priest Chryses, Serv. ib. whom Agamemnon made a captive, Ovid. Remed. Am. 469. Homer. Il. i.—The wife of Neptune was Amphitrite, sometimes put for the sea, Ovid. Met. i. 14.

Besides Neptune, there were other sea-gods and goddesses; Océanus, and his wife Tethys; Nereus, and his wife Doris, the Nereides, Thetis, Doto, Galatæa, &c. Triton, Proteus, Portunus, the son of Matuta or Aurora and Glaucus, Ino, Palemon, &c.

7. VENUS, the goddess of love and beauty, said to have been produced from the foam of the sea, near the island Cythæra; hence called Cythærea, Horat. Od. i. 4. 5. Virg. Æn. ib. 128. Marina, Id. iii. 26. 5. and by the Greeks, Ἀφροδίτη, ab ἀφρός, spuma: according to others, the daughter of Jupiter and the nymph Dione; hence called Dionæa mater, by her son Æneas, Virg. Æn. iii. 19. and hence Julius Cæsar was called Dionæus; as being descended from Iulus, the son of Æneas, Id. Ecl. ix. 47. Dionæo sub antro, under the cave of Venus, Horat. Od. ii. 1. 39.—the wife of Vulcan, but unfaithful to him, Ovid. Met. iv. 171. &c. worshipped chiefly at Paphos, Amāthus, -untis, and Idalia, v. -ium, in Cyprus; at Eryx in Sicily, and at Cnidus in Caria; hence called Cypris, -idis, Dea Paphia; Amathusia Venus, Tacit. Annal. iii. 62. Venus Idalia, Virg. Æn. v. 760. and ΕΑΥCΙΝΑ, Horat. Od. i. 2. 33. Cic. Verr. ii. 8. Regina Cnidia, Horat. Od. i. 30. 1. Venus Cnidia, Cic. Divin. i. 13. Verr. iv. 60. Alma decens, aurea, formosa, &c. also Cloacina or Cluacina, from cluere, anciently the same with luere or purgare, because her temple was built in the place where the Romans and Sabines, after laying aside their arms, and concluding an agreement, purified themselves, Plin. xv. 29. s. 36.—Also supposed to be the same with Libitina, the goddess of funerals, Dionys. iv. 15. whom some make the same with Proserpine, Plutarch. in Numa, 67.—often put for love, or the indulgence of it: Damnosa Venus, Horat. Ep. i. 18. 21. Sera juvenum Venus, eoque inexhausta pubertas, Tacit. de mor. Germ. 20.—for a mistress, Horat. Sat. i. 2. 119.—4. 113. Virg. Ec. iii. 68.—for beauty, comeliness, or grace, Plaut. Stich. ii. 1. 5. Tabulæ pictæ Venus, vel Venustas, quam Græci χάρμα vocant. Plin. xxxv. 10. s. 36. Dicendi veneres, &c. the Graces, Quinctilian, x. 1. Venerem habere, Senec. Benef. ii. 28. Cicero says there were more than one Venus, Nat. D. iii. 23. (VENUS dicta quidd ad omnes res veniret; atque ex ea venustas, Id. ii. 27. et VENERII, i. e. servi Veneris, Id. Cæcil. 17.)

The tree most acceptable to Venus, was the myrtle, Virg. Ecl. vii. 62. & Serv. in loc. Æn. v. 72. hence she was called MYRTEA, and by corruption MURCIA, Plin. xv. 29. s. 36. Plutarch. quæst. Rom. 20. Varr. L. L. iv. 32. Serv. in Virg. Æn. viii. 635. and the month most agreeable to her was April, because it produced flowers; hence called mensis VENERIS, Horat. Od. iv. 11. 15. on the first day of which, the matrons, crowned with myrtle, used to bathe, themselves in the Tiber, near the temple of FORTUNA VIRILIS, to whom they offered frankincense, that she would conceal their defects from their husbands, Ovid. Fast. iv. 139, &c.

The attendants of Venus were her son CUPID; or rather the Cupids, for there were many of them; but the two most remarkable, were one (Eros) who caused love, and the other (Anteros) who made it cease, or produced mutual love; painted with wings, a quiver, bow, and darts: the three GRACES, Gratia, vel Charites, *Aglai*a or Pasithea, Thalia, and Euphrosyne, represented generally naked, with their hands joined together; and NYMPHS dancing with the Graces, and Venus at their head, Horat. Od. i. 4. 5.—30. 6. ii. 8. 13. Senec. Benef. 1. 3.

8. VULCANUS vel Mulciber, the god of fire, (IGNIPOTENS, Virg. x. 243.) and of smiths; the son of Jupiter and Juno, and husband of Venus; represented as a lame blacksmith, hardened from the forge, with a fiery red face whilst at work, and tired and heated after it. He is generally the subject of pity and ridicule to the other gods, as a cuckold and lame.

Vulcan is said to have had his workshop (officina) chiefly in Lemnos, and in the Æolian or Lipari islands near Sicily, or in a cave of Mount Ætna. His workmen were the Cyclopes, giants with one eye in their forehead, who were usually employed in making thunderbolts for Jupiter, Virg. Æn. viii. 416. &c. Hence Vulcan is represented in spring as eagerly lighting up the fires in their toil-some or strong-smelling workshops, (graves ardens urit officinas.) to provide plenty of thunderbolts for Jupiter to throw in summer, Horat. Od. i. 4. 7. called avidus, greedy, Id. iii. 58. as Virgil calls ignis, fire, edas, from its devouring all things, Æn. ii. 758.—Sometimes put for fire, ib. 311. v. 662. vii. 77. Horat. Sat. 15. 74. Plaut. Amph. i. 1. 185. called luteus, from its colour, Juvenal. x. 133. from luteum v. luteum, woad, the same with glastum, Cæs. B. G. v. 14. which dies yellow; herba qua cœrulium inficiunt, Vitruv. vii. 14. Plin. xxxiii. 5. s. 26. Croceo mutabit vellera luto, Virg. Ecl. 44. luteum ovi, the yolk of an egg, Plin. x. 53. or rather from lutum, clay, luteus, dirty. Cicero also mentions more than one Vulcan, Nat. D. iii. 22. as indeed he does in speaking of most of the gods.

9. MARS, or Mavors, the god of war, and son of Juno: worshipped by the Thracians, Getæ, and Scythians, and especially by the Romans, as the father of Romulus, their founder, called Gradius, (a gradiendo;) Ovid. Fast. ii. 861. painted with a fierce aspect, riding in a chariot, or on horseback, with an helmet and a spear. Mars, when peaceable, was called QUIRINUS, Serv. in Virg. i. 296.—BELLONA, the goddess of war, was the wife or sister of Mars.

A round shield (ANCILE, quod ab omni parte recisum est, Ovid. Fast. iii. 377.) is said to have fallen from heaven, in the reign of Numa, supposed to be the shield of Mars; which was kept with great care in his sanctuary, as a symbol of the perpetuity of the empire, by the priests of Mars, who were called SALII; and that it might not be stolen, eleven others were made quite like it, (ancilia, -ium, vel -iorum.)

The animals sacred to Mars were the horse, the wolf, and the woodpecker, (picus.) Mars is often, by a metonymy, put for war or the fortune of war; thus, Æquo, vario, ancipite, incerto Marte pugnatum est, with equal, various, doubtful success; Mars communis, the uncertain events of war, Cic. Accendere Martem cantu, i. e. pug-

to be the daughters of Jupiter and Mnemosyne or memory ; Liöpe, the muse of heroic poetry ; Clio, of history ; Melpomène, of tragedy ; Thalia, of comedy and pastorals ; Eräto, of love-songs and hymns ; Euterpe, of playing on the flute ; Terpsichöre, of the harp ; Polyhymnia, of gesture and delivery, also of the three-stringed instrument called Barbitos, vel -on ; and Urania, of astronomy ; Auson. Eidyll. 20. Diodor. iv. 7. Phornutus de Natura Deorum.

The Muses frequented the mountains Parnassus, Helicon, Piërus, &c. the fountains Castalius, Aganippe, or Hypocrène, &c. ; whence they had various names, Heliconides, Parnassides, Pierides, Castalides, Thespiädes Pemphiädes.

12. DIANA, the sister of Apollo, goddess of the woods and of hunting ; called Diana on earth, Luna in heaven, and Hecäte in hell ; hence tergemina, diva triformis, Tria virginis ora Dianæ, Virg. Æn. iv. 52. Also Lucina, Illithya, et Genitalis seu Genetyllis ; because she assisted women in child-birth ; Noctiluca, and siderum regina, Horat. Trivia, from her statues standing where three ways met.

Diana is represented as a tall beautiful virgin, with a quiver on her shoulder, and a javelin or bow in her right hand, chasing deer or other animals.

These twelve deities were called CONSENTES, -um ; (Varr. L. L. vii. 38. quia in consilium Jovis adhibebantur, Augustin. de Civit. Dei. iv. 23. Duodecim enim deos advocat, Senec. Q. Nat. ii. 41. a consensu, quasi consentientes: vel a censendo, i. e. consulo :) and are comprehended in these two verses of Ennius : as quoted by Apuleius, de Deo Socratis :

Juno, Vesta, Minerva, Ceres, Diana, Venus, Mars, Mercurius, Jovi, Neptunus, Vulcanus, Apollo.

On ancient inscriptions they are thus marked : J. O. M. i. e. Jovi optimo maximo, CETERISQ. DIS CONSENTIBUS. They were also called DII MAGNI, Virg. Æn. iii. 12. Ovid. Amor. iii. 6. and CELESTES, Vitruv. i. 8. Virg. Æn. i. 391. Cic. Legg. ii. 8. or NOBILES, Ovid. Met. i. 172. and are represented as occupying a different part of heaven from the inferior gods, who are called FLEBS, ibid.

The DII SELECTI were Eight in Number.

1. SATURNUS, the god of time ; the son of Cælus or Uranus, and Terra or Vesta.*

Titan, his brother, resigned the kingdom to him on this condition, that he should rear no male offspring. On which account he is feigned by the poets to have devoured his sons as soon as they were born, but Rhea found means to deceive him, and bring up by stealth Jupiter and his two brothers.

Saturn being dethroned by his son Jupiter, fled into Italy, and gave name to Latium, from his lurking there, (a latendo.) He was kindly received by Janus king of that country. Under Saturn is supposed to have been the golden age, when the earth produced food in abundance spontaneously; when all things were in common, Virg. G. i. 125. and when there was an intercourse between the gods and men upon earth; which ceased in the brazen and iron ages, when even the virgin Astrea, or goddess of justice, herself, who remained on earth longer than the other gods, at last, provoked by the wickedness of men, left it. Ovid. Met. i. 150. The only goddess then left was Hope, Id. Pont. i. 6. 29.

* Saturnus is usually considered to be the Cronus of the Greeks ; but the story of the latter was undoubtedly blended with that of the origin of the Roman worship of Saturn was purely Italian.—Ed.

Saturn is painted as a decrepid old man, with a scythe in his hand, or a serpent biting off its own tail.

2. JANUS, the god of the year, who presided over the gates of heaven, and also over peace and war. He is painted with two faces, (bifrons vel biceps.) His temple was open in time of war, and shut in time of peace, Liv. i. 19. A street in Rome, contiguous to the Forum, where bankers lived, was called by his name; thus Janus summus ab imo, the street Janus from top to bottom, Horat. Ep. i. 1. 54. medius, the middle part of it; id. Sat. ii. 3. 18. Cic. Phil. vi. 5. Thoroughfares (transitiones perviæ) from him were called Jani, and the gates at the entrance of private houses, Janua, Cic. N. D. ii. 27. thus dextro JANO portæ CARMENTALIS, Liv. ii. 49.†

3. RHEA, the wife of Saturn: called also Ops, Cybele, Magna Mater, Mater Deorum, Berecynthia, Idæa, and Dyndymène, from three mountains in Phrygia: she was painted as a matron, crowned with towers, (turrata), sitting in a chariot drawn by lions, Ovid. Fast. iv. 249. &c.

Cybele, or a sacred stone, called by the inhabitants the mother of the gods, was brought from Pessinus in Phrygia to Rome, in the time of the second Punic war, Liv. xxix. 11 & 14.

4. PLUTO, the brother of Jupiter and king of the infernal regions; called also Orcus, Jupiter infernus et Stygius. The wife of Pluto was PROSERPINA, the daughter of Ceres whom he carried off as she was gathering flowers in the plains of Enna in Sicily; called Juno inferna or Stygia, often confounded with Hecate and Luna or Diana; supposed to preside over sorceries or incantations, (veneficiis præesse.)

There were many other infernal deities, of whom the chief were the FATES or Destinies, (PARCÆ, a parcendo vel per ANTIPHRASIN, quod nemini parcant), the daughters of Jupiter and Themis, or of Erebus and Nox, three in number; Clotho, Lachesis, and Atropos, supposed to determine the life of men by spinning; Ovid. Pont. i. 8. 64. Ep. xii. 3. Clotho held the distaff, Lachæsis span, and Atropos cut the thread: when there was nothing on the distaff to spin, it was attended with the same effect, Ovid. Amor. ii. 6. 46. Sometimes they are all represented as employed in breaking the threads, Lucan. iii. 18. The FURIES, (Furiæ vel Diræ, Eumenides vel

* Janus was exclusively a Roman deity.—Ed.

Erinyes.) also three in number, Alecto, Tysiphōne, and Megara; represented with wings, and snakes twisted in their hair; holding in their hands a torch and a whip to torment the wicked; MORS vel Lethum, death; SOMNUS, sleep, &c. The punishments of the infernal regions were sometimes represented in pictures, to deter men from crimes, Plaut. Captiv. v. 4. 1.

5. BACCHUS, the god of wine, the son of Jupiter and Semele; called also Liber or Lycæus, because wine frees the minds of men from care: described as the conqueror of India; represented always young, crowned with vine or ivy-leaves, sometimes with horns, hence called CORNIGER, Ovid. Ep. xiii. 33. holding in his hand a thyrsus or spear bound with ivy; his chariot was drawn by tigers, lions, or lynxes, attended by Silenus, his nurse and preceptor, Bacchanals (frantic women, Bacchæ, Tryades vel Menades), and Satyra, Ovid. Fast. iii. 715.—770. Ep. iv. 47.

The sacred rites of Bacchus, (Bacchanalia, ORGIA vel Dionysia.) were celebrated every third year, (hence called trieterica.) in the night-time, chiefly on Cithæron and Isménus in Bœotia, on Ismârus, Rhödope, and Edon in Thrace.

PRIAPUS, the god of gardens, was the son of Bacchus and Venus, Serv. in Virg. G. iv. iii.

6. SOL, the sun, the same with Apollo; but sometimes also distinguished, and then supposed to be the son of Hyperion, one of the Titans or giants produced by the earth; who is also put for the sun.

Sol was painted in a juvenile form, having his head surrounded with rays, and riding in a chariot drawn by four horses, attended by the Horæ or four seasons, Ver, the spring; Æstas, the summer; Autumnus, the autumn; and Hiems, the winter, Ovid. Met. ii. 25.

The sun was worshipped chiefly by the Persians, under the name of Mithras.

7. LUNA, the moon, as one of the Dii Selecti, was the daughter of Hyperion, and sister of Sol. Her chariot was drawn only by two horses.

8. GENIUS, the daemon or tutelary god, who was supposed to take care of every one from his birth during the whole of life. Places and cities, as well as men, had their particular Genii.

It was generally believed that every person had two Genii, the one good, and the other bad. Defraudare genium suum, to pinch one's appetite, Ter. Phorm. i. 1. 10. Indulgere genio, to indulge it, Pers. v. 151.

Nearly allied to the Genii, were the LARES and PENATES, household gods, who presided over families.

The Lares of the Romans appear to have been the manes of their ancestors, Virg. Æn. ix. 255. Small waxen images of them, clothed with the skin of a dog, were placed round the hearth in the hall, (in atrio.) On festivals they were crowned with garlands, Plaut. Trin. i. 1. and sacrifices were offered to them, Juvenal. xii. 89. Suet. Aug. 31. There were not only Lares domestici et familiares, but also Compitales et viales, militares et marini, &c.

The Penates (sive a penu; est enim omne quo vescuntur homines, PENUS; sive quod penitus insident, Cic. Nat. Deor. ii. 27. Dii per quos penitus spiramus, Macrob. Sat. iii. v. Idem ac Magni Dii, Jupiter, Juno, Minerva, Serv. ad Virg. Æn. ii. 296.) were worshipped in the innermost part of the house, which was called Penetralia; also Impluvium or Compluvium, Cic. et Suet. Aug. 92. There were likewise Publici Penates, worshipped in the Capitol, Liv. iii. 17. under whose protection the city and temples were. These Æneas brought with him from Troy, Virg. Æn. ii. 293. 717. iii. 148. iv. 598. Hence Patrii Penates, familiaresque, Cic. pro Dom. 57.

Some have thought the Lares and Penates the same; and they seem sometimes to be confounded, Cic. P. Quinct. 26 & 27. Verr. iv. 22. They were, however, different, Liv. i. 29. The Penates were of divine origin; the Lares of human. Certain persons were admitted to the worship of the Lares, who were not to that of the Penates. The Penates were worshipped only in the innermost part of the house, the Lares also in the public roads, in the camp, and on sea.

Lar is often put for a house or dwelling: Apto cum lare fundus, Horat. Od. i. 12. 44. Ovid. Fast. vi. 95 & 362. So Penates; thus, Nostris succede Penatibus hospes, Virg. Æn. viii. 123. Plin. Pan. 47. Ovid. Fast. vi. 529.

DII MINORUM GENTIUM, or INFERIOR DEITIES.

THESE were of various kinds:

1. Dii INDIGETES, or heroes ranked among the gods on account of their virtues and merits: of whom the chief were,—

HERCULES, the son of Jupiter, and Alcmena, wife of Amphitryon, king of Thebes; famous for his twelve labours and other exploits; squeezing two serpents to death in his cradle, killing the lion in the Nemeæan wood, the hydra of the lake Lerna, the boar of Erymanthus, the brazen-footed stag on mount Menælus, the harpies in the lake Stymphalus, Diomedes, and his horses, who were fed on human flesh, the wild bull in the island Crete, cleansing the stables of Augeas, subduing the Amazons and Centaurs, dragging the dog Cerberus from hell, carrying off the oxen of the three-bodied Geryon from Spain, fixing pillars in the fretum Gaditanum, or Streights of Gibraltar, bringing away the golden apples of the Hesperides, and killing the dragon which guarded them, slaying the giant Antæus, and the monstrous thief Cacus, &c.

Hercules was called Alcides, from Alcaus the father of Amphitryon; and Tyrnthius from Tiryus, the town where he was born; Oëtaus, from mount Oëte, where he died. Being consumed by a poisoned robe, sent him by his wife Dejanira in a fit of jealousy, which he could not pull off, he laid himself on a funeral pile, and ordered it to be set on fire.

Hercules is represented as possessed of prodigious strength, holding a club in his right hand, and clothed in the skin of the Nemean lion.

Men used to swear by Hercules in their asseverations; Hercle, Mehercle, vel -es, so under the title of DIUS FIDIUS, i. e. Deus fidei, the god of faith or honour; thus, per Dian Fidium, Plaut. me Dius fidius, sc. juvet, Sallust. Cat. 35.

Hercules was supposed to preside over treasures; hence Dives amico Hercule, Horat. Sat. ii. 6. 12. dextro Hercule, by the favour of Hercules, Pers. ii. 11. Hence those who obtained great riches consecrated (pollucebant) the tenth part to Hercules, Cic. Nat. D. iii. 36. Plaut. Stich. i. 3. 80. Bacch. iv. 4. 15. Plutarch. in Crasso, inist.

CASTOR and POLLUX, sons of Jupiter and Leda, the wife of Tyndarus king of Sparta, brothers of Helena and Clytemnestra, said to have been produced from two eggs; from one of which came Pollux and Helena, and from the other, Castor and Clytemnestra. But Horace makes Castor and Pollux to spring from the same egg, Sat. ii. 1. 26. He however also calls them FRATRES HELENÆ, Od. i. 3. 2.—the gods of mariners, because their constellation was much observed at sea:—called Tyndaridæ, Gemini, &c. Castor was remarkable for riding, and Pollux for boxing; Horat. Od. i. 12. 26. represented as riding on white horses, with a star over the head of each, and covered with a cap; hence called FRATRES PILEATI, Festus, Catull. 35. There was a temple at Rome, dedicated to both jointly, but called only the temple of Castor, Dio. xxxvii. 8. Suet. Cas. 10.

Æneas, called Jupiter indiges; and Romulus, QUIRINUS, after being ranked among the gods, either from Quires a spear, or Cures, a city of the Sabines, Ovid. Fast. ii. 475.—480.

The Roman emperors also after their death were ranked among the gods.

2. There were certain gods, called SEMONES, (quasi semihomines, minores diis et majores hominibus.) Liv. viii. 20. as,

PAN, the god of shepherds, the inventor of the flute, said to be the son of Mercury and Penelope, Cic. worshipped chiefly in Arca-dia; hence called Arcadius and Mænalius, vel -ides, et Lycæus, from two mountains there; Tegeæus, from a city, &c. called by the Romans Inuus;—represented with horns and goats' feet.

Pan was supposed to be the author of sudden frights or causeless alarms; from him called Panici terrores, Dionys. v. 16.

FAUNUS and SYLVANUS, supposed to be the same with Pan. The wife or daughter of Faunus was Fauna or Fatua, called also Marica and BJNA DEA, Macrob. Sat. i. 12.

There were several rural deities called FAUNI, who were believed to occasion the night-mare, (ludibria noctis vel epialten immittere.) Plin. xxv. 3.

VERTUMNUS, who presided over the change of seasons and merchandize;—supposed to transform himself into different shapes. Propert. iv. 2. Hence Vertumnis natus iniquis, an inconstant man, Horat. Sat. ii. 7. 14.

POMONA, the goddess of gardens and fruits; the wife of Vertumnus, Ovid. Met. xiv. 623. &c.

FLORA, the goddess of flowers; called Cloris by the Greeks, Lactant. i. 20. 6. Ovid. Fast. v. 195.

TERMINUS, the god of boundaries; whose temple was always open at the top, Festus. (Se supra ne quid nisi sidera cernat, Ovid. Fast. ii. 671.) And when, before the building of the capitol, all the temples of the other gods were unhallowed, (exaugurarentur,) it alone could not, Liv. i. 55. v. 54. Jovi ipsi regi noluit concedere, Gell. xii. 6. which was reckoned an omen of the perpetuity of the empire, Liv. ibid.

PALES, a god or goddess who presided over flocks and herds; usually feminine. Pastoria PALES, Flor. i. 20.

HYMEN vel HYMENÆUS, the god of marriage.

LAVERNA, the goddess of thieves, Horat. Ep. i. 16. 60.

VACUNA, who presided over vacation, or respite from business, Ovid. Fast. vi. 307.

AVERRUNCUS, the god who averted mischiefs, (mala averuncabat,) Varr. vi. 5.—There were several of these.

FASCINUS, who prevented fascination or enchantment.

ROBIGUS, the god, and RUBICO, the goddess who preserved corn from blight, (a rubigine,) Gell. v. 13.

MEPHITIS, the goddess of bad smells, Serv. in Virg. Æn. vii.

84. CLOACINA, of the cloaca, or common sewers.

Under the Semōnes were comprehended the NYMPHS, (nymphae,) female deities, who presided over all parts of the earth; over mountains, Oreādes; woods, Dryades, Hamadryades, Napa; rivers and fountains, Naiades vel Naiades; the sea, Nereides, Oceanitides, &c. —Each river was supposed to have a particular deity, who presided over it; as Tiberinus over the Tiber, Virg. Æn. viii. 31. and 77. Eridanus over the Po; taurino vultu, with the countenance of a bull, and horns; as all rivers were represented, (quod flumina sunt atrocia, ut tauri;* Festus; vel propter impetus et mugitus aquarum, Vet. Schol. in Horat. Od. iv. 14. 25. Sic tauriformis volatutur Aufidus.) Virg. G. iv. 371. Ovid. Met. iv. pr. Ælian. ii. 33. Claudian. Cons. Prob. 214. &c. The sources of rivers were particularly sacred to some divinity, and cultivated with religious ceremonies, Senec. Ep. 41. Temples were erected; as to Clitumnis, Plin. Ep. viii. 8. to Ilissus, Pausan. i. 19. small pieces of money were thrown into them, to render the presiding deities propitious; and no person was allowed to swim near the head of the spring, because the touch of a naked body was supposed to pollute the consecrated waters, ibid. & Tacit. Annal. xiv. 22. Thus no boat was allowed to be on the lacus Vadimonis, Plin. Ep. viii. 20. in which were several floating islands, ibid. & Plin. ii. 95. s. 96. Sacrifices were also offered to fountains; as by Horace to that of Blandusia, Od. iii. 13. whence the rivulet Digentia probably flowed, Ep. i. 18. 104.

* Quia sonitum lauri edebant, they roared like bullocks.

Under the SEMONES were also included the judges in the infernal regions, MINOS, Æacus, and Rhadamanthus; CHARON, the ferryman of hell, (PORTITOR, Virg. Æn. vi. 298. PORTHEMUS, -eos, Juvenal. iii. 266.) who conducted the souls of the dead in a boat over the rivers Styx and Acheron, and extracted from each his portorium or freight, (naulum), which he gave an account of to Pluto; hence called PORTITOR: the dog CERBERUS, a three-headed monster, who guarded the entrance of hell.

The Romans also worshipped the virtues and affections of the mind, and the like; as, Piety, Faith, Hope, Concord, Fortune, Fame, &c. Cic. Nat. D. ii. 23. even vices and diseases, Id. legg. ii. 11. Nat. D. iii. 25. Juvenal. i. 115. and under the emperors likewise foreign deities, as, Isis, Osiris, Anubis, of the Egyptians: Lucan. viii. 831.—also the winds and the tempests; Eurus, the east wind; Auster or Notus, the south wind; Zephyrus, the west wind; Boreas, the north wind; Africus, the south-west: Corus, the north-west; and ÆOLUS, the god of winds, who was supposed to reside in the Lipari islands, hence called Insulæ Æolæ; AURÆ, the air nymphs or sylphs, &c.

The Romans worshipped certain gods, that they might do them good, and others, that they might not hurt them; as, Averruncus and Robigus. There was both a good Jupiter, and a bad: the former was called DIOJVIS, (a juvando), or Diespiter, and the latter, VEJOVIS, or VEDIUS, Gell. v. 12. But Ovid makes Vejovis the same with Jupiter parvis, or non magnus, Fast. iii. 445. &c.

II. MINISTRI SACRORUM, the MINISTERS of SACRED THINGS.

THE ministers of religion, among the Romans, did not form a distinct order from the other citizens. (See p. 94.) They were usually chosen from the most honourable men in the state.

Some of them were common to all the gods, (omnium deorum sacerdotes; others appropriated to a particular deity, (uni aliqui numini addicti.) Of the former kind were,—

I. The PONTIFICES, (a posse facere, quia illis jus erat sacra faciendi; vel potius a ponte faciendo, nam ab iis publicius est factus primùm, et restitutus saepe cum ideo sacra et uls et cis Tiberim fiant, Varr. L. L. iv. 15. Dionys. ii. 73. iii. 45.) were first instituted by Numa, Liv. iv. 4. Dionys. ii. 73. chosen from among the patricians; four in number, till the year of the city 454, when four more were created from the plebeians, Liv. x. 6. Some think that originally there was only one Pontifex; as no more are mentioned in Livy, i. 20. ii. 2. Sylla increased their number to 15, Liv. Ep. 89. They were divided into MAJORES and MINORES, Cic. Harusp. R. 6. Liv. xxii. 57. Some suppose the 7 added by Sylla and their successors to have been called minores; and the 8 old ones, and such as were chosen in their room, MAJORES. Others think the majores were patricians, and the minores plebeians. Whatever be in this, the cause of the distinction certainly existed before the time of Sylla, Liv. ib. The whole number of the Pontifices was called COLLEGIUM, Cic. Dom. 12.

The Pontifices judged in all cases relating to sacred things; and, in cases where there was no written law, they prescribed what regulations they thought proper. Such as neglected their mandates, they could fine according to the magnitude of the offence. Dionysius says, that they were not subject to the power of any one, nor bound to give account of their conduct even to the senate, or people, ii. 73. But this must be understood with some limitations; for we learn from Cicero, that the tribunes of the commons might oblige them, even against their will, to perform certain parts of their office, Dom. 45. and an appeal could be made from their decree, as from all others, to the people, Ascon. in Cic. Mil. 12. It is certain, however, that their authority was very great, Cic. Dom. 1. 51. Harusp. R. 10. It particularly belonged to them to see that the inferior priests did their duty, Dionys. ibid. From the different parts of their office, the Greeks called them ἱεροδιδασκαλοι, ἱερωται, ἱεροδρακτες, ἱεροφαναται, Sacrorum doctores, administratores, custodes et interpretes, ibid.

From the time of Numa, the vacant places in the number of Pontifices were supplied by the college, Dionys. ii. 73. till the year 650; when Domitius, a tribune, transferred that right to the people, Suet. Ner. 2. Cic. Rull. ii. 7. Vell. ii. 12. Sylla abrogated this law, Ascon. in Cic. Cæcil. 3. but it was restored by Labienus, a tribune, through the influence of Julius Cæsar, Dio. xxxvii. 37. Antony again transferred the right of election from the people to the priests, Dio. xlv. fin. thus Lepidus was chosen Pontifex M. irregularly, ibid. furto creatus, Vell. ii. 61. In confusione rerum ac tumultu, pontificatum maximum intercept, Liv. Epit. 117. Pansa once more restored the right of election to the people, Cic. Ep. ad Brut. 5. After the battle of Actium, permission was granted to Augustus, to add to all the fraternities of priests, as many above the usual number as he thought proper; which power the succeeding emperors exercised, so that the number of priests was thenceforth very uncertain, Dio. li. 20. liii. 17.

The chief of the Pontifices was called PONTIFEX MAXIMUS, (quodd maximus rerum, quæ ad sacra, et religiones pertinent, judex sit, Festus: Judex atque arbiter rerum divinarum atque humanarum, Id. in ORDO SACERDOTUM;) which name is first mentioned by Livy, iii. 54. He was created by the people, while the other pontifices were chosen by the college, Liv. xxv. 5. commonly from among those who had borne the first offices in the state, ibid. The first plebeian Pontifex M. was T. Coruncanius, Liv. Ep. xviii.

This was an office of great dignity and power. The Pontifex M. was supreme judge and arbiter in all religious matters, Liv. i. 20. ix. 46. He took care that sacred rites were properly performed; and, for that purpose, all the other priests were subject to him, Liv.

ii. 2. He could hinder any of them from leaving the city, although invested with consular authority, Liv. Ep. xix. l. xxxvii. 5. Tacit. Annal. iii. 58. 51. and fine such as transgressed his orders, even although they were magistrates, Liv. ibid. xl. 2. 42. Cic. Phil. xi. 8.

How much the ancient Romans respected religion and its ministers, we may judge from this; that they imposed a fine on Tremellius, a tribune of the commons, for having, in a dispute, used injurious language to Lepidus, the Pontifex M. (Sacrorumque quam magistratum jus potentius fuit), Liv. Ep. xlvii. But the Pontifices appear, at least in the time of Cicero, to have been, in some respects, subject to the tribunes, Cic. Dom. 45.

It was particularly incumbent on the Pontifex M. to take care of the sacred rites of Vesta, Ovid. Fast. iii. 417. Gell. i. 12. Senec. Contr. i. 2. If any of the priestesses neglected their duty, he reprimanded, Liv. iv. 44. or punished them, xxviii. 11. sometimes, by a sentence of the college, capitally, Cic. Har. resp. 7. legg. ii. 9. Liv. viii. 15. xxii. 57.

The presence of the Pontifex M. was requisite in public and solemn religious acts; as when magistrates vowed games or the like, Liv. iv. 27. xxxi. 9. xxxvi. 2. made a prayer, Suet. Cl. 22. or dedicated a temple, Liv. ix. 46. also when a general devoted himself for his army, Liv. viii. 9. x. 7. 28. to repeat over before them, the form of words proper to be used, (his verba præire, v. carmen præfari), ibid. & v. 41. which Seneca calls PONTIFICALE CARMEN, Consol. ad Marc. 13. It was of importance that he pronounced the words without hesitation, Valer. Max. viii. 13. 2. He attended at the Comitia; especially when priests were created, that he might inaugurate them, Liv. xxvii. 8. xl. 42. likewise when adoptions or testaments were made, Tacit. Hist. i. 15. Gell. v. 19. xv. 27. Cic. Dom. 13. Plin. Pan. 37. At these the other pontifices also attended: hence the comitia were said to be held, or what was decreed in them to be done, apud pontifices, vel pro collegio pontificum, in presence of, ibid. Solennia pro pontifice suscipere, to perform the due sacred rites in the presence, or according to the direction of the Pontifex Maximus, Liv. ii. 27. Any thing done in this manner was also said Pontificio jure fieri, Cic. Dom. 14. And when the Pontifex M. pronounced any decree of the college in their presence, he was said PRO COLLEGIO RESPONDERE, Cic. pro Dom. 53. The decision of the college was sometimes contrary to his own opinion. He however was bound to obey it, Liv. xxxi. 9. What only three pontifices determined was held valid, Id. resp. Har. 6. But in certain cases, as in dedicating a temple, the approbation of the senate, or of a majority of the tribunes of the commons, was requisite, Liv. ix. 46. The people, whose power was supreme in every thing, (cujus est summa potestas omnium rerum, Cic. ibid.) might confer the dedication of a temple on whatever person they pleased, and force the Pontifex M. to officiate, even against his will; as they did in the case of Flavius, Liv. ibid. In some cases the Flamines and Rex Sacrorum seem to have judged together with the Pontifices, Cic. Dom. 49. and even to have been reckoned of the same college, ibid. 52.

It was particularly the province of the pontifices to judge concerning marriages, Tacit. Annal. i. 10. Dio. xlvii. 44.

The Pontifex Maximus and his college had the care of regulating the year and the public calendar, Silet. Jul. 40. Aug. 31. Macrob. Sat. i. 14. called FASTI KALENDARES; because the days of each month, from kalends to kalends, or from beginning to end, were marked in them through the whole year, what days were fasti, and what nefasti, &c. Festus; the knowledge of which was confined to the pontifices and patricians, Liv. iv. 3. till C. Flavius divulged them, (fastos circa forum in albo proposuit.) Liv. ix. 46. (See p. 160.) In the Fasti of each year were also marked the names of the magistrates, particularly of the consuls, Liv. ix. 18. Valer. Max. vi. 2. Cic. Sext. 14. Att. iv. 8. Pis. 13. Thus, enumeratio fastorum, quasi annorum, Cic. Fam. v. 12. Tusc. i. 28. FASTI memores, permanent records, Horat. Od. iii. 17. 4. iv. 14. 4. picti, variegated with different colours, Ovid. Fast. i. 11. signantes tempora, Id. 657. Hence a list of the consuls engraved on marble, in the time of Constantius, the son of Constantine, as it is thought, and found accidentally by some persons digging in the Forum, A. D. 1545, are called FASTI CONSULARES, or the Capitoline marbles, because beautified, and placed in the capitol, by Cardinal Alexander Farnese.

In latter times it became customary to add on particular days, after the name of the festival, some remarkable occurrence: Thus, on the Lupercalia, it was marked (ascriptum est) that Antony had offered the crown to Cæsar, Cic. Phil. ii. 34.—To have one's name thus marked (ascriptum) in the Fasti, was reckoned the highest honour, Cic. Ep. ad Brut. 15. Ovid. Fast. i. 9. Tacit. Annal. i. 15. (whence, probably, the origin of canonization in the church of Rome;) as it was the greatest disgrace to have one's name erased from the Fasti. Cic. Sext. 14. Pis. 13. Verr. ii. 53. iv. fn. Tacit. Annal. iii. 17.

The books of Ovid, which describe the causes of the Roman festivals for the whole year, are called FASTI, Ovid. Fast. i. 7. (FASTORUM libri appellantur, in quibus totius anni fit descriptio, Festus, quia de consulibus et regibus editi sunt, Isid. vi. 8.) The six first of them only are extant.

In ancient times the Pontifex M. used to draw up a short account of the public transactions of every year, in a book, (in album efferebat, vel potius referebat,) and to expose this register in an open place at his house, where the people might come and read it; (proponebat tabulam domi, potestas ut esset populo cognoscendi;) which continued to be done to the time of Mucius Scævola, who was slain in the massacre of Marius and Cinna. These records were called in the time of Cicero, ANNALES maximi, Cic. Orat. ii. 12. Gell. iv. 5. as having been composed by the Pontifex Maximus.

The annals composed by the Pontifices before Rome was taken by the Gauls, called also COMMENTARIJ, perished most of them with the city, Liv. vi. 1. After the time of Sylla, the Pontifices seem to have dropt the custom of compiling annals; but several private persons composed historical accounts of the Roman affairs; which, from their resemblance to the pontifical records in the simplicity of their narration, they likewise styled ANNALES; as Cato, Pictor, and Piso, Cic. ibid. Liv. i. 44. 55. ii. 40. x. 9. 37. &c. Dionys. iv. 7. 15. Gell. i. 19. Hortensius, Vell. ii. 16. So also Tacitus.

The memoirs (ἱστορικὰ), which a person wrote concerning his own actions, were properly called COMMENTARII, Cic. Fam. v. 12. Syll. 16. Verr. v. 21. Suet. Aug. 74. Tib. 61. as Julius Cæsar modestly called the books he wrote concerning his wars, Cic. Brut. 75. Suet. Cæs. 56. and Gellius calls Xenophon's book concerning the words and actions of Socrates, (ἱστορικὰ, Memorabilia Socratis), xiv. 3. But this name was applied to any thing which a person wrote, or ordered to be written, as a memorandum for himself or others, (quæ commeminisse opus esset, notes to help the memory;) as the heads of a discourse which one was to deliver; Cic. Brut. 44. Quintilian. iv. 1. 69. x. 7. 30; notes taken from the discourse or book of another; Id. ii. 11. 7. iii. 8. 67. or any book whatever, in which short notes or memorandums were set down: Thus Commentarii regis Numæ, Liv. i. 31 & 32. Servi Tullii, ib. 60. Eumenis, xl. 11. 6. regum, Cic. Rabir. perd. 5. Cæsaris, Cic. Att. xiv. 14. Trajani, Plin. Ep. x. 106. Hence, a commentarius, a clerk or secretary, Gruter. p. 89. Cælius, in writing to Cicero, calls the acta publica, or public registers of the city, COMMENTARIUS RERUM URBANARUM, Cic. Fam. iii. 11.

In certain cases the Pontifex M. and his college had the power of life and death, Cic. Har. resp. 7. legg. ii. 9; but their sentence might be reserved by the people, Ascon. in Cic. pro Mil. 12. Liv. xxxvii. 51. xl. 42.

The Pontifex M. although possessed of so great a power, is called by Cicero, PRIVATUS, Cat. i. 3. as not being a magistrate. But some think that the title Pontifex Maximus is here applied to Scipio by anticipation; he not having then obtained that office, according to Paterculus, ii. 3. contrary to the account of Appian, B. Civ. i. p. 359. and Cicero himself elsewhere calls him simply a private person, Off. i. 22. Livy expressly opposes Pontifices to privatus, v. 52.

The Pontifices wore a robe bordered with purple, (toga prætexta), Liv. xxxiii. 28. Lamprid. Alex. Sev. 40. and a woollen cap, (Galerus, Pileus vel Tutulus, Festus & Varr. vi. 3.) in the form of a cone, with a small rod (virgula) wrapt round with wool, and a tuft or tassel on the top of it; called APEX, Serv. in Virg. Æn. ii. 683. viii. 664. x. 270. often put for the whole cap, Liv. vi. 41. Cic. legg. i. 1. thus, irato timere regum apices, to fear the tiara nodding on the head of an enraged Persian monarch, Horat. Od. iii. 21. 19. or for a woollen bandage tied round the head, which the priests used instead of a cap, for the sake of coolness, Serv. ibid. Sulpicius Galba was deprived of his office on account of his cap having fallen (apex prolapsus) from his head in the time of a sacrifice, Valer. Max. i. 1.

4. Hence apex is put for the top of any thing ; as montis apex, Sil. xii. 709. or for the highest honour or ornament ; as, apex senectutis est auctoritas, Cic. Sen. 17.

In ancient times the Pontifex M. was not permitted to leave Italy, Liv. xxviii. 38. 44. Dio. Fragm. 62. The first Pontifex M. freed from that restriction was P. Licinius Crassus, A. U. 618. Liv. Epit. 59. so afterwards Cæsar, Suet. 22.

The office of Pontifex M. was for life, Dio. lxi. 15. on which account Augustus never assumed that dignity while Lepidus was alive, Suet. Aug. 31. which Tiberius, Dio. lvi. 30. and Seneca, de clem. i. 10. impute to his clemency ; but with what justice, we may learn from the manner in which Augustus behaved to Lepidus in other respects. For after depriving him of his share in the triumvirate, A. U. 718. Dio. xlix. 12. and confining him for a long time to Circeji under custody, Suet. 16. Dio. ibid. he forced him to come to Rome against his will, A. U. 736. and treated him with great indignity, Dio. liv. 15.—After the death of Lepidus, A. U. 741. Augustus assumed the office of Pontifex Maximus, ibid. 27. Ovid. Fast. iii. 420. which was ever after held by his successors, and the title even by Christian emperors to the time of Gratian, Zosim. iv. 36. or rather of Theodosius ; for on one of the coins of Gratian, this title is annexed. When there were two or more emperors, Dio informs us, that one of them only was Pontifex M. liii. 17. but this rule was soon after violated, Capitolin. in Balbin. 8. The Hierarchy of the church of Rome is thought to have been established partly on the model of the Pontifex M. and the college of Pontifices.

The Pontifex M. always resided in a public house, (habitavit, sc. in sacra via, domo publica, Suet. Cæs. 46.) called REGIA, Plin. Ep. iv. 11. 6. (quod in ea sacra a rege sacrificulo erant solita usurpari, Festus ; vel quod in ea rex sacrificulus habitare consuesset, Serv. in Virg. Æn. viii. 363.) Thus when Augustus became Pontifex Maximus, he made public a part of his house ; and gave the REGIA, (which Dio calls the house of the Rex sacrorum,) to the Vestal Virgins ; to whose residence it was contiguous, Dio. liv. 27. whence some suppose it to be the same with the Regia Numa, the palace of Numa, Ovid. Trist. iii. 1. 30. to which Horace is supposed to allude under the name of monumenta regis, Od. i. 2. 13. and Augustus, Suet. 76.—said afterwards to sustain the atrium of Vesta, Ovid. Fast. vi. 263. called ATRIUM REGIUM, Liv. xxvi. 27. Others suppose it different. It appears to have been the same with that regia mentioned by Festus in EQUUS OCTOBER ; in which was the sanctuary of Mars, Gell. iv. 6. Plutarch. Q. Rom. 96. for we learn from Dio that the arms of Mars, i. e. the Ancilia, were kept at the house of Cæsar, as being Pontifex M. xlv. 17. Macrobius says that a ram used to be sacrificed in it to Jupiter every Nendina or market-day, by the wife of the Flamen dialis, (FLAMINICA,) Sat. i. 16.

A Pontifex M. was thought to be polluted by touching and even by seeing a dead body ; Senec. consol. ad Marc. 15. Dio. liv. 28. 35. lvi. 31. as was an augur, Tacit. Annal. i. 62. So the high Priest among the Jews, Levit. xxi. 11. Even the statue of Augustus was removed from its place that it might not be violated by the sight of slaughter, Dio. lx. 13. But Dio seems to think that the Pontifex M. was violated only by touching a dead body, liv. 28.

II. AUGURES, anciently called AUSPICES, Plutarch. Q. Rom. 72. whose office it was to foretel future events, chiefly from the flight, chirping, or feeding of birds, (ex avium gestu vel garritu et spectione, Festus.) and also from other appearances, Cic. Fam. vi. 6. Horat. Od. iii. 27. &c. a body of priests, (amplissimi sacerdotii collegium, Cic. Fam. iii. 10.) of the greatest authority in the Roman state, Liv. i. 36. because nothing of importance was done respecting the public, either at home or abroad, in peace or in war, without consulting them, (nisi auspiciò, Liv. i. 36. vi. 41. sine auspiciis, Cic. divin. i. 2. nisi augurio acto, Id. 17. ii. 36. Varr. v. 6. vel capto, Suet. Aug. 95.) and anciently in affairs of great consequence, they were equally scrupulous in private, Cic. div. i. 16.

AUGUR is often put for any one who foretold futurity, Cic. divin. ii. 3. 4. Fam. vi. 6. So Augur Apollo, i. e. qui augurio præest, the good augury, Horat. Od. i. 2. 32. Virg. Æn. iv. 376. AUSPEX denoted a person who observed and interpreted omens, (auspicia vel omina), Horat. Od. iii. 27. 8. particularly the priest who officiated at marriages, Juvenal. x. 336. Cic. Cluent. 5. Plaut. Cas. prol. 86. Suet. Cl. 26. Liv. xlii. 12. In later times, when the custom of consulting the auspices was in a great measure dropt, Cic. Nat. D. i. 15. ii. 3. Legg. ii. 13. those employed to witness the signing of the marriage contract, and to see that every thing was rightly performed, were called AUSPICES NUPTIARUM, Cic. Divin. i. 46. otherwise Proxêneta, conciliatores, καταυυπιον προνέτι. Hence auspex is put for a favourer or director; thus Auspex legis, Cic. Att. ii. 7. Auspices captorem operum, favourers, Virg. Æn. iii. 20. Diis Auspiciibus, under the direction or conduct of, Id. iv. 45. So auspice mûsâ, Horat. Ep. i. 3. 13. Teucro. Od. i. 7. 27.

AUGURIUM and AUSPICIUM are commonly used promiscuously, Virg. Æn. i. 392. Cic. div. i. 47. but they are sometimes distinguished. Auspicium was properly the foretelling of future events, from the inspection of birds; augurium, from any omens or prodigies whatever, Non. v. 30. So Cic. Nat. D. ii. 3. but each of these words is often put for the omen itself, Virg. Æn. iii. 89. 499. AUGURIUM SALUTES, when the augurs were consulted whether it was lawful to ask safety from the gods, Dio. xxxvii. 24. li. 21. Suet. Aug. 31. Tacit. Annal. xii. 23. Civ. div. i. 47. The omens were also called ostenta, portenta, monstra, prodigia, (quia ostendunt, portendunt, monstrant, prædicunt.) Cic. div. i. 42.

The auspices taken before passing a river, were called PEREMNIA, Festus. Cic. Nat. D. ii. 37. Div. ii. 36. from the beaks of birds, as it is thought, or from the points of weapons, EX ACUMINIBUS, a kind of auspices peculiar to war, ibid. both of which had fallen into disuse in the time of Cicero, ibid.

The Romans derived their knowledge of augury chiefly from the Tuscans; and anciently their youth used to be instructed as carefully in this art, as afterwards they were in the Greek literature, Liv. ix. 36. Cic. legg. ii. 9. For this purpose, by a decree of the senate, six of the sons of the leading men at Rome were sent to each of the 12 states of Etruria, to be taught, Cic. div. i. 41. Valerius Maximus says ten, i. 1. It should probably be in both authors, one to each.

Before the city of Rome was founded, Romulus and Remus are said to have agreed to determine by augury (auguriis legere) who should give name to the new city, and who should govern it when built. Romulus chose the Palatine hill, and Remus the Aventine, as places to make their observations, (templa ad inaugurandum.) Six vultures first appeared as an omen or augury (augurium) to Remus; and after this omen was announced or formally declared, (nunciato augurio), or as Cicero calls it, decantato, Divin. i, 47. see p. 81 & 82. twelve vultures appeared to Romulus. Whereupon each was saluted king by his own party. The partisans of Remus claimed the crown to him from his having seen the omen first; those of Romulus, from the number of birds. Through the keenness of the contest they came to blows, and in the scuffle Remus fell. The common report is, that Remus was slain by Romulus for having in derision leapt over his walls, Liv. i. 7.

After Romulus, it became customary that no one should enter upon an office without consulting the auspices. Dionys. iii. 35. But Dionysius informs us, that in his time this custom was observed merely for form's sake. In the morning of the day on which those elected were to enter on their magistracy, they rose about twilight, and repeated certain prayers under the open air, attended by an augur, who told them that lightning had appeared on the left, which was esteemed a good omen, although no such thing had happened. This verbal declaration, although false, was reckoned sufficient, Dionys. ii. 6.

The augurs are supposed to have been first instituted by Romulus, three in number, one to each tribe, Liv. x. 6. as the Haruspices, Dionys. ii. 22. and confirmed by Numa, ibid. 64. The fourth was added, probably by Servius Tullius, when he increased the number of tribes, and divided the city into four tribes, Id. iv. 34. Liv. i. 13. The augurs were at first all patricians, till A. U. 454, when five plebeians were added, Liv. x. 9. Sylla increased their number to fifteen, Liv. Ep. lxxxix. They were at first chosen, as the other priest, by the Comitia Curiata, Dionys. ii. 64. and afterwards underwent the same changes as the pontifices, Liv. iii. 37. See p. 245.

The chief of the augurs was called MAGISTER COLLEGII.

The augurs enjoyed this singular privilege, that, of whatever crime they were guilty, they could not be deprived of their office, Plin. Ep. iv. 8. because, as Plutarch says, Q. Rom. 97. they were intrusted with the secrets of the empire.—The laws of friendship were anciently observed with great care among the augurs, and no one was admitted into their number, who was known to be inimical to any of the college, Cic. Fam. iii. 10. In delivering their opinions about any thing in the college, the precedency was always given to age, Cic. Sen. 18.

As the Pontifices prescribed solemn forms and ceremonies, so the augurs explained all omens, Cic. Harusp. 9. They derived tokens (signa) of futurity chiefly from five sources; 1st, from appearances in the heavens, as thunder or lightning, 2d, from the singing or flight of birds, Stat. Theb. iii. 482. 3d, from the eating of chickens, 4th, from quadrupeds, and 5th from uncommon accidents, called Diræ v. -a.—The birds, which gave omens by singing, (OSCINES) were the raven, (corvus.) the crow, (cornix.) the owl, (noctua vel bubo.) the cock, (gallus gallinaceus.) &c. Festus. Plin. x. 20. s. 22. 29. s. 42.—Those which gave omens by flight, (ALITES vel PRÆPITES.) were the eagle, vulture, &c. ib. Gell. vi. 6. Serv. in. Virg. Æn. iii. 361. Cic. div. i. 47. Nat. D. ii. 64.—The manner in which chickens fed (PULLI.) Cic. div. ii. 34. see p. 82. was much attended to in war; Plin. x. 22. s. 24. Liv. x. 40. and contempt of their intimations was supposed to occasion signal misfortunes: as in the case of P. Claudius in the first Punic war; who, when the person who had the charge of the chickens (PULLARIUS) told him they would not eat, which was esteemed a bad omen, ordered them to be thrown into the sea, saying, Then let them drink. After which, engaging the enemy, he was defeated with the loss of his fleet, Cic. Nat. D. ii. 3. div. i. 16. Liv. Ep. xix. Valer. Max. i. 4. 3. Concerning ominous birds, &c. see Statius, Theb. iii. 502. &c.

The badges of the augurs (Ornamenta auguralia, Liv. x. 7.) were, 1. a kind of robe, called TRABEA, striped with purple, (virgata vel plamata, a trabibus dicta.) according to Servius made of purple and scarlet, (ex purpurâ et cocco mistum.) in Virg. Æn. vii. 612. So Dionysius, speaking of the dress of the Salii, ii. 70. who describes it as fastened with clasps, ibid. hence bibaphum, i. e. purpuram bis tinctam, cogitare, to desire to be made an augur, Cic. Fam. ii. 16. bibapho vestire, to make one, Att. ii. 9.—2. A cap of a conical shape, like that of the pontifices, ibid.—3. A crooked staff, which they carried in their right hand, to mark out the quarters of the heavens, (quo regiones cæli determinarent.) called LITUUS, (baculus v. -um, sine nodo aduncus, Liv. i. 18. Incurvum et leviter a summo inflexum bacillum, quod ab ejus litui, quo canitur, similitudine nomen invenit, Cic. divin. i. 17. Virga brevis, in parte qua robustior est, incurva, Gell. v. 8.)

An augur made his observations on the heavens, (SERVABAT de cælo v. cælum, Cic. div. ii. 35. Dom. 15. Phil. ii. 32. Lucan. i. 601. v. 395.) usually in the dead of the night, (post mediam noctem, Gell. iii. 2. media nocte, Liv. xxxiv. 14. cum est SILENTIUM, Festus: nocte SILENTIO, Liv. ix. 38. viii. 23. aperto cælo, it aut apertis uti liceat lucernis, Plutarch. Q. R. 71. Id silentium dicimus in auspicio, quod omnivito caret, Cic. div. ii. 44.) or about twilight, Dionys. ii. 5.

The augur took his station on an elevated place, called ARX or TEMPLUM, Liv. i. 6. vel TABERNACULUM, Liv. iv. 7. Cic. div. ii. 35.

which Plutarch calls ἀναμν, in Marcell. p. 300—where the view was open on all sides ; and to make it so, buildings were sometimes pulled down. Having first offered up sacrifices, and uttered a solemn prayer, (EFFATA, plur. Sero. Virg. Æn. vi. 197. whence effari templum, to consecrate, Cic. Att. xiii. 42. hinc FANA nominata quoddam pontifices in sacrando fati sunt finem, Varr. L. L. v. 7.) he sat down (sedem cepit in SOLIDA SELLA), with his head covered, (capite velato), and, according to Livy, i. 18. with his face turned to the east ; so that the parts towards the south were on the right, (partes dextræ), and those towards the north on the left, (laevæ.) Then he determined with his lituus, the regions of the heavens from east to west, and marked in his mind some object straight forward, (signum contra animo finivit), at as great a distance as his eyes could reach : within which boundaries he should make his observation, Liv. i. 18. This space was also called TEMPLUM, (a tuendo : locus augurii aut auspicii causâ quibusdam conceptis verbis finitus, Varr. L. L. vi. 2. Donat. in Ter. iii. 5. 42.) Dionysius gives the same description with Livy of the position of the augur, and of the quarters of the heavens, ii. 5. so Hyginus, de limit. But Varro makes the augur look towards the south, which he calls pars antica ; consequently, the pars sinistra was on the east, and dextra on the west : that on the north he calls postica, ibid. In whatever position the augur stood, omens on the left among the Romans were reckoned lucky : Plaut. Pseud. ii. 4. 72. Epid. ii. 2. 1. Sero. in Virg. Æn. ii. 693. ix. 631. Stat. Theb. iii. 493. Cic. legg. iii. 3. Div. ii. 35. Gell. v. 12. Ovid. Trist. i. 8. 49. Dionys. ii. 5. but sometimes omens on the left are called unlucky ; Virg. Ecl. i. 18. ix. 15. Suet. Cl. 7. Vit. 9. Ovid. Epist. ii. 115. Trist. iv. 3. 69. in imitation of the Greeks, among whom the augurs stood with their faces to the north ; and then the east, which was the lucky quarter, was on the right. (Sinistrum, quod bonum sit, nostri nominaverunt, externi, (sc. Græci,) dextrum, Cic. div. ii. 36.) Hence dexter is often put for felix vel faustus, lucky or propitious, Virg. Æn. iv. 579. viii. 302. and sinister for infelix, infaustus vel funestus, unlucky or unfavourable, Id. i. 444. Plin. Ep. i. 9. vii. 28. Tacit. Hist. v. 5. Thunder on the left was a good omen for every thing else but holding the comitia, Cic. div. ii. 18. 35. The croaking of a raven (corvus) on the right, and of a crow (cornix) on the left, was reckoned fortunate, and vice versâ, Cic. div. i. 7. & 39. In short, the whole art of augury among the Romans was involved in uncertainty, ibid. It seems to have been at first contrived, and afterwards cultivated, chiefly to increase the influence of the leading men over the multitude.

The Romans took omens (omina captabant) also from quadrupeds crossing the way, or appearing in an unaccustomed place, (Juvenal. xiii. 63. Horat. Od. iii. 27. Liv. xxi. ult. xxii. 1.) from sneezing, (ex sternutatione), spilling salt on the table* and other accidents of that kind, which were called DIRA, sc. signa, or DIRÆ, Cic. de divin. i. 16. ii. 40. Dio. xl. 18. Ovid. Amor. i. 12. These the augurs explained, and taught how they should be expiuted. When they did so, they were said commentari, Cic. Amic. 2. If the omen was good, the phrase was, IMPETRITUM, INAUGURATUM EST, Plaut. Asin. ii. 11. and hence it was called Augurium impetrativum vel optatum, Serv. in Virg. Æn. v. 190. Many curious instances of Roman superstition, with respect to omens and other things, are enumerated, Plin. 28. 2. as among the Greeks, Pausan. iv. 13.—Cæsar, in landing at Adrumetum in Africa with his army, happened to fall on his face, which was reckoned a bad omen; but he, with great presence of mind, turned it to the contrary: for, taking hold of the ground with his right hand, and kissing it, as if he had fallen on purpose, he exclaimed, I take possession of thee, O Africa, (TEXEO TE, AFRICA,) Dio. xlii. fin. Suet. Jul. 59.

Future events were also prognosticated by drawing lots, (sortibus ducendis, Cic. div. ii. 33. thus, Oracula sortibus æqualis ducuntur, Id. i. 18. that is, being so adjusted, that they had all an equal chance of coming out first, Plaut. Cas. ii. 6. 35.) These lots were a kind of dice (tali v. tesseræ) made of wood, Plaut. Cas. ii. 6. 32. of gold, Suet. Tib. 14. or other matter, Plaut. ibid. 46. Pausan. Messen. iv. 3. Eliac. v. 25. with certain letters, words or marks, inscribed on them, Cic. div. ii. 41. They were thrown commonly into an urn, ibid. sometimes filled with water, Plaut. ibid. 28 & 33. and drawn out by the hand of a boy, or of the person who consulted the oracle. The priest of the temple explained the import of them, Cic. div. i. 34. the lots were sometimes thrown like common dice, and the throws esteemed favourable or not, as in playing, Suet. Tib. 14. Propert. iv. 9. 19. Sortes denotes not only the lots themselves, and the answer returned from the explanation of them, thus, Sortes ipsas et cetera, quæ erant ad sortem, i. e. ad responsum reddendum parata, disturbavit simia, Cic. div. i. 34. Liv. viii. 24; but also any verbal responses whatever of an oracle, (sortes quæ vaticinatione funduntur, quæ oracula verius dicimus,) Cic. div. ii. 33 & 56. Dicta per carmina sortes, Horat. art. p. 403. So Liv. i. 56. v. 15. Virg. Æn. iv. 346, vi. 72. Ovid. Met. i. 368 & 381. &c. Thus ORACULUM is put both for the temple, Cic. Font. 10. Ep. ad Brut. 2. and the answer given in it, Cic. div. i. 1. 34 & 51. &c. Tacitus calls by the name of Sortes the manner which the Germans used to form conjectures about futurity. They cut the branch of a tree into small parts or slips (in surculos,) and distinguishing these slips by certain marks, scattered them at random, (temere ac fortuito,) on a white cloth. Then a priest, if the presage was made for the public, (si publicè consulèretur,) if in private, the master of a family, having prayed to the gods, and looking to heaven, took up each of the slips three times, and interpreted it according to the mark impressed on it, Tact. de mor. G. 10. Of prophetic lots, those of Præneste were the most famous, Cic. div. ii. 41. Suet. Tib. 63. Domit. 15. Stat. Sylv. 1. 3. 80. Livy mentions among unlucky omens the lots of Cære to have been diminished in their bulk, (extenuata), xxi. 62. and of Falerii, xxii. 1. Omens of futurity were also taken from names, Plaut. Pers. iv. 4. 73. Bacch. ii. 3. 50. Those who foretold futurity by lots, or in any manner whatever, were called Sortilegi; Lucan. ix. 581. which name Isidorus applies to those who, upon opening any book at random, formed conjectures from the meaning of the first line or passage which happened to turn up, viii. 9. Hence in later writers we read of the Sortes Virgilianæ, Homericæ, &c. Sometimes select verses were written on slips of paper, (in pittanceis), and being thrown into an urn, were drawn out like common lots; whence of these it was said, Sors excidit, Spartian. Adrian. 2. Lamprid. Alex. Sev. 14. —Those who foretold future events by observing the stars, were called Astrologi, Cic. Divin. i. 38. 39. ii. 42. Verr. ii. 52. MATHEMATICI,* Suet. Aug. 94. Tib. Cal. 57. Tacit. Hist. i. 22. Juvenal. vi. 561. xiv. 248. GENETHIACI, Gell. xiv. 1. from genēsīs vel genitura, the nativity or natal hour of any one, or the star which happened to be then rising, (sidus natalitium, Cic. div. ii. 43.) Juvenal. xiv. 248. Suet. Tit. 9. and which was supposed to determine his future fortune; called also Horoscōpus (ab horā inspicienda), thus, Geminus, horoscope, varo (for vario) producis genio; O natal hour, although one and the same, thou producest twins of different dispositions, Pers. vi. 18. Hence a person was said habere imperatoriam genesim, to whom an astrologer had foretold at his birth that he would be emperor, Suet. Vesp. 14. Dom. 10. Those astrologers were also called CHALDÆI or BABYLONII, because they came originally from Chaldæa or Babylonia, Strab. xvi. 739. or Mesopotamia, i. e. the country between the conflux of the Euphrates and Tigris, Plin. vi. 28. Diodor. ii. 29. Hence Chaldaicis rationibus eruditus, skilled in astrology, Cic. div. ii. 47. Babylonica doctrina, astrology, Lucret. v. 726.—nec Babylonios tentāris numeros, and do not try astrological calculations, i. e. do not consult an astrologer; Horat. Od. i. 11. these used to have a book, (ephemēris, v. plur. -ides), in which the rising and setting, the conjunction, and other appearances of the stars, were calculated. Some persons were so superstitious, that in the most trivial affairs of life they had recourse to such books, Plin. 29. 1. which Juvenal ridicules, vi. 576. An Asiatic astrologer (Phryx Augur, et Indus), skilled in astronomy (astrorum mundique peritus), was consulted by the rich; the poor applied to common fortune-tellers, (sortilēgi vel divini), who usually sat in the Circus Maximus, ibid. which is therefore called by Horace fallax, Sat. i. 6. 113.

Those who foretold future events by interpreting dreams, were called Conjectores; by apparent inspiration, haliōli v. divini; vates v. vaticinatores, &c.

Persons disordered in their mind, (melancholici, cardiāci, et phrenetici;) were supposed to possess the faculty of presaging future events, Cic. div. i. 38. These were called by various other names; CERRITI or Ceriti, Plaut. Amph. ii. 2. 144. Horat. Sat. ii. 3. 278. because Ceres was supposed sometimes to deprive her worshippers of their reason, Non. i. 213. also LARVATI, Larvarum pleni, i. e. furiosi et mente moti, quasi Larvis et spectris exterriti, Festus. Plaut. Men. v. 4. 2. and LYMPHATICI, or lymphati, Virg. Æn. vii. 377. Liv. vii. 17. (a nymphis in furorem acti, νυμφοληκτοι, Varro. L. L. vi. 5. qui speciem quandam e fonte, id est effigium nymphæ viderint, Festus;) because the nymphs made those who saw them mad, Ovid. Ep. iv. 49. Isidore makes lymphaticus the same with one seized with the hydrophobia, (qui aquam timeat, ὑδροφοβος), x. litera L. Pavor lymphaticus, a panic fear, Liv. x. 28. Senec. Ep. 13. Nummi auri lymphatici, burning in the pocket, as eager to get out, or to be spent, Plaut. Pan. i. 2. 132. Mens lymphata Maræotico, intoxicated, Horat. Od. i. 37. 14. As hellebore was used in curing those who were mad, hence elleborosus, for insanus, Plaut. Rud. iv. 3. 67. Those transported with religious enthusiasm were called FANATICI, Juvenal. ii. 113. iv. 123. Cic. divin. ii. 57. Dom. 60. from FANUM, a fari, because it was consecrated by a set form of words, (fando;) Festus, & Varr. L. L. v. 7.—OR FROM FAUNUS, (qui primus fani conditor fuit;) Serv. in Virg. G. 1. 10. From the influence of the moon on persons labouring under certain kinds of insanity, they are called by later writers LUNATICI.

HARUSPICES, ab harugâ, i. e. ab hostiâ, (Donat. in Ter. Phorm. iv. 4. 28. vel potius a victimis, aut extis victimarum in ara inspiciendis;) called also EXTISPICES, Cic. Div. ii. 11. Non. i. 53. who examined the victims and their entrails after they were sacrificed, and from thence derived omens of futurity; Stat. Theb. iii. 456. also from the flame, smoke, and other circumstances attending the sacrifice; as if the victim came to the altar without resistance, stood there quietly, fell by one stroke, bled freely, &c. These were favourable signs. The contrary are enumerated, Virg. G. iii. 186. Lucan. i. 609. &c. They also explained prodigies, Cic. Cat. iii. 8. Div. i. 3. Suet. Aug. 19. Plin. vii. 3. Their office resembled that of the augurs; but they were not esteemed so honourable: hence, when Julius Cæsar admitted Ruspina, one of them, into the senate, Cicero represents it as an indignity to the order, Fam. vi. 18. Their art was called HARUSPICINA, v. haruspicium disciplina, Cic. div. i. 2. 41. and was derived from Etruria, where it is said to have been discovered by one Tagus, Cic. div. ii. 23. Ovid. Met. xv. 553. Lucan. i. 637. Censorin. nat. d. 4. and whence Haruspices were often sent for to Rome, Liv. v. 15. xxvii. 37. Cic. Cat. iii. 8. Lucan. i. 584. Martial. iii. 24. 3. They sometimes came from the east; thus Armenius and Comagēnus haruspex, Juvenal. vi. 549. Females also practised this art, (ARUSPICÆ;) Plaut. Mil. Glor. iii. 1. 99. The college of the Haruspices was instituted by Romulus, Dionys. ii. 22. Of what number it consisted is uncertain. Their chief was called SUMMUS HARUSPEX, Cic. div. ii. 24.

Cato used to say, he was surprised that the Haruspices did not laugh when they saw one another, Cic. Nat. D. i. 26. Divin. ii. 24. their art was so ridiculous; and yet wonderful instances are recorded of the truth of their predictions, Liv. xxv. 16. Sallust. Jug. 63. Tacit. Hist. i. 27. Suet. Galb. 19. Suet. Cæs. 81. Dio. xlv. 18.

III. QUINDECENVIRI sacris faciundus; these had the charge of the Sibylline books; inspected them by the appointment of the senate in dangerous junctures; and performed the sacrifices which they enjoined. It belonged to them in particular to celebrate the secular games, Horat. de Carm. sac. 72. Tacit. Annal. ii. 11. vi. 12. and those of Apollo, Dio. liv. 49. They are said to have been instituted on the following occasion.

A certain woman, called Amalthæa, from a foreign country, is said to have come to Tarquinius Superbus, wishing to sell nine books of Sibylline, or prophetic oracles. But upon Tarquin's refusal to give her the price which she asked, she went away, and burnt three of them. Returning soon after, she demanded the same price for the remaining six. Whereupon being ridiculed by the king, as a senseless old woman, she went and burnt other three; and coming back, still demanded the same price for the three which remained. Gellius says, that the books were burnt in the king's presence, i. 19. Tarquin, surprised at the strange conduct of the woman, consulted the augurs what to do. They, regretting the loss of the books which had been destroyed, advised the king to give the price required. The woman therefore having delivered the books, and having desired them to be carefully kept, disappeared, and was never afterwards seen, Dionys. iv. 62. Lactant. i. 6. Gell. i. 19. Pliny says she burnt two books, and only preserved one, Plin. xiii. 13. s. 27. Tarquin committed the care of these books, called LIBRI SIBYLLINA, ibid. or VERSUS, Horat. Carm. sac. 5. Cic. Verr. iv. 49. to two men (Duumviri) of illustrious birth; Dionys. ibid. one of whom, called Atillius, Dionys. iv. 62. or Tullius, Valex Maximus. i. 1. 13. he is said to have punished, for being unfaithful to his trust, by ordering him to be sewed up alive in a sack, (in culcum insua;) and thrown into the sea, ibid. the punishment afterwards inflicted on parricides, Cic. Rosc. Am. 25. In the year 387, ten men (decemviri) were appointed for this purpose; five patricians and five plebeians; Liv. vi. 37. 42. afterwards fifteen, as it is thought by Sylla, Serv. in Virg. Æn. vi. 73. Julius Cæsar made them sixteen, Dio. xlii. 51. xliii. 51. They were created in the same manner as the Pontifices, Dio. liv. 19. See Lex Domitia. The chief of them was called MAGISTER COLLEGII, Plin. xxviii. 2.

These Sibylline books were supposed to contain the fate of the Roman empire, Liv. xxxviii. 45. and therefore, in public danger or calamity, the keepers of them were frequently ordered by the senate to inspect (adire, inspicere v. consulere) them, Liv. iii. 10. v. 13. vii. 27. xi. 12. xxi. 62. xxii. 9. xxix. 10. xxxvi. 27. xli. 21. They were kept in a stone chest below ground in the temple of Jupiter Capitolinus. But the Capitol being burnt in the Marsic war, the Sibylline books were destroyed together with it. A. U. 670. Whereupon ambassadors were sent every where to collect the oracles of the Sibyls, Tacit. Annal. vi. 12. For there were other prophetic women besides the one who came to Tarquin, Pausan. x. 12. Lactantius from Varro mentions ten, i. 6. Ælian, four, xii. 35. Pliny says there were statues of three Sibyls, near the Rostra in the Forum, xxxiv. 5. s. 10. The chief was the Sibyl of Cumæ, (SIBYLLA CUMÆA,) whom Æneas is supposed to have consulted; called by Virgil Deiphobe, Æn. vi. 36. 98. from her age, longæva, 321. vivax, Ovid. Met. xiv. 104. and the Sibyl of Erythræ, a city of Ionia, (ΕΡΥΘΡÆΑ SIBYLLA,) Cic. divin. i. 18. who used to utter her oracles with such ambiguity, that whatever happened, she might seem to have predicted it, id. ii. 54. as the priestess of Apollo at Delphi, Pausan. iv. 12. &c. the verses, however, were so contrived, that the first letters of them joined together made some sense; hence called ACROSTICHIS, or in the plural acrostichides, (ἀκροστιχίς,) Dionys. iv. 62. Christian writers often quote the Sibylline verses in support of Christianity; as Lactantius, i. 6. ii. 11. 12. iv. 6. but these appear to have been fabricated.

From the various Sibylline verses thus collected, the Quindecimviri made out new books; which Augustus (after having burnt all other prophetic books, fatidici libri, both Greek and Latin, above 2000) deposited in two gilt cases, (forulis auratis,) under the base of the statue of Apollo, in the temple of that god on the Palatine hill, Suet. Aug. 31. to which Virgil alludes, Æn. vi. 69. &c. having first caused the priests to write over with their own hands a new copy of them, because the former books were fading with age, Dio. liv. 17.

The Quindecimviri were exempted from the obligation of serving in the army, and from other offices in the city. Their priesthood was for life, Dionys. iv. 62. They were properly the priests of Apollo; and hence each of them had at his house a brazen tripod, (cortina vel tripus,) Serv. in Virg. Æn. iii. 332. Val. Flac. i. 5. as being sacred to Apollo, Suet. Aug. 52. Similar to that on which the priestess at Delphi sat, which Servius makes a three-footed stool or table, (mensa,) ibid. 360; but others, a vase with three feet and a covering, properly called Cortina, (κόρτις,) which also signifies a large round cauldron, Plin. xxxv. 11. s. 41. Varr. L. L. vi. 3. often put for the whole tripod, or for the oracle, Virg. Æn. vi. 347. iii. 92. Ovid. Met. xv. 635. Plin. xxxiv. 3. s. 8: hence tripodas sentire, to understand the oracles of Apollo, Virg. Æn. iii. 360. When tripods are said to have been given in a present, vases or cups supported on three feet are understood, Virg. Æn. v. 110. Horat. Od. iv. 8. 3. Nep. Paus. 1. Ovid. Her. iii. 32. Suet. Aug. 52. such as are to be seen on ancient coins.

IV. SEPTENVIRI epulonem, who prepared the sacred feasts at games, processions, and on other solemn occasions.

It was customary among the Romans to decree feasts to the gods, in order to appease their wrath, especially to Jupiter, (epulum Jo- vis, v. -i;) during the public games, (ludorum causâ;) Liv. xxv. 2. xxvii. 38. xxix. 38. fin. xxix. 39. xxxi. 4. xxxii. 7. These sacred entertainments became so numerous, that the Pontifices could no longer attend to them; on which account this order of priests was instituted to act as their assistants. They were first created A. U. 557. three in number, (TRIUMVIRI EPULONES,) Liv. xxxiii. 44. Cic. Orat. iii. 19. and were allowed to wear the toga prætexta, as the Pontifices, ibid. In the sing. TRIUMVIR EPULO, Id. xl. 42. Their number was increased to seven, it is thought, by Sylla, Gell. i. 12. sing. SEPTEMVIRQUE EPULIS festis, Lucan. i. 602. If any thing had been neglected or wrongly performed in the public games, the Epulones reported it (afferebant) to the Pontifices; by whose decree the games on that account were sometimes celebrated anew, Cic. Harusp. 10. Liv. ibid. The sacred feasts were celebrated with great magnificence; hence, Cænæ pontificum v. pontificales, et augurales, for sumptuous entertainments, Horat. Od. ii. 14. 28. Macrob. Sat. ii. 9.

The Pontifices, Augures, Septemviri Epulones, and Quindecimviri were called the four colleges of priests, (ἑσθιαὶσὶ ἱερῶν.) Dio. liii. 1. Sacerdotes SUMMORUM COLLEGIORUM, Suet. Aug. 101.) When divine honours were decreed to Augustus, after his death, a fifth college was added, composed of his priests; hence called COLLEGIUM SODALIVM AUGUSTALIVM, Tacit. Annal. iii. 64. Dio. lvi. 46. lviii. 12. So FLAVIALIVM collegium, the priests of Titus and Vespasian, Suet. Dom. 4. But the name of COLLEGIUM was applied not only to some other fraternities of priests, Liv. xxxvi. 3. but to any number of men joined in the same office; as the Consuls, Liv. x. 22. 24. Prætors, Cic. Off. iii. 20. Quæstors, Suet. Claud. 24. Tribunes, Cic. Dom. 18. also to any body of merchants, Liv. ii. 27. or mechanics, Plin. xxxiv. 1. Plin. Ep. x. 42. to those who lived in the capitol, Liv. v. 50. 52. even to an assemblage of the meanest citizens, Cic. Dom. 28. or slaves, Cic. post red. in Sen. 13. Sext. 25. Pis. 4.

To each of the colleges of Pontifices, Augures, and Quindecimviri, Julius Cæsar added one, Dio. xlii. 51. and to the Septemviri, three, Id. xlii. fin. After the battle of Actium, a power was granted to Augustus, of adding to these colleges as many extraordinary members as he thought proper; which power was exercised by the succeeding emperors; so that the number of those colleges was thenceforth very uncertain, Dio. li. 20. liii. 17. They seem, however, to have retained their ancient names; thus, Tacitus calls himself Quindecimvirali sacerdotio præditus, Ann. xi. 11. and Pliny mentions a SEPTEMVIR EPULONUM, Ep. ii. 11.

It was anciently ordained by law, that two persons of the same family (ἐκ τῆς αὐτῆς οὐγενείας) should not enjoy the same priesthood, Dio. xxxix. 17. But under the emperors this regulation was disregarded.

The other fraternities of priests were less considerable, although composed of persons of distinguished rank.

1. FRATRES AMBARVALES, twelve in number, who offered up sacrifices for the fertility of the ground, (ut arva fruges ferrent.) Varr. iv. 15. which were called Sacra Ambarvalia, because the victim was carried round the fields, (arva ambiebat, ter circumibat hostia fruges, Virg. G. i. 345.) Hence they were said, agros lustrare, Id. Ecl. v. 75. et purgare, Tibull. ii. l. 1. & 17. and the victim was called HOSTIA AMBARVALIS, Festus. Macrob. Sat. iii. 5. attended with a crowd of country people, having their temples bound with garlands of oak leaves, dancing and singing the praises of Ceres; to whom libations were made of honey diluted with milk and wine, (cui tu lacte favos, i. e. mel, et miti dilue Bacchid, Virg. G. i. 554.) These sacred rites were performed before they began to reap, privately as well as publicly, ibid. 347.

This order of priests is said to have been instituted by Romulus in honour of his nurse Acca Laurentia, who had 12 sons, and when one of them died, Romulus, to console her, offered to supply his place, and called himself and the rest of her sons, FRATRES ARVALIS. Their office was for life, and continued even in captivity and exile. They wore a crown made of the ears of corn, (corona spicea,) and a white woollen wreath around their temples, (infula alba,) Gell. vi. 17. Plin. xviii. 2.

INFULÆ erant filamenta lanea, quibus sacerdotes et hostiæ, templaque velabantur, Festus. The infulæ were broad woollen bandages tied with ribands, (vitæ,) Virg. G. iii. 487. Æn. x. 538. Ovid. Pont. iii. 2. 74. used not only by priests to cover their heads, Cic. Verr. iv. 50. Lucan. v. 142. but also by suppliants, Cæs. B. C. ii. 12. Liv. xxiv. 30. xxv. 25. Tacit. Hist. i. 66.

2. CURIONES, the priests, who performed the public sacred rites in each curia, 30 in number. See. p. 9. Heralds who notified the orders of the prince or people at the spectacles, were also called CURIONES, Plin. Ep. iv. 7. Martiat. Praef. ii. Plautus calls a lean lamb curio, i. e. qui curâ macet, which is lean with care, Aul. iii. 6. 27.

3. FECIALES vel Fetiales, sacred persons employed in declaring war and making peace, Liv. ix. 5. The Fecialis, who took the oath in the name of the Roman people in concluding a treaty of peace, was called PATER PATRATUS, (quod jusjurandum pro toto populo patrabat, i. e. præstabat vel peragebat.) Liv. i. 24. The Feciales (collegium fecialium, Liv. xxxvi. 3.) were instituted by Numa Pompilius, borrowed, as Dionysius thinks, i. 21. ii. 72. from the Greeks: they are supposed to have been 20 in number, Varr. apud Non. xii. 43. They judged concerning every thing which related to the proclaiming of war and the making of treaties; ibid. Cic. legg. ii. 9. the forms they used were instituted by Ancus; Liv. i. 32. They were sent to the enemy to demand the restitution of effects, (CLARIGATUM, i. e. res raptus, clare repitum,) they always carried in their hands, or wreathed round their temples, vervain (verberna,) Serv. in Virg. xii. 120. vel verbenaca, a kind of sacred grass or clean herbs, (sagmina v. herbæ puræ,) plucked from a particular place in the capitol, with the earth, in which it grew, (gramen ex arce cum sua terra evulsum;) hence the chief of them was called VERBENARI- us, Plin. xxii. 3. xxx. 9. s. 69. If they were sent to make a treaty, each of them carried vervain as an emblem of peace, and a flint stone to strike the animal which was sacrificed, (privos lapides sili-ces, privasque verbenas.) Liv. xxx. 43.

4. SODALES Titii vel Titienses, priests appointed by Titus Tatius to preserve the sacred rites of the Sabines; or by Romulus in honour of Tatius himself, Tacit. Annal. i. 54. Hist. ii. 95. in imitation of whom, the priests, instituted to Augustus after his death, were called SODALES, ibid. Suet. Claud. 6. Galb. 8.

5. REX Sacrorum, vel Rex sacrificulus, a priest appointed after the expulsion of Tarquin, to perform the sacred rites, which the kings themselves used formerly to perform; an office of small importance, and subject to the Pontifex Maximus, as all the other priests were, Liv. ii. 2. Dionys. iv. 74. v. 1. Before a person was admitted to this priesthood, he was obliged to resign any other office he bore, Liv. xl. 52. His wife was called REGINA, Macrob. Sat. i. 15. and his house anciently REGIA, Serv. in Virg. Æn. viii. 363.

The PRIESTS of PARTICULAR GODS.

THE priests of particular gods were called FLAMINES, from a cap or fillet (a filo vel pileo), which they wore on their head, Varr. L. L. iv. 15. The chief of these were,

I. Flamen DIALIS, the priest of Jupiter, who was distinguished by a lictor, sella curulis, and toga prætexta, Liv. i. 20. and had a right from his office of coming into the senate, Liv. xxvii. 8. II. Flamen MARTIALIS, the priest of Mars; III. QUIRINALIS, of Romulus, &c. These three were always chosen from the patricians, Cic. Dom. 14.—They were first instituted by Numa, Liv. i. 20. Dionys. ii. 64. who had himself performed the sacred rites, which afterwards belonged to the Flamen Dialis, Liv. i. 20. They were afterwards created by the people, Gell. xv. 27. when they were said to be electi, designati, creati vel destinati, Vell. ii. 43. Suet. Jul. 1. and inaugurated or solemnly admitted to their office by the Pontifex M. and the augurs, Cic. Phil. ii. 34. Brut. 1. Suet. Cal. 12. Liv. xxx. 26. Valer. Max. vi. 9. 3. when they were said inaugurari, prodi vel capi, ibid. & Cic. Mil. 10. 17. The Pontifex M. seems to have nominated three persons to the people, of whom they chose one, Tacit. Annal. iv. 16.

The Flamines wore a purple robe called LÆNA, Cic. Brut. 14. which seems to have been thrown over their toga; hence called by Festus duplex amictus, and a conical cap, called APEX, Lucan. i. 604. Lanigerosque APICES, Virg. Æn. viii. 664. Although not Pontifices, they seem to have had a seat in that college, Cic. Harusp. 6. Dom. 9. Other Flamines were afterwards created, called MINORES, who might be plebeians, Festus, as the Flamen of Carmenta, the mother of Evander, Cic. Brut. 14. The emperors also, after their consecration, had each of them their Flamines, and likewise colleges of priests, who were called sodales, Suet. Cl. 6. Thus, FLAMEN CÆSARIS, Suet. Jul. 74. sc. Antonius, Cic. Phil. ii. 43. Dio. xl. iv. 6.

The Flamen of Jupiter was an office of great dignity, (MAXIMÆ dignationis inter xv. flamines, Festus,) but subjected to many restrictions, as that he should not ride on horseback, Fest. & Plin. xxxviii. 9. nor stay one night without the city, Liv. v. 52. Tacit. Annal. iii. 58. nor take an oath, Liv. xxxi. 50. and several others enumerated, Gell. x. 15. Plutarch. Q. Rom. 39. 43. 107. 108. &c. His wife (Flaminica), was likewise under particular restrictions, ibid. & Tacit. Annal. iv. 16. Ovid. Fast. vi. 226. but she could not be divorced, and if she died, the Flamen resigned his office, Plutarch. Q. Rom. 49. because he could not perform certain rites without her assistance, ibid.

From the death of Merula, who killed himself in the temple of Jupiter, (incisis venis, superfusoque altaribus sanguine.) Cicero says in the temple of Vesta, Orat. iii. 3. to avoid the cruelty of Cinna, A. U. 666. Flor. iii. 21. Vell. ii. 22. there was no Flamen Dialis, for 72 years, Tacit. Annal. iii. 58. (Dio makes it 77 years, Lib. 36. but seems not consistent, ibid. 24.) and the duties of his function were performed by the Pontifices; till Augustus made Servius Maluginensis, Priest of Jupiter, Tacit. ibid. Suet. Aug. 31. Julius Cæsar had indeed been elected (destinatus, Suet. 1. creatus, Vell. ii. 43.) to that office at 17 (pene puer, ibid.) but not having been inaugurated, was soon after deprived of it by Sylla, ibid.

II. SALII, the priests of Mars, twelve in number, instituted by Numa; so called, because on solemn occasions they used to go through the city dancing, (a saltu nomina ducunt, Ovid. Fast. iii. 387. exsultantes SALII, Virg. Æn. viii. 663. a saltando, quod facere in comitio in sacris quotannis solent et debent, Varr. iv. 15.) drest in an embroidered tunic, (unicâ pictâ), bound with a brazen belt, and a toga prætexta or trabea; having on their head a cap rising to a considerable height in the form of a cone, (apex, κρηβάσια), with a sword by their side; in their right hand, a spear, a rod, or the like; and in their left, one of the Ancilia, or shields of Mars, Dionys. ii. 70. Lucan says it hung from their neck, Et Salius læto portat ancilia collo, i. 603. Seneca resembles the leaping of the Salii, (saltus SALIARIS), to that of fullers of cloth, (saltus FULLONIUS), Ep. 15. They used to go to the capitol, through the Forum and other public parts of the city, singing, as they went, sacred songs, (per urbem ibant canentes carmina cum tripodis solennique saltatu, Liv. i. 20. Horat. Od. i. 36. 12. iv. 1. 28.) said to have been composed by Numa, (Saliare Numæ carmen), Horat. Ep. ii. 1. 86. Tacit. Annal. ii. 83. which, in the time of Horace, could hardly be understood by any one, ibid. scarcely by the priests themselves, Quintilian. i. 6. 40. Festus calls these verses AXAMENTA, vel Assamenta.

The most solemn procession of the Salii was on the first of March, in commemoration of the time when the sacred shield was believed to have fallen from heaven in the reign of Numa. They resembled the armed dancers of the Greeks, called Curætes, from Crete, where that manner of dancing, called Pyrrhiche, had its origin; whether invented by Minerva, or, according to the fables of the poets, by the Curætes, who, being intrusted with the care of Jupiter in his infancy, Serv. in Virg. iv. 151. to prevent his being discovered by Saturn, his father, drowned his cries by the sound of their arms and cymbals, Dionys. ii. 70. vii. 72. Hygin. 139. It was certainly common among the Greeks in the time of Homer; Il. vi. v. 494. Strab. x. 467 & 468. fin.

No one could be admitted into the order of the Salii, unless a native of the place, and freeborn, whose father and mother were alive. Lucan calls them lecta juvenus patricia, because chosen from that order, ix. 478. The Salii, after finishing their procession, had a splendid entertainment prepared for them, Suet. Claud. 33; hence SALLARES dapes, costly dishes, Horat. Od. i. 37. 2. Epulari Saliarem in modum, to feast luxuriously, Cic. Att. v. 9. Their chief was called PRÆSUL, (i. e. qui ante alios salit;) who seems to have gone foremost in the procession, Cic. Divin. i. 26. ii. 66; their principal musician, VATES; he who admitted new members, MACISTER; Capitolin. in Antonin. philos. 4. According to Dionysius, iii. 32. Tullus Hostilius added twelve other Salii, who were called AGONALES, -enses, or Collini, from having their chapel on the Colline hill. Those instituted by Numa had their chapel on the Palatine hill; hence for the sake of distinction they were called PALATINI, Id. ii. 70.

III. LUPERCI, the priests of Pan; so called (a lupo) from a wolf, because that god was supposed to keep the wolves from the sheep, Serv. in Virg. Æn. viii. 343. Hence the place where he was worshipped was called Lupercal, and his festival Lupercalia, which was celebrated in February; at which time the Luperci ran up and down the city naked, having only a girdle of goat-skins round their waist, and thongs of the same in their hands, with which they struck those whom they met: particularly married women, who were thence supposed to be rendered prolific, Ovid. Fast. ii. 427 & 445.

There were three companies (sodalitates) of Luperci; two ancient, called FABIANI and QUINTILIANI, (a Fabio et Quintilio præpositis suis, Festus.) and a third, called JULII, instituted in honour of Julius Cæsar, whose first chief was Antony; and therefore, in that capacity, at the festival of the Lupercalia, although consul, he went almost naked into the forum Julium, attended by his lictors, and having made an harangue to the people, (nundus concionatus est.) Cic. Phil. ii. 34 & 43. from the Rostra, he, according to concert, as it is believed, presented a crown to Cæsar, who was sitting there in a golden chair, drest in a purple robe, with a golden diadem, which had been decreed him, surrounded by the whole senate and people, ibid. Antony attempted repeatedly to put the crown on his head, addressing him by the title of King, and declaring that what he said and did was at the desire of his fellow-citizens, Dio. xlv. 31 & 41. xlv. 5. But Cæsar perceiving the strongest marks of aversion in the people, rejected it, saying, that Jupiter alone was king of Rome, and therefore sent the crown to the Capitol, as a present to that god, Suet. Cæs. 79. Cic. Phil. iii. 5. v. 14. xiii. 8. 15. 19. Dio. xlvi. 19. Vell. ii. 56. Plutarch. Cæs. p. 736. Anton. p. 921. Appian. B. C. ii. p. 496. It is remarkable that none of the succeeding emperors, in the plenitude of their power, ever ventured to assume the name of KING.

As the Luperci were the most ancient order of priests, said to have been first instituted by Evander, Ovid. Fast. ii. 279. Liv. i. 5; so they continued the longest, not being abolished till the time of Anastasius, who died A. D. 518.

IV. POTITII and PINARII, the priests of Hercules, instituted by Evander, Liv. i. 7. Virg. Æn. viii. 270. when he built an altar to Hercules, called MAXIMA, after that hero had slain Cacus, Liv. i. 7. said to have been instructed in the sacred rites by Hercules himself, Cic. Dom. 52. Serv. in Virg. Æn. viii. 269. being then two of the most illustrious families in that place. The Pinarii happening to come too late to the sacrifice, after the entrails were eaten up, (extis adesis.) were by the appointment of Hercules never after permitted to taste the entrails, ibid. & Dionys. i. 40. So that they only acted as assistants, in performing the sacred rites; (Et domus Herculei custos Pinaria sacri, Virg. ibid.) The Potitii, being taught by Evander, continued to preside at the sacrifices of Hercules for many ages; (ANTISTITES sacri ejus fuerunt, Liv. ibid. Primusque Potitius auctor, Virg. ibid.) till by the authority or advice of Appius Claudius, the censor, having delegated their ministry to public slaves, their whole race, (genus omne, v. GENS, Potitiorum.) consisting of 12 familia, became extinct within a year; and some time after Appius lost his sight; a warning, says Livy, against making innovations in religion, (quod dimovendis statu suo sacris religionem facere posset.) ix. 29.

V. GALLI, the priests of Cybele the mother of the gods, so called from GALLUS, a river in Phrygia, which was supposed to make those who drank of it mad, so that they castrated themselves, Festus; as the prests of Cybele did, Herodian. l. 11. Ovid. Fast. iv. 361. (genitalia sibi abscedebant cultris lapideis vel Samia testâ, with knives of stone or Samian brick,) Juvenal. ii. 116. vi. 513. Martial. iii. 81. 3. Plin. xi. 49. s. 109. xxxv. 12. s. 46. in imitation of Atys, -yis, Attis, -idis, v. Attin, -inis, Ovid. Fast. iv. 223. &c. Met. x. 104. Arnob. called also CURETES, Lucret. ii. 629. CORYBANTES, *Horat. VIRGINES VESTALES, (Παρθέναι 'Eσάδες,) Virgins consecrated to the worship of Vesta, a priesthood derived from Alba, Liv. i. 20: for Rhea Sylvia, the mother of Romulus, was a Vestal, ibid. 3. originally from Troy, Virg. Æn. ii. 296. first instituted at Rome by Numa, Liv. ibid. four in number, Dionys. ii. 64 & 65; two were added by Tarquinius Priscus, Id. iii. 67. or by Servius Tullius, Plutarch. in Numa, which continued to be the number ever after, Dionys. ibid. Festus in SEX.

The Vestal Virgins were chosen first by the kings, Dionys. ibid. and after the expulsion, by the Pontifex Maximus; who, according to the Papian law, when a vacancy was to be supplied, selected from among the people, twenty girls above six, and below sixteen years of age, free from any bodily defect, (which was a requisite in all priests, SACERDOS INTEGRER SIT, Senec. controv. iv. 2. Plutarch. Q. Rom. 72.) whose father and mother were both alive, and free-born citizens. It was determined by lot in an assembly of the people, which of these twenty should be appointed. Then the Pontifex M. went and took her on whom the lot fell, from her parents, as a captive in war (manu prehensam a parente veluti bello captam abducebant), addressing her thus, ΤΕ, ΑΜΑΤΑ, ΚΑΠΙΟ; that being, according to A. Gellius, the name of the first who was chosen a Vestal: Hence CAPERE, Virginem Vestalem, to choose; which word was also applied to the Flamen Dialis, to the Pontifices and augurs, Gell. i. 12. But afterwards this mode of casting lots was not necessary. The Pontifex M. might choose any one he thought proper, with the consent of her parents, and the requisite qualifications, (cujus ratio haberi posset), ibid. Tacit. Ann. ii. 86. If none offered voluntarily, the method of casting lots was used, Suet. Aug. 31.

The Vestal Virgins were bound to their ministry for thirty years. For the first ten years they learned the sacred rites; for the next ten, they performed them; and for the last ten, taught the younger virgins, Senec de vit. beat. 29. Dionys. ii. 67. They were all said, præsidere sacris, Tacit. Ann. ii. 86. ut assiduae templi ANTISTITES, v. -tæ, Liv. i. 20. The oldest (Vestaliūm vetustissima, Tacit. Ann. xi. 32. was called MAXIMA, Suet. Jul. 83. η ἀρχαιότατα, Dio. liv. 24. After thirty years' service they might leave the temple and marry; which, however, was seldom done, and always reckoned ominous, Dionys. ii. 67.

The office of the Vestal Virgins was,—1. to keep the sacred fire always burning, Flor. i. 2. CUSTODIUNTO IGNEM FOCI PUBLICI SEMPERITERNUM, Cic. legg. ii. 8. whence Æternæque Vestæ oblitus, Horat. Od. iii. 5. 11. watching it in the night-time alternately, Liv. xxviii.

Num. p. 67. or by his order, Liv. xxviii. 11. This accident was always esteemed unlucky, and expiated by offering extraordinary sacrifices (hostiis majoribus procurari.) ibid. The fire was lighted up again, not from another fire, but from the rays of the sun, Plutarch. ibid. in which manner it was renewed every year on the 1st of March; that day being anciently the beginning of the year, Macrob. U. 512. Liv. Ep. xix. Dionys. ii. 66. Ovid. Font. 17. Dio. xlviii. 19. Horat. Od. i. 2. 28. In their devotions, they worshipped the god Fascinus, to guard them from envy, Plin. xxviii. 4. s. 7.

The Vestal Virgins wore a long white robe, bordered with purple: their heads were decorated with fillets, (infula, cappa, Dionys. ii. 67. viii. 89.) and ribands, (vitta.) Ovid. Fast. iii. 30. hence the Vestalis Maxima is called VITTATA, SACERDOS, Lucan. i. 597. and simply VITTATA, Juvenal. iv. 10. their head dress, SUFFIBULUM, Festus, is described by Prudentius, contra Symmach. ii. 1093. When first chosen, their hair was cut off, and buried under an old lote or lote-tree in the city, Plin. xvi. 44. s. 85. but it was afterwards allowed to grow.

The Vestal Virgins enjoyed singular honours and privileges. The prætors and consuls when they met them in the street, lowered their fascæ, and went out of the way to show them respect, Sen. contr. vi. 8. They had a lictor to attend them in public, at least after the time of the triumvirate, Dio. xlvii. 19. Senec. contr. i. 2. Plutarch says always, in Numa. They rode in a chariot, (carpento, v. pilento.) Tacit. Annal. xii. 42. sat in a distinguished place at the spectacles, Id. iv. 16. Suet. Aug. 44. were not forced to swear, Gell. x. 15. unless they inclined, Tacit. Annal. ii. 34. and by none other but Vesta, Senec. ibid. They might make their testament, although under age: for they were not subject to the power of a parent or guardian, as other women, Gell. ibid. They could free a criminal from punishment, if they met him accidentally, Plutarch. in Numa; and their interposition was always greatly respected, Cic. Font. 17. Agr. ii. 36. Tacit. Annal. xi. 32. Suet. Jul. 1. Tib. 2. Vit. 16. Tacit. Hist. iii. 81. They had a salary from the public, Liv. i. 20. Suet. Aug. 31. They were held in such veneration, that testaments and the most important deeds were committed to their care, Suet. Jul. 83. Aug. 102. Tacit. Annal. i. 8. Dio. xlviii. 12. 37. 46. Tacit. Annal. iv. 16. and they enjoyed all the privileges of matrons who had three children, Dio. lvi. 10.

When the Vestal Virgins were forced through indisposition to leave the ATRIVM VESTÆ, probably a house adjoining to the temple, and to the palace of Numa, REGIA parva NUMÆ; if not a part of it, Ovid. Trist. iii. 1. 30. Fast. vi. 263. where the virgins lived, they were intrusted to the care of some venerable matron, Plin. Ep. vii. 19.

If any Vestal violated her vow of chastity, after being tried and sentenced by the Pontifices, she was buried alive with funeral solemnities, in a place called the CAMPUS SCLELERATUS, near the Porta Colina, and her paramour scourged to death in the Forum; which method of punishment is said to have been first contrived by Tarquinius Priscus, Dionys. iii. 67. The commission of this crime was thought to forbode some dreadful calamity to the state, and therefore was always expiated by extraordinary sacrifices, Liv. viii. 15. xiv. xxii. 57. lxiii. Dionys. i. 78. ii. 67. viii. 89. ix. 40. Dio. fragm. 91. 92. Plutarch: Q. Rom. 83. Ascon. in Mil. 12. Suet. Dom. 8. Plin. Ep. iv. 11. Juvenal. iv. 10. The suspected virtue of some virgins is said to have been miraculously cleared, Valer. Max. viii. 1. 5. Liv. xxix. 14. Plin. vii. 35.

These were the principal divisions of the Roman priests. Concerning their emoluments, the classics leave us very much in the dark; as they also do with respect to those of the magistrates. When Romulus first divided the Roman territory, he set apart what was sufficient for the performance of the sacred rights, and for the support of temples, Dionys. ii. 7. So Livy informs us, that Numa, who instituted the greatest number of priests and sacrifices, provided a fund for defraying these expenses, (unde in eos sumptus pecunia erogaretur.) i. 20. but appointed a public stipend (stipendium de publico statuit.) to none but the Vestal Virgins, ibid. Dionysius, speaking of Romulus, says, that while other nations were negligent about the choice of their priests, some exposing that office to sale, and others determining it by lot; Romulus made a law that two men, above fifty, of distinguished rank and virtue, without bodily defect, and possessed of a competent fortune, should be chosen from each curia, to officiate as priests in that curia or parish for life; being exempted by age from military service, and by law from the troublesome business of the city, ii. 21. There is no mention of any annual salary. In after ages the priests claimed an immunity from taxes, which the Pontifices and augurs for several years did not pay. At last, however, the quæstors, wanting money for public exigencies, forced them, after appealing in vain to the tribunes, to pay up their arrears, (annorum, per quos non dederant, stipendium exactum est.) Liv. xxxiii. 42. s. 44. Augustus increased both the dignity and emoluments (commoda) of the priests; particularly of the Vestal Virgins, Suet. Aug. 31. as he likewise first fixed the salaries of the provincial magistrates; Dio. lii. 23. 25. liii. 15. whence we read of a sum of money (salarium) being given to those who were disappointed of a province, Id. 78. 22. xliii. 4. lxxviii. 22. Tacit. Agric. 42. But we read of no fixed salary for the priests; as for the teachers of the liberal arts, Suet. Vesp. 18. Digest. and for others, Suet. Tib. 46. Ner. 10. When Theodosius the Great abolished the heathen worship at Rome, Zosimus mentions only his refusing to grant the public money for sacrifices, and expelling the priests of both sexes from the temples, v. 38. It is certain, however, that sufficient provision was made, in whatever manner, for the maintenance of those who devoted themselves wholly to sacred functions. Honour, perhaps, was the chief reward of the dignified priests, who attended only occasionally, and whose rank and fortune raised them above desiring any pecuniary gratification. There is a passage in the life of Aurelian by Vopiscus, c. 15. which some apply to this subject; although it seems to be restricted to the priests of a particular temple: Pontifices roboravit sc. Aurelianus, i. e. he endowed the chief priests with salaries; decrevit etiam emolumenta ministris, and granted certain emoluments to their servants, the inferior priests, who take care of the temples. The priests are by later writers sometimes divided into three classes, the antistites or chief priests, the sacerdotes or ordinary priests, and the ministri or meanest priests, whom Manilius calls auctoratos in tertia jura ministros, v. 350. but they are distributed for the most part only into two classes, the Pontifices or Sacerdotes, and the Ministri; as in Vopiscus; So in leg. 14. Cod. Theodos. de pagan. sacrif. et templis.

SERVANTS of the PRIESTS.

THE priests who had children, employed them to assist in performing sacred rites: but those who had no children procured free-born boys and girls to serve them, the boys to the age of puberty, and the girls till they were married. These were called Camilli and Camillæ, Dionys. ii. 24.

Those who took care of the temples were called ÆDITUI, or Æditumni; Gell. xii. 6. those who brought the victims to the altar and slew them, POPÆ; Victimarii and Cultrarii; to whom, in particular, the name of MINISTRI was properly applied, Ovid. Fast. i. 319. iv. 637. Met. ii. 717. Virg. G. iii. 488. Juvenal. xii. 14. The boys who assisted the Flamines in sacred rites were called FLAMINI; and the girls FLAMINÆ, Festus. There were various kinds of musicians, Tibicines, Tubicines, Fidicines, &c. Liv. ix. 30.

III. The PLACES and RITES of SACRED THINGS.

THE places dedicated to the worship of the gods were called temples, TEMPLA, (fana, delubra, sacraria, aedes sacra.) and consecrated by the augurs: hence called Augusta. A temple built by Agrippa in the time of Augustus, and dedicated to all the gods, was called Panthæon, Dio. liii. 27.

A small temple or chapel was called Sacellum or Ædicula. A wood or thicket of trees consecrated to religious worship, was called Lucus, a grove, Plin. xii. 6. Plaut. Amph. v. 1. 42. The gods were supposed to frequent woods and fountains; hence Esse locis superos testatur siva, Læcan. ix. 522.

The worship of the gods consisted chiefly in prayers, vows, and sacrifices.

No act of religious worship was performed without prayer. The words used were thought of the greatest importance, and varied according to the nature of the sacrifice, Valer. Max. i. 1. Hence the supposed force of charms and incantations, (verba et incantamenta carminum.) Plin. xxviii. 2. Horat. Ep. i. 1. 34. When in doubt about the name of any god, lest they should mistake, they used to say, Quisquis es, Plaut. Rud. i. 4. 37. Virg. Æn. iv. 577. Whatever occurred to a person in doubt what to say, was supposed to be suggested by some divinity, Plaut. Most. iii. 1. 137. Apulei, de deo Socratis. In the day-time, the gods were thought to remain for the most part in heaven, but to go up and down the earth during the night, to observe the actions of men, Plaut. Rud. Prol. 8. The stars were supposed to do the contrary, ibid.

Those who prayed stood usually with their heads covered, (capite velato vel aperto.) looking towards the east; a priest pronounced the words before them, (verba præibat;) they frequently touched the altars or the knees of the images of the gods; turning themselves round in a circle, (in gyrum se convertebant.) Liv. v. 21. towards the right, Plaut. Curc. i. 1. 70. sometimes put their right hand to their mouth, (dextram ori admovebant; whence adoratio.) and also prostrated themselves on the ground, (procumbebant aris advoluti.)

The ancient Romans used with the same solemnity to offer up vows, (VOVERE, vota facere, suscipere, concipere, nuncupare, &c.) They vowed temples, games, thence called Ludi votivi, sacrifices, gifts, a certain part of the plunder of a city, &c. Also what was called VER SACRUM, that is, all the cattle which were produced from the first of March to the end of April, Liv. xxii. 9. 10. xxxiv. 44. In this vow among the Samnites, men were included, Festus in MARTINI.

Sometimes they used to write their vows on paper or waxen tablets, to seal them up, (obsignare.) and fasten them with wax to the knees of the images of the gods; that being supposed to be the seat of mercy; Hence Genua incerare deorum, Juvenal. x. 55.

When the things for which they offered up vows were granted, the vows were said valere, esse rata, &c. but if not, cadere esse irrita, &c.

The person who made vows was said, esse voti reus; and when he obtained his wish, (voti compos, voti damnatus, bound to make good his vow till he performed it, Macrob. Sat. iii. 2. vel voto, Virg. Ecl. v. 80. Hence damnabis tu quoque votis, i. e. obligabis ad vota solvenda, shall bind men to perform their vows by granting what they prayed for, Virg. ibid. reddere vel solvere vota, to perform. Pars prædæ debita, Liv. debiti vel meriti honores, merita dona, &c. A vowed feast (epulum votivum) was called POLLUCTUM, Plaut. Rud. v. 3. 63. from pollucere, to consecrate, Id. Stich. i. 3. 80. hence pollucibiliter canare, to feast sumptuously, Id. Most. i. 1. 23. Those who implored the aid of the gods, used to lie (incubare) in their temples, as if to receive from them responses in their sleep, Serv. in Virg. vii. 88. Cic. divin. i. 43. The sick in particular did so in the temple of Æsculapius, Plaut. Curc. i. 1. 61. ii. 2. 10. &c.

Those saved from shipwreck used to hang up their clothes in the temple of Neptune, with a picture (tabula votiva) representing the circumstances of their danger and escape, Virg. xii. 768. Horat. Od. i. 5. Cic. Nat. D. iii. 37. So soldiers, when discharged, used to suspend their arms to Mars, gladiators their swords to Hercules, Horat. Ep. i. 1. 4. and poets, when they finished a work, the fillets of their hair to Apollo, Stat. Sylv. iv. 4. 92. A person who had suffered shipwreck used sometimes to support himself by begging, and for the sake of moving compassion, to show a picture of his misfortunes, Juvenal. xiv. 301. Phædr. iv. 21. 24.

Augustus, having lost a number of his ships in a storm, expressed his resentment against Neptune, by ordering that his image should not be carried in procession, with those of the other gods, at the next solemnity of the Circensian games, Suet. Aug. 16.

Thanksgivings (gratiarum actiones) used always to be made to the gods for benefits received, and upon all fortunate events. It was, however, believed that the gods, after remarkable success, used to send on men, by the agency of NEMESIS, (ULTRIX facinorum impiorum, bonorumque PRÆMIATRIX, Marcellin. xiv. 11.) a reverse of fortune, Liv. xlv. 41. To avoid which, as it is thought, Augustus, in consequence of a dream, every year, on a certain day, begged an alms of the people, holding out his hand to such as offered him, (caavam manum asses porrigentibus præbens), Suet. Aug. 91. Dio. liv. 35.

When a general had obtained a signal victory, a thanksgiving (SUPPLICATIO vel supplicium) was decreed by the senate to be made in all the temples; Liv. iii. 63. and what was called a LECTISTERNIUM, when couches were spread (lecti vel pulvinaria sternebantur), for the gods, as if about to feast; and their images taken down from their pedestals, and placed upon these couches around the altars, which were loaded with the richest dishes. Hence, Ad omnia pulvinaria sacrificatum, Liv. xxii. 1. supplicatio decreta est, Cic. Cat. iii. 10. This honour was decreed to Cicero for having suppressed the conspiracy of Catiline, which he often boasts had never been conferred on any other person, without laying aside his robe of peace, (togatus.) Dio. xxxvii. 36. Cic. Pis. 3. Cat. iii. 6 & 10. The author of the decree was L. Cotta, Cic. Phil. ii. 6. xiv. 8. A supplication was also decreed in times of danger, or public distress; when the women prostrating themselves on the ground, sometimes swept the temples with their hair, Liv. iii. 7. The Lectisternium was first introduced in the time of a pestilence, A. U. 356. Liv. v. 13.

It was requisite that those who offered sacrifices should come chaste and pure; that they should bathe themselves; be dressed in white robes, and crowned with the leaves of that tree which was thought most acceptable to the god whom they worshipped. Sometimes also they put on the garb of suppliants, with dishevelled hair, loose robes, and barefooted. Vows and prayers were always made before the sacrifice.

It was necessary that the animals to be sacrificed (hostiæ vel victimæ, Ovid. Fast. i. 335.) should be without spot and blemish, (decora et integræ vel intactæ, never yoked in the plough,) ibid. i. 83. and therefore they were chosen from a flock or herd, approved by the priests, and marked with chalk, Juvenal. x. 66. whence they were called, egregiæ eximia, lectæ. They were adorned with fillets and ribands, (infulis et vittis.) Liv. ii. 54. and crowns; and their horns were gilt.

The victim was led to the altar by the Popæ, with their clothes tucked up and naked to the waist, (qui succincti erant et ad ilia nudi, Suet. Calig. 32.) the animal was led by a slack rope, that it might not seem to be brought by force, which was reckoned a bad omen. For the same reason it was allowed to stand loose before the altar; and it was a very bad omen if it fled away.

Then after silence was ordered, Civ. divin. i. 45. (see p. 152.) a salted cake, (mola salsa, vel fruges salsa, Virg. Æn. ii. 133. Far et mica salis, Ovid. & Horat. i. e. Far tostum, comminutum, et sale mistum, bran or meal mixed with salt,) was sprinkled (inspergebatur) on the head of the beast, and frankincense and wine poured between its horns, the priest having first tasted the wine himself and given it to be tasted by those that stood next him, which was called LIBATIO, Serv. in Virg. Æn. iv. 57. &c. and thus the victim was said esse macta, i. e. magis aucta: Hence immolare et mactare, to sacrifice; for the Romans carefully avoided words of a bad omen, as cædere, jugulare, &c. The priest plucked the highest hairs between the horns, and threw them into the fire; which was called LIBAMINA PRIMA, Virg. Æn. vi. 246.

The victim was struck by the cultrarius, with an axe or a mallet, (malleo.) Suet. Calig. 32. by the order of the priest, whom he asked thus, AGONE? Ovid. Fast. i. 323. and the priest answered, Hoc AGE; Suet. Calig. 58. Then it was stabbed (jugulabatur) with knives; and the blood being caught (exceptus) in goblets, was poured on the altar. It was then flayed and dissected. Sometimes it was all burnt, and called HOLOCAUSTUM, (ex ὅλος totus, et καίω uro.)

Virg. vi. 25. but usually only a part; what remained was divided between the priest and the person who offered the sacrifice (qui sacra v. sacrificium FACIEBAT, v. sacris OPERABATUR, Virg. G. I. 393. Tacit. Annal. ii. 14.) The person who cut up the animal, and divided it into different parts, was said prosecare exta, Liv. v. 21. Plaut. Pœn. iii. 1. 8. and the entrails thus divided were called PROSICILÆ or PROSECTA, Ovid. Fast. vi. 163. These rites were common to the Romans with the Greeks; whence Dionysius concludes the Romans were of Greek extraction, vii. 72.

Then the aruspices inspected the entrails, (exta consulebant), Virg. iv. 64. And if the signs were favourable (si exta bona essent), they were said to have offered up an acceptable sacrifice, or to have pacified the gods, (diis litisse); if not, (si exta non bona vel prava et tristia essent), another victim was offered up, (sacrificium instaurabatur, vel victima succedanea mactabatur), and sometimes several, Cic. de divin. ii. 36. 38. Suet. Cæs. 81. Liv. xxv. 16. Serv. in Virg. iv. 50. v. 94.

The liver was the part chiefly inspected, and supposed to give the most certain presages of futurity; hence termed CAPUT EXTORUM, Plin. xi. 37. s. 73. It was divided into two parts, called pars FAMILIARIS, and pars HOSTILIS vel inimici. From the former, they conjectured what was to happen to themselves; and from the latter, what was to happen to an enemy. Each of these parts had what was called CAPUT, Liv. viii. 9. Cic. divin. ii. 12. Lucan. i. 621. which seems to have been a protuberance at the entrance of the blood-vessels and nerves, which the ancients distinguished by the name of fibres; thus, In imâ fibrâ, Suet. Aug. 95. Ecce videt capiti fibrarum increscere molem Alterius capitis, Lucan. i. 627. En capita paribus bina consurgunt toris, Senec. CEdip. 356. Caput jecinoris duplex, Valer. Max. i. 6. 9. i. e. two lobes, one on each side of the fissure or cavity, commonly called PORTA, v. -tæ, Cic. Nat. D. ii. 55. which Livy calls AUCTUM in jecinore, xxvii. 26. s. 28. A liver without this protuberance, (jecur sine capite), or cut off (caput jecinoris casum), was reckoned a very bad omen; (nihil tristius), Cic. divin. i. 52. ii. 13 & 16. Liv. viii. 9. or when the heart of the victim could not be found; for although it was known that an animal could not live without the heart, Cic. divin. ii. 16. yet it was believed sometimes to be wanting; as happened to Cæsar, a little before his death, while he was sacrificing, on that day on which he first appeared in his golden chair and purple robe, ibid. i. 52. Valer. Max. i. 6. 13. whereupon the Haruspex Spurinna warned him to beware of the ides of March, ibid. et Suet. Jul. 81. The principal fissure or division of the liver, (fissum jecoris familiare et vitale), was likewise particularly attended to, Cic. Nat. D. iii. 6. Divin. i. 10. ii. 13. 14. as also its fibres or parts, and those of the lungs, ibid. & Virg. G. i. 484. Æn. iv. 6. x. 176.

After the Haruspices had inspected the entrails, the parts which fell to the gods were sprinkled with meal, wine, and frankincense, and burnt (adulebantur vel cremabantur) on the altar. The entrails were said, Dii dari, reddi, et porrici, (quasi porrigi, vel porro jaci,) when they were placed on the altars, (cum aris vel flammis imponerentur;) Virg. Æn. vi. 252. xii. 214. or when, in sacrificing to the Dii Marini, they were thrown into the sea, ibid. v. 774. Hence, if any thing unluckily fell out to prevent a person from doing what he had resolved on, or the like, it was said to happen inter casa (sc. exta) et porrecta, between the time of killing the victim and burning the entrails, i. e. between the time of forming the resolution and executing it, Cic. Att. v. 16.*

When the sacrifice was finished, the priest, having washed his hands and uttered certain prayers, again made a libation, and then the people were dismissed in a set form of words; ILICET, or ire licet.

After the sacrifice followed a feast, (Epula sacrificales;) which in public sacrifices, was sumptuously prepared by the Septemviri Epuiones. In private sacrifices, the persons who offered them, feasted on the parts which fell to them, with their friends; sacra tulere suam (partem); pars est data cetera mensis, Ov. Met. 12. 154.

On certain solemn occasions, especially at funerals, a distribution of raw flesh used to be made to the people, called VISCERATIO, Liv. viii. 22. xxxix. 56. xli. 28. Cic. Off. ii. 16. Suet. Cas. 38. For viscera signifies not only the intestines, but whatever is under the hide: particularly the flesh between the bones and the skin, Serv. in Virg. Æn. i. 211. iii. 622. vi. 253. Suet. Vitell. 13.

The sacrifices offered to the celestial gods, differed from those offered to the infernal deities in several particulars.

The victims sacrificed to the former were white, brought chiefly from the river Clitumnus,† Juvenal. xii. 13. Virg. Georg. ii. 146. in the country of the Falisci, Ovid. Pont. iv. 8. 41. their neck was bent upwards, (sursum reflectebatur;) the knife was applied from above, (imponebatur;) and the blood was sprinkled on the altar, or caught in cups: the victims offered to the infernal gods were black; they were killed with their faces bent downwards (prona); the knife was applied from below, (supponebatur;) and the blood was poured into a ditch.

Those who sacrificed to the celestial gods, were clothed in white, bathed the whole body, made libations by heaving the liquor out of the cup, (fundendo manu supina;) and prayed with the palms of their hands raised to heaven: those who sacrificed to the infernal gods were clothed in black; only sprinkled their body with water, made libations by turning the hand, (INVERGENDO, ita ut manu in sinistram partem versâ patera converteretur;) and threw the cup into the fire; Serv. in Virg. Æn. vi. 244. prayed with their palms turned downwards, and striking the ground with their feet, Cic. Tusc. Q. ii. 25.

Sacrifices were of different kinds; some were stated (stata et so-

* The proverb analogous to this in English, is expressed thus: between the cup and the lip.

† It appears from Mrs. Plossi's travels, that the cattle and even birds on this river are still white. Clitumnus is a river in Umbria.

temnia), others occasional, (fortuita et ex accidenti nata), as, those called expiatory, for averting bad omens, (ad portenta vel prodigia procuranda, expianda et avertenda. vel averruncanda, making atonement for a crime, (SACRIFICIA PIACULARIA, ad crimen expiandum), and the like.

Human sacrifices were also offered among the Romans.—By an ancient law of Romulus, which Dionysius calls νομος προδοσίας, Lex proditiōnis, ii. 10. persons guilty of certain crimes, as treachery or sedition, were devoted to Pluto and the infernal gods, and therefore any one might slay them with impunity. In after times, a consul, dictator, or prætor, might devote not only himself, but any one of the legion, (ex legione Romana, called Scripta, because perhaps the soldiers not included in the legion, the Velites, Subitarii, Tumultuarii, &c. were excepted,) and slay him as an expiatory victim, (piaculum, i. e. in piaculum, hostiam cedere.) Liv. viii. 10. In the first ages of the republic human sacrifices seem to have been offered annually, Macrob. Sat. i. 7. and it was not till the year of the city 657, that a decree of the senate was made to prohibit it; ne homo immolaretur, Plin. xxx. i. s. 3. Mankind, says Pliny, are under inexpressible obligations to the Romans for abolishing so horrid a practice, (qui sustulere monstra, in quibus hominem occidere religio sissimum erat, mandis vero etiam saluberrimum.) Ibid. We read however of two men who were slain as victims with the usual solemnities in the Campus Martius by the Pontifices and Flamen of Mars, as late as the time of Julius Cæsar, A. U. 708. Dio. xliii. 24. Whence it is supposed that the decree of the senate mentioned by Pliny respected only private and magical sacred rites, as those alluded to, Horat. Epod. 5. Augustus, after he had compelled L. Antonius to a surrender at Perugia, ordered 400 senators and equites, who had sided with Antony, to be sacrificed as victims at the altar of Julius Cæsar, on the ides of March, A. U. 713. Dio. xlvi. 14. Suetonius makes them only 300, Aug. 15. To this savage action Seneca alludes, de Clem. i. 11. In like manner, Sex. Pompeius threw into the sea not only horses, but also men alive, as victims to Neptune, Dio. xlvi. 48. Boys used to be cruelly put to death, even in the time of Cicero and Horace, for magical purposes, Cic. Vat. 14. Horat. Epod. 5.

A place reared for offering sacrifices was called ARA or ALTARE, an altar: ALTARIA (ab altitudine) tantum diis superis consecrabantur; ARE et diis superis et inferis, Serv. in Virg. Ecl. v. 66. Æn. ii. 515. In the phrase, Pro aris et focis, ARA is put for the altar in the impluvium or middle of the house, where the Penates were worshipped; and FOCUS, for the hearth in the atrium or hall, where the Lares were worshipped, Cic. Dom. 40. 41. Deiot. 3. Sext. 42. Phil. ii. 30. Sallust. Cat. 52. A secret place in the temple, where none but the priests entered, was called ADYTUM, Cæs. B. C. iii. 105. universally revered, Pausan. x. 32.

iv. 4. 5. Horat. Od. iv. 11. 7. adorned with flowers, Ovid. Trist. iii. 13. 15. Stat. Theb. 8. 298. Sil. 16. 309. and bound with woollen fillets, Prop. iv. 6. 6. Virg. Æn. iv. 459. therefore called nexæ torques, i. e. caronæ, Id. G. iv. 276.

*Altars and temples afforded an Asylum or place of refuge among the Greeks and Romans, Nep. Paus. 4. Cic. Nat. D. iii. 10. Q. Rosc. 2. Ovid. Trist. v. 2. 43. as among the Jews, 1 Kings, i. 50. chiefly to slaves from the cruelty of their master, Terent. Heaut. v. 2. 22. Plaut. Rud. iii. 4. 18. Most. v. i. 45. to insolvent debtors and criminals, Tacit. Annal. iii. 60. where it was reckoned unlawful to touch them, Cic. Tusc. i. 35. Virg. Æn. i. 349. ii. 513. 550. and whence it was unlawful to drag them, Cic. Dom. 41. but sometimes they put fire and combustible materials around the place, that the persons might appear to be forced away, not by men, but by a god, (Vulcan,) Plaut. Most. v. i. 65. or shut up the temple and unroofed it, (tectum sunt demoliti,) that he might perish under the open air, Nep. Paus. 5. p. 63. hence ara is put for refugium, Ovid. Trist. iv. 5. 2.

The Triumviri consecrated a chapel to Cæsar in the forum, on the place where he was burnt; and ordained that no person who fled thither for sanctuary should be taken thence to punishment; a thing which, says Dio, had been granted to no one before, not even to a divinity; except the asylum of Romulus, which remained only in name, being so blocked up, that no one could enter it, Dio. xlvii. 19. But the shrine of Julius was not always esteemed inviolable; the son of Antony was slain by Augustus, although he fled to it, Suet. Aug. 17.

There were various vessels and instruments used in sacrifices; as acerra vel thuribulum, a censer for burning incense; simpulum vel simpvium, guttum, capis, -idis, patera, cups used in libations, olla,

* Not only altars and temples, but tombs, statues, and other monuments of considerable personages, were Asyla in ancient times. Thus the temple of Diana at Ephesus was a refuge for debtors, and the tomb of Theseus for slaves. The cities of refuge, the temple, and the altar of burnt offerings, were Asyla among the Jews.

The cities of Thebes and Athens, as well as Rome, were originally peopled by being declared Asyla.

Lyons and Vienne among the ancient Gauls were places of refuge, and some cities in Germany are said still to preserve the ancient right of Asylum. Hence the medals of several ancient cities, particularly in Syria, had the inscription ΑΣΥΛΟΙ, to which is added ΙΕΡΑΤΑ; which, according to Spanheim, referred to their temples, and the gods revered in them.

In London, the Verge of the Court, which formerly extended twelve miles, and Holyrood house in Edinburgh, are considered as places of exemption from arrest for debt in certain cases to this day.

The Emperors Honorius and Theodosius, having made churches Asyla, the bishops and monks laid hold of a certain tract or territory, without which they fixed the bounds of the secular jurisdiction. Convents accordingly, in a short time became next akin to fortresses; where the most atrocious villains were in safety, and braved the power of the magistrate.

These privileges were at length extended to the bishops' houses, whence the criminal could not be removed without a legal assurance of life, and an entire remission of the crime.

The sanctuaries were at length stript of their immunities, because they only served as an encouragement to guilt, and are now every where almost entirely abolished.

The ROMAN YEAR.

ROMULUS is said to have divided the year into ten months; the first of which was called Martius, March, from Mars his supposed father; Ovid. Fast. iii. 75 & 98. the second Aprilis, either from the Greek name of Venus, (Ἀφροδίτη), Ovid. Fast. i. 39. Horat. Od. iv. because then trees and flowers open (se aperiant), their buds, ch. in Numa, Ovid. Fast. iv. 87. the third, Maius, May, from the mother of Mercury, or in honour of the old, (majorum), Fast. v. 427; and the fourth, Junius, June, from the goddess or in honour of the young, (juniorum.) The rest was named their number, Quintilis, Sextilis, September, October, November, December, ibid. i. 41. Quintilis was afterwards called Julius, Julius Cæsar, and Sextilis Augustus, from Augustus Cæsar; before it he had first been made consul, and had obtained remarkable victories, Suet. 31. Dio. lv. 6: in particular he had become ruler of Alexandria in Egypt, A. U. 724. and fifteen years after (tertio) on the same day, probably the 29th of August, had vanquished the Rhæti, by means of Tiberius, Horat. Od. iv. 14. 34. The Roman emperors gave their names to particular months, but these were forgotten after their death, Suet. Domit. 13. Plin. Pan. 54.

Numa added two months, called Januarius, from Janus; and Februarius, because then the people were purified (februabatur, i. e. purgabatur vel lustrabatur), by an expiatory sacrifice (Februalia) from the sins of the whole year; for this anciently was the last month in the year, Cic. de Legg. ii. 21. Ovid. Fast. ii. 49. Tibull. iii. 1. 2.

Numa, in imitation of the Greeks, divided the year into twelve months, according to the course of the moon, consisting in all of 354 days; he added one day more, Plin. xxxiv. 7. to make the number odd, which was thought the more fortunate. But as 10 days, 5 hours, 49 minutes, (or rather 48 minutes, 57 seconds,) were wanting to make the lunar year correspond to the course of the sun, he appointed that every other year an extraordinary month, called Menſis Intercalaris, or Mercedonius, should be inserted between the 23d and 24th day of February, Liv. i. 19. The intercalating of this month was left to the discretion (arbitrio) of the Pontifices: who, by inserting more or fewer days, used to make the current year longer or shorter, as was most convenient for themselves or their friends; for instance, that a magistrate might sooner or later resign his office, or contractors for the revenue might have longer or shorter time to collect the taxes, Cic. de legg. ii. 12. Fam. vii. 3. 12. viii. 6. Att. v. 9. 13. vi. 1. Suet. Cæs. 40. Dio. xl. 62. Censorin. 20. Macrob. Sat. i. 13. In consequence of this license, the months were transposed from their stated seasons; the winter months carried back into autumn, and the autumnal into summer, Cic. Att. x. 17.

Julius Cæsar, when he became master of the state, resolved to put an end to this disorder, by abolishing the source of it, the use of the intercalations ; and for that purpose, A. U. 707. adjusted the year according to the course of the sun, and assigned to each month the number of days which they still contain. To make matters proceed regularly, from the 1st of the ensuing January, he inserted in the current year, besides the intercalary month of 23 days, which fell into it of course, two extraordinary months between November and December, the one of thirty-three, and the other of thirty-four days ; so that this year, which was called the last year of confusion, consisted of sixteen months, or 445 days, Suet. Cæs. 40. Plin. xviii. 25. Macrob. Sat. i. 14. Censorin. de die Nat. 20.

All this was effected by the care and skill of Sosigenes, a celebrated astronomer of Alexandria, whom Cæsar had brought to Rome for that purpose ; and a new calendar was formed from his arrangement by Flavius, a scribe, digested according to the order of the Roman festivals, and the old manner of computing the days by kalends, nones, and ides ; which was published and authorized by the dictator's edict.

This is the famous JULIAN or solar year, which continues in use to this day in all Christian countries, without any other variation than that of the old and new style ; which was occasioned by a regulation of Pope Gregory, A. D. 1582 ; who observing that the vernal equinox, which, at the time of the council of Nice, A. D. 325, had been on the 21st of March, then happened on the 10th, by the advice of astronomers, caused ten days to be entirely sunk and thrown out of the current year between the 4th and 15th of October : and, to make the civil year for the future to agree with the real one, or with the annual revolution of the earth round the sun : or, as it was then expressed, with the annual motion of the sun round the ecliptic, which is completed in 365 days, 5 hours, 49 minutes, nearly, ordained that every 100th year should not be leap year ; excepting the 400th ; so that the difference will hardly amount to a day in 7000 years, or, according to a more accurate computation of the length of the year, to a day in 5200 years.

This alteration of the style was immediately adopted in all the Roman Catholic countries ; but not in Britain till the year 1752, when eleven days were dropt between the 2d and 14th September ; so that that month contained only nineteen days ; and thenceforth the new style was adopted as it had been before in the other countries of Europe. The same year also, another alteration was made in England, that the legal year, which before had begun the 25th March, should begin upon the first of January, which first took place 1st January, 1752.

The Romans divided their months into three parts, by Kalends, Nones, and Ides. The first day was called KALENDÆ vel Calendæ (a calando vel vocando,) from a priest calling out to the people that it was new moon ; the 5th day, NONÆ, the nones ; the 13th, IDUS, the ides, from the obsolete verb iduarè, to divide ; because the ides nearly divided the month. The nones were so called, because, counting inclusively, they were nine days from the ides.

In March, May, July, and October, the nones fell on the 7th, and the ides on the 15th. The first day of the intercalary month was called CALENDÆ INTERCALARES, Cic. Quint. 25. of the former of those inserted by CÆSAR. KAL. INTERCALARES PRIORES, Cic. Fam. vi. 14.—Intra septimas Calendas, in 7 months, Martial. i. 100. 6. Sexta kalendæ, i. e. Kalendæ sexti mensis, the first day of June, Ovid. Fast. vi. 181.

Cæsar was led to this method of regulating the year by observing the manner of computing time among the Egyptians; who divided the year into 12 months, each consisting of 30 days, and added 5 intercalary days at the end of the year, and every fourth year 6 days, Herodot. ii. 4. These supernumerary days Cæsar disposed of among those months which now consist of 31 days, and also the two days which he took from February; having adjusted the year so exactly to the course of the sun, says Dio, that the insertion of one intercalary day in 1461 years would make up the difference, Dio. xliii. 26. which, however, was found to be ten days less than the truth. Another difference between the Egyptian and Julian year was, that the former began with September, and the latter with January.

The ancient Romans did not divide their time into weeks, as we do, in imitation of the Jews. The country people came to Rome every ninth day, (see p. 79.) whence these days were called NUNDINÆ, quasi NOVENDINÆ, having seven intermediate days for working, Macrob. i. 16. but there seems to have been no word to denote this space of time. The time, indeed, between the promulgation and passing of a law, was called TRINUM NUNDINUM, or TRINUNDINUM, Liv. iii. 35. Cic. Dom. 16. 17. Phil. v. 3. Fam. xvi. 12; but this might include from 17 to 30 days, according to the time when the table containing the business to be determined, (tabula promulgationis,) was hung up, and the Comitia were held. The classics never put nundinum by itself for a space of time. Under the late emperors, indeed, it was used to denote the time that the consuls remained in office, which then probably was two months, Lamprid. in Alex. Sever. 28 & 43. so that sometimes there were 12 consuls in one year; hence nundinum is also put for the two consuls themselves, (collegium consulum,) Vospic. Tac. 9.

The custom of dividing time into weeks, (hebdomades, v. -de vel septimāna,) was introduced under the emperors. Dio, who flourished under Severus, says, it first took place a little before his time, being derived from the Egyptians; and universally prevailed, xxxvii. 81. The days of the week were named from the planets, as they still are; Dies Solis, Sunday; Lunæ, Monday; Martis, Tuesday; Mercurii, Wednesday; Jovis, Thursday; Veneris, Friday; Saturni, Saturday; ibid.

The Romans, in marking the days of the month, counted backwards. Thus they called the last day of December Pridie Kalendas. sc. ante, or Pridie Kalendarum Januarü, marked shortly, Prid. Kal.

Jan. the day before that ; or the 30th December, Tertio Kal. Jan. sc. die ante, or ante die tertium Kal. Jan. and so through the whole year ; Thus,

In leap year, that is, when February has twenty-nine days, which happens every fourth year, both the 24th and 25th days of that month were marked sexto Kalendas Martii or Martias ; and hence the year is called BISSEXTILIS.

The names of all the months are used as substantives or adjectives, except Aprilis, which is used only as a substantive.

The Greeks had no kalends in their way of reckoning, but called the first day of the month. πρωτη, or new moon; hence ad Græcas Kalendas solvere, for nunquam, Suet. Aug. 87.

The day among the Romans was either civil or natural.

The civil day (DIES CIVILIS) was from midnight to midnight. The parts of which were, 1. Media nox; 2. Media noctis inclinatio, vel de media nocte; 3. Gallitinium, cock-crow, or cock-crowing, the time when the cocks begin to crow; 4. Conticinium, when they give over crowing; 5. Diluculum, the dawn; 6. Mane, the morning; 7. Antemeridianum tempus, the forenoon; 8. Meridies, noon, or mid-day; 9. Tempus pomeridianum vel meridiæ inclinatio, afternoon; 10. Solis occasus, sun-set; 11. Vespera, the evening; 12. Crepusculum, the twilight, (dubium tempus, noctis an diei sit: Ideo dubia res creperæ dictæ, Varr. L. L. vi. 4.) 13. Prima fax, when candles were lighted, called also prima tenebra, Liv. Prima lumina, Horat.—14. Concubia nox, vel concubium, bed-time, Liv. xxv. 9.—15. Intempesta nox, or silentium noctis, far on in the night; 16. Inclinatio ad mediam noctem, Censorin. de die. nat. c. 24.

The natural day (DIES NATURALIS) was from the rising to the setting of the sun. It was divided into twelve hours, which were of a different length at different seasons: Hence hora hiberna for brevissima, Plaut. Pseud. v. 2. 11.

The night was divided into four watches, (vigilia prima, secunda, &c.) each consisting of three hours, which were likewise of different length at different times of the year: thus, hora sexta noctis, midnight; Septima, one o'clock in the morning; Octava, two, &c. Plin. Ep. iii. 4.

Before the use of dials (horologia solaria vel sciaterica) was known at Rome, there was no division of the day into hours; nor does that word occur in the Twelve Tables. They only mention sun-rising and sun-setting, before and after mid-day, Censorin. 23. According to Pliny, mid-day was not added till some years after, vii. 60. an accensus of the consuls being appointed to call out that time, (accenso consulum s'd pronunciante.) when he saw the sun from the senate-house; between the Rostra and the place called GRÆCOSTASIS, Plin. ibid. where ambassadors from Greece and other foreign countries used to stand, Varr. L. L. iv. 32. Cic. ad Q. Fr. ii. 1.

Anaximander or Anaximenes of Miletus, is said to have invented dials at Lacedæmon in the time of Cyrus the Great, Plin. ii. 76. the first dial is said to have been set up at Rome by L. Papius Cursor, A. U. 447. and the next near the Rostra by M. Valerius Mesala the Consul, who brought it from Catana in Sicily, in the first Punic war, A. U. 481. Plin. vii. 60. Gell. ex Plaut. iii. 3.—Hence, ad solarium versari, for in foro, Cic. Quint. 18.—Scipio Nasica first measured time by water, or by a clepsydra, which served by night as well as by day, A. U. 595. ibid. (See p. 209.) The use of clocks and watches was unknown to the Romans.*

DIVISION of DAYS and ROMAN FESTIVALS.

DAYS among the Romans were either dedicated to religious purposes, (DIES FESTI,) or assigned to ordinary business, (dies PROFESTI.) There were some partly the one and partly the other, (dies INTERSICI, i. e. ex parte festi, et ex parte profesti;) half holidays.

On the Dies Festi sacrifices were performed, feasts and games were celebrated, or there was at least a cessation from business.—The days on which there was a cessation from business, were called FERIÆ, holidays, Cic. legg. ii. 8. Divin. 45. and were either public or private.

Public Feriæ or festivals were either stated, (STATÆ,) or annually fixed on a certain day by the magistrates, or priests, (CONCEPTIVÆ,) or occasionally appointed by order of the consul, the prætor, or Pontifex Maximus, (IMPERATIVÆ.)

The stated festivals were chiefly the following :

1. In January, AGONALIA, in honour of Janus, on the 9th, (v. Id.) Ovid. Fast. i. 318. &c. and also on the 20th May: CARMENTALIA, in honour of Carmenta, the mother of Evander, on the 11th (II. Id.) : Ovid. ibid. 461. But this was an half-holiday, (intenciusus :) for after mid-day it was dies profestus, a common work-day. On the 13th (Idibus) a wether (vervex vel ovis semimas, æris;) was sacred to Jupiter, Ovid. Fast. i. 588. On this day the name of AUGUSTUS was conferred on Cæsar Octavianus, ibid. 590. On the first day of this month, people used to wish one another health and prosperity, (omnia fausta;) Plin. 28. 2. s. 5. and to send presents to their friends. (See p. 55.) Most of the magistrates entered on their office, and artists thought it lucky to begin any work they had to perform, (opera auspiciabantur;) Senec. Ep. 83. Ovid. et Martial. passim.

2. In February, FAUNALIA, to the god Faunus, on the 13th (Idibus) : LUPERCALIA, to Lycæan. Pan, on the 15th, (xv. Kal.

* The invention of clocks with wheels is attributed to Pacificus, Archdeacon of Verona, who lived in the time of Lotharius son of Louis le Debonsair, on the credit of an epitaph quoted by Ughelli and borrowed by him from Penwinus. They were at first called nocturnal dials, to distinguish them from sun-dials, which shewed the hours by the sun's shadow. Others ascribe the invention to Boethius, about the year 510.—Some rank Archimedes's sphere, mentioned, by Claudian, and that of Peridonius, mentioned by Cicero, among the machines of this kind; because they had their motion from some hidden weights or springs, with wheels, or pulleys, or some such clock-work principle. Such as are now in use were either first invented, or at least retrieved in Germany, near the close of the 16th century. The honour of the invention of Pendulum clocks is disputed by Huygens and Galileo.

It is certain, however, that the invention never flourished until it came into Huygens's hands.

The invention of spring or pocket watches is contended for by Huygens and Dr. Hooke; the time of this invention was about the year 1668, and Hooke's claim appears now to be almost undisputed.—See Encyclop. Brit.

Sacred rites were performed to them for three nights; not successively, but alternately for six days, Ovid. Fast. v. 429; on the 13th, or the ides, the images of thirty men made of rushes, (simulacra scripæa virorum.) called Argei, were thrown from the Sublician bridges by the Vestal Virgins, attended by the magistrates and priests, in place of that number of old men, which used anciently to be thrown from the same bridge into the Tiber, Festus in DEPONTANI, Varr. de Lat. ling. vii. 3. *Ovid. The FERLÆ CONCEPTIVÆ, which were annually appointed (concupiebantur vel indicebantur) by the magistrates on a certain day, were,

1. FERLÆ LATINÆ, the Latin holidays, (see p. 65.) first appointed by Tarquin for one day, Liv. i. 55. After the expulsion of the kings they were continued for two, then for three, and at last for four days, Liv. vi. 42. The consuls always celebrated the Latin feriæ before they set out to their provinces; and if they had not been rightly performed, or if any thing had been omitted, it was necessary that they should be again repeated, (instaurari.) Liv. passim.

2. PAGANALIA, celebrated in the villages, (in pagis) to the tutelary gods of the rustic tribes. See p. 75.

3. SEMENTIVÆ, in seed-time for a good crop, Varr. ibid.

4. COMPITALIA, to the Lares, in places where several ways met, (in compitis.)

FERLÆ IMPERATIVÆ, were holidays appointed occasionally; as, when it was said to have rained stones, Sacrum NOVENDIALE vel feriæ per novem dies, for nine days, Liv. i. 31; for expiating other prodigies, Liv. iii. 5. xxxv. 40. xlii. 2; on account of a victory; &c. to which may be added JUSTITIUM, (cum jura stant.) a cessation from business on account of some public calamity, as a dangerous war, the death of an emperor, &c. Liv. iii. 3. 27. iv. 26. 31. vi. 2. 7. vii. 6. 28. ix. 7. x. 4. 21. *Tacit. Feriæ were privately observed by families and individuals on account of birth-days, prodigies, &c. The birth-day of the emperors was celebrated with sacrifices and various games, as that of Augustus, the 23d September, Dio. lii. 8. 26. 34. The games then celebrated were called AUGUSTALIA, Dio. lvi. 29. as well as those on the 12th of October, (iv. Id. Octob.) in commemoration of his return to Rome, Dio. liv. 10. lvi. 46. which Dio says continued to be observed in his time, under Severus, liv. 34.

DIES PROFESTI, were either Fasti or Nefasti, &c. (See p. 282.) Nundinæ, quasi Novendinæ, (see p. 76.) market-days, which happened every ninth day; when they fell on the first day of the year it was reckoned unlucky, Dio. xl. 47. Macrob. Sat. i. 13. and therefore Augustus, who was very superstitious, Suet. Aug. 92. used to insert a day in the foregoing year to prevent it, which day was taken away from the subsequent year, that the time might agree with the arrangement of Julius Cæsar, Dio. xlviii. 33. PRÆLIARES, fighting days, and non præliares; as, the days after the kalends, nones, and ides; for they believed there was something unlucky in the word post, after, and therefore they were called Dies religiosi, atri vel infasti; Ovid. Fast. i. 58. as those days were, on which any remarkable disaster had happened; as, Dies Alliensis, &c. Liv. vi. 1. The ides of March, or the 15th, was called PARRICIDIUM; because on that day, Cæsar, who had been called PATER PATRIÆ, was slain in the senate-house, Suet. Cæs. 85 & 88. Conclave, in quo cæsus fuerat, obstructum et in latrinam conversum, Dio. xlviii. 19.

As most of the year was taken up with sacrifices and holy days, to the great loss of the public, Claudius abridged their number, Dio. lx. 17.

ROMAN GAMES.

GAMES among the ancient Romans constituted a part of religious worship. They were of different kinds at different periods of the republic. At first they were always consecrated to some god; and were either stated, (Ludi STATI), the chief of which have been already enumerated among the Roman festivals; or vowed by generals in war, (VOTIVI), or celebrated on extraordinary occasions, (EXTRAORDINARI.)

At the end of every 110 years, games were celebrated for the safety of the empire, for three days and three nights, to Apollo and Diana, called Ludi SÆCULARES. (See p. 153.) But they were not regularly performed at those periods.

The most famous games were those celebrated in the Circus Maximus; hence called Ludi Circenses; of which the chief were Ludi Romani vel Magni, Liv. i. 35.

I. LUDI CIRCENSES.*

THE Circus Maximus was first built by Tarquinius Priscus, and afterwards at different times magnificently adorned. It lay betwixt the Palatine and Aventine hills, and was of an oblong circular form, whence it had its name. The length of it was three stadia, or furlongs and a half, i. e. 437½ paces, or 2187½ feet: the breadth little more than one stadium, with rows of seats all around, called Fori or spectacula, (i. e. sedilia unde spectarent,) rising one above another, the lowest of stone and the highest of wood, where separate places were allotted to each Curia, and also the Senators and to the Equites; but these last under the republic, sat promiscuously with the rest of the people. (See page 14.) It is said to have contained at least 150,000 persons, Dionys. iii. 68. or, according to others, above double that number; according to Pliny, 250,000, Plin. xxxvi. 15. s. 24. Some moderns say 380,000. Its circumference was a mile. It was surrounded with a ditch or canal, called Eurtus, ten feet broad and ten feet deep; and with porticoes three stories high (συναρτῆραι); both the work of Julius Cæsar. In different parts there were proper places for the people to go in and out without disturbance. On one end there were several openings, (oclia,) from which the horses and chariots started, (emittebantur,) called CARCERES vel Lepagula, and sometimes Carcer, (quod equos coercebat, ne exirent, priusquam magistratus signum mitteret, Varro. L. L. iv. 32.) first built A. U. 425. Liv. viii. 20. Before the carceres stood two small statues of Mercury, (Hermuli), holding a chain or rope to keep in the horses, Cassiodor. Var. Ep. iii. 51. in place of which there seems sometimes to have been a white line, (alba linea,) or a cross furrow filled with chalk or lime, ibid. at which the horses were made to stand in a straight row (frontibus æquabantur,) by persons called MORATORES, mentioned in some ancient inscriptions. But this line, called also CRETA or CALX, seems to have been drawn chiefly to mark the end of the course, or limit of victory, (ad victoriae notum,) Plin. xxxv. 16. s. 58. Isidor. xviii. 37. to which Horace beautifully alludes, Mors ultima linea rerum est, Ep. i. 16. fin.

On this end of the circus, which was in the form of a semicircle, were three balconies or open galleries, one in the middle, and one in each corner: called MÆNIANA, from one Mænius, who, when he sold his house adjoining to the Forum, to Cato and Flaccus the censors, reserved to himself the right of one pillar, where he might build a projection, whence he and his posterity might view the shows of gladiators, which were then exhibited in the Forum, Ascon. in Cic. Suet. Cal. 18.

In the middle of the Circus, for almost the whole length of it, there was a brick wall, about twelve feet broad, and four feet high, called SPINA, Scholias in Juvenal. vi, 587. Cassiod. Ep. iii. 51. at both the extremities of which there were three columns or pyramids on one base, called METÆ, or goals, round which the horses and chariots turned, (flectebant;) so that they always had the spina and metas on their left hand, Ovid. Am. iii. 65. Lucan. viii. 200. contrary to the manner of running among us. Whence a carceribus ad metas vel calcem, from beginning to end, Cic. Am. 27. Sen. 23.

* Bianchini supposes these to have relation to the traditions of the creation, &c.

In the middle of the spina Augustus erected an obelisk 132 feet high, brought from Egypt; and at a small distance another 88 feet high. Near the first Meta, whence the horses set off, there were seven other pillars, either of an oval form or having oval spheres on their top called OVA, Varr. de re Rust. i. 2. 11. which were raised or rather taken down, (tollebantur, ibid.) to denote how many rounds the charioteers had completed, one for each round; for they usually ran seven times round the course. Above each of these ova was engraved the figure of a dolphin. These pillars were called FALÆ or PHALÆ. Some think there were two different kinds of pillars, one with the figure of an ovum on the top, which were erected at the Meta prima; and another with the figure of a dolphin, which stood at the Meta ultima; Juvenal joins them together, Consulit ante falas delphinorumque columnas, vi. 589. They are said to have been first constructed, A. U. 721. by Agrippa, Dio. xlix. 43. but ova ad metas curricula numerandis, are mentioned by Livy long before A. U. 577. Liv. xli. 27. as they are near 600 years after by Cassiodorus, iii. Var. Ep. 51. The figure of an egg was chosen in honour of Castor and Pollux, (Dioscuri, i. e. Jove nati, Cic. Nat. D. iii. 21. agonum prasides;) and of a dolphin in honour of Neptune, Tertullian. Spectac. 8. also as being the swiftest of animals, Plin. ix. 8.

Before the games began, the images of the gods were carried in procession on carriages and in frames, (in thensis et ferculis;) Suet. Jul. 76. Ovid. Amor. iii. 2. 44. Cic. Verr. 5. 72. or on men's shoulders, with a great train of attendants, part on horseback, and part on foot. Next followed the combatants, dancers, musicians, &c. When the procession was over, the consuls and priests performed sacred rites, Dionys. vii. 72.

The shows (spectacula) exhibited in the Circus Maximus, were chiefly the following:

1. Chariot and horse-races, of which the Romans were extravagantly fond.

The charioteers (agitatores vel aurigæ) were distributed into four parties (greges) or factions, distinguished by their different dress or livery; factio alba vel albata, the white; russata, the red; veneta, the sky-coloured or sea-coloured; and prasina, the green faction; to which Domitian added two, called the golden and purple, (factio aurata et purpurea;) Suet. Domit. 7. The spectators favoured one or the other colour, as humour or caprice inclined them. It was not the swiftness of the horses, nor the art of the men, that attracted them; but merely the dress; (Nunc favent panno, pannum amanti;) Plin. Ep. ix. 6. In the time of Justinian, no less than 30,000 men are said to have lost their lives at Constantinople in a tumult raised by contention among the partisans of these several colours, Procop. Bell. Pers. i.

The order in which the chariots or horses stood, was determined by lot; and the person who presided at the games gave the signal for starting by dropping a napkin or cloth, *mappâ vel panno misso. Then the chain of the Hermuli being withdrawn, they sprung forward, and whoever first ran seven times round the course was victor, Propert. ii. 25. 26. 1. Senec. Ep. 30. Ov. Hal. 68. This was called one match: (unus MISSUS, -ûs,) for the matter was almost always determined at one heat; and usually there were twenty-five of these in one day, so that when there were four factions, and one of these started at each time, 100 chariots ran in one day, Serv. in Virg. G. iii. 18. (centum quadrâjûgi) sometimes many more; but then the horses commonly went only five times round the course, Suet. Claud. 21. Ner. 22. Domit. 4.

The victor, being proclaimed by the voice of a herald, was crowned, Suet. Calig. 32. Virg. Æn. iii. 245. and received a prize in money of considerable value, Martial. x. 50. 74. Juvenal. vii. 113.

Palms were first given to the victors at games, after the manner of the Greeks; and those who had received crowns for their bravery in war, first wore them at the games, A. U. 459. Liv. x. 47.—The palm tree was chosen for this purpose, because it rises against a weight placed on it, (adversus pondus resurgit et sursum nititur,) Gell. iii. 6. Plin. xvi. 42. s. 81. 12. hence put for any token or prize of victory, Horat. Od. i. 1. 5. Juvenal. xi. 181. or for victory itself, Virg. G. iii. Ovid. Trist. iv. 8. 19. Palma lemniscata, a palm crown with ribands (lemnisci) hanging down from it, Cic. Rosc. Am. 25. Festus. Huic consilio palman do, I value myself chiefly on account of this contrivance, Ter. Heaut. iv. 3. 31.

2. Contests of agility and strength, of which there were five kinds; running, (cursus;) leaping, (saltus;) boxing, (pugilatus;) wrestling, (lucta;) and throwing the discus or quoit (disci jactus;) hence called Pentathlum, vel -on, (Latinè QUINQUERTIUM, Festus,) or Certamen Athleticum vel Gymnicum, because they contended naked, (γυμνωταί;) with nothing on but trowsers or drawers, (subligaribus tantum velati;) whence GYMNASIUM, a place of exercise, or a school. This covering, which went from the waist downwards, and supplied the place of a tunic, was called CAMPESTRE, Horat. Ep. i.

* "The person at whose expense the games were given, sat over the middle entrance. It was from hence that the signal was made for the chariots to start. At first torches were used; but afterwards a napkin or cloth was lowered. It was the business of the consul to make the signal, and in his absence the prætor gave it. In the time of the emperors it was the prætor's office: he let a napkin fall from the balcony; and it is said, that the custom arose from an order of Nero, who was dining, and the people became so impatient for the games to begin, that he ordered his own napkin to be thrown down as a signal. Hence Juvenal's expression, Interea Megales iacæ spectacula mappæ.

A trumpet also sounded, as at the Olympic games.' Burton.—Ed.

11. 18. (αεργωμα, Pausan. i. 44.) because it was used in the exercises of the Campus Martius, and those who used it, Campestrati, Augustin. de Civ. Dei. xiv. 17. So anciently at the Olympic games, Thucydid. i. 6.

The Athletæ were anointed with a glutinous ointment, called CÆROMA, Martial. vii. 31. 9. iv. 4 & 19. xi. 48. Juvenal. vi. 245. by slaves called Aliptæ, Cic. i. 9. 35. whence liquida, PALESTRA, Lucan. ix. 661. uncta PALESTRA, Ovid. Ep. xix. 11. and wore a coarse shaggy garment called ENDRŌMIS, -idis, Martial. iv. 19. used of finer stuff by women, Juvenal. ibid. also by those who played at that kind of the hand-ball (pila) called TRIGON or HÆRPASTUM, Martial. ibid.

Boxers covered their hands with a kind of gloves, (chirotheca,) which had lead or iron sewed into them, to make the strokes fall with the greater weight, called CÆSTUS vel cestus, Virg. Æn. v. 879. 400.

The combatants (Athletæ) were previously trained in a place of exercise, (in palastra vel gymnasio;) Plaut. Bacch. iii. 3. 14. and restricted to a particular diet, Horat. de Art. Poet. 413. 1. Corinth. ix. 25. In winter they were exercised in a covered place called XYSTUS, vel -um, surrounded with a row of pillars, PERISTYLIUM, Vitruv. v. 2. But Xystrum generally signifies a walk under the open air, (ambulatio Hypæthra vel subdiatis;) laid with sand or gravel, and planted with trees, joined to a Gymnasium, Cic. Att. i. 8. Acad. iv. 3. Suet. Aug. 72. Plin. Ep. ii. 17. ix. 36.

The persons thus exercised were called Palastritæ, or Xystici; and he who exercised them, EXERCITATOR, Plin. xxiii. 7. s. 63. Magister vel Doctor Palestricus, Gymnasiarchus, vel Xystarchus, vel -es. From the attention of Antony to gymnastic exercises at Alexandria, he was called Gymnasiarcha by Augustus, Dio. l. 5. 27.

PALESTRA was properly a school for wrestling, (ααλη, luctatio;) but is put for any place of exercise, or the exercise itself; hence palastram discere, to learn the exercise; Cic. Orat. iii. 22. These gymnastic games, (gymnici agones;) were very hurtful to morals, Plin. iv. 22.

The Athletic games among the Greeks were called ISELASTIC, (from ισελαστω, invethor;) because the victors, (Hieronica, Suet. Ner. 24. 25.) drawn by white horses, and wearing crowns on their heads; of olive, if victors at the Olympic games, Virg. G. iii. 18. of laurel at the Pythian; of parsley at the Nemean; and of pine at the Isthmian, were conducted with great pomp into their respective cities, which they entered through a breach in the walls made for that purpose; intimating, as Plutarch observes, that a city which produced such brave citizens, had little occasion for the defence of walls, Plin. Ep. x. 119. They received for life an annual stipend, (opsonia;) from the public, ibid. & Vitruv. ix. Præf.

3. LUDUS TROJÆ, a mock fight, performed by young noblemen on horseback, revived by Julius Cæsar, Dio. xlvi. 23. Suet. 19. and frequently celebrated by the succeeding Emperors, Suet. Aug. 43.

Tib. 6. Cal. 18. Claud. 21. Ner. 7. Dio. xlvi. 20. li. 22. &c. described by Virgil, Æn. v. 561. &c.

4. What was called VENATIO, or the fighting of wild beasts with one another, or with men called Bestiarii, who were either forced to this by way of punishment, as the primitive Christians often were; or fought voluntarily, either from a natural ferocity of disposition, or induced by hire, (auctoramento,) Cic. Tusc. Quæst. ii. 17. Fam. vii. 1. Off. ii. 16. Vat. 17.* An incredible number of animals of various kinds were brought, from all quarters, for the entertainment of the people, and at an immense expense, Cic. Fam. viii. 2. 4. 6. They were kept in inclosures, called VIVARIA, till the day of exhibition. Pompey, in his second consulship, exhibited at once 500 lions, who were all despatched in 5 days; also 18 elephants, Dio. xxxix. 38. Plin. viii. 7.

5. The representation of a horse and foot battle, and also of an encampment or a siege, Suet. Jul. 39. Claud. 21. Dom. 4.

6. The representation of a sea-fight, (NAUMACHIA), which was at first made in the Circus Maximus, but afterwards oftener elsewhere. Augustus dug a lake near the Tiber for that purpose, Suet. Aug. 43. Tiber. 72. and Domitian built a naval theatre, which was called Naumachia Domitiani, Suet. Dom. 5. Those who fought were called Naumachiarii. They were usually composed of captives or condemned malefactors, who fought to death, unless saved by the clemency of the emperor, Dio. lx. 33. Suet. Claud. 21. Tacit. Annal. xii. 56.†

If any thing unlucky happened at the games, they were renewed, (instaurabantur,) Dio. lvi. 27. often more than once, Id. lx. 6.

II. SHOWS of GLADIATORS.

THE shows (spectacula) of gladiators were properly called Munera, and the person that exhibited (edebat) them, Munerarius, vel

* "It was in the course of the second Punic war that wild beasts were first exhibited at all, as before that time there was a decree of the senate, prohibiting the importation of beasts from Africa. At first they were only shown to the people, and not hunted or killed. The earliest account we have of such an exhibition was U. C. 502, when one hundred and forty-two elephants were produced, which were taken in Sicily. Pliny, who gives us this information, tells us, that he could not ascertain whether they were put to death in the Circus, or merely exhibited there. But these animals had been seen in Rome twenty-three years before, in the triumph of M. C. Dentatus over Pyrrhus. According to Seneca, Pompey was the first person who gave a combat of elephants. If we may believe Suetonius, Galba introduced them in the games dancing or walking upon ropes. Lions first appeared in any number U. C. 652; but these were not turned loose. In the year 661, Sylla brought forward one hundred, when he was prætor, and had some African hunters sent on purpose to shoot them. In the year 696, besides lions, elephants, bears, etc. one hundred and fifty panthers were shown for the first time." Burton.—ED.

† "The Naumachia of Augustus was on the other side of the Tiber, and was 1800 feet in length, and 200 in width, so that thirty ships of war could engage in it. Caligula constructed one, as did Domitian and others. That of Domitian was on the site of the present Piazza di Spagna. Elagabalus upon one occasion filled the Euripus with wine, and had naval exhibitions performed in it. P. Victor mentions ten Naumachias." Burton.—ED.

-ator, Editor et Dominus, Cic. Att. ii. 19. who, although in a private station, enjoyed, during the days of the exhibition, the ensigns of magistracy, Cic. legg. ii. 24. They seem to have taken their rise from the custom of slaughtering captives at the tombs of those slain in battle to appease their manes, Virg. Æn. x. 518.

Gladiators were first publicly exhibited (dati sunt) at Rome by two brothers called Bruti, at the funeral of their father, A. U. 490. Liv. Epit. xvi. Valer. Max. ii. 4. 7. and for some time they were exhibited only on such occasions; but afterwards, also, by the magistrates, to entertain the people, chiefly at the Saturnalia and feasts of Minerva. Incredible numbers of men were destroyed in this manner. After the triumph of Trajan over the Dacians, spectacles were exhibited for 123 days, in which 11,000 animals of different kinds were killed; and 10,000 gladiators fought, Dio. xlviii. 15. whence we may judge of other instances. The emperor Claudius, although naturally of a gentle disposition, is said to have been rendered cruel by often attending these spectacles, Dio. lx. 14.

Gladiators were kept and maintained in schools (in ludis) by persons called LANISTÆ, who purchased and trained them. The whole number under one Lanista was called FAMILIA, Suet. Jul. 26. Aug. 42. They were plentifully fed on strong food; hence Sagina gladiatoria, Tacit. Hist. ii. 88.

A Lanista, when he instructed young gladiators (tirones), delivered to them his lessons and rules (dictata et leges) in writing, Suet. Jul. 26. Juvenal. xi. 8. and then he was said commentari, Cic. de Orat. iii. 23. when he gave over his employment, a gladius recessisse, Cic. Rosc. Am. 40.

The gladiators, when they were exercised, fenced with wooden swords, (rudibus batuebant; whence batualia, a battle,) Cic. ibid. Suet. Calig. 32. 54. When a person was confuted by weak arguments, or easily convicted, he was said, Plumbeo gladio jugulari, Cic. Att. i. 16. Jugulo hunc suo sibi gladio, I foil him with his own weapons; I silence him with his own arguments, Terent. Adolph. v. 8. 34. O plumbeum pugionem! O feeble or inconclusive reasoning! Cic. Fin. iv. 18.

Gladiators were at first composed of captives and slaves, or of condemned malefactors. Of these, some were said to be ad gladium damnati, who were to be despatched within a year. This, however, was prohibited by Augustus, (gladiatores sine missione edi prohibuit), Suet. Aug. 45. and others, ad ludum damnati, who might be liberated after a certain time. But afterwards, also, free-born citizens, induced by hire or by inclination, fought on the arena, some even of noble birth, Juvenal. ii. 43. viii. 191. &c. Liv. xxviii. 2. Suet. Ner. 12. and, what is still more wonderful, women of quality, Tacit. Annal. x. v. 32. Suet. Domit. 4. Juvenal. vi. 254. &c. and dwarfs, (uani) Stat. Syl. v. 1. vi. 57.

Freemen who became gladiators for hire were said esse auctorati, Horat. Sat. ii. 7. 5. and their hire, auctoramentum, Suet. Tib. 7. or gladiatorium, Liv. xlv. 31. and an oath was administered to them, Pet. Arbitr.-117.

Gladiators were distinguished by their armour and manner of fighting. Some were called SECUTORES, whose arms were an helmet, a shield, and a sword or a leaden bullet, (massa plumbea), Isidor. xviii. 55. With them were usually matched (commitebantur vel componebantur) the RETIARII. A combatant of this kind was dressed in a short tunic, but wore nothing on his head, Suet. Calig. 30. Claud. 34. Juvenal. viii. 205. He bore in his left hand a three-pointed lance, called Tridens or Fuscina, and in his right a net, (rete), with which he attempted to entangle (irretire) his adversary, by casting it over his head, and suddenly drawing it together, and then with his trident he usually slew him. But if he missed his aim, either by throwing his net too short, or too far, he instantly betook himself to flight, and endeavoured to prepare his net for a second cast; while his antagonist as quickly pursued, (whence the name Secutor.) to prevent his design by despatching him.

Some gladiators were called MIRMIILLONES, (a μυρμιγες, piscis) because they carried the image of a fish on their helmet; hence a Retiarius, when engaged with one of them said, "I do not aim at you, I throw at your fish," (NON TE PETO, FISCEM PETO: QUID ME FUGIS, GALLE?) Festus. The Mirmillo was armed like a Gaul, with a buckler (parma vel pelta) and a hooked sword or cutlass, (sica vel harpe, i. e. gladio incurvo et falcato), and was usually matched with a Thracian, (THREX vel THRAX, i. e. Threcedicis armis ornatus), Cic. Phil. vii. 6. Liv. xli. 20. Horat. Sat. ii. 6. 44. Suet. Cal. 32. Juvenal. viii. 201. Auson. in Monosyll. 102. Quis Myrmilloni componitur æquimanus? Threx.

Certain gladiators from their armour were called SAMNITES, Liv. ix. 40. Cic. Sext. 64. and also Hoplomachi, Suet. Calig. 35. Some Dimachæri, because they fought with two swords; and others Loquearii, because they used a noose to entangle their adversaries, Isidor. xviii. 56.

There was a kind of gladiators who fought from chariots, (ex es-sedis), after the manner of the Britons or Gauls, called ESSEDARII, Cic. Fam. vii. 6. Suet. Cal. 35. Cæs. de B. G. v. 24. and also from on horseback, with, what was curious, their eyes shut, (clausis oculis), who were called ANDABAVÆ, Cic. Fam. vii. 10. Hence Andabaturum more pugnare, to fight in the dark or blindfold, Hieronym.

Gladiators who were substituted (supponebantur) in place of those who were conquered or fatigued, were called SUPPOSITITII, or SUBDITII, Martial. v. 25. 8. Those who were asked by the people, from the Emperor, on account of their dexterity and skill in fighting, were called POSTULATITII; such were maintained at the Emperor's private charge, and hence called FISCALES or Casariani. Those who were produced and fought in the ordinary manner, were called ORDINARII, Suet. Aug. 44. Domit. 4.

When a number fought together, (gregatim, temere ac sine arte), and not in pairs, they were called CATERVARIII, Suet. Aug. 45. Cal.

30. Those produced at mid-day, who were generally untrained, were called MERIDIANI, Senec. Epist. 7. Suet. Claud. 34.

The person who was to exhibit gladiators (EDITOR) some time before announced the show, (munus edicebat, Senec. Ep. 117. ostendebat, pronunciabat, proponebat, &c. Cic. Fam. ii. 8. ix. 9. Suet. Jul. 26. Tit. 8.) by an advertisement or bill pasted up in public, (per libellum publicè affixum), in which he mentioned the number and the names of the most distinguished gladiators. Sometimes these things seem to have been represented in a picture, Horat. Sat. ii. 7. 95. Plin. xxxv. 7. s. 33.

Gladiators were exhibited sometimes at the funeral pile, often in the Forum, which was then adorned with statues and pictures, Cic. Verr. i. 22. but usually in an amphitheatre, so called because it was seated all round, like two theatres joined, Plin. xxxvi. 14. 16. &c.

AMPHITHEATRES were at first temporary, and made of wood. The first durable one of stone was built by Statilius Taurus at the desire of Augustus, Suet. Aug. 29. which seems likewise to have been partly of wood. The largest amphitheatre was begun by Vespasian and completed by Titus, now called COLISEUM, from the Colossus or large statue of Nero which stood near it. It was of an oval form, and is said to have contained 87,000 spectators. Its ruins still remain. The place where the gladiators fought was called ARENA, because it was covered with sand or saw-dust, to prevent the gladiators from sliding, and to absorb the blood; and the persons who fought, Arenarii. But arena is also put for the whole amphitheatre, or the show, Juvenal. iii. 34. also for the seat of war; Prima civilis arena Italia fuit, Flor. iii. 20. 21. iv. 2. thus Lucan. vi. 63. or for one's peculiar province, Plin. Ep. vi. 12. So CAVEA, for a theatre or amphitheatre, Suet. Aug. 44. Claud. 21. Cic. Amic. 24. Plaut. Amph. prol. 65. Consessus cavea, the spectators, Virg. Æn. v. 340. But CAVEA properly signifies a place where wild beasts were confined, Suet. Cal. 27. Horat. Art. P. 473. Martial. ix. 90. Plin. xxxvi. 5.

The part next the arena was called PODIUM, where the senators sat, and the ambassadors of foreign nations; and where also was the place of the emperor, (SUGGESTUS, vel -UM.) elevated like a pulpit or tribunal, Suet. Jul. 76. Plin. Paneg. 51. and covered with a canopy like a pavilion, (CUBICULUM vel papilio, Suet. Ner. 12.) likewise of the persons who exhibited the games, (Editoris Tribunal), and of the Vestal Virgins, Suet. Aug. 44.

The Podium projected over the wall which surrounded the arena, and was raised between twelve and fifteen feet above it; secured with a breast-work or parapet (loricâ) against the irruption of wild beasts. As a further defence, the arena was surrounded with an iron railing, (ferreis clathris), and a canal, (euripo), Plin. viii. 7.

The Equites sat in fourteen rows behind the senators. The seats (gradus vel sedilia) of both were covered with cushions, (pulvillis), Juvenal. iii. 152, first used in the time of Caligula, Dio. lix. 7. The rest of the people sat behind on the bare stone, and their seats were called POPULARIA, Suet. Claud. 25. Dom. 4. The entrance to these seats were called VOMITORIA; the passages (vie) by which they ascended to the seats were called Scalæ or Scaloria, and the seats between the two passages were, from their form, called Cuneus, a wedge, Juvenal. vi. 61. Suet. Aug. 44. For, like the section of a circle, this space gradually widened from the arena to the top. Hence Cuneis immotuit res omnibus, to all the spectators, Phædr. v. 7. 35.

Sometimes a particular place was publicly granted to certain persons by way of honour, Cic. Phil. ix. 7. and the Editor seems to have been allowed to assign a more honourable seat to any person he inclined, Cic. Att. ii. 1.

There were certain persons called DESIGNATORES, or Dissignatores, masters of ceremonies, who assigned to every one his proper place, Plaut. Pænul. prolong. 19. Cic. Att. ix. 3. as undertakers did at funerals, Horat. Epist. i. 7. 6. and when they removed any one from his place, they were said eum excitare vel suscitare, Martial. iii. 95. v. 14. vi. 9. The Designatores are thought by some to have been the same with what were called LOCARII, (quia sedes vel spectacula locabant.) But these, according to others, properly were poor people, who came early and took possession of a seat, which they afterwards parted with to some rich person who came late, for hire, Martial. v. 25.

Anciently women were not allowed to see the gladiators, without the permission of those in whose power they were, Valer. Max. vi. 3. 12. But afterwards this restriction was removed. Augustus assigned them a particular place in the highest seats of the amphitheatre, Suet. Aug. 44. Ovid. Amor. ii. 7. 3.

There were in the amphitheatres secret tubes, from which the spectators were besprinkled with perfumes, (croco diluto aut aliis fragrantibus liquoribus.) Martial. v. 26. & de spect. 3. issuing from certain figures (SIGNA.) Lucan. ix. 808. and in rain or excessive heat, there were coverings (vela vel velaria) to draw over them, Juvenal. iv. 122. For which purpose there were holes in the top of the outer wall, in which poles were fixed to support them. But when the wind did not permit these coverings to be spread, they used broad-brimmed hats or caps (causis vel pilei) and umbrellas, Dio. lix. 7. Martial. xiv. 27. 28.

By secret springs, certain wooden machines, called PEGMATA, vel -mæ, were raised to a great height, to appearance spontaneously, and elevated or depressed, diminished or enlarged, at pleasure, Martial. Spect. ii. 16. viii. 33. Senec. Epist. 88. Suet. Claud. 34. Gladiators were sometimes set on them, hence called Pegmares. Suet. Cal. 26. and boys (et pueros inde ad velaria raptos.) Juvenal. iv. 122. But pegmata is put by Cicero for the shelves, (pro loculis) in which books were kept, Att. iv. 8.

Nigh to the amphitheatre was a place called SPOLIARIUM, to which those who were killed or mortally wounded were dragged by a hook, (unco trahebantur.) Plin. Paneg. 36. Senec. Epist. 93. Lamprid. in Commod. fin.

On the day of the exhibition the gladiators were led along the arena in procession. Then they were matched by pairs, (paria inter se componebantur vel comparabantur.) Horat. Sat. I. vii. 20. and their swords were examined (explorabantur) by the exhibitor of the games, Suet. Tit. 9.

The gladiators, as a prelude to the battle, (praludentes vel proludentes), at first fought with wooden swords or the like, flourishing (ventilantes) their arms with great dexterity, Cic. de Orat. ii. 78. Senec. Ep. 117. Ovid. de Art. Am. iii. 515. 589. Then upon a signal given with a trumpet, (sonabant ferali clangore tubæ), they laid aside these, (arma lusoria, vedes vel gladios hebetes ponebant v. abjiciebant), and assumed their proper arms (arma pugnatoria vel decretoria, i. e. gladios acutos sumebant.) Quinctilian. 10. 5. 20; & Suet. Cal. 54. They adjusted themselves (se ad pugnam componebant, Gell. vii. 3.) with great care, and stood in a particular posture, (in statu vel gradu stabant.) Plaut. Mil. iv. 9. 12. Hence moveri, dejici, vel deturbari de stamentis; depelli, dejici, vel demoveri gradu, &c. Cic. Off. i. 23. Att. xvi. 15. Nep. Themist. 5. Liv. vi. 32. Then they pushed at one another (petebant) and repeated the thrust (repetebant.) Suet. Cal. 58. They not only pushed with the point, (punctim), but also struck with the edge, (cassim.) It was more easy to parry or avoid (cavere, propulsare, exire, effugere, excedere, eludere), direct thrusts, (ictus adversos, et rectas ac simplices manus), than back or side strokes, (manus vel petitiones aversas tectasque.) Quinctilian. v. 13. 54. ix. 1. 20. Virg. ix. 439. Cic. Cat. i. 6. They therefore took particular care to defend their side, (latus tegere;) hence latere tecto abscedere, to get off safe, Ter. Heaut. iv. 2. 5. Per alterius latus peti, Cic. Vat. 5. Latus apertum vel nudum dare, to expose one's self to danger, Tibull. i. 4. 46. Some gladiators had the faculty of not winking. Two such belonging to the Emperor Claudius were on that account invincible, Plin. xi. 37. s. 54. Senec. de Ir. ii. 4.

When any gladiator was wounded, the people exclaimed, HABET, sc. vulnus, vel hoc habet, he has got it. The gladiator lowered (submittebat) his arms as a sign of his being vanquished; but his fate depended on the pleasure of the people, who, if they wished him to be saved, pressed down their thumbs, (pollicem premebant.) Horat. Ep. i. 18. 66. if to be slain, they turned up their thumbs, (pollicem vertebant.) Juvenal. iii. 36. (hence laudare utroque pollice, i. e. valde, Horat. Ep. i. 18. 66. Plin. 28. 2. s. 5.) and ordered him to receive the sword (ferrum recipere), which gladiators usually submitted to with amazing fortitude, Cic. Sext. 37. Tusc. ii. 17. Mil. 34. Senec. Ep. 7 & 177. de Tranquil. Animi, c. 11. Const. Sap. 16. Sometimes a gladiator was rescued by the entrance of the emperor, Ovid. de Pont. ii. 8. 53. or by the will of the Editor.

The rewards given to the victors were a palm, Martial. de Spect. 32. Hence plurimarum palmarum gladiator, who had frequently conquered; Cic. Rosc. Am. 6. Alias suas palmas cognosces, i. e.

caedes, ibid. 30. Palma lemniscata, a palm crown, with ribands (lemnisci) of different colours hanging from it, ibid. 35. Festus. Sexta palma urbana etiam in Gladiatore difficilis, Cic. Phil. xi. 5.—monney, Suet. Claud. 21. Juvenal. vii. ult. and a rod or wooden sword, (rudis), as a sign of their being discharged from fighting; which was granted by the Editor, at the desire of the people, to an old gladiator, or even to a novice for some uncommon act of courage. Those who received it (rude donati) were called RUDIARI, and fixed their arms in the temple of Hercules, Horat. Ep. i. 1. Ovid. Trist. iv. 8. 24. But they were afterwards sometimes induced by great hire (ingente auctoramento) again to engage, Suet. Tib. 7. Those who were dismissed on account of age or weakness, were said deluisse, Plin. xxxvi. 27.

The spectators expressed the same eagerness by betting (sponsionibus) on the different gladiators, as in the Circus, Suet. Tib. 8. Domit. 10. Martial. ix. 68.

Till the year 693, the people used to remain all day at an exhibition of gladiators without intermission till it was finished; but then, for the first time, they were dismissed to take dinner, Dio. xxxvii. 46. which custom was afterwards observed at all the spectacles exhibited by the emperors, ibid. et Suet. Horace calls intermissions given to gladiators in the time of fighting, or a delay of the combat, DILUDIA, -orum, Ep. i. 19. 47. & Scholias. in loc.

*Shows of gladiators, (cruenta spectacula), were prohibited by Constantine, Cod. xi. 43. but not entirely suppressed till the time of Honorius, Prudent. contra Symmach. ii. 11. 21.

III. DRAMATIC ENTERTAINMENTS.

DRAMATIC entertainments, or stage-plays (ludi scenici), were first introduced at Rome, on account of a pestilence, to appease the divine wrath, A. U. 391. Liv. vii. 2. Before that time there had only been the games of the Circus. They were called LUDI SCENICI, because they were first acted in a shade, (œna, umbra), formed by the branches and leaves of trees, Ovid. de Art. Am. i. 105. Serv. in Virg. Æn. i. 164. or in a tent, (σκηνη, tabernaculum;) hence afterwards the front of the theatre, where the actors stood, was called SCENA, and the actors SCENICI, Suet. Tib. 34. Cic. Planc. 11. Verr. iii. 79. or SCENICI ARTIFICES, Suet. Cas. 84.

Stage-plays were borrowed from Etruria; whence players (ludiones) were called HISTRIONES, from a Tuscan word, hister, i. e. ludio; for players also were sent for from that country, Liv. vii. 2.

These Tuscans did nothing at first but dance to a flute, (ad tibivi-

* The gladiators, about the year of the city 680, under the conduct of Spartacus, Crixus, and Oenoneus, maintained for a short time a war against the Roman people. These men having escaped, with other gladiators, to the number of 74, out of the place where they had been kept at Capua, gathered together a body of slaves, put themselves at their head, rendered themselves masters of all Campania, and gained several victories over the Roman prætors. They were at length defeated in the year 622, at the extremity of Italy; having in vain endeavoured to pass over into Sicily.

nis modos,) without any verse or corresponding action. They did not speak, because the Romans did not understand their language, ibid.

The Roman youth began to imitate them at solemn festivals, especially at harvest-home, throwing out raillery against one another in unpolished verse, with gestures adapted to the sense. These verses were called VERSUS FESCENNINI, from Fescennia, or -ium, a city of Etruria, Horat. Epist. II. i. 145.

Afterwards, by frequent use, the entertainment was improved, (scipius usurpando res excitata est,) and a new kind of dramatic composition was contrived, called SATYRÆ or SATURÆ, Satires, because they were filled with various matter, and written in various kinds of verse, in allusion to what was called LANX SATURA, a platter or charger filled with various kinds of fruits, which they yearly offered to the gods at their festivals, as the Primitiæ, or first gatherings of the season. Some derive the name from the petulance of the Satyrs.

These satires were set to music, and repeated with suitable gestures, accompanied with the flute and dancing. They had every thing that was agreeable in the Fescennine verses, without their obscenity. They contained much ridicule and smart repartee; whence those poems afterwards written to expose vice got the name of satires; as, the satires of Horace, of Juvenal, and of Persius.

It was LIVIUS ANDRONICUS, the freed-man of M. Livius Salinator, and the preceptor of his sons, who, giving up satires, (absaturis, i. e. saturis relictis,) first ventured to write a regular play, (argumento fabulam serere,) A. U. 512, some say, 514; the year before Ennius was born, Cic. Brut. 18. above 160 years after the death of Sophocles and Euripides, and about fifty-two years after that of Menander, Gell. xvii. 21.

He was the actor of his own compositions, as all then were.—Being obliged by the audience frequently to repeat the same part, and thus becoming hoarse, (quum vocem obtudisset,) he asked permission to employ a boy to sing to the flute, whilst he acted what was sung (canticum agebat,) which he did with the greater animation, as he was not hindered by using his voice. Hence actors used always to have a person at hand to sing to them, and the colloquial parts (diverbia) only was left them to repeat, Liv. vii. 2. It appears there was commonly a song at the end of every act, Plaut. Pseud. ii. ult.

Plays were afterwards greatly improved at Rome from the model of the Greeks, by NÆVIUS, ENNIUS, PLAUTUS, CÆCILIUS, TERENCE, AFRANIUS, PACUVIUS, ACCIIUS, &c.

After playing was gradually converted into an art, (ludus in artem paulatim verterat,) the Roman youth, leaving regular plays to be acted by professed players, reserved to themselves the acting of ludicrous pieces or farces, interlarded with much ribaldry and buffoonery, called EXODIA, Juvenal. iii. 175. vi. 71. Suet. Tib. 45. Domit. 10. because they were usually introduced after the play, (when the players and musicians had left the stage,) to remove the painful impressions of tragic scenes, Scholiast. in Juvenal. iii. 175. or FABULÆ

LÆ ATELLANÆ, Liv. vii. 2. or, LUDI OSCI, Cic. Fam. vii. 1. LUDICRUM OSCUM, Tacit. Annal. iv. 14. from Atella, a town of the Osci in Campania, where they were first invented and very much used.

The actors of these farces (Atellani vel Atellanarum actores), retained the rights of citizens, (non tribu moti sunt), and might serve in the army, which was not the case with common actors, who were not respected among the Romans, as among the Greeks, but were held infamous, Ulpian. l. 2. § 5. D. de his qui not. infam.—Nep. Præfat. Suet. Tib. 35.

Dramatic entertainments, in their improved state, were chiefly of three kinds, Comedy, Tragedy, and Pantomimes.

1. Comedy, (COMŒDIA, quasi, καμῆς ᾠδή, the song of the village,) was a representation of common life, (quotidianæ vitæ speculum), written in a familiar style, and usually with a happy issue. The design of it was to expose vice and folly to ridicule.

Comedy, among the Greeks, was divided into old, middle, and new. In the first, real characters and names were represented; in the second, real characters, but fictitious names; and in the third, both fictitious characters and names. Eupolis, Cratinus, and Aristophanes excelled in old comedy, and Menander in the new, Horat. Sat. i. 4. Epist. ii. 1. 57. Quintilian. x. 1. Nothing was ever known at Rome but the new comedy.

The Roman comic writers, Nævius, Afranius, Plautus, Cæcilius, and Terence, copied from the Greek, chiefly from MENANDER, who is esteemed the best writer of comedies that ever existed, Quintilian. x. 1. but only a few fragments of his works now remain. We may, however, judge of his excellence from Terence, his principal imitator.

Comedies, among the Romans, were distinguished by the character and dress of the persons introduced on the stage. Thus comedies were called TOGATÆ, in which the characters and dress were Roman, from the Roman toga, Juvenal. i. 3. Horat. Art. Poet. 288. so carmen togatum, a poem about Roman affairs, Stat. Silv. ii. 7. 53. PRÆTEXTATÆ or Prætextæ, when magistrates and persons of dignity were introduced; but some take these for tragedies, ibid. TRABEATÆ, when generals and officers were introduced, Suet. Gramm. 21. TABERNARIÆ, when the characters were of low rank, Horat. Art. Poet. 225. PALLIATÆ, when the characters were Grecian, from pallium, the robe of the Greeks. MOTORIÆ, when there were a great many striking instances, much action, and passionate expressions. STATARIÆ, when there was not much bustle or stir, and little or nothing to agitate the passions; and MIXTÆ, when some parts were gentle and quiet, and others the contrary, Terent. Heaut. prol. 36. Donat. in Terent. Cic. Brut. 116. The representations of the Atellani were called Comædia Atellana.

The actors of Comedy wore a low-heeled shoe, called Soccus.

Those who wrote a play, were said docere vel facere fabulam; if it was approved, it was said stare, stare recto talo, placere, &c. if not, cadere, exigi, exhibitari, &c.

II. TRAGEDY had its name, according to Horace, from εραγος, a goat, and ωδη, a song; because a goat was the prize of the person who produced the best poem, or was the best actor, de Art. Poet. 220. to which Virgil alludes, Ecl. iii. 22. according to others, because such a poem was acted at the festival of Bacchus after vintage, to whom a goat was then sacrificed, as being the destroyer of the vines; and therefore it was called, εραγωδια, the goat's song. (Primi ludæ theatrales ex Liberalibus nati sunt, from the feasts of Bacchus, Serv. ad Virg. G. ii. 381.)

THESPIA, a native of Attica, is said to have been the inventor of tragedy, about 536 years before Christ.* He went about with his actors from village to village, in a cart, on which a temporary stage was erected, where they played and sang, having their faces be-smearred with the lees of wine, (peruncti fœcibus ora.) Horat. de Art. Poet. 275. whence, according to some, the name of Tragedy, (from εραξ, νυος, new wine not refined, or the lees of wine, and ωδης, a singer; hence εραγωδης, a singer thus be-smearred, who threw out scoffs and raillery against people.)

Thespis was contemporary with Solon, who was a great enemy to his dramatic representations, Plutarch. in Solone.

Thespis was succeeded by Æschylus, who erected a permanent stage, (modicis instravit pulpita, tignis.) and was the inventor of the mask, (persona.) of the long flowing robe, (palla, stola, vel syrma.) and of the high-heeled shoe or buskin, (cothurnus.) which tragedians wore; whence these words are put for a tragic style, or for tragedy itself, Virg. Ecl. viii. 10. Juvenal. viii. 229. xv. 30. Martial. iii. 20. iv. 49. v. 5. viii. 3. Horat. Od. ii. 1. 12. as soccus is put for a comedy or familiar style, (Id. Epist. ii. 174. Art. Poet. 80. 90.—Nec comædia in cothurnos assurgit, nec contra tragædia socco ingreditur), Quintilian, x. 2. 22.

As the ancients did not wear breeches, the players always wore under the tunic a girdle or covering, (SUBLIGACULUM vel SUBLIGAR verecundiæ causâ.) Cic. Off. i. 35. Juvenal. vi. 60. Martial iii. 87.

After Æschylus, followed SOPHOCLES and EURIPIDES, who brought tragedy to the highest perfection. In their time comedy began first to be considered as a distinct composition from tragedy; but at Rome comedy was long cultivated, before any attempt was made to compose tragedies. Nor have we any Roman tragedies extant, except a few which bear the name of Seneca. Nothing remains of the works of Ennius, Pacuvius, Accius, &c. but a few fragments.

Every regular play, at least among the Romans, was divided into five acts, Horat. Art. Poet. 189. the subdivision into scenes is thought to be a modern invention.

Between the acts of a tragedy were introduced a number of singers called the CHORUS, Horat. de Art. Poet. 193. who indeed appear to have been always present on the stage. The chief of them, who spoke for the rest, was called Chorægus or Coryphæus. But

* See Theatre of the Greeks, p. 6.

CHORAGUS is usually put for the person who furnished the dresses, and took care of all the apparatus of the stage, Plaut. Pers. i. 3. 79. Trinum. iv. 2. 16. Suet. Aug. 70. and choragium for the apparatus itself, (instrumentum scenarum, Fest.) Plaut. Capt. prol. 61. Plin. xxxvi. 15. choragia for choragi, Vitruv. v. 9. hence falsa choragium gloriæ, comparetur, their dress may be compared to false glory, Cic. ad Herenn. iv. 50.

The Chorus was introduced in the ancient comedy, as we see from Aristophanes; but when its excessive license was suppressed by law, the Chorus likewise was silenced, Horat. Art. Poet. 283. A Choragus appears and makes a speech, Plaut. Curc. iv. 1.

The music chiefly used was that of the flute, which at first was small and simple, and of few holes, Horat. Art. Poet. 202. but afterwards it was bound with brass, had more notes and a louder sound.

Some flutes were double, of various forms. Those most frequently mentioned, are the Tibiæ dextræ and sinistræ, pares and impares, which have occasioned much disputation among critics, and still appear not to be sufficiently ascertained. The most probable opinion is, that the double flute consisted of two tubes, which were so joined together as to have but one mouth, and so were both blown at once. That which the musician played on with his right hand was called tibia dextra, the right-handed flute; with his left, tibia sinistra, the left-handed flute. The latter had but few holes, and sounded a deep serious bass; the other had more holes, and a sharper and more lively tone. Plin. 16. 36. s. 66. Varr. R. R. 1. 2. 15. When two right or left-handed flutes were joined together, they were called tibiæ pares dextræ, or tibiæ pares sinistrae. The flutes of different sorts were called tibiæ impares, or tibiæ dextra et sinistrae. The right-handed flutes were the same with what were called the Lydian flutes, (Tibiæ Lydiae), and the left-handed with the Tyrian flutes, (Tibiæ Tyriae or Sarranae, vel Serranae.) Hence Virgil, Biforem dat tibia cantum, i. e. bisonum, imparem, Æn. ix. 618. Sometimes the flute was crooked, Virg. Æn. vii. 737. Ovid. Met. iii. 532. and is then called Tibia Phrygia or cornu, Id. de Pont. I. i. 39. Fast. iv. 181.

III. PANTOMIMES were representations by dumb show, in which the actors, who were called by the same name with their performances, (Mimi vel Pantomimi), expressed every thing by their dancing and gestures without speaking, (loquaci manu); hence called also Chironomi.) Juvenal. xiii. 110. vi. 63. Ovid. Trist. ii. 515. Martial. iii. 86. Horat. i. 18. 13. ii. 2. 125. Manil. v. 474. Suet. Ner. 54. But Pantomimi is always put for the actors, who were likewise called Planipedes, because they were without shoes, (excalceati.) Senec. Epist. 8. Quintilian. v. 11. Juvenal. viii. 191. Gell. i. 11. They wore, however, a kind of wood or iron sandals, called SCABILLA or Scabella, which made a rattling noise when they danced, Cic. Cæl. 27. Suet. Cæl. 54.

The Pantomimes are said to have been the invention of Augustus; for before his time the Mimi both spoke and acted.

MIMUS is put both for the actor and for what he acted, Cic. Cæl.

27. Verr. iii. 36. Rabir. Post. 12. Phil. ii. 27. not only on the stage, but elsewhere, Suet. Cæs. 39. Ner. 4. Oth. 3. Calig. 45. Aug. 45. 100. Sen. Ep. 80. Juvenal. viii. 108.

The most celebrated composers of mimical performances or farces, (mimographi), were Laberius and Publius Syrus, in the time of Julius Cæsar, Suet. Jul. 39. Horat. Sat. i. 10. 6. Gell. xvii. 14. The most famous Pantomimes under Augustus were Pylades, and Bathyllus, the favourite of Mæcenas, Tacit. Annal. i. 54. He is called by the Scholiast on Persius, v. 123. his freedman, (libertus Mæcenatis;) and by Juvenal, mollis, vi. 63. Between them there was a constant emulation. Pylades being once reproved by Augustus on this account, replied, "It is expedient for you, that the attention of the people should be engaged about us." Pylades was the great favourite of the public. He was once banished by the power of the opposite party, but soon after restored, Dio. liv. 17. Macrob. Sat. ii. 7. The factions of the different players, Senec. Ep. 47. Nat. Q. vii. 22. Petron. 5. sometimes carried their discords to such a length, that they terminated in bloodshed, Suet. Tib. 37.

The Romans had rope dancers, (FUNAMBŪLI, Schœnobåtæ vel Neurobåtæ) who used to be introduced in the time of the play, Ter. Hec. Prol. 4. 34. Juvenal. iii. 77. and persons who seemed to fly in the air, (PETAURISTÆ), who darted (jactabant vel excutebant) their bodies from a machine called Petaurum, vel -us, Festus. Juvenal. xiv. 265. Manil. iii. 438. Martial. ii. 86; also interludes or musical entertainments, called EMBOLIA, Cic. Sext. 54. or ACROAMATA; but this last word is usually put for the actors, musicians, or repeaters themselves, who were also employed at private entertainments, Cic. ibid. Verr. iv. 22. Arch. 9. Suet. Aug. 74. Macrob. Sat. ii. 4. Nep. Att. 14.

The plays were often interrupted likewise by the people calling out for various shows to be exhibited; as, the representation of battles, triumphal processions, gladiators, uncommon animals, and wild beasts, &c. The noise which the people made on the occasions, is compared by Horace to the raging of the sea, Epist. II. i. 185. &c. In like manner, their approbation, (plausus), and disapprobation, (sibilus, strepitus, fremitus, clamor tonitruum, Cic. Fam. viii. 2. fistula pastoritia, Att. 16.) which at all times were so much regarded, Cic. Pis. 27. Sext. 54. 55. 56. &c. Horat. Od. i. 20. ii. 17.

Those who acted the principal part of a play, were called Actores primarum partium; the second, secundarum partium; the third, tertiarum, &c. Ter. Phorm. prol. 28. Cic. in Cæcil. 15. & Ascon. in loc.

The actors were applauded or hissed, as they performed their parts, or pleased or displeased the spectators, Quinctilian. vi. 1. Cic. Rosc. Com. 2. Att. i. 3. 16. When the play was ended, an actor always said, PLAUDITE, Terent. &c.

Those actors who were most approved, received crowns, &c. as at other games; at first composed of leaves or flowers, tied round the head with strings, called STRUPPI, strophia, v. -iōla, Festus. Plin. xxi. 1. afterwards of thin plates of brass gilt, (e lamina ærea te- auri inaurata aut inargentata), called COROLLE or corollaria; first made by Crassus of gold and silver, Plin. xxi. 2. 3. Hence COROLIARIUM, a reward given to players over and above their just hire, (additum prator quam quod debitum est), Varro. de Lat. Ling. iv. 36. Plin. Ep. vii. 24. Cic. Verr. iii. 79. iv. 22. Suet. Aug. 45. or any thing given above what was promised, Cic. Verr. iii. 50. Plin. ix. 35. s. 57. The Emperor M. Antonius ordained that players should receive from five to ten gold pieces, (aurei), but no more, Capitolin. 11.

The place where dramatic representations were exhibited, was called THEATRUM, a theatre, (a θεωραου, video.) In ancient times the people viewed the entertainments standing; hence stantes for spectators, Cic. Amic. 7. and, A. U. 599, a decree of the senate was made, prohibiting any one to make seats for that purpose in the city, or within a mile of it. At the same time a theatre, which was building, was, by the appointment of the senate, ordered to be pulled down, as a thing hurtful to good morals, (nociturum publicis moribus), Liv. Epit. xlviii. Valer. Max. ii. 4. 3.

Afterwards temporary theatres were occasionally erected. The most splendid was that of M. Æmilius Scaurus, when seditious, which contained 80,000 persons, and was adorned with amazing magnificence, and at an incredible expense, Plin. xxvi. 15. s. 24. 8.

Curio, the partisan of Cæsar, at the funeral exhibition in honour of his father, (funebri patris munere), made two large theatres of wood, adjoining to one another, suspended, each, on hinges, (cardinum singulorum versatili suspensa libramento), and looking opposite ways, (inter se aversa), so that the scenes should not disturb each other by their noise, (ne invicem obstreperent;) in both of which he acted stage-plays in the former part of the day; then having suddenly wheeled them round, so that they stood over against one another, and thus formed an amphitheatre, he exhibited shows of gladiators in the afternoon, Plin. xxxvi. 15.

Pompey first reared a theatre of hewn stone in his second consulship, which contained 40,000; but that he might not incur the animadversion of the censors, he dedicated it as a temple to Venus, Suet. Claud. 21. Tertullian. de Spect. 10. Plin. viii. 7. Dio. xxxix. 38. Tacit. xiv. 19. There were afterwards several theatres, and in particular those of Marcellus, Dio. xliii. 49. and of Balbus, near that of Pompey, Ovid. Trist. iii. 12. 13. Amor. ii. 7. 3. hence called tria theatra, the three theatres. Suet. Aug. 45. Ovid. Art. iii. 394. Trist. iii. 12. 24.

Theatres at first were open at top, and, in excessive heat or rain, coverings were drawn over them, as over the amphitheatre, Plin. xix. 1. s. 6. xxxvi. 15. s. 24. Lucret. iv. 73. but in later times they were roofed, Stat. Silv. iii. 5. 91.

Among the Greeks, public assemblies were held in the theatre, Cic. Flacc. 7. Tacit. ii. 80. Senec. Epist. 108. And among the Romans it was usual to scourge malefactors on the stage, Suet. Aug. 47. This the Greeks called θεατρικόν et καταδουρατικόν.

The theatre was of an oblong semicircular form, like the half of an amphitheatre, Plin. xxxvi. 16. The benches or seats, (gradus vel cunei) rose above one another, and were distributed to the different orders in the same manner as in the amphitheatre. The foremost rows next the stage, called Orchestra, were assigned to the senators and ambassadors of foreign states; fourteen rows behind them to the equites, and the rest to the people, Suet. Aug. 44. The whole was called CAVEA. The foremost rows were called Cavea prima, or ima; the last, cavea ultima or summa, Cic. Senect. 14. The middle, cavea media, Suet. ibid.

The parts of the theatre allotted to the performers, were called Scena Postscenium, Proscenium, Pulpitum, and Orchestra.

1. SCENA, the scene, was adorned with columns, statues, and pictures of various kinds, according to the nature of the plays exhibited, Vitruv. v. 8. to which Virgil alludes, Æn. i. 166. 432. The ornaments were sometimes inconceivably magnificent, Valer. Max. ii. 4. 6. Plin. xxxvi. 15. s. 24.

When the scene was suddenly changed by certain machines, it was called SCENA VERSATILIS; when it was drawn aside, SCENA DUCTILIS, Serv. ad Virg. G. iii. 24.

The scenery was concealed by a curtain, (AULÆUM vel Siparium, oftener plural -a), which, contrary to the modern custom, was dropt (premebatur) or drawn down, as among us the blinds of a carriage, when the play began, and raised (tollebatur) or drawn up, when the play was over; sometimes also between the acts, Horat. Ep. ii. 1. 189. Art. Poet. 154. Ovid. Met. iii. 111. Juvenal. vi. 166. The machine by which this was done was called EXOSTRA, Civ. prov. Cons. 6. Curtains and hangings of tapestry were also used in private houses, Virg. Æn. i. 701. Horat. Od. iii. 29. 15. Sat. ii. 8. 54. called Aulæa Attalica, because said to have been first invented at the court of Attalus, king of Pergamus, in Asia Minor, Propert. ii. 23. 46. Serv. in Virg. Æn. i. 701.

2. POSTCENIUM, the place behind the scene, where the actors dressed and undressed; and where those things were supposed to be done, which could not with propriety be exhibited on the stage, Horat. de Art. P. 182. Lucret. iv. 1178.

3. PROSCENIUM, the place before the scene, where the actors appeared.

The place where the actors recited their parts was called PULPITUM; and the place where they danced, ORCHESTRA, which was about five feet lower than the Pulpitum, Vitruv. v. 6. Hence Ludibria scenâ et pulpito digna, buffooneries fit only for the stage, Plin. Ep. iv. 25.

MILITARY AFFAIRS of the ROMANS.

I. LEVYING of SOLDIERS.

THE Romans were a nation of warriors. Every citizen was obliged to enlist as a soldier when the public service required, from the age of seventeen to forty-six ; nor at first could any one enjoy an office in the city who had not served ten campaigns, Polyb. vi. 17. Every foot soldier was obliged to serve twenty campaigns, and every horseman ten. At first, none of the lowest class was enlisted as soldiers, nor freedmen, unless in dangerous junctures, Liv. x. 21. xxii. 11. 57. But this was afterwards altered by Marius, Sallust. Jug. 86. Gell. xvi. 10.

The Romans, during the existence of the republic, were almost always engaged in wars ; first, with the different states of Italy, for near 500 years, and then for about 200 years more in subduing the various countries which composed that immense empire.

The Romans never carried on any war without solemnly proclaiming it. This was done by a set of priests called FECIALES.

When the Romans thought themselves injured by any nation, they sent one or more of these Feciales to demand redress, (ad res repetendas.) Liv. iv. 30. xxxviii. 45. Varr. L. L. iv. 15. Dionys. ii. 72. and, if it was not immediately given, thirty-three days were granted to consider the matter, after which, war might be justly declared. Then the Feciales again went to their confines, and having thrown a bloody spear into them, formally declared war against that nation, Liv. i. 32. The form of words, which he pronounced before he threw the spear, was called CLARIGATIO, (a clara voce quia utebatur.) Serv. in Virg. Æn. ix. 52. x. 14. Plin. xxii. 2. Afterwards, when the empire was enlarged, and wars carried on with distant nations, this ceremony was performed in a certain field near the city, which was called AGER HOSTILIS, Ovid. Fast. vi. 205. Thus Augustus declared war professedly against Cleopatra, but in reality against Antony, Dio. i. 4. So Marcus Antoninus, before he set out to war against the Scythians, shot a bloody spear from the temple of Bellona into the ager hostilis, Dio. lxxi. 53.

In the first ages of the republic, four legions for the most part were annually raised, two to each consul: for two legions composed a consular army. But often a greater number was raised, ten, Liv. ii. 30. vii. 35. eighteen, xxiv. 11. twenty, xxx. 2. twenty-one, xxvi. 28. xxvii. 24. twenty-three, xx. 1. xxviii. 38. Under Tiberius twenty-five, even in time of peace, besides the troops in Italy, and the forces of the allies, Tacit. Annal. iv. 5. under Adrian thirty, Spartian. 15. In the 529th year of the city, upon the report of a Gallic tumult, Italy alone is said to have armed 80,000 cavalry and 700,000 foot, Plin. iii. 20. s. 24. But in after times, when the lands were cultivated chiefly by slaves, Liv. vi. 12. it was not so easy to procure soldiers. Hence, after the destruction of Quintilius Varus and his army in Germany, A. U. 763, Augustus could not raise forces even to defend Italy and Rome, which he was afraid the Germans and Gauls would attack, without using the greatest rigour, Dio. lvi. 23.

The consuls, after they entered on their office, appointed a day (diem edicebant, vel indicebant,) on which all those who were of the military age should be present in the capitol, Liv. xxvi. 31. Polyb. vi. 17.

On the day appointed, the consuls, seated in their curule chairs, held a levy (delectam habebant,) by the assistance of the military or legionary tribunes, unless hindered by the tribunes of the commons, Liv. iii. 51. iv. 1. It was determined by lot in what manner the tribes should be called.

The consuls ordered such as they pleased to be cited out of each tribe, and every one was obliged to answer to his name under a severe penalty, Liv. iii. 11 & 41. Gell. xi. 5. Valer. Max. vi. 3. 4. They were careful to choose (legere) those first, who had what they thought lucky names, (bona nomina,) as Valerius, Salvius, Statorius, &c. Cic. Divin. i. 45. Festus in Voce LACUS LUCRINUS. Their names were written down on tables; hence scribere, to enlist, to levy or raise.

In certain wars, and under certain commanders, there was the greatest alacrity to enlist, (nomina dare,) Liv. x. 25. xlii. 32. but this was not always the case. Sometimes compulsion (coërcitio) was requisite; and those who refused, (REFRACTARI, qui militiam detrectabant,) were forced to enlist (sacramento adacti) by fines and corporal punishment, (damno et virgis,) Liv. iv. 53. vii. 4. Sometimes they were thrown into prison, ibid. & Dionys. viii. or sold as slaves, Cic. Cæcin. 34. Some cut off their thumbs or fingers to render themselves unfit for service: hence pollice trunci, poltroons. But this did not screen them from punishment, Suet. Aug. 24. Valer. Max. vi. 3. 3. On one occasion Augustus put some of the most refractory to death, Dio. lvi. 23.

There were, however, several just causes of exemption from military service, (vacationis militiæ vel a militiâ,) of which the chief were, Age, (Ætas,) if above fifty, Liv. xlii. 33. 34. Disease or infirmity, (morbis vel vitium,) Suet. Aug. 24. Office, (honor,) being a magistrate or priest, Plutarch. in Camill. vers. fin. Favour or indulgence (beneficium) granted by the senate or people, Cic. Phil. v. 19. de Nat. D. ii. 2. Liv. xxxix. 19.

Those also were excused who had served out their time, (EMERITI, qui stipendia explevisent, vel DEFUNCTI, Ovid. Amor. ii. 9. 24.) Such as claimed this exemption, applied to the tribunes of the commons, Liv. ii. 55. who judged of the justice of their claims, (causas cognoscebant,) and interposed in their behalf or not, as they judged proper. But this was sometimes forbidden by the decree of the senate, Liv. xxxiv. 56. And the tribunes themselves sometimes referred the matter to the consuls, Liv. xlii. 32. 33. &c.

In sudden emergencies, or in dangerous wars, as a war in Italy or against the Gauls, which was called TUMULTUS, (quasi timor multus, vel a tumeo.) Cic. Phil. v. 31. viii. 1. Quintilian. vii. 3. no regard was had to these excuses, (delectus sine vacationibus habitus est.) Liv. vii. 11. 28. viii. 20. x. 21. Two flags were displayed (vexilla sublata vel prolata sunt.) from the capitol, the one red, (roseum.) to summon the infantry, (ad pedites evocandos.) and the other green, (cæruleum.) to summon the cavalry, Serr. in Virg. Æn. viii. 4.

On such occasions, as there was not time to go through the usual forms, the consul said, QUI REMPUBLICAM SALVAM ESSE VULT, ME SEQUATUR. This was called CONJURATIO, or evocatio, and men thus raised, CONJURATI, Liv. xxii. 38. Cæs. de Bell. G. vii. 1. who were not considered as regular soldiers, Liv. xlv. 2.

Soldiers raised upon a sudden alarm, (in tumultu ; nam, TUMULTUS nonnunquam levior quam bellum, Liv. ii. 26.) were called SUBITARIII (ita repentina auxilia appellabant.) Liv. iii. 4. 30. or TUMULTUARIII, Liv. i. 37. xxxv. 2. not only at Rome, but also in the provinces, ibid. & xl. 26 ; when the sickly or infirm were forced to enlist, who were called CAUSARII, Liv. vi. 6. If slaves were found to have obtruded themselves into the service, (inter tirones.) they were sometimes punished capitally, (in eos animadvertendum est.) Plin. Ep. x. 38 & 39.

The cavalry were chosen from the body of the Equites, and each had a horse, and money to support him, given them by the public, Liv. i. 43.

On extraordinary occasions, some Equites served on their own horses, Liv. v. 7. But that was not usually done ; nor were there, as some have thought, any horse in the Roman army, but from the Equites, till the time of Marius, who made a great alteration in the military system of the Romans, in this, as well as in other respects.

After that period, the cavalry was composed not merely of Roman Equites, as formerly, but of horsemen raised from Italy, and the other provinces : and the infantry consisted chiefly of the poorer citizens, or of mercenary soldiers, which is justly reckoned one of the chief causes of the ruin of the republic.

After the levy was completed, one soldier was chosen to repeat over the words of the military oath, (qui reliquis verba sacramenti præiret.) and the rest swore after him, (in verba ejus jurabant.) Every one, as he passed along, said, IDEM IN ME, Festus in PRÆJURATIONES, Liv. ii. 45. Polyb. vi. 19.

The form of the oath does not seem to have been always the same. The substance of it was, that they would obey their commander, and not desert their standards, &c. Liv. iii. 20. xxii. 38. Gell. xvi. 4. Sometimes those below seventeen were obliged to take the military oath, (sacramento vel -um dicere.) Liv. xxii. 57. xxv. 5.

Without this oath, no one could justly fight with the enemy, Cic. Off. i. 11. Hence sacramenta is put for a military life, Juvenal. xvi. 35. Livy says, that it was first legally exacted in the second Punic war, xxii. 38. where he seems to make a distinction between the oath (SACRAMENTUM) which formerly was taken voluntarily, when the troops were embodied, and each decuria of cavalry, and century of foot, swore among themselves, (inter se equites decuriati, pedites centuriati conjurabant,) to act like good soldiers, (sese fugam ac formidinis ergo non abituros, neque ex ordine resessuros;) and the oath, (JURJURANDUM,) which was exacted by the military tribunes after the levy, (ex voluntario inter ipsos fadere a tribunis ad legitimam jurisjurandi actionem translatum.)

On occasion of a mutiny, the military oath was taken away, Liv. xxviii. 29.

Under the emperors, the name of the prince was inserted in the military oath, Tacit. Hist. iv. 31. and this oath used to be renewed every year on his birth-day, Plin. Ep. x. 60. by the soldiers and the people in the provinces; Id. Pan. 68. also on the kalends of January, Suet. Galb. 16. Tacit. Annal. xvi. 22. Hist. i. 12.

On certain occasions, persons were sent up and down the country to raise soldiers, called CONQUISITORES, and the force used for that purpose. COERCITIO vel Conquisitio, a press or impress, Liv. xxi. 11. xxiii. 32. Cic. de Prov. Cons. 2. Att. vii. 21. Hist. de Bell. Alex. 2. Sometimes particular commissioners (triumviri) were appointed for that purpose, Liv. xxv. 5.

Veteran soldiers, who had served out their time, (homines emeritis stipendiis,) were often induced again to enlist, and were then called EVOCATI, Liv. xxxvii. 4. Cic. Fam. iii. 7. Cæs. Bell. Civ. iii. 53. Sallust. Jug. 84. Dio. xlv. 12. Galba gave this name to a body of equites, whom he appointed to guard his person, Suet. Galb. 10. The Evocati were exempted from all the drudgery of military service, (cæterorum immunes, nisi propulsandi hostis,) Tacit. Annal. i. 36.

After Latium and the states of Italy were subdued, or admitted into alliance, they always furnished at least an equal number of infantry with the Romans, and the double of cavalry, Liv. viii. 8. xxii. 36. sometimes more. (See p. 65.) The consuls, when about to make a levy, sent them notice what number of troops they required, (ad socios Latinumque nomen ad milites ex formula accipiendos mittunt, arma, tela, alia parari jubent, Liv. xxii. 57.) and at the same time appointed the day and place of assembling, (quod convenirent,) Liv. xxxiv. 56. xxxvii. 4.

The forces of the allies seem to have been raised, (scripti vel conscripti,) much in the same manner with those of the Romans. They were paid by their own states, Liv. xxvii. 9 & 11. and received nothing from the Romans but corn; on which account they had a paymaster (Quæstor) of their own, Polyb. vi. But when all the Italians were admitted to the freedom of the city, their forces were incorporated with those of the republic.

The troops sent by foreign kings and states were called auxiliaries, (AUXILIARES militæ vel AUXILIA, ab augeo, Cic. Att. vi. 5. Varr. & Fest.) They usually received pay and clothing from the republic, although they sometimes were supported by those who sent them.

The first mercenary soldiers in the Roman army, are said to have been the Celtiberians in Spain, A. U. 537. Liv. xxiv. 49. But those must have been different from the auxiliaries, who are often mentioned before that time, Liv. xxi. 46. 48. 55. 56. xxii. 22.

Under the emperors, the Roman armies were in a great measure composed of foreigners; and the provinces saw with regret the flower of their youth carried off for that purpose, Tacit. Hist. iv. 14. Agric. 31. Each district was obliged to furnish a certain number of men, in proportion to its extent and opulence.

II. DIVISION of the TROOPS in the ROMAN ARMY; their ARMS, OFFICERS, and DRESS.

AFTER the levy was completed, and the military oath administered, the troops were formed into legions, (LEGIO a legendo, quia milites in delectu legebantur, Varro. L. L. iv. 16. which word is sometimes put for an army, ib. ii. 26. &c. Sallust. Jug. 79.)

Each legion was divided into ten cohorts, each cohort into three maniples, and each maniple into two centuries, (MANIPULUS, ex manipulo vel fasciculo sceni, hastæ, vel perticæ longæ alligato, quem quo signo primum gerebat, Ovid. Fast. iii. 117.) So that there were thirty maniples and sixty centuries in a legion, Gell. xvi. 4. and if there always had been 100 men in each century, as its name imports, the legion would have consisted of 6000 men. But this was not the case.

The number of men in a legion was different at different times, Liv. vii. 25. viii. 8. xxvi. 28. xxix. 24. xlii. 31. xlii. 12. Cæs. B. C. iii. 106. B. Al. 69. In the time of Polybius it was 4200.

There were usually 300 cavalry joined to each legion, called JUSTUS EQUITATUS, or ALA, ibid. & Liv. iii. 62. They were divided into ten turmæ or troops; and each turmæ into three decuriæ, or bodies of ten men.

The different kinds of infantry which composed the legion, were three, the Hastati, Principes, and Triarii

The HASTATI were so called, because they first fought with long spears, (hastæ.) which were afterwards laid aside as inconvenient, Varro de Lat. ling. iv. 16. They consisted of young men in the flower of life, and formed the first line in battle, Liv. viii. 8.

The PRINCIPES were men of middle age in the vigour of life; they occupied the second line. Anciently they seem to have been posted first: whence their name, ibid.

The TRIARII were old soldiers of approved valour, who formed the third line; whence their name, Dionys. viii. 86. They were also called PILANI, from the Pilum or javelin which they used; and the Hastati and Principes, who stood before them, were called ANTEPILANI.

There was a fourth kind of troops, called VELITES, from their swiftness and agility, (a volando vel velocitate.) the light-armed soldiers, (milites levis armaturæ, vel expediti, vel levis armatura.) first instituted in the second Punic war, Liv. xxvi. 4. These did not form a part of the legion, and had no certain post assigned them; but fought in scattered parties where occasion required, usually before the lines. To them were joined the slingers and archers, FUNDITORES Balearis, Achai, &c. Liv. xxi. 21. xxviii. 37. xxxviii. 31. 29. SAGITTARII Cretenses, Arabes, &c. Liv. xxxvii. 40. xlii. 35.

The light-armed troops were anciently called Ferentarii : Rorarii (quod ante rorat quam pluit, Varr. L. L. vi. 3.) and, according to some, Accensi. Others made the Accensi supernumerary soldiers, who attended the army to supply the place of those legendary soldiers, who died or were slain, Festus in Accensi et Adscariptum, Varro, ibid. In the mean time, however, they were ranked among the light-armed troops. These were formed into distinct companies, (expediti manipuli et expedita cohortes), and are sometimes opposed to the legionary cohorts, Sallust. Jug. 46. 90. 100.

The soldiers were often denominated, especially under the emperors, from the number of the legion in which they were ; thus, Primani, the soldiers of the first legion : Secundani, Tertiani, Quartani, Quintani, Decimani, Tertiadecimani, Vicesimani, Duodevicesimani, Duo et vicesimani, &c. Tacit. Hist. iv. 36. 37. iii. 27. v. 1. Suet. Jul. 70.

The Velites were equipped with bows, slings, seven javelins or spears with slender points like arrows, so that when thrown they bent, and could not easily be returned by the enemy, quorum telum inhabile ad remittendum imperitis est, Liv. xxiv. 34. a Spanish sword having both edge and point, (quo cæsim et punctum petebant, Liv.) a round buckler (PARMA) about three feet in diameter, made of wood and covered with leather ; and a helmet or cask, for the head, (GALEA vel Galerus), generally made of the skin of some wild beast, to appear the more terrible, Polyb. vi. 20.

The arms of the Hastati, Principes, and Triarii, both defensive (arma ad tegendum) and offensive (tela ad petendum) were in a great measure the same ; Polyb. vi. 20 & 22.

—1. An oblong shield (SCUTUM) with an iron boss (UMBO) jutting out in the middle, four feet long and two feet and a half broad, made of wood, joined together with little plates of iron, and the whole covered with a bull's hide : sometimes a round shield (CLYPEUS) of a smaller size.

—2. A head piece (GALEA vel Cassis v. -ida) of brass or iron, coming down to the shoulders, but leaving the face uncovered, Flor. iv. 2. whence the command of Cæsar at the battle of Pharsalia, which in a great measure determined the fortune of the day, FACIEM FERRE, NILES, Flor. iv. 2. Pompey's cavalry being chiefly composed of young men of rank, who were as much afraid of having their visages disfigured as of death. Upon the top of the helmet was the crest, (CRISTA), adorned with plumes of feathers of various colours.

—3. A coat of mail, (LORICA), generally made of leather, covered with plates of iron in the form of scales, or iron rings twisted within one another like chains (hamis concerta.) Instead of the coat of mail, most used only a plate of brass on the breast, (thorax vel pectorale.)

—4. Greaves for the legs, (OCREÆ,) Liv. ix. 40. tegmina crurum, Virg. Æn. xi. 777. sometimes only on the right leg, Veget. i. 20. and a kind of shoe or covering for the feet, called Caliga, set with nails, Juvenal. xvi. 24. used chiefly by the common soldiers, (gregarii vel manipulares milites.) whence the emperor Caligula had his name, Suet. Cal. ix. 52. Tacit. Annal. i. 41. Cic. Att. ii. 3. Hence Caligatus, a common soldier, Suet. Aug. 25. Marius a caliga ad consulatum perductus, from being a common soldier, Senec. de ben. v. 16.

—5. A sword (gladius vel ensis) and two long javelins, (PILA.) The cavalry at first used only their ordinary clothing for the sake of agility, that they might more easily mount their horses; for they had no stirrups, (STAPLE vel STAPEDÆ, as they were afterwards called.) When they were first used is uncertain. There is no mention of them in the classics, nor do they appear on ancient coins and statues. Neither had the Romans saddles, such as ours, but certain coverings of cloth, (vestis stragula) to sit on, called EPHIPPIA, Horat. Ep. i. 14. 44. vel STRATA, with which a horse was said to be CONSTRATUS, Liv. xxi. 54. These the Germans despised, Cæs. B. G. iv. 2. The Numidian horse had no bridles, Liv. xxxv. 11.

But the Roman cavalry afterwards imitated the manner of the Greeks, and used nearly the same armour with the foot, Polyb. vi. 23. Thus, Pliny wrote a book de jaculatione equestri, about the art of using the javelin on horseback, Plin. Ep. iii. 4.

Horsemen armed cap-a-pied, that is, completely from head to foot, were called LORICATI or CATAPRACTI, Liv. xxxv. 48. xxxvii. 40.

In each legion there were six military tribunes, (see p. 165.) who commanded under the consul, each in his turn, generally month about, Liv. xl. 41. Horat. Sat. i. 6. 48. In battle a tribune seems to have had the charge of ten centuries, or about a thousand men; hence called in Greek, χιλάρχης, vel -ης. Under the emperors, they were chosen chiefly from the senators and equites; hence called LATICLAVII and AUGUSTICLAVII, Suet. Oth. 10. One of these seems to be called TRIBUNIS COHORTIS, Plin. Ep. iii. 9. and their command to have lasted only six months; hence called SEMEMSTRIS TRIBUNATUS, Plin. Ep. iv. 4. or SEMEMSTRE AURUM, Juvenal. vii. 8. because they had the right of wearing a golden ring.

The tribunes chose the officers who commanded the centuries (CENTURIONES vel ordinum ductores.) from the common soldiers, according to their merit, Liv. xlii. 34. Cæs. vi. 39. Lucan. i. 645. vi. 145. But this office (centurionatus) was sometimes disposed of by the consul or proconsul, through favour, and even for money, Cic. Pis. 26.

The badge of a centurion was a vine-rod or sapling, (VITIS.) Plin. xiv. i. s. 3. Tacit. i. 23. Juvenal. viii. 247. Ovid. Art. Am. i. 527. hence vite donari, to be made a centurion; vitem poscere, to ask that office, Juvenal. xiv. 193. gerere, to bear it. Lucan. vi. 146.

There were two centurions in each manipule called by the same name, but distinguished by the title prior, former, and posterior, latter, because the one was chosen and ranked before the other, Tacit. Ann. i. 32. Dionys. ix. 10.

Under the emperors, persons were made centurions all at once through interest, Dio. lii. 25.

The centurion of the first century of the first maniple of the Triarii, was called Centurio primi pili, vel primi ordinis, Liv. xxv. 19. or Primus Pilus, primipilus, or primopilus, Cæs. B. G. ii. 25. also primus centurio, Liv. vii. 41. qui primum pilum ducebat, ib. 13. Dux legionis, (ὁ ἡγεμὼν τοῦ ταγματός), Dionys. ix. 10. He presided over all the other centurions, and had the charge of the eagle (aquila), or chief standard of the legion, Tacit. Hist. iii. 22. Valer. Max. i. 6. 11. whereby he obtained both profit and dignity, being ranked among the equites, Juvenal. xiv. 197. Martial. i. 32. Ovid. Amor. iii. 8. 20. Pont. iv. 7. 15. He had a place in the council of war with the consul and tribunes. The other centurions were called minores ordine, ib. 49.

The centurion of the second century of the first maniple of the Triarii, was called Primipilus posterior: so the two centurions of the second maniple of the Triarii, Prior centurio, and posterior centurio secundi pili; and so on to the tenth, who was called Centurio decimi pili, prior et posterior. In like manner, Primus princeps, secundus princeps, &c. Primus hastatus, &c. Thus, there was a large field for promotion in the Roman army, from a common soldier to a centurion; from being the lowest centurion of the tenth maniple of Hastati, (decimus hastatus posterior), to the rank of Primipilus, Liv. xlii. 34. Any one of the chief centurions was said ducere honestum ordinem; as Virginius, Liv. iii. 44.

The centurions chose each two assistants or lieutenants, called OPTIONES, Uragi, or Succenturiones, Liv. viii. 8. Festus in OPTIO; and two standard-bearers or ensigns, (SIGNIFERI vel Vexillarii), Liv. vi. 8. xxxv. 5. Tacit. Ann. i. 81. Hist. i. 41. iii. 17. Cic. Divin. i. 77.

He who commanded the cavalry of a legion was called PRÆFECTUS ALÆ, Plin. Ep. iii. 4.

Each Turma had three DECURIONES or commanders of ten, but he who was first elected commanded the troop, Polyb. vi. 23. and he was called DUXTURMÆ, Sallust. Jug. 38. Each decurio had an optio or deputy under him, Varr. de Lat. ling. iv. 16.

The troops of the allies (which, as well as the horse, were called ALÆ, from their being stationed on the wings, Liv. xxxi. 21. Gell. xvi. 4.) had præfects (PRÆFECTI) appointed over them, who commanded in the same manner as the legionary tribunes, Cæs. B. G. i. 39. Suet. Aug. 38. Claud. 35. Plin. Ep. x. 19. These troops were divided into cohorts, as the Roman infantry, Sallust. Jug. 58.

A third part of the horse, and a fifth of the foot of the allies were selected and posted near the consul, under the name of EXTRAORDINARIIS, and one troop, called ABLECTI or Selecti, to serve as his life-guards, Liv. xxxv. 5. Polyb. vi. 28.

It is probable that the arms and inferior officers of the allied troops were much the same with those of the Romans.

Two legions, with the due number of cavalry, (cum justo equitatu), and the allies, formed what was called a consular army, (exercitus consularis), about 20,000 men, Liv. x. 25. in the time of Polybius, 18,600, Polyb. vi. 24.

The consul appointed lieutenant-generals (LEGATI) under him, one or more, according to the importance of the war, Liv. ii. 29. 59. iv. 17. x. 40. 43. &c. Sall. Cat. 59. Jug. 28. Cas. de bell. civ. ii. 17. iii. 55.

When the consul performed any thing in person, he was said to do it by his own conduct and auspices (ductu vel imperio, et auspicio suo), Liv. iii. 1. 17. 42. xli. 17. 28. Plaut. Amph. i. 1. 41. ii. 2. 25. Horat. i. 7. 27. but if his legatus or any other person did it by his command, it was said to be done, auspicio consulis et ductu legati, by the auspices of the consul and under the conduct of the legatus. In this manner the emperors were said to do every thing by their own auspices, although they remained at Rome. Ductu Germanici, auspiciis Tiberii, Tacit. Annal. ii. 41. Horat. Od. iv. 14. 16 & 33. Ovid. Trist. ii. 173. hence auspicia, the conduct, Liv. iii. 60.

The military robe or cloak of the general was called PALUDAMENTUM, or Chlamys, of a scarlet colour bordered with purple; sometimes worn also by the chief officers, Liv. i. 26. Plin. xvi. 3. Tac. Ann. xii. 56. cum paludatis ducibus, officers in red coats, Juvenal. vi. 399. and, according to some, by the lictors who attended the consul in war, Liv. xli. 10. xlv. 39. CHLAMYS was likewise the name of a travelling dress, (vestis viatoria;) hence Chlamydatus, a traveller or foreigner, Plaut. Pseud. iv. 2. 8. sc. 7. 49.

The military cloak of the officers and soldiers was called SAGUM, also Chlamys, Plaut. Rud. ii. 2. 9. an open robe drawn over the other clothes and fastened with a clasp, Suet. Aug. 26. opposed to toga, the robe of peace. When there was a war in Italy, (in tumultu), all the citizens put on the sagum: hence Est in sagis civitas, Cic. Phil. viii. 11. sumere saga, ad saga ire; et redire ad togas, Id. v. 12. xiv. 1. also put for the general's robe; thus, Punico lugubre mutavit sagum, i. e. deposuit coccineam chlamydem Antonius, et accepit nigram, laid aside his purple robe and put on mourning, Horat. Epod. ix. 27.

III. DISCIPLINE of the ROMANS, their MARCHES and ENCAMPMENTS.

THE discipline of the Romans was chiefly conspicuous in their marches and encampments. They never passed a night, even in the longest marches, without pitching a camp, and fortifying it with a rampart and ditch, Liv. xlv. 39. Sallust. Jug. 45 & 91. Persons were always sent before to choose and mark out a proper place for that purpose, (castra metari.) Hence called METATORES; thus, Alteris castris vel secundis, is put for altero die, the second day; tertiis castris, quintis castris, &c. Tacit. Hist. iii. 15. iv. 71. Cas. B. G. vii. 36.

When the army staid but one night in the same camp, or even two or three nights, it was simply called castra, and in later ages MANSIO; which word is also put for the journey of one day, Plin. xii. 14. or for an inn, Suet. Tit. 10. as σρασιος among the Greeks.

When an army remained a considerable time in the same place, it was called Castra STATIVA; a standing camp; ÆSTIVA, a summer camp; and HIBERNA, a winter camp; which was first used in the siege of Veji, Liv. v. 2. Hibernacula ædificavit, xxiii. 39.

The winter quarters of the Romans were strongly fortified, and furnished, particularly under the emperors, with every accommodation like a city, as storehouses, (armaria,) workshops, (fabricæ,) an infirmary or hospital, (valetudinarium,) &c. Hence from them many towns in Europe are supposed to have had their origin; in England, particularly, those whose names end in cestor or chester.

The form of the Roman camp was a square, (quadrata,) and always of the same figure, Polyb. vi. 25. In later ages, in imitation of the Greeks, they sometimes made it circular, or adapted it to the nature of the ground, Veget. i. 23. It was surrounded with a ditch, (Fossa,) usually nine feet deep and twelve feet broad, and a rampart (VALLUM,) composed of the earth dug from the ditch, (AGER,) and sharp stakes, (sudes, VALLI vel pali) stuck into it, Virg. G. ii. 25. Cas. B. Civ. ii. 1. 15. Polyb. xvii. 14 & 15.

The camp had four gates, one on each side; the first called Porta PRÆTORIA vel Extraordinaria, next the enemy, Liv. xl. 27. 2. DECUMANA, opposite to the former, (ab tergo castrorum et hosti aversa, vel ab hoste,) Liv. iii. 5. x. 32. Cæs. B. G. ii. 24. Civ. iii. 79. Porta PRINCIPALIS DEXTRA and PRINCIPALIS SINISTRA, Liv. xl. 27. were the names of the two others.

The camp was divided into two parts, called the upper and lower.

The upper part (pars castrorum superior) was that next the porta prætoria, in which was the general's tent, (ducis tabernaculum,) called PRÆTORIUM, also AUGURALE, Tacit. Annal. ii. 13. xv. 30. from that part of it where he took the auspices (auguraculum, Fest. vel Auguratorium, Hygin. de castrament.) or AUGUSTALE, Quinctil. viii. 2. 8. with a sufficient space around for his retinue, the prætorian cohort, &c. On one side of the Prætorium were the tents of the lieutenant-generals, and on the other that of the Quæstor, QUÆSTORIUM, which seems anciently to have been near the porta decumana, hence called Quæstoria, Liv. x. 32. xxxiv. 47. Hard by the quæstor's tent was the FORUM, called also QUINTANA, where things were sold and meetings held, Liv. xli. 2. Suet. Ner. 26. Polyb. vi. 38. In this part of the camp were also the tents of the tribunes, prefects of the allies, the Evocati, Ablecti, and Extraordinarii, both horse and foot. But in what order they were placed does not appear from the classics. We only know that a particular place was assigned both to officers and men, with which they were all perfectly acquainted.

The lower part of the camp was separated from the upper by a broad open space, which extended the whole breadth of the camp, called PRINCIPIA, Liv. vii. 12. where the tribunal of the general was erected, when he either administered justice or harangued the army, Tacit. Annal. i. 67. Hist. iii. 13. where the tribunes held their courts, (jura reddebant), Liv. xxviii. 24. and punishments were inflicted, Suet. Otho. i. Aug. 24. Liv. viii. 32. ix. 16. where the principal standards of the army, and the altars of the gods stood, Tacit. Annal. i. 39. also the images of the emperors, Id. iv. 2. xv. 29. by which the soldiers swore, Liv. xxvi. 48. Horat. Od. iv. 5. Ep. ii. 1. 19. and deposited their money at the standards, (ad vel apud signa), as in a sacred place; Suet. Dom. 7. each a certain part of his pay, and the half of a donative, which was not restored till the end of the war, Veget. ii. 20.

In the lower part of the camp the troops were disposed in this manner: The cavalry in the middle; on both sides of them the Triarii, Principes, and Hastati; next to them on both sides were the cavalry and foot of the allies, who, it is observable, were always posted in separate places, lest they should form any plots, (ne quid novæ rei molirentur), by being united. It is not agreed what was the place of the Velites. They are supposed to have occupied the empty space between the ramparts and the tents, which was 200 feet broad. The same may be said of the slaves, (CALONES vel servi), and retainers or followers of the camp, (LIXÆ, qui exercitum sequerantur, quæstus gratiâ, Festus), Liv. xxiii. 16. These were little used in ancient times. A common soldier was not allowed a slave, but the officers were, Sallust. Jug. 45. The Lixæ were sometimes altogether prohibited, ibid. At other times they seem to have stayed without the camp, in what was called PROCESTRIA (ædificia extra castra), Festus; Tacit. Hist. iv. 22.

The tents (tentoria) were covered with leather or skins extended with ropes: hence sub pellibus hiemare, Flor. i. 12. durare, Liv. v. 2. haberi, Id. 37. 39. retineri, in tents, or in camp, Tacit. Ann. 13. 35. So Cic. Acad. iv. 2.

In each tent were usually ten soldiers, with their decanus or petty officer who commanded them, (qui iis præfuit;) which was properly called CONTUBERNIUM, and they Contubernales. Hence young noblemen under the general's particular care, were said to serve in his tent, (contubernio ejus militare), and were called his CONTUBERNALES, Suet. Jul. 42. Cic. Cæl. 30. Planc. 21. Sallust. Jug. 64. Hence, vivere in contubernio alicujus, to live in one's family, Plin. Ep. vii. 24. Contubernalis, a companion, Id. i. 19. x. 3. The centurions and standard-bearers were posted at the head of their companies.

The different divisions of the troops were separated by intervals, called VILÆ. Of these there were five longwise, (in longum), i. e. running from the decuman towards the prætorian side; and three across, one in the lower part of the camp, called Quintana, and two in the upper, namely, the Principia already described, and another between the Prætorium and the Prætorian gate. The rows of tents between the vix were called STRIGÆ, (στριγαι.)

In pitching the camp, different divisions of the army were appointed to execute different parts of the work, under the inspection of the tribunes or centurions, Juvenal. viii. 147. as they likewise were during the encampment to perform different services, (ministra;) to procure water, forage, wood, &c. From these certain persons were exempted, (immunes operum militarium, in unum pugnae laborem reservati, Liv. vii. 7.) either by law or custom, as the Equites, Val. Max. ii. 9. 7. the Evocati and veterans, Tacit. Annal. i. 36. or by the favour (beneficio) of their commander; hence called BENEFICIARI, Festus. Cæs. B. C. i. 75. But afterwards this exemption used to be purchased from the centurions, which proved most pernicious to military discipline, Tacit. Annal. i. 17. Hist. i. 46. The soldiers obliged to perform these services were called MUNIFICES, Veget. ii. 7. 19.

Under the emperors, there was a particular officer in each legion who had the charge of the camp, called PÆRÆFECTUS CASTROUM, Tacit. Annal. i. 20. xiv. 37. Hist. ii. 29. Veget. ii. 10.

A certain number of maniples were appointed to keep guard at the gates, on the rampart, and in other places of the camp, before the Prætorium, the tents of the Legati, Quæstor, and tribunes, both by day and by night, (agere excubias vel stationes et vigiliis;) who were changed every three hours, Polyb. vi. 33.

EXCUBIÆ denotes watches either by day or night; VIGILIÆ, only by night. Guards placed before the gates were properly called STATIONES, on the rampart CUSTODIÆ, Liv. xxv. 40. xlv. 33. But statio is also put for any post: hence, Vctat Pythagoras injussu imperatoris, id est, Dei, de præsidio et statione vitæ decedere, Cic. Sen. 20. Whoever deserted his station was punished with death, Suet. Aug. 24.

Every evening, before the watches were set, (antequam vigilia disponerentur) the watch-word (symbolum) or private signal, by which they might distinguish friends from foes, Dio. xliii. 34. was distributed through the army by the means of a square tablet of wood in the form of a die, called TESSERA, from its four corners, (tesse, -a, quatuor.) On it was inscribed whatever word or words the general chose, which he seems to have varied every night, Polyb. vi. 32.

A frequent watch-word of Marius was LAR DEUS; of Sulla, APOLLO DELPHICUS, and of Cæsar, VENUS GENITRIX, &c. Serv. ad Virg. Æn. vii. 637. of Brutus, LIBERTAS, Dio. 47. 43. It was given, (tessera data est) by the general to the tribunes and prefects of the allies, by them to the centurions, and by them to the soldiers. The person who carried the Tessera from the tribunes to the centurions, was called TESSERARIUS, Tacit. Hist. i. 25.

In this manner also the particular commands of the general were made known to the troops, Liv. vii. 35. ix. 32. xxvii. 46. xxviii. 14.

Suet. Galb. 6. which seems likewise sometimes to have been done viva voce, Liv. xlv. 33.

Every evening, when the general dismissed his chief officers and friends, (cum PRÆTORIUM dimittebat,) after giving them his commands, all the trumpets sounded, Liv. xxx. 5. xxi. 54. xxvi. 15. xxxvii. 5.

Certain persons were every night appointed to go round (circumire vel obire) the watches: hence called CIRCUTORÆ, vel Circitores. This seems to have been at first done by the equites, Liv. xxii. 1. and tribunes, Id. xxviii. 24. on extraordinary occasions by the legati and general himself, Sallust. Jug. 45. At last, particular persons were chosen for that purpose by the tribunes, Veget. iii. 8.

The Romans used only wind-instruments of music in the army. These were the TUBA, straight like our trumpet; CORNU, the horn, bent almost round; BUCCINA, similar to the horn, commonly used by the watches; LITUUS, the clarion, bent a little at the end like the augur's staff or lituus; all of brass: whence those, who blew them, were called ÆNEATORES, Suet. Jul. 32. The Tuba was used as a signal for the foot, the Lituus for the horse, Acron. ad Horat. Od. i. 1. 23. but they are sometimes confounded, Virg. Æn. vi. 167. and both called Concha, because first made of shells, Id. 171.

The signal was given for changing the watches (vigiliis mutandis) with a trumpet or horn, (tubâ,) Lucan. viii. 24. (buccinâ,) Liv. vii. 35. Tacit. Hist. v. 22. hence ad tertiam buccinam, for vigiliam, Liv. xxvi. 15. and the time was determined by hour-glasses, (per clepsydras,) Veget. iii. 8. See p. 209.

A principal part of the discipline of the camp consisted in exercises, (whence the army was called EXERCITUS,) walking and running (decurso,) completely armed, Liv. xxiii. 35. xxvi. 51. xxix. 22. Polyb. vi. 20. leaping, swimming, Suet. Ang. 65. vaulting (saltatio) upon horses of wood, Veget. i. 18. shooting the arrow, and throwing the javelin; attacking a wooden figure of a man as a real enemy, (exercitia ad palum, vel PALARIA,) Juvenal. vi. 246. the carrying of weights, &c. Virg. G. iii. 346.

When the general thought proper to decamp, (castra movere,) he gave the signal for collecting the baggage (colligendi vasa,) whereupon all took down their tents, (tabernacula detendebant,) but not till they saw this done to the tents of the general and tribunes, Polyb. vi. Upon the next signal, they put their baggage on the beasts of burden, and upon the third signal began to march; first, the extraordinarii and the allies of the right wing with their baggage; then the legions, and last of all the allies on the left wing, with a party of horse in the rear, (ad agmen cogendum, i. e. colligendum, to prevent straggling,) and sometimes on the flanks, in such order, (composito agmine, non itineri magis apto, quam prælio,) that they might readily be formed into a line of battle, if an enemy attacked them.

An army in close array was called AGMEN PILATUM, Serv. in Virg. Æn. xii. 121. vel justum, Tacit. Hist. i. 68. When under no apprehension of an enemy, they were less guarded, (agmine incauto, i. e. minus munito, ut inter pacatos ducebat, sc. consul,) Liv. xxxv. 4.

The form of an army on march, however, varied according to circumstances and the nature of the ground, Liv. xxxv. 4. 27. 28. It was sometimes disposed into a square, (AGMEN QUADRATUM), with the baggage in the middle, Liv. xxxi. 37. xxxix. 30. Hirt. de Bell. Gall. 8. Tacit. Ann. 1. 51.

Scouts (speculatores) were always sent before to reconnoitre the ground, (ad omnia exploranda.) Suet. Jul. 58. Sall. Jug. 46. A certain kind of soldiers under the emperors were called SPECULATORES, Tacit. Hist. i. 24. 25. 27. ii. 11. 33. 73. Suet. Claud. 35. Oth. 5.

The soldiers were trained with great care to observe the military pace, (gradu militari incedere), and to follow the standards, (signa sequi.) For that purpose, when encamped, they were led out thrice a month, sometimes ten, sometimes twenty miles, less or more, as the general inclined. They usually marched at the rate of twenty miles in five hours, sometimes with a quickened pace (gradu vel agmine citato) twenty-four miles in that time, Veget. i. 9.

The load which a Roman soldier carried is almost incredible, Virg. G. iii. 346. Horat. Sat. ii. 2, 10. victuals (cibaria) for fifteen days, Cic. Tusc. ii. 15. 16. sometimes more, Liv. Epit. 57. usually corn, as being lighter, sometimes drest food, (coctus cibus), Liv. iii. 27. utensils, (utensilia), ib. 42. a saw, a basket, a mattock, (rutrum), an axe, a hook, and leathern thong, (falx et lorum ad pabulandum), a chain, a pot, &c. Liv. xxviii. 45. Horat. Epod. ix. 13. stakes, usually three or four, sometimes twelve, Liv. iii. 27. the whole amounting to sixty pounds weight, besides arms; for a Roman soldier considered these not as a burden, but as a part of himself, (arma membra milites ducebant) Cic. Tusc. ii. 16.

Under this load they commonly marched twenty miles a day, sometimes more, Veget. i. 10. Spartian. Adrian. 10.

There were beasts of burden for carrying the tents, mills, baggage, &c. (JUMENTA SARCINARIA, Cæs. B. C. i. 81.) The ancient Romans rarely used wagons, as being more cumbersome, and the roads rough and difficult, Sallust. Jug. 45.

The general usually marched in the centre, sometimes in the rear, or wherever his presence was necessary, Ibid. et Polyb. x. 22.

When they came near the place of encampment, some tribunes and centurions, with proper persons appointed for that service, (cum metatoribus), were sent before to mark out the ground, and assign to each his proper quarters, which they did by erecting flags (vexilla) of different colours in the several parts.

The place for the general's tent was marked with a white flag, and when it was once fixed, the places of the rest followed of course, as being ascertained and known, Polyb. vi. 39. When the troops came up, they immediately set about making the rampart, (vallum jaciebant), while part of the army kept guard (præcidium agitabant), to prevent surprise. The camp was always marked out in the same manner, and fortified, if they were to continue in it only for a single night, Joseph. Bell. Jud. iii. 6.

IV. The ORDER of BATTLE, and the different STANDARDS.

THE Roman army was usually drawn up in three lines, (triplice acie, vel triplicibus subsidiis, Sallust. Jug. 49.) each several rows deep.

The Hastati were placed in the first line; (in prima acie vel in principibus; the Principes in the second; and the Triarii or Pilani in the third; at proper distances from one another. The Principes are supposed anciently to have stood foremost. Hence post principia, behind the first line, Ter. Eum. iv. 7. 11. Liv. ii. 65. iii. 22. viii. 10. Transvorsis principibus, the front or first line being turned into the flank, Sallust. Jug. 49. Liv. viii. 8. xxxvii. 89.

A maniple of each kind of troops was placed behind one another, so that each legion had ten maniples in front. They were not placed directly behind one another as on a march, (agmine quadrato), but obliquely, in the form of what is called a Quincunx, Vir. G. ii. 279. unless when they had to contend with elephants, as at the battle of Zama, Polyb. xv. 9. et Appian. Liv. xxx. 33. There were certain intervals or spaces, (VLE) not only between the lines, but likewise between the maniples. Hence ordines explicare, to arrange in order of battle, Liv. iii. 60. and in the maniples each man had a free space of at least three feet, both on the side and behind, Polyb. xvii. 26.

The Velites were placed in the spaces or intervals (in tur) between the maniples, Liv. xxx. 33. Sallust. ibid. or on the wings, xlii. 58.

The Roman legions possessed the centre, (mediam aciem tenebant), the allies and auxiliaries the right and left wings, (cornua), Liv. xxxvii. 39. The cavalry were sometimes placed behind the foot, whence they were suddenly let out on the enemy through the intervals between the maniples, Liv. x. 5. but they were commonly posted on the wings, Liv. xviii. 14. and were hence called ALÆ, Gell. xvi. 4. Plin. Ep. 7. 30. which name is commonly applied to the cavalry of the allies, (alarii vel alarii equites), Liv. xxxv. 5. Cic. Fam. ii. 17. when distinguished from the cavalry of the legions, (equites legionarii), Liv. xl. 40. Cæs. B. G. i. 41; and likewise to the auxiliary infantry, (cohortes alares vel alaria), Liv. x. 40. 43. Cæs. B. C. i. 65. ii. 16.

This arrangement, however, was not always observed. Sometimes all the different kinds of troops were placed in the same line. For instance, when there were two legions, the one legion and its allies were placed in the first line, and the other behind as a body of reserve, (in subsidiis vel præsidis), Liv. xxvii. 12. 2. xxix. 2. xxx. 18. This was called ACIES DUPLEX, Cæs. B. C. i. 75. Sallust. Cat. 59. when there was only one line, ACIES SIMPLEX, Cæs. B. G. iii. 25. Afr. 12. 53. Some think, that in latter times an army was drawn up in order of battle, without any regard to the division of soldiers into different ranks. In the description of Cæsar's battles there is no mention made of the soldiers being divided into Hastati, Principes, and Triarii, but only of a certain number of legions and cohorts, which Cæsar generally drew up in three lines, Cæs. B. G. i. 19. 41. ii. 22. iv. 11. B. C. i. 57. 75. iii. 74. Afr. 53. So Sallust. Cat. 59. Tacit. Hist. ii. 24. In the battle of Pharsalia, he formed a body of reserve, which he calls a fourth line, (QUARTEM ACIEM instituit) to oppose the cavalry of Pompey, which indeed determined the fortune of the day, B. C. iii. 76. This was properly called ACIES QUADRUPLEX: as, B. Afr. 58.

In the time of Cæsar the bravest troops were commonly placed in the front, Sallust. et Cæs. ibid. contrary to the ancient custom. This, and various other alterations in the military art, are ascribed to Marius.

ACIES is put not only for the whole or part of an army in order of battle; as, Aciem instruere, æquare, exornare, explicare, extenuare, firmare, perturbare, instaurare, restituere, redintegrare, &c. but also for the battle itself, Cic. Fam. vi. 3. Suet. Aug. 20. Commissam aciem secutus est terra tremor, there happened an earthquake after the fight was begun, Flor. ii. 6. Post acies primas, after the first battle, Ovid. Met. xiii. 207.

Each century, or at least each maniple, had its proper standard and standard-bearer, Varro. de Lat. ling. iv. 16. Liv. viii. 8. Veget. ii. 23. Hence milites signi unius, of one maniple or century, Liv. xv. 23. xxxiii. 1. 9. Reliqua signa in subsidio artius collocat, he places the rest of the troops as a body of reserve, or in the second line more closely, Sallust. Cat. 59. signa inferre, to advance: convertere, to face about, Cæs. B. G. i. 25. efferre, to go out of the camp, Liv. xxv. 4. a signis discedere, to desert, Ibid. 20. referre, to retreat; also, to recover the standards, Virg. Æn. vi. 826. signa conferre, vel signis collatis confligere, to engage; signis infestis inferri, ire vel incedere, to march against the enemy; urbem intrare sub signis, Liv. iii. 51. sub signis legiones ducere, in battle order, Cic. Att. xvi. 8. signa infesta ferre, to advance as if to an attack, Virg. Æn. v. 582.

The ensign of a manipulus was anciently a bundle of hay on the top of a pole, (see p. 309-10.) whence miles manipularis, a common soldier, Ovid. Fast. iii. 116. Afterwards a spear with a cross piece of wood on the top, sometimes the figure of a hand above, probably in allusion to the word manipulus; and below, a small round or oval shield, commonly of silver, Plin. xxxiii. 3. also of gold, Herodian. iv. 7. on which were represented the images of the warlike deities, as Mars or Minerva; and after the extinction of liberty, of the emperors, Tacit. Ann. i. 43. Hist. i. 41. iv. 62. or of their favourites, Suet. Tib. 48. Cal. 14. Hence the standards were called Numina legionum, and worshipped with religious adoration, Suet. Cal. 14. Vit. 2. Tacit. Ann. i. 39. Veget. ii. 6. The soldiers swore by them, Lucan. i. 374.

We read also of the standards of the cohorts, Liv. xxvii. 15. Cæs. B. G. ii. 25. Tacit. Ann. i. 18. Hist. i. 41. as of prefects or commanders of the cohorts, Sallust. Jug. 46. But then a whole is supposed to be put for a part, cohortes for manipuli or ordines, which were properly said ad signa convenire et contineri, Cæs. B. G. vi. l. 31. 37. The divisions of the legion, however, seem to have been different at different times. Cæsar mentions 120 chosen men of the same century, B. C. iii. 76. Vegetius makes manipulus the same with contubernium, ii. 13. It is at least certain that there always was a diversity of ranks, ORDINES INFERIORES ET SUPERIORES, Cæs. B. G. vi. 34. Tacit. Hist. i. 52. iv. 59. and a gradation of preferments, ORDINES vel gradus militiæ, Ibid. et Cæs. B. C. i. 44. Suet. Claud. 25. The divisions most frequently mentioned are COHORTES, battalions of foot, and TURMÆ, troops of horse, Cic. Marcel. x. Fam. xv. 2. Att. vi. 2. Cohors is sometimes applied to the auxiliaries, and opposed to the legions, Tacit. Hist. ii. 89. v. 18. It is also, although more rarely, applied to cavalry, Plin. Ep. x. 107.

The standards of the different divisions had certain letters inscribed on them, to distinguish the one from the other, Veget. ii. 13.

The standard of the cavalry was called VEXILLUM, a flag, or banner, i. e. a square piece of cloth fixed on the end of a spear, Liv. used also by the foot, Cæs. B. G. vi. 33. 37. particularly by the veterans who had served out their time, but under the emperors were still retained in the army, and fought in bodies distinct from the legion under a particular standard of their own, (sub vexillo), hence called VEXILLARI, Tacit. Ann. i. 17. 26. 36. 38. But Vexillum or Vexillatio is also put for any number of troops following one standard, Tacit. Hist. i. 31. 70. Suet. Galb. 18. Stat. Theb. xii. 782.

To lose the standards was always esteemed disgraceful, (Magnum perdere crimen erat, Ovid. Fast. iii. 113.) particularly to the standard-bearer, Cæs. B. G. iv. 23. v. 29. B. C. i. 54. sometimes a capital crime, Liv. ii. 59. Hence to animate the soldiers, the standards were sometimes thrown among the enemy, Liv. iii. 70. vi. 8. xxv. 14. xxvi. 5.

A silver eagle, with expanded wings, on the top of a spear, sometimes holding a thunderbolt in its claws, with the figure of a small chapel above it, Dio. xl. 18. was the common standard of the legion, at least after the time of Marius, for before that the figures of other animals were used, Plin. x. 4. s. 5. Hence AQUILA is put for a legion, Cæs. Hisp. 30. and aquila signaque for all the standards of a legion, Tacit. passim. It was anciently carried before the first manipule of the Triarii, but after the time of Marius, in the first line, and near it was the ordinary place of the general, Sallust. Cat. 59. almost in the centre of the army; thus, MEDIO DUX AGMINE Turnus vertitur arma tenens, Virg. Æn. ix. 28. usually on horseback, Liv. vi. 7. Sall. Cat. 59. Cæs. B. Gell. i. 25. So likewise the Legati and tribunes, Ibid. & Cæs. vii. 65.

The soldiers who fought before the standards or in the first line, were called ANTESIGNANI, Liv. ii. 20. iv. 37. vii. 16. 33. ix. 32. 39. xxii. 5. xxx. 33. Cæs. B. C. i. 41. 52. Those behind the standards, (post signa), POSTSIGNANI, Liv. viii. 11. Frontin. Stratag. i. 3. 17. vel SUBSIGNANI, Tacit. Hist. i. 70. but the Subsignani seem to have been the same with the Vexillarii, or privileged veterans, Id. iv. 33. Ann. i. 36.

The general was usually attended by a select band, called COHORS PRÆTORIA, Cic. Cat. ii. 11. Fam. x. 20. Sallust. Cat. 60. Jug. 98. first instituted by Scipio Africanus, Festus; but something similar was used long before that time, Liv. ii. 20. not mentioned in Cæsar, unless by the by, B. G. i. 31.

When a general, after having consulted the auspices, had determined to lead forth his troops against the enemy, a red flag was displayed, (vexillum vel signum pugnae proponebantur;) on a spear from the top of the Prætorium, Cæs. de bell. G. ii. 20. Liv. xxii. 45. which was the signal to prepare for battle. Then having called an assembly by the sound of a trumpet, (classico, i. e. tubâ concione advocatâ, Liv. iii. 62. vii. 36. viii. 7. 32.) he harangued (alloquebatur) the soldiers, who usually signified their approbation by shouts, by raising their right hands, id. & Lucan. i. 386. or by beating on their shields with their spears. Silence was a mark of timidity, Lucan. ii. 596. This address was sometimes made in the open field from a tribunal raised of turf (e tribunali cespitio aut viridi cespice extracto;) Tacit. Ann. i. 18. Plin. Paneg. 56. Stat. Silv. v. 2. 144. A general always addressed his troops by the title of milites: hence Cæsar greatly mortified the soldiers of the tenth legion, when they demanded their discharge, by calling them QUIRITES instead of MILITES, Dio. xlii. 53. Suet. Cæs. 70.

After the harangue, all the trumpets sounded, (signa canebant;) which was the signal for marching, Lucan. ii. 597.

At the same time the soldiers called out To arms, (AD ARMA clamatum est.) The standards, which stood fixed in the ground, were pulled up, (convellabantur;) Liv. iii. 50. 54. vi. 28. Virg. Æn. xi. 19. If this was done easily, it was reckoned a good omen; if not, the contrary, Liv. xxii. 3. Cic. div. i. 35. Val. Max. i. 2. 11. Lucan. vii. 162. Hence, Aquila prodire nolentes, the eagles unwilling to move, Flor. ii. 6. Dio. xl. 18. The watchword was given, (signum datum est;) either vivâ voce, or by means of a tessera, Cæs. de B. G. ii. 20. de B. Afric. 83. as other orders were communicated, Liv. v. 36. xxi. 14. In the mean time, many of the soldiers made their testaments, (in procinctu, see p. 56.) Gell. xv. 27.

When the army was advanced near the enemy (intra teli conjectum, unde a ferentariis prælium committi posset;) the general, riding round the ranks, again exhorted them to courage, and then gave the signal to engage. Upon which all the trumpets sounded, and the soldiers rushed forward to the charge with a great shout (maximo clamore procurrebant cum signis vel pilis infestis, i. e. in hostem versis vel directis;) Sallust. Cat. 60. Cæs. B. Civ. iii. 92. Liv. vi. 8. &c. Dio. xxxvi. 32. which they did to animate one another and intimidate the enemy, Cæs. ibid. Hence primus clamor atque impetus rem decrevit, when the enemy were easily conquered, Liv. xxv. 4.

The Velites first began the battle; and when repulsed, retreated, either through the intervals between the files, (per intervallo ordi- num,) or by the flanks of the army, and rallied in the rear. Then the Hastati advanced; and if they were defeated, they retired slowly (presso pede) into the intervals of the ranks of the Principes, or if greatly fatigued, behind them. Then the Principes engaged; and if they too were defeated, the Triarii rose up, (consurgedant;) for hitherto they continued in a stooping posture, (subsdebant, hinc dicti SUBSIDIA, Festus,) leaning on their right knee, with their left leg stretched out, and protected with their shields; hence, AD TRIARIOS VENTUM EST, it is come to the last push, Liv. viii. 8.

The Triarii, receiving the Hastati and Principes into the void spaces between their manipuli, and closing their rank (compressis ordinibus,) without leaving any space between them, in one compact body (uno continente agmine) renewed the combat. Thus the enemy had several fresh attacks to sustain before they gained the victory. If the Triarii were defeated, the day was lost, and a retreat was sounded, (receptui cecinerunt,) Liv. viii. 8. 9.

This was the usual manner of attack before the time of Marius. After that several alterations took place, which, however, are not exactly ascertained.

The legions sometimes drew lots about the order of their march, and the place they were to occupy in the field, Tacit. Hist. ii. 41.

The Romans varied the line of battle by advancing or withdrawing particular parts. They usually engaged with a straight front, (recta fronte, Festus; vel æquatis frontibus, Tibull. iv. l. 103. ACIES DIRECTA.) Sometimes the wings were advanced before the centre, (ACIES SINUATA,) Senec. de beat. Vit. 4. Liv. xxviii. 14. which was the usual method, Plutarch. in Mario; or the contrary, (ACIES GIBBERA, vel flexa, which Hannibal used in the battle of Cannæ, Liv. xxii. 47. Sometimes they formed themselves into the figure of a wedge, (CUNEUS vel trigōnum, a triangle,) called by the soldiers CAPUT PORCINUM, like the Greek letter Delta, Δ. Liv. viii. 10. Quinctil. ii. 13. Virg. xii. 269. 457. Cæs. vi. 39. So the Germans, Tacit. de Mor. G. 6. and Spaniards, Liv. xxxix. 31. But cuneus is also put for any close body, as the Macedonian phalanx, Liv. xxxii. 17. Sometimes they formed themselves to receive the cuneus, in the form of a FORCEPS or scissors; thus A. Gell. x. 9. Veget. ii. 19.

When surrounded by the enemy, they often formed themselves into a round body, (ORBIS vel GLOBUS; hence orbis facere vel volvere; in orbem se tutari vel conglobare,) Sallust. Jug. 97. Liv. ii. 50. iv. 28. 39. xxiii. 27. Cæs. B. G. iv. 37. Tacit. Ann. ii. 11.

When they advanced or retreated in separate parties without remaining in any fixed position, it was called SERRA, Festus.

When the Romans gained a victory, the soldiers with shouts of joy saluted their general by the title of IMPERATOR. (See p. 142.) His lictors wreathed their fasces with laurel, Plutarch. in Lucull. as did also the soldiers their spears and javelins, Suet. Sylo. v. i. 92. Martial. vii. 5. 6. Plin. xv. 30. He immediately sent letters wrapped round with laurel (literæ laureatæ) to the senate, to inform them of his success, to which Ovid alludes, Amor. i. 11. 25. and if the victory was considerable, to demand a triumph, Liv. xlv. 1. Cic. Pis. 17. Att. v. 20. Fam. ii. 10. Appian. B. Mithrid. p. 223. to which Persius alludes, vi. 43. This kind of letter was seldom sent under the emperors, Dio. liv. 11. Tacit. Agric. 18. If the senate approved, they decreed a thanksgiving (supplicatio, vel supplicium, vel gratulatio, Cic. Marcell. 4. Fam. ii. 18.) to the gods, and confirmed to the general the title of IMPERATOR, which he retained till his triumph or return to the city, Cic. Phil. xiv. 3. 4. 5. In the mean time, his lictors, having the fascēs wreathed with laurel, attended him, Ib.

V. MILITARY REWARDS.

AFTER a victory the general assembled his troops, and in presence of the whole army, bestowed rewards on those who deserved them. These were of various kinds.

The highest reward was the civic crown, (CORONA CIVICA,) given to him who had saved the life of a citizen, Gell. v. 6. Liv. vi. 20. x. 56. with this inscription, OB CIVEM SERVATUM, vel, -es, -tos, Senec. Clem. i. 26. made of oak leaves, (e fronde querna, hence called Quercus civilis, Virg. Æn. vi. 772.) and by the appointment of the general presented by the person who had been saved, to his preserver, whom he ever after respected as a parent, Cic. Planc. 30. Under the emperors it was always bestowed by the prince, (imperatoria manu.) Tacit. Ann. iii. 21. v. 12. It was attended with particular honours. The person who received it wore it at the spectacles, and sat next the senate. When he entered, the audience rose up, as a mark of respect, (ineuntī etiam ab senatu assurgebatur, Plin. xxi. 4. Among the honours decreed to Augustus by the senate was this, that a civic crown should be suspended from the top of his house, between two laurel branches, which were set up in the vestibule before the gate, as if he were the perpetual preserver of his citizens and the conqueror of his enemies, Dio. liii. 16. Val. Max. ii. 8. fin. Ovid. Fast. l. 614. iv. 953. Trist. iii. 1. 35.—48. So Claudius, Suet. 17. hence, on some of the coins of Augustus there is a civic crown, with these words inscribed, OB CIVES SERVATOS.

To the persons who first mounted the rampart or entered the camp of the enemy, was given by the general a golden crown, called CORONA VALLARIS vel CASTRENSIS. Val. Max. i. 8. To him who first scaled the walls of a city to an assault, CORONA MURALIS, Liv. xxvi. 48. who first boarded the ship of an enemy, CORONA NAVALIS, Festus; Gell. v. 6.

Augustus gave to Agrippa, after defeating Sextus Pompeius in a sea-fight near Sicily, a golden crown, adorned with figures of the beaks of ships, hence called ROSTRATA, Virg. viii. 664. said to have been never given to any other person, Liv. Epit. 129. Paterc. ii. 81. Dio. xlix. 14. but according to Festus in voc. NAVALI, and Pliny, vii. 39. xvi. 4. it was also given to M. Varro in the war against the pirates by Pompey ; but they seem to confound the corona rostrata and navalis, which others make different. So also Suet. Claud. 17.

When an army was freed from a blockade, the soldiers gave to their deliverer (ei duci, qui liberavit, Gell. v. 6.) a crown made of the grass which grew in the place where they had been blocked up ; hence called graminea corona OBSIDIONALIS, Liv. vii. 37. Plin. xxii. 4. 5. This of all military honours was esteemed the greatest. A few, who had the singular good fortune to obtain it, are recounted, ib. 5 & 6.

Golden crowns were also given to officers and soldiers who had displayed singular bravery ; as to T. Manlius Torquatus, and M. Valerius Corvus, who each of them slew a Gaul in single combat, Liv. vii. 10. 26. to P. Decius, who preserved the Roman army from being surrounded by the Samnites, id. 37. and to others, x. 44. xxvi. 21. xxx. 15.

There were smaller rewards (præmia minora) of various kinds ; as, a spear without any iron on it, (HASTA PURA.) Virg. Æn. vi. 760. Suet. Claud. 28.—a flag or banner, i. e. a streamer on the end of a lance or spear (VEXILLUM, quasi parvum velum, Serv. in Virg. Æn. viii. 1.) of different colours, with or without embroidery, (auratum vel purum.) Sall. Jug. 85. Suet. Aug. 25.—Trappings, (PHALERÆ.) ornaments for horses, Virg. Æn. v. 310. Liv. xxii. 52. and for men, Liv. ix. 46. Cic. Att. xvi. 17. Verr. iii. 80. iv. 12.—Golden chains (Auræ TORQUES.) Tacit. Annal. ii. 9. iii. 21. Juvenal. xvi. 60. which went round the neck, whereas the Phalæras hung down on the breast, Sil. Ital. xv. 52.—Bracelets, (ARMILLÆ.) ornaments for the arms, Liv. x. 44.—CORNICULA, ornaments for the helmet in the form of horns, ibid.—CATELLÆ vel Catenulæ, chains composed of rings ; whereas the Torques were twisted (tortæ) like a rope, Liv. xxxix. 31.—FIBULÆ, clasps, or buckles for fastening a belt or garment, ibid.

These presents were conferred by the general in presence of the army ; and such as received them, after being publicly praised, were placed next him, Sal. Jug. 51. Liv. xxiv. 16. Cic. Phil. v. 13. 17. They ever after kept them with great care, and wore them at the spectacles and on all public occasions, Liv. x. 47. They first wore them at the games, A. U. 459. ib.

The spoils (SPOLIA, vel Exuvie) taken from the enemy, were fixed up on their door-posts, or in the most conspicuous part of their houses, Virg. Æn. ii. 504. Liv. xxiii. 23.

When the general of the Romans slew the general of the enemy in single combat, the spoils which he took from him, (quæ dux duci detraxit.) were called SPOLIA OPIMA, (ab Ope vel opibus, Festus.) Liv. iv. 20. and hung up in the temple of Jupiter Feretrius, built by Romulus, and repaired by Augustus, by the advice of Atticus, Nep. in vit. 20. These spoils were obtained only thrice before the fall of the republic ; the first by Romulus, who slew Acron king of the Cæninenses, Liv. i. 10. the next by A. Cornelius Cossus, who slew Lar Tolumnius, king of the Veientes, A. U. 318. Liv. iv. 20.

and the third by M. Claudius Marcellus, who slew Viridomarus, king of the Gauls, A. U. 530. Liv. Epit. xx. Virg. Æn. vi. 859. Plutarch. in Marcello; Propert. iv. 11.

Florus calls the spoils OPIMA which Scipio Æmilianus, when in a subordinate rank, took from the king of the Terduli and Vaccæi in Spain, whom he slew in single combat, ii. 17. but the Spolia Opima could properly be obtained only by a person invested with supreme command, Dio. li. 24.

Sometimes soldiers, on account of their bravery, received a double share of corn, (duplex frumentum), which they might give away to whom they pleased; hence called DUPLICARII, Liv. ii. 59. vii. 37. also double pay (duplex stipendium), clothes, &c. Cæs. bell. civ. iii. 53. called by Cicero, DIARIA, Att. viii. 14.

VI. A TRIUMPH.

THE highest military honour which could be obtained in the Roman state, was a triumph, or solemn procession, with which a victorious general and his army passed through the city to the Capitol; so called from Θριάμβος, the Greek name of Bacchus, who is said to have been the inventor of such processions, Varro. de Lat. ling. v. 7. Plin. vii. 56. s. 57. It had its origin at Rome, from Romulus carrying the Spolia opima in procession to the Capitol, Dionys. ii. 34. and the first who entered the city in the form of a regular triumph was Tarquinius Priscus, Liv. i. 38. the next P. Valerius, Liv. ii. 7. and the first who triumphed after the expiration of his magistracy, (acto honore), was Q. Publius Philo, Id. viii. 26.

A triumph was decreed by the senate, and sometimes by the people against the will of the senate, Liv. iii. 63. vii. 17. to the general who, in a just war with foreigners, (justo et hostili bello, Cic. Deiot. 5.) and in one battle, had slain above 5000 enemies of the republic, and by that victory had enlarged the limits of the empire, Val. Max. ii. 8. Whence a triumph was called Justus, which was fairly won, Cic. Pis. 19. Horat. Od. i. 12. 54. And a general was said triumphare, et agere vel deportare triumphum de vel ex aliquo; triumphare aliquem vel aliquid, Virg. Æn. vi. 836. Plin. v. 5. ducere portare, vel agere eum in triumpho.

There was no just triumph for a victory in a civil war, Val. Max. ii. 8. 7. Flor. iv. 2. Dio. xlii. 18. hence, Bella geri placuit nullos habitura triumphos? Lucan. i. 12. although this was not always observed, Liv. Epit. 115. 116. 133. Plin. Paneg. 2. Dio. xliii. 19. nor, when one had been first defeated, and afterwards only recovered what was lost, Oros. iv. nor anciently could one enjoy that honour, who was invested with an extraordinary command, as Scipio in Spain, Liv. xxviii. 38. xxxvi. 20. nor unless he left his province in a state of peace, and brought thence his army to Rome along with him to be present at the triumph, Liv. xxvi. 21. xxxi. 49. xxxix. 29. xlv. 38. But these rules were sometimes violated, particularly in the case of Pompey, Val. Max. viii. 15. 8. Dio. xxxvii. 25.

There are instances of a triumph being celebrated without either the authority of the senate, or the order of the people, Liv. x. 37. Oros. v. 4. Cic. Cæl. 14. Suet. Tib. 2. Val. Max. v. 4. 6. and also when no war was carried on, Liv. xl. 38.

Those who were refused a triumph at Rome by public authority, sometimes celebrated it on the Alban mountain. This was first done by Papirius Naso, A. U. 522, Val. Max. iii. 6. 5. whom several afterwards imitated, Liv. xxvi. 21. xxxiii. 24. xlii. 21. xlv. 38.

As no person could enter the city while invested with military command, generals, on the day of their triumph, were, by a particular order of the people, freed from that restriction, (Ut iis, quo die urbem triumphantes invehentur, imperium esset,) Liv. xlv. 35.

The triumphal procession began from the Campus Martius, and went from thence along the Via Triumphalis, through the Campus and Circus Flaminius, to the Porta Triumphalis, and thence through the most public places of the city to the Capitol. The streets were strewed with flowers, and the altars smoked with incense, Ovid. Trist. iv. 2. 4.

First went musicians of various kinds, singing and playing triumphal songs; next were led the oxen to be sacrificed, having their horns gilt, and their heads adorned with fillets and garlands; then in carriages were brought the spoils taken from the enemy, statues, pictures, plate, armour, gold, silver, and brass; also golden crowns, and other gifts sent by the allied and tributary states, Liv. xxxiii. 24. xxxvii. 58. xxxix. 5. 7. xl. 43. xlv. 40. Virg. Æn. viii. 720. The titles of the vanquished nations were inscribed on wooden frames (in ferculis), Suet. Jul. 37. Cic. Off. i. 36. and the images or representations of the conquered countries, cities, &c. Liv. xxvi. 21. Quinctil. vi. 3. Plin. v. 5. Ovid. Pont. ii. 1. 37. iii. 4. 25. Art. Am. i. 220. Flor. iv. 2. The captive leaders followed in chains, with their children and attendants; after the captives, came the lictors, having their fascēs wreathed with laurel, followed by a great company of musicians and dancers dressed like satyrs, and wearing crowns of gold; in the midst of whom was a Pantomime, clothed in a female garb, whose business it was, with his looks and gestures, to insult the vanquished.—Next followed a long train of persons carrying perfumes, (suffimenta.)—Then came the general (DUX) dressed in purple embroidered with gold, (togâ pictâ et tunicâ palmatâ) with a crown of laurel on his head, Liv. ii. 47. x. 8. Dionys. v. 47. Plin. xv. 30. v. 39, a branch of laurel in his right hand, Plut. in Æmil. and in his left an ivory sceptre, with an eagle on the top, Juvenal. x. 43. having his face painted with vermilion, in like manner as the statue of Jupiter on festival days, Plin. xxxiii. 7. s. 36. and a golden ball (auræa bulla), hanging from his neck on his breast, with some amulet in it, or magical preservative against envy, Macrob. Sat. i. 6. standing in a gilded chariot, (stans in curru aurato), Liv. v. 23. adorned with ivory, Ovid. Pont. iii. 4. 35. Juvenal. viii. 3. and drawn by four white horses, Ovid. Art. i. 214. at least after the time of Camillus, Liv. v. 23. sometimes by elephants, Plin. viii. 2. at tended by his relations, Suet. Tib. 2. Domit. 2. Cic. Muran. 5. and a great crowd of citizens, all in white, Juvenal. x. 45. His children used to ride in the chariot along with him, Liv. xlv. 40. Appian. de Punic. and, that he might not be too much elated, (ne sibi placeret,) a slave, carrying a golden crown sparkling with gems, stood behind him, who frequently whispered in his ear, REMEMBER THAT THOU ART A MAN! Plin. xxxiii. l. s. 4. Juvenal. x. 41. Zonar. ii. Tertull. Apolog. 33. After the general, followed the consuls and senators on foot, at least according to the appointment of Augustus; for formerly they used to go before him. Dio. li. 21. His legati and military tribunes commonly rode by his side, Cic. Pis. 25.

The victorious army, horse and foot, came last, all in their order, crowned with laurel, and decorated with the gifts which they had received for their valour, singing their own and their general's praises, Liv. v. 49. xlv. 38. but sometimes throwing out railleries against him, Suet. Jul. 49. 51. Dionys. vii. 72. Martial. i. 5. 3. often exclaiming, IO TRIUMPHÉ, in which all the citizens, as they passed along, joined, Horat. Od. iv. 2. 49. Ovid. Trist. iv. 2. 51. Amor. i. 2. 34.

The general, when he began to turn his chariot from the Forum to the Capitol, ordered the captive kings and leaders of the enemy to be led to prison, and there to be slain, Cic. Verr. v. 30. Liv. xxvi. 13. Dio. xl. 41. xliii. 19. but not always, Appian. de Bell. Mithrid. 253. Liv. xlv. 41. 42. and when he reached the Capitol, he used to wait till he heard that these savage orders were executed, Joseph. de bell. Jud. vii. 24.

Then, after having offered up a prayer of thanksgiving to Jupiter and the other gods for his success, he commanded the victims to be sacrificed, which were always white, Ovid. ibid. from the river Clitumnus, Virg. G. ii. 146. and deposited his golden crown in the lap of Jupiter, (in gremio Jovis,) Senec. Helv. 10. to whom he dedicated part of the spoils, Plin. xv. 30. xxxv. 40. After which he gave a magnificent entertainment in the Capitol to his friends, and the chief men of the city. The consuls were invited, but were afterwards desired not to come, (ut venire supersederent,) that there might be no one at the feast superior to the triumphant general, Val. Max. ii. 8. 6. After supper, he was conducted home by the people, with music and a great number of lamps and torches, Dio. xliii. 22. Flor. ii. 2. Cic. Sen. 13. which sometimes also were used in the triumphal procession, Suet. Jul. 37.

The gold and silver were deposited in the treasury, Liv. x. 46. and a certain sum was annually given as a donative to the officers and soldiers, who were then disbanded, (exauctorati et dimissi,) Liv. xxviii. 9. xxx. 45. xxxvi. 40.—The triumphal procession sometimes took up more than one day; that of Paulus Æmilius, three, Plutarch.

When the victory was gained by sea, it was called a NAVAL TRIUMPH; which honour was first granted to Duilius, who defeated the Carthaginian fleet near Liparæ in the first Punic war, A. U. 493. Liv. Epit. 17. and a pillar erected to him in the Forum, called Co-

LUMNA ROSTRATA. Quinctil. i. 7. Sil. vi. 663. with an inscription, part of which still remains.

When a victory had been gained without difficulty, or the like, Gell. v. 6. an inferior kind of triumph was granted, called OVATIO, in which the general entered the city on foot or on horseback, Dio. liv. 8. crowned with myrtle, not with laurel, Plin. xv. 29. s. 38. and instead of bullocks, sacrificed a sheep, (ovem,) whence its name. Plut. in Marcell. Dionys. v. 47. viii. 9. Liv. iii. 10. xxvi. 21. xxxi. 20. xxxiii. 28. xli. 28.

After Augustus, the honour of a triumph was in a manner confined to the emperors themselves. Dio. lix. 19 & 23. and the generals who acted with delegated authority under their auspices, only received triumphal ornaments, a kind of honour devised by Augustus, Suet. Aug. 38. Tib. 9. Dio. liv. 24. 31. Hence L. Vitellius, having taken Terracina by storm, sent a laurel branch in token of it (lauream prosperę, gestę rei,) to his brother, Tacit. Hist. iii. 77. As the emperors were so great, that they might despise triumphs, Flor. iv. 12. 53. so that honour was thought above the lot of a private person; such therefore usually declined it, although offered to them; as Vinicius, Dio. liii. 26. Agrippa, Id. liv. 11 & 24. Plautius, Id. lx. 20. We read, however, of a triumph being granted to Belisarius the general of Justinian, for his victories in Africa, which he celebrated at Constantinople, and is the last instance of a triumph recorded in history, Procop. The last triumph celebrated at Rome was by Diocletian and Maximian, 20 Nov. A. D. 303. Eutrop. ix. 27. just before they resigned the empire, Id. 28.

VII. MILITARY PUNISHMENTS.

THESE were of various kinds, either lighter or more severe.

The lighter punishments, or such as were attended with inconvenience, loss, or disgrace, were chiefly these, 1. Deprivation of pay, either in whole or in part, (stipendio privari,) Liv. xl. 41. the punishment of those who were often absent from their standards (INFREQUENTES,) Plaut. Truc. ii. 1. 19. A soldier punished in this manner was called ÆRE DIRUTUS, Festus. Whence Cicero facetiously applies this name to a person deprived of his fortune at play, Verr. v. 13. or a bankrupt by any other means, Phil. xiii. 12.—2. Forfeiture of their spears, CENSIO HASTARIA, Festus.—3. Removal from their tent, (locum in quo tenderent mutare,) Liv. xxv. 6. sometimes to remain without the camp, and without tents, Liv. x. 4. or at a distance from the winter-quarters, Liv. xxvi. 1. Val. Max. ii. 7. 15.—4. Not to recline or sit at meals with the rest, (cibum stantes capere,) Liv. xxiv. 16.—5. To stand before the prætorium in a loose jacket, Suet. Aug. 24. Val. Max. ii. 7. 9. and the centurions without their girdle, (discincti,) Liv. xxvii. 13. or to dig in that dress, Plut. in Lucull.—6. To get an allowance of barley instead of wheat, (hordeo pasci,) Liv. ibid. Suet. Aug. 24.—7. Degradation of rank, (gradus dejectio;) an exchange into an inferior corps or less honourable service, (militiæ mutatio.) Val. Max. ibid.—8. To be removed from the camp, (a castris segregari), and employed in various works, Veget. iii. 4. an imposition of labour, munerum indictio, or dismissal with disgrace, (ignominiosè mitti.) Hirt. de bell. Afr. 54. vel EXAUCTORATIO, Plin. Ep. vi. 31. A. Gellius mentions a singular punishment, namely, of letting blood, (sanguinem mittendi.) x. 8. Sometimes a whole legion was deprived of its name, as that called AUGUSTA, Dio. liv. 11.

The more severe punishments were, 1. To be beaten with rods, (virgis caedi), or with a vine-sapling, (vite.) Val. Max. ii. 7. 4. Juvenal. viii. 247.—2. To be scourged and sold as a slave, Liv. Epit. 55.—3. To be beaten to death with sticks, called FUSTUARIUM, the bastinado, Liv. v. 6. Cic. Phil. iii. 6. Polyb. vi. 35. which was the usual punishment of theft, desertion, perjury, &c. When a soldier was to suffer this punishment, the tribune first struck him gently with a staff, on which signal all the soldiers of the legion fell upon him with sticks and stones, and generally killed him on the spot. If he made his escape, for he might fly, he could not however return to his native country, because no one, not even his relations, durst admit him into their houses, Polyb. ibid.—4. To be overwhelmed with stones (lapidibus cōoperiri), and hurdles, (sub crate necari.) Liv. i. 51. iv. 50.—5. To be beheaded, (securi percuti.) Liv. ii. 59. xxviii. 29. Epit. xv. sometimes crucified, Liv. xxx. 43. and to be left unburied, Val. Max. ii. 7. 15.—6. To be stabbed by the swords of the soldiers, Tacit. Annal. i. 44. and, under the emperors, to be exposed to wild beasts, or to be burnt alive, &c.

Punishments were inflicted by the legionary tribunes and præfects of the allies with their council; or by the general, from whom there was no appeal, Polyb. vi. 35.

When a number had been guilty of the same crime, as in the case of mutiny, every tenth man was chosen by lot for punishment, which was called DÉCIMATIO, Liv. ii. 59. Cic. Cluent. 46. Suet. Aug. 24. Galb. 12. Tacit. Hist. i. 37. Plutarch. in Crass. Dio. xli. 35. xlviii. 42. xlix. 27 & 38. or the most culpable were selected, Liv. xxviii. 29. Sometimes only the 20th man was punished, VICESIMATIO; or the 100th, CENTESIMATIO, Capitolin. in Macrin. 12.

VIII. MILITARY PAY and DISCHARGE.

THE Roman soldiers at first received no pay (stipendium) from the public. Every one served at his own charges.

Pay was first granted to the foot, A. U. 347, Liv. iv. 59. and three years after, during the siege of Veji, to the horse, Id. v. 7.

It was in the time of the republic very inconsiderable; two oboli, or three asses, (about 2½d. English,) a day to a foot soldier, the double to a centurion, and the triple to an EQUES, Polyb. vi. 37. Plaut. Most. ii. 1. 10. Liv. v. 12. Julius Cæsar doubled it, Suet. Jul. 26. Under Augustus, it was ten asses, (7½d.) Suet. Aug. 49. Tacit. Ann. i. 17. and Domitian increased it still more, by adding three gold pieces annually, Suet. Domit. 7. What was the pay of the tribunes, is uncertain; but it appears to have been considerable, Juvenal. iii. 132. The prætorian cohorts had double the pay of the common soldiers, Dio. liv. 25. Tacit. ib.

Besides pay, each soldier was furnished with clothes, and received a certain allowance (dimensum) of corn, commonly four bushels a month, the centurions double, and the equites triple, Polyb. vi. 37. But for these things a part of their pay was deducted, Tacit. Ann. i. 17. Polyb. ib.

The allies received the same quantity of corn, except that the horse only received double of the foot. The allies were clothed and paid by their own states, Polyb. ibid.

Anciently there were no cooks permitted in the Roman army. The soldiers dressed their own victuals. They took food twice a day, at dinner and supper. A signal was publicly given for both. The dinner was a slight meal, which they commonly took standing. They indulged themselves a little more at supper. The ordinary drink of soldiers, as of slaves, was water mixed with vinegar, called POSCA, Plaut. Mil. iii. 2. 23.

When the soldiers had served out their time, (stipendia legitima fecissent, vel meruissent), the foot twenty years, and the horse ten, they were called EMERITI, Lucan. i. 344. and obtained their discharge. This was called MISSIO HONESTA vel JUSTA. When a soldier was discharged for some defect or bad health, it was called Missio CAUSARIA; if, from the favour of the general, he was discharged before the just time, Missio GRATIOSA, Liv. xliii. 14. if on account of some fault, IGNOMINIOSA, Hirt. de bell. Afr. 54. D. de re milit. l. 13.

Augustus introduced a new kind of discharge, called EXAUCTORATIO, by which those who had served sixteen campaigns, were exempted from all military duty except fighting. They were, however, retained (tenebantur) in the army, not with the other soldiers under standards (sub signis et aquilis), but under a flag by themselves, (sub vexillo seorsim, Tacit. Annal. i. 36. whence they were called VEXILLARII or Veterani, sometimes all SUBSIGNANI, Tacit. Hist. i. 70.) till they should receive a full discharge, and the rewards of their service (præmia vel commoda militiæ), either in lands or money, or both, Suet. Aug. 49. Cat. 44. *Cic. IX. METHOD of ATTACKING and DEFENDING TOWNS.

THE Romans attacked (oppugnabant) places either by a sudden assault, or, if that failed, (si subito impetu expugnare non poterant), they tried to reduce them by a blockade, Cæs. B. G. vii. 36.

They first surrounded a town with troops (coronâ cingebant, vel circumdabant, Liv. vii. 27. xxiii. 44. xxiv. 2. mania exercitu circumvenerunt, Sallust. Jug. 57.) and by their missive weapons endeavoured to clear the walls of defendants (nudare muros defensoribus, vel propugnatoribus.) Then, joining their shields in the form of a testudo or tortoise, (testudine facta v. acta.) Liv. xlv. 9. Dio. xlix. 30. to secure themselves from the darts of the enemy, they came up to the gates, (succedere portis.) and tried either to undermine (subruere vel subfodere) the walls, or to scale them, Liv. x. 43. xxvi. 45. xxxiv. 39. xlv. 9. Cæs. B. G. ii. 6. Tacit. Hist. iii. 28. 31. Sallust. Jug. 94.

When a place could not be taken by storm, it was invested, Liv. ii. 11. Two lines of fortifications or intrenchments (ancipitia munimenta vel munitiones) were drawn around the place at some distance from one another, called the lines of contravallation and circumvallation; the one against the sallies of the townsmen, and the other against attacks from without, Liv. v. 1. xxxviii. 4.

These lines were composed of a ditch and a rampart, strengthened with a parapet and battlements, (lorica et pinnæ.) and sometimes a solid wall of considerable height and thickness flanked with towers and forts at proper distances round the whole.

At the foot of the parapet, or at its junction with the rampart, (ad commissuras pluteorum atque aggeris) there sometimes was a pallisade made of large stakes cut in the form of stags' horns; hence called CERVI, to prevent the ascent of the enemy. Before that, there were several rows of trunks of trees, or large branches sharpened at the ends (præacutis cacuminibus.) called CIPPI, fixed in trenches (fossæ) about five feet deep. In front of these were dug pits (scrobæ) of three feet deep, intersecting one another in the form of a quincunx, thus stuck thick with strong sharp stakes, and covered over with bushes to deceive the enemy, called LILIA. Before these, were placed up and down (omnibus locis disserebantur) sharp stakes, about a foot long, (TALEÆ.) fixed to the ground with iron hooks, called STIMULI. In front of all these, Cæsar, at Alesia, made a ditch twenty feet wide, 400 feet from the rampart, which was secured by two ditches, each fifteen feet broad, and as many deep; one of them filled with water. But this was merely a blockade, without any approaches or attacks on the city, Cæs. B. G. vii. 66. 67.

Between the lines were disposed the army of the besiegers, who were thus said, Urban obsidione claudere vel cingere, to invest.

The camp was pitched in a convenient situation to communicate with the lines.

From the inner line was raised a mount, (AGGER extruebatur*)

* The AGGER, or Mount, was employed in modern times, by the Russians; I think at the siege of Ocksakow.

composed of earth, wood, and hurdles, (CRATES,) and stone, which was gradually advanced (promovebatur) towards the town, always increasing in height, till it equalled or overtopped the walls. The mount which Cæsar raised against Avaricum or Bourges, was 330 feet broad, and 80 feet high, Cæs. B. G. vii. 23.

The Agger or mount was secured by towers consisting of different stories, (turres contabulatæ.) from which showers of darts and stones were discharged on the townsmen by means of engines, (tormenta.) called CATAPULTÆ, BALISTÆ,* and SCORPIONES, to defend the work and workmen, (opus et administros tutari.) Sallust. Jug. 76. Of these towers Cæsar is supposed to have erected 1561 on his lines around Alesia, Cæs. de Bell. G. vii. 72. The labour and industry of the Roman troops were as remarkable as their courage.

There were also moveable towers, (TURRES MOBILES vel AMBULATORIÆ,) which were pushed forward (admovebantur vel adigebantur) and brought back (reducebantur) on wheels, fixed below (rotis subjectis) on the inside of the planks, Cæs. B. G. ii. 31. v. 42. vii. 24. Hirt. de bell. Alex. 2. Liv. xxi. 11.†

To prevent them from being set on fire by the enemy, they were

* "The catapultæ and balistæ were intended for discharging darts, arrows, and stones. They were of different sizes, and consequently produced more or less effect. Some were used in battles, and might be called field-pieces: others were employed in sieges, which was the use most commonly made of them. The balistæ must have been the heaviest and most difficult to carry, because there was always a greater number of catapultæ in the armies. Livy, in his description of the siege of Carthage, says, that there were a hundred and twenty great, and more than two hundred small catapultæ taken, with thirty-three great balistæ, and fifty-two small ones. Josephus mentions the same difference amongst the Romans, who had three hundred catapultæ, and forty balistæ, at the siege of Jerusalem. These machines had a force which it is not easy to comprehend, but which all good authors attest. Vegetius says, that the balistæ discharged darts with so much rapidity and violence, that nothing could resist their force. Athenius tells us, that Agesistratus made one of little more than two feet in length, which shot darts almost five hundred paces. These machines were not unlike our cross-bows. There were others of much greater force, which threw stones of three hundred weight, upwards of a hundred and twenty-five paces. We find surprising effects of them in Josephus. The darts of the catapultæ, he tells us, destroyed abundance of people. The stones from the balistæ beat down the battlements, and broke the angles of the towers; nor was there any phalanx so deep, but one of these stones would sweep a whole file of it from one end to the other. Folard, in his Commentary upon Polybius, says, their force was very near equal to that of artillery." Duncan.—Ed.

† "The moving towers were made of an assemblage of beams and strong planks, not unlike a house. To secure them against the fires thrown by the besieged, they were covered with raw hides, or with pieces of cloth made of hair. Their height was in proportion to their base. They were sometimes thirty feet square, and sometimes forty or fifty. They were higher than the walls or even towers of the city. They were supported upon several wheels according to mechanic principles, by the means of which the machine was easily made to move, how great soever it might be. The town was in great danger, if this tower could approach the walls; for it had stairs from one story to another, and included different methods of attack. At bottom it had a ram to batter the wall, and on the middle story a draw-bridge, made of two beams with rails of basket work, which let down easily upon the wall of the city when within reach of it. The besiegers passed upon this bridge to make themselves masters of the wall. Upon the higher stories were soldiers armed with partizans, and missive weapons, who kept a perpetual discharge upon the works. When affairs were in this posture, a place seldom held out long." Duncan.—Ed.

covered with raw hides (coria) and pieces of coarse cloth and mattresses, (centones vel cilicia.) Cæs. de bell. Civ. ii. 10. They were of an immense bulk, sometimes thirty, forty, or fifty foot square, and higher than the walls, or even than the towers of the city. When they could be brought up to the walls, a place was seldom able to stand out long, Liv. xxi. 11. 14. xxxii. 17. xxxiii. 17.

But the most dreadful machine of all was the battering ram, (ARIES.) a long beam, like the mast of a ship, and armed at one end with iron in the form of a ram's head; whence it had its name.* Veget. iv. 14. Liv. xxi. 12. xxx. 32. 46. xxxii. 23. xxxviii. 5. Joseph. de bell. Jud. iii. 9.

The ram was covered with sheds or mantlets, called VINEÆ, machines constructed of wood and hurdles, and covered with earth or raw hides, or any materials, which could not easily be set on fire. They were pushed forwards by wheels below, (rotis subjectis agebantur vel impellebantur.) Sallust. Jug. 76. Under them, the besiegers either worked the ram, or tried to undermine the walls, Liv. ii. 17. v. 7. x. 34. xxi. 7. 61. xxiii. 18.

Similar to the Vineæ in form and use were the TESTUDINES; so called, because those under them were safe as a tortoise under its shell, Liv. v. 5. Cæs. B. G. v. 41. 50. de bell. Civ. ii. 2. 14.†

* "The ram was composed of a large long beam, armed at one end with iron in the form of a ram's head, and of the same bigness with the beam. This piece of wood was suspended by chains in æquilibrium, in order to be set in motion with the greater ease. A hundred men, more or less, worked it by main strength, to strike it against a wall or rampart, in order to beat them down after having shaken them by repeated blows. Care was taken to clothe this beam with wet leather, to prevent its being set on fire. It was slung under a kind of moving tortoise or gallery, which covered more than half of it, in order to shelter those who worked the ram from the stones and darts of the besieged. The effects of this machine were prodigious. As it was one of those that did most hurt, many methods were contrived to render it useless. Fire was darted upon the roof that covered, and the timber that supported it, in order to burn them with the ram. To deaden its blows, sacks of wool were let down against the place at which it was levelled. A machine was also made use of against it, called the wolf, by way of opposition to the ram, with which they endeavoured to grapple it, in order to draw it to themselves, or break it." Duncan.—Ed.

† "The tortoise was a machine composed of very strong and solid timber work. The height of it, to the uppermost beam, which sustained the roof, was twelve feet. The base was square, and each of its fronts twenty-five feet. It was covered with a kind of quilted mattress made of raw hides, and prepared with different drugs, to prevent its being set on fire by combustibles. This heavy machine was supported upon four wheels, and had the name of tortoise from its serving as a very strong covering and defence, against the enormous weight thrown down on it: those under it being safe in the same manner as a tortoise under her shell. It was used both to fill up the ditch, and for sapping. For the filling up of the ditch, it was necessary to join several of them together in a line, and very near one another. Diodorus Siculus, speaking of the siege of Halicarnassus by Alexander the Great, says, that he first caused three tortoises to approach, in order to fill up the ditch, and that afterwards he planted his rams upon the space filled up, to batter the wall. This machine is often mentioned by authors. There were, without doubt, tortoises of different forms and sizes. Some indeed are of opinion, that because of its enormous weight, it could not be moved from place to place on wheels, but was pushed forwards on rollers. Under these rollers the way was laid with strong planks, to facilitate its motion, and prevent its sinking into the ground, from whence it would have been very difficult to have removed it. The ancients have observed, that the roof had a thicker covering of hides, hurdles, sea weed, &c. than the sides, as it was exposed to much greater shocks from the weight thrown upon it by the besieged. It had a

Of the same kind were the PLUTEI, Liv. xxi. 61. xxxiv. 17. Cæs. passim. the MUSCULUS, ibid. &c.

These mantlets or sheds were used to cover the men in filling up the ditches, and for various other purposes, Cæs. B. G. vii. 58.

When the nature of the ground would permit these machines to be erected or brought forward to the walls, the besiegers sometimes drove a mine (CUNICULUM agebant) into the heart of the city, Liv. v. 19. 21. or in this manner intercepted the springs of water, Hirt. de Bell. Gall. viii. 41. 43.

When they only wished to sap the foundation of the walls, they supported the part to be thrown down with wooden props, which being consumed with fire, the wall fell to the ground.

In the mean time the besieged, to frustrate the attempts of the besiegers, met their mines* with countermines, (transversis cuniculis hostium cuniculos excipere,) Liv. xxiii. 18. which sometimes occasioned dreadful conflicts below ground, xxxviii. 7. The great object was to prevent them from approaching the walls (apertos, sc. ab hostibus vel Romanis, cuniculos morabantur, mœnibusque appropinquare prohibebant,) Cæs. B. G. vii. 22.

The besieged also, by means of mines, endeavoured to frustrate or overturn the works of the enemy, Cæs. B. G. iii. 21. vii. 22. They withdrew the earth from the mount, (terram ad se introrsus subtrahebant,) or destroyed the works by fires below, in the same manner as the besiegers overturned the walls, Cæs. ibid. Joseph. de Bell. Jud. iii. 12.

When they apprehended a breach would be made, they reared new walls behind, with a deep ditch before them. They employed various methods to weaken or elude the force of the ram, and to defend themselves against the engines and darts of the besiegers, Liv. xlii. 63. But these and every thing else belonging to this subject, will be best understood by reading the accounts preserved to us of ancient sieges, particularly of Syracuse by Marcellus, Liv. xxiv. 33. of Ambracia by Fulvius, Id. xxxviii. 4. of Alesia by Julius Cæsar, de Bell. Gall. vii. of Marseilles by his lieutenants, Cæs. B. Civ. ii. and of Jerusalem, by Titus Vespasian, Joseph. de Bell. Jud.

When the Romans besieged a town, and thought themselves sure of taking it, they used solemnly (certo carmine) to call out of it (EVOCARE) the gods, under whose protection the place was supposed to be, Liv. vi. 21.† Hence when Troy was taken, the gods are said door in front, which was drawn up by a chain as far as was necessary, and covered the soldiers at work in filling up the ditch." Duncan.—Ed.

* Mining and countermining have been often used in modern times, especially in Flanders and the Low Countries.

† The form of the Evocation was nearly as follows:—"If there be to Carthage a protecting god or goddess, I pray and beseech ye great gods, who have taken into your care this city, to abandon these habitations, these temples, and these sacred places; to forget them, to fill them with terror, and to withdraw to Rome and to our people. May our dwellings, our temples, and our sacred offerings find favour before you. Let it appear that you are my protectors, the protectors of the Roman people and of my soldiers. If you do this, I pledge myself to found temples, and to institute games in your honour." Ed.

NAVAL AFFAIRS OF THE ROMANS.

NAVIGATION at first was very rude, and the construction of vessels extremely simple. The most ancient nations used boats made of trunks of trees hollowed (ex singulis arboribus cavatis), Virg. G. 126. 262. Plin. xvi. 41. Liv. xxvi. 26. called ALVEI, LINTRES, SCAPHÆ vel MONOXyla, Paterc. ii. 107. Ovid. Fast. ii. 407. Liv. i. 4. xxv. 3. Plin. vi. 23. Strab. iii. 155. or composed of beams and planks fastened together with cords or wooden pins called RATES, Festus; or of reeds, called CANNÆ, Juvenal. v. 89. or partly of slender planks (carinæ ac statumina, the keels and ribs, ex levi materia), and partly of wicker hurdles or basket work, (reliquum corpus navium viminibus contextum), and covered with hides, as those of the ancient Britons, Cæs. B. G. i. 54. Lucan. iv. 131. and other nations, Herodot. i. 194. Dio. xlviii. 18. hence called NAVIGIA VITILIA corio circumscuta, Plin. iv. 16. vii. 56. and naves sutiles, xxiv. 9. s. 40. in allusion to which, Virgil calls the boats of Charon Cymba sutilis, Æn. vi. 414. somewhat similar to the Indian canoes, which are made of the bark of trees; or to the boats of the Icelanders and Esquimaux Indians, which are made of long poles, placed crosswise, tied together with whale sinews, and covered with the skins of sea dogs, sewed with sinews instead of thread.

The Phœnicians, or the inhabitants of Tyre and Sidon, are said to have been the first inventors of the art of sailing, as of letters and astronomy, Plin. v. 12. For Jason, to whom the poets ascribe it, Ovid. Met. vi. vers. ult. et Amor. ii. 11. 1. Lucan. iii. 194. and the Argonauts, who first sailed under Jason from Greece to Colchis in the ship Argo, in quest of the golden fleece, that is, of commerce, flourished long after the Phœnicians were a powerful nation. But whatever be in this, navigation certainly received from them its chief improvements.

The invention of sails is by some ascribed to Æolus, the god of the winds, Diodor. v. 7. and by others to Dædalus; whence he is said to have flown like a bird through the air, Virg. Æn. vi. 15.—They seem to have been first made of skins, which the Venëti, the people of Vienne in Gaul, used even in the time of Cæsar, B. G. iii. 13. afterwards of flax or hemp; whence lintea and carbasa, (sing. -us,) are put for vela, sails. Sometimes cloths spread out were used for sails, Tacit. Annal. ii. 24. Hist. v. 23. Juvenal. xii. 66.

It was long before the Romans paid any attention to naval affairs. They at first had nothing but boats made of thick planks (ex tabulis crassioribus, Festus.) such as they used on the Tiber, called NAVES

CAUDICARIÆ; whence Appius Claudius, who first persuaded them to fit out a fleet, A. U. 489. got the surname of CAUDEX, Senec. de brev. vita, 13. Varr. de Vit. Rom. 11. They are said to have taken the model of their first ship of war from a vessel of the Carthaginians, which happened to be stranded on their coasts, and to have exercised their men on land to the management of ships, Polyb. i. 20 & 21. But this can hardly be reconciled with what Polybius says in other places, nor with what we find in Livy about the equipment and operations of a Roman fleet, Liv. ix. 30. 38. Their first ships of war were probably built from the model of those of Antium, which, after the reduction of that city, were brought to Rome, A. U. 417. Liv. viii. 14. It was not, however, till the first Punic war that they made any figure by sea.*

Ships of war were called NAVES LONGÆ, because they were of a longer shape than ships of burden, (naves ONERARIÆ. ἰσχυρῆς, whence hulks; or barcæ, barks, Isidor. xix. 1.) which were more round and deep, Cæs. B. G. iv. 20. v. 7. The ships of war were moved chiefly by oars, the ships of burden by sails, Cæs. B. G. iv. 25. Cic. Fam. xii. 15. and as they were more heavy (*graviore*s), and sailed more slowly, they were sometimes towed (remulco tracta) after the war ships, Liv. xxxii. 16.

Their ships of war were variously named from their rows or ranks of oars (ab ordinibus remorum). Those which had two rows or tiers were called Birēmes, (Dicrota, Cic. Att. v. 11. xvi. 4. vel Dicrota, Hirt. B. Alex. 47.) three, trirēmes; four, quadriremes; five, quinqueremes vel penteres.

The Romans scarcely had any ships of more than five banks of oars; and therefore those of six or seven banks are called by a Greek name, Hexētes, Hepteres, Liv. xxxvii. 23. and above that by a circumlocution, naves, octo, novem, decem ordinum, vel versuum, Flor. iv. 11. Thus Livy calls a ship of sixteen rows, (ἑκκαίδεκάτης, Polyb.) navis ingentis magnitudinis, quam sexdecim versus remorum agebant, Liv. xlv. 34. This enormous ship, however, sailed up the Tiber to Rome, Ibid.—The ships of Antony, (which Florus says resembled floating castles and towns, iv. 11. 4. Virgil, floating islands or mountains, Æn. viii. 691. So Dio. l. 33.) had only from six to nine banks of oars, Flor. iv. 4. Dio says from four to ten rows, l. 23.

There are various opinions about the manner in which the rowers sat. That most generally received is, that they were placed above one another in different stages or benches (in transiris vel jugis) on one side of the ship, not in a perpendicular line, but in the form of a quincunx. The oars of the lowest bench were short, and those of the other benches increased in length, in proportion to their height above the water. This opinion is confirmed by several passages in the classics, Virg. Æn. v. 119. Lucan. iii. 536. Sil. Italic. xiv. 424. and by the representations which remain of ancient galleys, particularly that on Trajan's pillar at Rome. It is, however, attended with difficulties not easily reconciled.*

There were three different classes of rowers, whom the Greeks called Thranitæ, Zeugitæ, or Zeugioi, and Thalamitæ, or -ioi, from the different parts of the ship in which they were placed. The first sat in the highest part of the ship, next the stern; the second, in the middle; and the last in the lowest part, next the prow.—Some think that there were as many oars belonging to each of these classes of rowers, as the ship was said to have ranks or banks of oars; others, that there were as many rowers to each oar, as the ship is said to have banks; and some reckon the number of banks by that of oars on each side. In this manner they remove the difficulty of supposing eight or ten banks of oars above one another, and even forty; for a ship is said by Plutarch and Athenæus, to have been built by Ptolemy Philopator which had that number: So Plin. vii. 56. But these opinions are involved in still more inextricable difficulties.

Ships contrived for lightness and expedition (naves ACTUARÆ) had but one rank of oars on each side, (simplice ordine agebantur, μονοεις, Tacit. Hist. v. 23.) or at most two, Cæs. B. G. v. 1. Lucan. iii. 534. They were of different kinds, and called by various names; as, Celôces, i. e. naves celeres vel cursoriæ, Lembi, Phasêli, Myoparônes, &c. Cic. et Liv. But the most remarkable of these were the naves LIBURNÆ, Horat. Epod. i. 1. a kind of light galleys, used by the Liburni, a people of Dalmatia addicted to piracy. To ships of this kind Augustus was in a great measure indebted for his victory over Antony at Actium, Dio. l. 29. 32. Hence, after that time, the name of naves LIBURNÆ was given to all light quick-sailing vessels, and few ships were built but of that construction, Veget. iv. 33.

Ships were also denominated from the country to which they belonged, Cæs. B. G. iii. 5. Cic. Ferr. v. 33. and the various uses to which they were applied; as, NAVES MERCATORIÆ, frumentaria, vinaria, olearia; PISCATORIÆ, Liv. xxiii. 1. vel lenunculi, fishing-boats, Cæs. B. C. ii. 39. SPECULATORIÆ et exploratoriæ, spy-boats, Liv. xxx. 10. xxxvi. 42. PIRATICÆ vel predatoriæ, Id. xxxiv. 32. 36. HYPPAGOGÆ vel Hyppagines, for carrying horses and their riders, Liv. xlii. 28. Gell. x. 25. Festus. TABELLARIÆ, message-boats, Senec. Epist. 77. Plaut. Mil. Glor. iv. 1. 39. VECTORIÆ GRAVESQUE, transports and ships of burden; Annotina privataque, built that or the former year for private use: some read annonaria, i. e. for carrying provisions, Cæs. B. G. v. 7. Each ship had its long-boat joined to it, (cymbula onerariis adhærescebant), Plin. Ep. 8. 20.

A large Asiatic ship among the Greeks was called CERCURUS, Plaut. Merc. i. 1. 86. Stich. ii. 2. 84. iii. 1. 12. it is supposed from the island of Corcyra; but Pliny ascribes the invention of it to the Cyprians, vii. 56.

* The late British Gen. Stewart, in a publication on this subject, has endeavoured to show the form and management of the Roman ships; and by comparing the representation on Trajan's pillar with the descriptions to be found in the classics, has cleared up many of these difficulties. According to him, the sides of their vessels formed an angle of 45 degrees with the surface of the water, Zeugitæ.

Galleys kept by princes and great men for amusement, were called by various names ; Triremes ceretæ vel æratæ, lusoriæ et cubiculatæ vel thalamægi, pleasure-boats or barges, Senec. de ben. vii. 20. Suet. Cæs. 52. privæ, i. e. propriæ et non meritoria, one's own, not hired, Horat. Ep. i. 1. 92. sometimes of immense size, Deceres vel decemremes, Suet. Cal. 37.

Each ship had a name peculiar to itself inscribed or painted on its prow : thus, PRISTIS, SCYLLA, CENTAURUS, &c. Virg. Æn. v. 116. &c. called PARASEMON, its sign, Herodot. viii. 89. Liv. xxxvii. 29. or INSIGNE, Tacit. Ann. vi. 34. as its tutelary god (tutela vel tutelare numen) was on its stern, Ovid. Trist. i. el. 3. v. 110. et el. 9. v. 1. Herod. xvi. 112. Pers. vi. 30. Sil. Ital. xiv. 411. 439. whence that part of the ship was called TUTELA or Cautela, and held sacred by the mariners, Lucan. iii. 501. Senec. Epist. 76. Petron. c. 105. There supplications and treaties were made, Liv. xxx. 36. Sil. Ital. xiii. 76.

In some ships, the tutela and καρσινυον were the same, Sero. ad Virgil. Æn. v. 116. Act. Apost. xxviii. 11.

Ships of burden used to have a basket suspended to the top of their mast as their sign, (pro signo), hence they were called CORBITÆ, Festus. Cic. Att. xvi. 6. Plaut. Pæn. iii. 1. 4 & 40.

There was an ornament in the stern and sometimes on the prow, made of wood like the tail of a fish, called APLUSTRE, vel plur. -ia, from which was erected a staff or pole with a riband or streamer (fascia vel læmia) on the top, Juvenal. x. 136. Lucan. iii. 671.

The ship of the commander of a fleet (navis prætoria) was distinguished by a red flag, (vexillum vel velum purpureum,) Tacit. Hist. v. 22. Plin. xix. 1. Cæs. B. C. ii. 6. and by a light, Flor. iv. 8. Virg. Æn. ii. 256.

The chief parts of a ship and its appendages were, CARINA, the keel or bottom ; Statumina, the ribs, or pieces of timber which strengthened the sides ; PRORA, the prow, or fore-part ; and PUPPIS, the stern or hind-part ; ALVEUS, the belly or hold of the ship ; SENTINA, the pump, Cæs. B. C. iii. 25. or rather the bilge or bottom of the hold, where the water, which leaked into the ship, remained till it was pumped out ; (donec per ANTLIAM exhauriretur.) Cic. Fam. ix. 13. Sen. 6. Martial. ix. 19. 4. Suet. Tib. 51. or the bilge-water itself, Juvenal. vi. 99. properly called NAUTEA, Plaut. Asin. v. 2. 44. Nonius. l. 25. In order to keep out the water, ships were besmeared with wax and pitch ; hence called CERATÆ, Ovid. Her. v. 42.

On the sides (latera) were holes (foramina) for the oars, (REMI, called also by the poets tonæ ; the broad part or end of them, palmæ, vel palmula ;) and seats (sedilia vel transtra) for the rowers, (BENIGES.)

Each oar was tied to a piece of wood, (paxillus vel lignum teres.) called SCALMUS, by thongs or strings, called STROPPI vel struppi, Isid. xix. 4. hence scalmus is put for a boat, Cic. Off. iii. 14. Navicula duorum scalmorum, a boat of two oars, Cic. Orat. ii. 34. Actu- aria, sc. navis, decem scalmis, Id. Att. xvi. 3. Quatuor scalmorum navis, Vell. ii. 43. The place where the oars were put when the rowers were done working, was called CASTERIA, Plaut. Asin. iii. 1. 16.

On the stern was the rudder, (GUBERNACULUM vel clavus), and the pilot, (gubernator) who directed it.

Some ships had two rudders, one on each end, and two prows, so that they might be moved either way without turning, Tacit. Annal. iii. 6. much used by the Germans, Id. de Mor. G. 44. and on the Pontus Euxinus, or Black Sea, called CAMARÆ, Strab. xi. 496; because in a swelling sea they were covered with boards, like the vaulted roof of a house, (camera), Tacit. Hist. iii. 47. Gell. x. 25. hence Camaritæ, the name of a people bordering on the Black Sea, Eustath. ad Dionys. 700.

On the middle of the ship was erected the mast (MALUS), which was raised, (attollebatur vel erigebatur), Cic. Verr. v. 34. when the ship left the harbour, and taken down (inclinabatur vel ponebatur), when it approached the land, Virg. Æn. v. 829. Lucan. iii. 45. the place where it stood was called MODIUS, Id. xix. 2. The ships of the ancients had only one mast.

On the mast were fixed the sail-yards, (ANTENNÆ vel brachia), and the sails (VELA) fastened by ropes (funes vel rudentes.) Immittere rudentes, to loosen all the cordage; pandere vela, to spread the sails, Plin. Ep. viii. 4.

The sails were usually white, as being thought more lucky, Ovid. Her. ii. 11. Catull. lxiv. 225. &c. sometimes coloured, Plin. xix. i. a. 5.

The ends of the sail-yards were called CORNUA; from which were suspended two ropes called PEDES, braces, by pulling which towards the stern, the sails were turned to the right or left. If the wind blew obliquely from the left, they pulled the rope on the right, and so on the contrary: hence facere pedem, to trim or adjust the sails, Virg. Æn. v. 830. Obliquat lævo pede carbasa, turns the sails so as to catch the wind blowing from the right, Lucan. v. 428. so obliquat sinus in ventum, Virg. Æn. v. 16. Currere utroque pede, to sail with a wind right astern, or blowing directly from behind, Catull. iv. 21. In contrarium navigare prolati pedibus, by tacking, Plin. ii. 57. s. 48. Intendere brachia velis, i. e. vela brachii, to stretch the sails, or to haul them out to the yard-arms, Virg. Æn. v. 829. Dare vela ventis, to set sail, Virg. Æn. iv. 546. So Vela facere, Cic. Verr. v. 34. or to make way, Virg. Æn. v. 281. Subducere vela, to lower the sails, Sil. vi. 325. Ministrare velis, vel -a, i. e. attendere, to manage, by drawing in and letting out the opposite braces, (adducendo et remittendo vel proferendo pedes), Virg. Æn. vi. 302. x. 218. Velis remis, sc. et; i. e. summa vi, manibus pedibusque, omnibus nervis, with might and main, Cic. ad Q. Fratr. ii. 14. Tusc. iii. 11. Off. iii. 33. but in the last passage the best copies have viris equisque; as, Phil. viii. 7. So remigio veloque, Plaut. Asin. 1. 3. 5. who puts navales pedes for remiges et nauta, Men. ii. 2. ult.

The top-sails were called SUPPARA velorum, Lucan. v. 429. or any appendage to the main-sail, Stat. Silv. ii. 2. 27. Senec. ep. 77.

Carina, puppis, and even trabs, a beam, are often put by the poets for the whole ship; but never velum, as we use sail for one ship or many; thus, a sail, an hundred sail.

The rigging and tackling of a ship, its sails, sail-yards, oars, ropes, &c. were called ARMAMENTA, Plaut. Merc. i. 62. Hence arma is put for the sails, colligere arma jubet, i. e. vela contrahere, Virg. Æn. v. 15. and for the rudder, spoliata armis, i. e. clavo, vi. 353.

Ships of war (naves longæ vel bellicæ), and these only, had their prows armed with a sharp beak, (ROSTRUM, oftener plur. ROSTRA.) Cæs. B. G. iii. 13. Sil. Ital. xiv. 480. which usually had three teeth or points, Virg. Æn. v. 142. viii. 690. whence these ships were called ROSTRATÆ, and because the beak was covered with brass, ÆRATÆ, Cæs. B. C. ii. 3. Horat. Od. ii. 16. 21. Plin. xxxii. 1.

Ships when about to engage, had towers erected on them, whence stones and missive weapons were discharged from engines, Cæs. B. G. iii. Flor. iv. 11. Plin. xxxii. 1. Plutarch. in Ant. called PRO-PUGNACULA, Flor. ii. 2. Horat. Epod. i. 2. hence turritæ puppes, Virg. Æn. viii. 693. Agrippa invented a kind of towers which were suddenly raised, Serv. in Virg. Towers used also to be erected on ships in sieges, and at other times, Liv. xxiv. 34. Tacit. Ann. xv. 9. Sil. Ital. xiv. 418.

Some ships of war were all covered (tectæ vel constrictæ, καραυακται; quæ καραυακται, tabulata vel constricta habebant, decks); others covered, (apertæ ἀπαυακται, v. -a,) Cic. Att. v. 11. 12. vi. 8 & 12. except at the prow and stern, where those who fought, stood, Liv. xxx. 43. xxxvi. 42. Cæs. passim. Cic. Verr. v. 34.

The planks or platforms (tabulata) on which the mariners sat or passed from one part of the ship to another, were called FORI, gangways, (ab eo quod incessus ferant.) Serv. ad Virg. Æn. iv. 605. vi. 412. Cic. Sen. 6, and the helps to mount on board, PONTES vel SCALÆ (κρίβαδραι vel κλίμακται), Virg. Æn. x. 288. 654. 658. Stat. Silv. iii. 2. 55. Some take fori for the deck, (STEGA, æ, Plaut. Bacch. ii. 3. 44. Stich. iii. 1. 12.) others for the seats. It is at least certain, they were both in the top of the ship, and below, Sil. xiv. 425. Lucan. iii. 630. We also find forus, sing. Gell. xvi. 19.

The anchor, (ANCHORA,) which moored or fastened (fundabat vel alligabat) the ships, was at first of stone, sometimes of wood filled with lead, but afterwards of iron. It was thrown (jaciebatur) from the prow, Virg. Æn. vi. ult. by a cable, and fixed in the ground, while the ship stood (or, as we say, rode) at anchor, (ad anchoram vel in anchorâ stabat;) Cæs. B. G. v. 10. and raised, (tollebatur vel vellebatur.) when it sailed, Id. iv. 23. sometimes the cable (anchore vel anchora) was cut, (præcidebatur.) Liv. xxii. 19. Cic. Verr. v. 34. The Veneti used iron chains instead of ropes, Cæs. B. G. iii. 13.

The plummet for sounding depths (ad altitudinem maris explorandam) was called BOLIS or Catapirates, Isid. xix. 4. or MOLYBDIS, -idis, as Gronovius reads, Stat. Silv. iii. 2. 30.

The ropes by which a ship was tied to land, were called RETINACULA, Virg. Æn. iv. 580. or ORÆ, Liv. xxii. 19. xxviii. 36. or simply FUNES, Virg. Æn. iii. 639. 667. Hence Oram solvere, to set sail, Quinctil. Ep. ad Tryph. & iv. 2. 41.

The ancients had ropes for girding a ship in a storm, Horat. Od. i. 14. Act. Apost. xxvii. 17. which are still used. They had also long poles, (conti, perticæ, sudes vel trudes,) to push it off rocks and shoals, Virg. Æn. v. 208.

Sand, or whatever was put in a ship to keep it steady, was called SABURRA, ballast, Liv. xxxvii. 14. Virg. G. iv. 195.

Ships were built (ædificabantur) of fir, (abies,) Virg. G. ii. 68; of alder, (alnus, Lucan. iii. 440: whence alni, ships, ib. ii. 427;) of cedar, pine, and cypress, Veget. iv. 34. by the Veneti of oak, (ex robore;) Cæs. B. G. iii. 13. sometimes of green wood; so that a number of ships were put on the stocks, (positæ,) completely equipped and launched, (instructæ v. ornata armataque in aquam deductæ sint,) in forty-five days after the timber was cut down in the forest; Liv. xxviii. 45. by Cæsar, at Arles, against the people of Marseilles, in thirty days, de Bell. Civ. i. 34. See Plin. xvi. 39. s. 74.

There was a place at Rome beyond the Tiber, where ships lay and were built, called NAVALIA, plur. -ium, the dock, Liv. iii. 26. viii. 14. xl. 51.

As the Romans quickly built fleets, they as speedily manned them. Freedmen and slaves were employed as mariners or rowers, (navata vel remiges,) who were also called SOCII NAVALES, Liv. xxi. 49. 50. xxii. 11. xxvi. 17. and CLASSICI, xxvi. 48. Curt. iv. 3. 18. The citizens and allies were obliged to furnish a certain number of these, according to their fortune, and sometimes to supply them with provisions and pay for a limited time, Liv. xxiv. 11. xxvi. 35.

The legionary soldiers at first used to fight at sea as well as on land. But when the Romans came to have regular and constant fleets, there was a separate kind of soldiers raised for the marine service, (milites in classem scripti,) Liv. xxii. 57. who were called CLASSIARI, or EPIBATE, Cæs. passim. Suet. Galb. 12. Tacit. Annal. xv. 51; but this service was reckoned less honourable than that of the legionary soldiers, Suet. ibid. Liv. xxxii. 23. Tacit. Hist. i. 87. sometimes performed by manumitted slaves, Suet. Aug. 16. The rowers also were occasionally armed, Liv. xxvi. 48. xxxvii. 16.

The allies and conquered states were in after times bound to furnish a certain number of ships completely equipped and manned, Cic. Verr. v. 17. &c. Liv. xxxvi. 43. xlii. 48. Some provided only stores, arms, tackling, and men, xxviii. 45.

Augustus stationed a fleet on the Tuscan sea at Misenum, where Agrippa made a fine harbour called PORTUS JULIUS, Suet. Aug. 16. by joining the Lucrine lake, and the lacus Avernus to the bay of Bajæ, (sinus Bajanus, Suet. Ner. 27. vel lacus Bajanus, Tacit. Ann. xiv. 4.) Dio. xlvi. 50. Virg. G. ii. 163; and another on the Adriatic at Ravenna, Suet. Aug. 49. Tacit. Ann. iv. 5. Veget. iv. 31; and in other parts of the empire, Tacit. Hist. i. 58. ii. 83. iv. 79.

also on rivers, as the Rhine and Danube, Tacit. Annal. xii. 30. Flor. iv. 12. 26.

The admiral of the whole fleet was called DUX PRÆFECTUSQUE CLASSIS, Cic. Verr. v. 34. and his ship, NAVIS PRÆTORIA, Liv. xxix. 25 which in the night-time had, as a sign, (signum nocturnum), three lights, Ibid.

At first the consuls and prætors used to command the fleets of the republic, or some one under them: as Lælius under Scipio, Liv. xxvii. 42. xxix. 25.

The commanders of each ship were called NAVARCHI, Cic. Verr. iii. 80. v. 24. or TRIERARCHI, i. e. præfecti triëris vel triremis navis, Cic. Verr. i. 20. Tacit. Hist. ii. 9. Suet. Ner. 34. or MAGISTRI NAVIUM, Liv. xxix. 25. The master or proprietor of a trading vessel, NAUCLERUS, Plaut. Mil. iv. 3. 16. NAVICULATOR, vel -ARIUS; Cic. Fam. xvi. 9. Att. ix. 3. Verr. ii. 55. Manil. 5. who, when he did not go to sea himself, but employed another to navigate his ship, was said Naviculariam sc. rem facere, Cic. Verr. v. 18.

The person who steered the ship and directed its course was called GUBERNATOR, the pilot, sometimes also MAGISTER, Virg. Æn. v. 176. Sil. iv. 719; or RECTOR, Lucan. viii. 167. Virg. Æn. iii. 161. and 176. He sat at the helm, Cic. Sen. 6. on the top of the stern, dressed in a particular manner, Plaut. Mil. iv. 4. 41. 45. and gave orders about spreading and contracting the sails, (expandere vel contrahere vela), plying or checking the oars, (incumbere remis vel eos inhibere), &c. Virg. v. 12. x. 278. Cic. Orat. i. 33. Att. xiii. 21.

It was his part to know the signs of the weather, to be acquainted with ports and places, and particularly to observe the winds and the stars; Ovid. Met. iii. 592. Lucan. viii. 172. Virg. Æn. iii. 201. 269. 513. For as the ancients knew not the use of the compass,* they were directed in their voyages chiefly by the stars in the night-time, Horat. Od. ii. 16. 3. and in the day-time by coasts and islands which they knew. In the Mediterranean, to which navigation was then chiefly confined, they could not be long out of the sight of land. When overtaken by a storm, the usual method was to drive their ships on shore, (in terram agere vel ejicere), and when the danger was over; to set them afloat again by the strength of arms and levers. In the ocean, they only cruised along the coast.

* The invention of the compass is usually ascribed to Flavio of Amalfi, or Flavio Gioia, a Neapolitan, about the year 1302; and hence it is, that the territory of Principato (in the kingdom of Naples), where he was born, has a compass for its arms. Others say, that Marcus Paulius, a Venetian, who made a journey to China, brought back the invention with him in 1260. What confirms this conjecture is, that at first they used the compass as the Chinese still do; i. e. they let it float on a little piece of cork, instead of suspending it on a pivot. But the Chinese only divide their compass into 24 points, whereas the Europeans make 32 divisions.

Fouchette relates some verses of Guoyot de Provence, who lived in France about the year 1200, which seemed to make mention of the compass, under the name of marinette, or mariner's-stone; which show it to have been used in France near a hundred years before the Melphite or Venetian.

The French also lay claim to the invention from the Flour de Lys, wherewith all nations still distinguish the North point of the card.

In some ships there were two pilots, Ælian. ix. 40. who had an assistant called PRORETA, Plaut. Rud. iv. 3. 75. i. e. Custos et tutela prora, who watched at the prow, Ovid. Met. iii. 617.

He who had command over the rowers was called HORTATOR and PAUSARIUS, (καλοεργς), Plaut. Merc. iv. 2. 4. Senec. Epist. 56. Ovid. ibid. or PORTISCVLUS, Plaut. Asin. iii. 1. 15. Festus; which was also the name of the staff or mallet with which he excited or retarded them, (celeusmata vel hortamenta dabat), Plaut. Asin. iii. 1. 15. Isid. Orig. xix. 12. He did this also with his voice in a musical tone, that the rowers might keep time in their motions; Serv. ad Virg. Æn. iii. 128. Sil. v. 360. Valer. Flacc. i. 470. Martial. iii. 67. iv. 64. Quintil. i. 10. 16. Stat. Theb. vi. 800. Ascon. in Cic. divin. 17. Hence it is also applied to the commanders, Dio. l. 32. Those who hauled or pulled a rope, who raised a weight, or the like, called HELCIARII, used likewise to animate one another with a loud cry, Martial. ibid. hence Nauticus clamor, the cries or shouts of the mariners, Virg. Æn. iii. 128. v. 140. Lucan. ii. 688.

Before a fleet (CLASSIS) set out to sea it was solemnly reviewed (lustrata est) like an army; Cic. Phil. xii. 3. prayers were made and victims sacrificed; Liv. xxix. 27. xxxvi. 42. Appian. Bell. Civ. v. Virg. Æn. iii. 118. v. 772. Sil. xvii. 48. The auspices were consulted, Valer. Max. i. Hor. Epod. x. 1. 16. 24: and if any unlucky omen happened, as a person sneezing on the left, or swallows alighting on the ships, &c. the voyage was suspended, Polyæn. iii. 10. Frontin. i. 12.

The mariners, when they set sail, or reached the harbour, decked the stern with garlands, Virg. Æn. iv. 418. G. i. 303.

There was great labour in launching, (in deducendo) the ships, Virg. Æn. iv. 397. for as the ancients seldom sailed in winter, their ships during that time were drawn up, (subductæ) on land, Horat. Od. i. 4. 2. Virg. Æn. i. 555. and stood on the shore, Virg. Æn. iii. 135. 177.

They were drawn to sea by ropes and levers, (vectibus), with rollers placed below, (cylindris lignisque teretibus et rotundis subjectis), called PALANGES, vel -gæ, Cæs. B. C. ii. or SCUTULÆ, Ibid. iii. 34. and, according to some, lapsus rotarum; but others more properly take this phrase for rotæ labentes, wheels, Virg. Æn. ii. 236.

Archimedes invented a wonderful machine for this purpose, called HELIX, Athen. v. Plutarch. in Marcell.—Sil. Ital. xiv. 352.

Sometimes ships were conveyed for a considerable space by land, Liv. xxv. 11. Sil. xii. 441. Suet. Cal. 47. and for that purpose they were sometimes so made, that they might be taken to pieces, Curt. viii. 10. Justin. xxxii. 3; a practice still in use. Augustus is said to have transported some ships from the open sea to the Ambracian gulf near Actium, on a kind of wall covered with the raw hides of oxen; Dio. l. 12. in like manner over the isthmus of Corinth, Id. li. 5. Strab. viii. 335. So Trajan, from the Euphrates to the Tigris. Id. xlviii. 28.

The signal for embarking was given with the trumpet, Lucan. ii.

690. They embarked (conscendebant) in a certain order, the mariners first and then the soldiers, Liv. xxix. 25. xxii. 16. They also sailed in a certain order, Virg. Æn. v. 833. the light vessels usually foremost, then the fleet or ships of war, and after them the ships of burden. But this order was often changed, Liv. passim.

When they approached the place of their destination, they were very attentive to the objects they first saw, in the same manner as to omens at their departure, Virg. Æn. iii. 537. Liv. xxix. 27. xxx. 25.

When they reached the shore, (terram appulerunt), and landed (exposuerunt) the troops, prayers and sacrifices again were made, Liv. xxxvii. 14. 47.

If the country was hostile, and there was no proper harbour, they made a naval camp, (castra navalia vel nautica) and drew up their ships on land, (subducebant), Liv. xxx. 9. 10. xxiii. 28. Cæs. B. G. iv. 21. They did so, especially if they were to winter there, Liv. xxxvi. 45. xxxviii. 8. But if they were to remain only for a short time, the fleet was stationed in some convenient place, (ad anchoram stabat, vel in statione tenebatur), not far from land, Liv. xxxi. 23. xxxvii. 15. xxiv. 17. Cæs. B. C. iii. 6. iv. 21. B. Alex. 25.

Harbours (PORTUS) were strongly fortified, especially at the entrance, (aditus vel introitus; os, ostium, vel fauces), Virg. Æn. i. 404. Cic. et Liv. The two sides of which, or the piers, were called CORNUA, Cic. Att. ix. 14. Lucan. ii. 615. 706. or BRACHIA, Plin. Ep. vi. 31. Suet. Claud. 20. Liv. xxxi. 26: on the extremities were erected bulwarks and towers, Vitruv. v. 11. - There was usually also a watch-tower, (PHAROS, plur. -i,) Ibid. with lights to direct the course of ships in the night-time, as, at Alexandria in Egypt; Cæs. B. C. iii. ult. Plin. xxxvi. 12. at Ostia and Ravenna; Ibid. at Capræ, Brundisium, and other places, Suet. Tib. 74. Cal. 46. Stat. Sylv. iii. 5. 100. A chain was sometimes drawn across as a barrier or boom, (claustrum), Frontin. Stratagem. i. 5. 6.

Harbours were naturally formed at the mouths of rivers; hence the name of ΟΣΤΙΑ at the mouth of the Tiber, Serv. ad Virg. Æn. v. 281. Liv. i. 33. xxvi. 19. Dionys. iii. 45. Ovid calls the seven mouths of the Nile, septem PORTUS. Her. xiv. 107. Amor. ii. 13. 10.

Harbours made by art (manu vel arte) were called COTHONES, vel ~~NA~~-orum, Serv. ad Virg. Æn. i. 431. Festus.

Adjoining to the harbour were docks (NAVALIA, -ium), where the ships were laid up, (subductæ), careened and refitted, (refectæ), Cic. Off. ii. 17. Liv. xxxvii. 10. Cæs. B. C. ii. 3. 4. Virg. iv. 593. Ovid. Amor. ii. 9. 21.

Fleets about to engage were arranged in a manner similar to armies on land. Certain ships were placed in the centre, (media acies), others in the right wing, (dextrum cornu), and others in the left; some as a reserve, (subsidium, naves subsidiariæ.) Hirt. de Bell. Al. 10. Liv. xxxvii. 23. 29. xxxvi. 44. We find them sometimes disposed in the form of a wedge, a forceps, and a circle; Polyb. i. Polyæn. iii. Thucyd. ii. but most frequently in that of a semicircle or half-moon, Veget. iv. 45. Sil. xiv. 370.

Before the battle, sacrifices and prayers were made as on land; the admiral sailed round the fleet in a light galley, (navis actuaria), and exhorted the men.

The soldiers and sailors made ready (se expediebant) for action; they furled the sails and adjusted the rigging; for they never chose to fight but in calm weather, Liv. xxvi. 39.

A red flag was displayed from the admiral's ship, as a signal to engage. The trumpets in it and in all the other ships were sounded, Sil. xiv. 372. and a shout raised by all the crews, Lucan. iii. 540. Dio. xlix. 9.

The combatants endeavoured to disable or sink the ships of the enemy, by sweeping off (detergendo) the oars, or by striking them with their beaks, chiefly on the sides, Dio. l. 29. They grappled with them by means of certain machines called crows, (CORVI), iron hands or hooks, (FERRÆ MANUS), Lucan. iii. 635. drags or grappling irons, (HARPAGONES, i. e. asserēs ferreo unco præfixi), &c. and fought as on land, Flor. ii. 2. Liv. xxvi. 39. xxx. 10. Cæs. B. G. i. 52. Curt. iv. 9. Lucan. xi. 712. Dio. xxxix. 48.—xlix. 1. 3. &c. They sometimes also employed fire ships, Hirt. B. Alex. 11. or threw fire-brands, and pots full of coals and sulphur, with various other combustibles, Stuppea flamma manu, telisque volatile ferrum spargitur, Virg. Æn. viii. 694. which were so successfully employed by Augustus at the battle of Actium, that most of Antony's fleet was thereby destroyed, Dio. l. 29. 34 and 35. Hence Vix una sospes navis ab ignibus, Horat. Od. i. 37. 13.

In sieges they joined vessels together, and erected on them various engines, Curt. iv. 13. Liv. xxiv. 34. xxvi. 26. Cæs. B. C. iii. 34. or sunk vessels to block up their harbours, Ibid. et Liv. xxxv. 11. 14.

The ships of the victorious fleet, when they returned home, had their prows decked with laurel, and resounded with triumphant music, Dio. li. 5.

The prizes distributed after a victory at sea were much the same as on land. (See p. 324.) Also naval punishments, pay, and provisions, &c. Liv. xxiii. 21. 48.

The trading vessels of the ancients were in general much inferior in size to those of the moderns. Cicero mentions a number of ships of burden, none of which was below 2000 amphora (quarum minor nulla erat duâ millium amphorûm), i. e. about fifty-six tons, which he seems to have thought a large ship, Cic. Fam. xii. 15. There were, however, some ships of enormous bulk. One built by Ptolemy is said to have been 280 cubits, i. e. 420 feet long, and another 300 feet; the tonnage of the former, 7182, and of the latter, 3197, Athenæus. The ship which brought from Egypt the great obelisk that stood in the Circus of the Vatican in the time of Caligula, besides the obelisk itself, had 120,000 modii of lentes, lentiles, a kind of pulse, for ballast, about 1138 ton, Plin. xvi. 40. s. 76.

CUSTOMS OF THE ROMANS.

I. The ROMAN DRESS.

THE distinguishing part of the Roman dress was the TOGA or gown, as that of the Greeks was the Pallium, Suet. Aug. 98. and of the Gauls, Bracca, breeches; Suet. Jul. 80. Claud. 15. Plin. Epist. iv. 11. whence the Romans were called GENS TOGATA, Virg. Æn. i. 286. Suet. Aug. 40. or TOGATI, Cic. Rosc. Am. 46. Verr. i. 29. ii. 62. Orat. i. 24. iii. 11. Sallust. Jug. 21. Tacit. Hist. ii. 20. and the Greeks, or in general those who were not Romans, PALLIATI, Suet. Cas. 4. 8. Cic. Rabir. Post. 9. Phil. v. 5. also, Gallia Cisalpina, when admitted to the rights of citizens, were called TOGATA, Cic. Phil. viii. 9. Hence also Fabula Togata et Palliata. As the toga was the robe of peace, togati is often opposed to armati, Liv. iii. 10. 50. iv. 10. Cic. Cæcin. 15. Off. i. 23. Pis. 3. and as it was chiefly worn in the city, (ibi sc. rure, nulla necessitas togæ, Plin. Ep. v. 6.) it is sometimes opposed to RUSTICI, Plin. vi. 30.

The Romans were particularly careful, in foreign countries, always to appear dressed in the toga; Cic. Rabir. 10. but this was not always done. Some wore the Greek dress; as Scipio in Sicily, Tac. Ann. ii. 59. So the emperor Claudius at Naples, Dio. lxxvi. 6.

The TOGA (a tegendo, quod corpus tegat, Varro) was a loose (laxa) flowing (fluitans) woollen robe, which covered the whole body, round and close at the bottom, (ab imo), but open at the top down to the girdle, (ad cincturam), without sleeves; so that the right arm was at liberty, and the left supported a part (lacinia, a flap or lappet) of the toga, which was drawn up (subducebatur) and thrown back over the left shoulder, and thus formed what was called SINUS, a fold or cavity, upon the breast, in which things might be carried, Plin. xv. 18. Gell. iv. 18. and with which the face or head might be covered, Suet. Jul. 82. Liv. viii. 9. Hence Fabius, the Roman ambassador, when he denounced war in the senate of Carthage, is said to have poured out, (sinum effudisse), Liv. xxi. 18. or shaken out the lap of his toga, (excussisse togæ gremium), Flor. ii. 6. Dionysius says, the form of the toga was semicircular, iii. 61.

The toga in latter times had several folds, but anciently few or none, (veteribus nulli sinus), Quinctilian. xi. 3. These folds, when collected in a knot or centre, Virg. Æn. i. 324. were called UMBO, which is put for the toga itself, Pers. v. 33.

When a person did any work, he tucked up (succingebat) his toga, and girded it (astringebat) round him: hence Accingere se operi vel ad opus, or oftener, in the passive, accingi, to prepare, to make ready.

The toga of the rich and noble was finer and larger (laxior) than that of the less wealthy, Horat. Epod. iv. 8. Epist. i. 18. 30. A new toga was called PEXA; when old and threadbare, trita, Id. Ep. i. 95. Martial. ii. 58.

The Romans were at great pains to adjust (componere) the toga, that it might sit properly, (ne impar dissiderit,) and not draggle (ne deflueret,) Horat. Sat. ii. 3. 77. i. 3. 31. Epist. i. l. 95: Quinctil. xi. 3. Macrob. Sat. ii. 9.

The form of the toga was different at different times. The Romans at first had no other dress, Gell. vii. 12. It was then straight (arcta) and close; it covered the arms, and came down to the feet, Quinctil. ibid.

The toga was at first worn by women as well as men. But afterwards matrons wore a different robe, called STOLA, with a broad border or fringe (limbus) called INSTITA, Horat. Sat. i. 2. 29. reaching to the feet, Ovid. Art. Am. i. 32. Tibull. i. 7. 74. (whence instita is put for matrona; Ovid. Art. Am. ii. 600.) and also, as some say, when they went abroad, a loose outer robe thrown over the stola like a surtout, a mantle, or cloak, called PALLA or Peplus, Hor. ib. 99. But the old scholiast on Horace makes palla here the same with instita, and calls it Peripodium, and Tunicæ pallium. Some think that this fringe constituted the only distinction between the stola and toga. It is certain, however, that the outer robe of a woman was called PALLA, Virg. Æn. i. 648. xi. 576. (quod palam et foris gerebatur,) Varr. de Lat. ling. iv. 30.

Courtesans, and women condemned for adultery, were not permitted to wear the stola; hence called TOGATÆ, Horat. Sat. i. 2. 82. Juven. ii. 70. Martial. ii. 39. vi. 64. x. 52. Cic. Phil. ii. 18. and the modesty of matrons is called Stolatus pudor, Mart. i. 36. 8.

There was a fine robe of a circular form worn by women, called CYCLAS, -adis, Juvenal. vi. 258. Suet. Cal. 52.

None but Roman citizens were permitted to wear the toga; and banished persons were prohibited the use of it, Plin. Epist. iv. 11. Hence toga is put for the dignity of a Roman, Horat. Od. iii. 5. 10.

The colour of the toga was white, and on the festivals they usually had one newly cleaned, Ovid. Trist. v. 5. 7. hence they were said Festos ALBATI celebrare, Horat. Sat. ii. 2. 61.

Candidates for offices wore a toga whitened by the fuller, TOGA CANDIDA.

The toga in mourning was of a black or dark colour, TOGA PULLA vel atra; hence those in mourning were called PULLATI, Suet. Aug. 44. Juvenal. iii. 213. or ATRATI, Cic. Vat. 12. But those were also called Pullati, who wore a great-coat (lacerna) instead of the toga, Suet. Aug. 40. or a mean ragged dress, Plin. Epist. vii. 16. as the vulgar or poor people (pullatus circulus, vel turba pullata,) Quinctil. ii. 12. vi. 4.

The mourning robe of women was called RICINIUM, vel -NUS, vel RICA, (quod post tergum rejiceretur,) which covered the head and shoulders, Cic. legg. ii. 23. or MAVORTES, -IS, vel -TA, Serv. in Virg. Æn. i. 268. Isid. xix. 25. They seem to have had several of these above one another, that they might throw them into the funeral piles of their husbands and friends. The twelve tables restricted the number to three, Cic. ibid.

The Romans seldom or never appeared at a feast in mourning, Cic. Vat. 12. nor at the public spectæles, Mart. iv. 2. nor at festivals and sacrifices, Ovid. Fast. i. 79. Horat. ii. 2. 60. Pers. ii. 40.

At entertainments, the more wealthy Romans laid aside the toga, and put on a particular robe called SYNTHESIS, Martial. v. 80. ii. 46. iv. 66. which they wore all the time of the Saturnalia, because then they were continually feasting, Martial. xiv. 1. 141. Senec. Epist. 18. Nero wore it (synthesina, sc. vestis) in common, Suet. 51.

Magistrates and certain priests wore a toga bordered with purple, (limbo purpureo circumdata), hence called TOGA PRÆTEXTA; as the superior magistrates, Cic. Red. in Sen. 5. Liv. xxxiv. 7. Juvenal. x. 99. the Pontifices, the augurs, Cic. Sext. 69. the DECENVIRI sacris faciundis, Liv. xxvii. 39. &c. and even private persons when they exhibited games, Cic. Pis. 4.

Generals when they triumphed wore an embroidered toga, called PICTA vel PALMATA, Martial. vii. 2. 7.

Young men, till they were seventeen years of age, and young women, till they were married, also wore a gown bordered with purple, TOGA PRÆTEXTA, Liv. xxxiv. 7. Cic. Verr. i. 44. Cat. ii. 2. Propert. iv. 12. 33: whence they were called PRÆTEXTATI, Liv. xxii. 57. Cic. Muran. 5. Suet. Aug. 44. 94. Hence amicitia prætectata, i. e. a teneris annis, formed in youth, Martial. x. 20. But verba prætectata is put for obscæna, Suet. Vesp. 22. (quodd nubentibus, depõsitis prætectis, a multitudine puerorum obscæna clamarentur, Festus.) Gell. ix. 10. Macrob. Sat. ii. 1. and mores prætectati, for impudici vel corrupti, Juvenal. ii. 170.

Under the emperors, the toga was in a great measure disused, unless by clients when they waited (officium faciebant) on their patrons, Suet. Aug. 60. Martial. i. 109. ii. 95. x. 74. 3. Scholias. in Juvenal. x. 45. and orators; hence called Togati, enrobed, Senec. de constant. 9. Tacit. Annal. xi. 7.

Boys likewise wore a hollow golden ball or boss (AUREA BULLA), which hung from the neck on the breast; as some think, in the shape of a heart, to prompt them to wisdom; according to others, round, with the figure of a heart engraved on it, Cic. Verr. i. 58. et Ascon. in loc. Liv. xxvi. 6. Plaut. Rud. iv. 4. 127. Macrob. Sat. i. 6. The sons of freedmen and poorer citizens used only a leathern boss, (bulla scortea, vel signum de paupere loro), Juvenal. v. 165. Plin. xxxiii. 1. Bosses were also used as an ornament for belts or girdles, Virg. Æn. xii. 942.

Young men, usually, when they had completed the seventeenth year of their age, laid aside (ponebant vel deponebant) the toga prætecta, and put on (sumebant vel induebant) the manly gown, (TOGA VIRILIS), called Toga PURA, Cic. Att. v. 20. ix. 19. because it was purely white; and LIBERA, Ovid. Trist. iv. 10. 28. Fast. iii. 777. because they were then freed from the restraint of masters, and allowed greater liberty, Pers. v. 30.

The ceremony of changing the toga was performed (toga mutabatur, Hor. Od. i. 36. 9.) with great solemnity before the images of the Lares; Propert. iv. 132. to whom the bulla was consecrated, (laribus donata pependit.) Pers. ibid. sometimes in the Capitol, Val. Max. v. 4. 4. or they immediately went thither, or to some temple to pay their devotions to the gods, Suet. Claud. 2.

The usual time of the year for assuming the toga virilis was at the feasts of Bacchus in March, (Liberilibus, xii. Kal. Apr. Cic. Att. vi. 1.) Ovid. Fast. iii. 771.

Then the young man was conducted by his father or principal relation to the Forum, accompanied by his friends, Cic. Att. ix. 22. Suet. Aug. 26. Ner. 7. Tib. 54. (whose attendance was called OFFICIUM SOLENNE TOGÆ VIRILIS, Suet. Claud. 2. Plin. Epist. i. 9.) and there recommended to some eminent orator, whom he should study to imitate; Cic. Am. 1. Tacit. Orat. 34. whence he was said Forum attingere, vel in forum venire, when he began to attend to public business, (forensia stipendia auspicabatur.) Senec. Controv. v. 6. Cic. Fam. v. 8. xiii. 10. xv. 16. This was called Dies togæ virilis, Suet. Aug. 66. Cal. 15. Claud. 2. or Dies tirocinii, Suet. Tib. 54. and the conducting of one to the forum, TYROCINIUM. Id. Aug. 26. Cal. 13. the young men were called TIRONES, young or raw soldiers, because they then first began to serve in the army, Cic. Phil. xi. 15. Fam. vii. 3. Suet. Ner. 7. Liv. xl. 35. Hence TIRO is put for a learner or novice, Cic. Orat. i. 50. Ponere tirocinium, to lay aside the character of a learner, and give a proof of one's parts, to be past his noviciate, Liv. xlv. 37.

When all the formalities of this day were finished, the friends and dependents of the family were invited to a feast, and small presents distributed among them, called SPORTULÆ, Plin. Ep. x. 117. 118. The emperors on that occasion used to give a largess to the people, (CONGIARIUM, so called from congius, a measure of liquids,) Suet. Tib. 54. Tacit. Annal. iii. 29.

Servius appointed, that those who assumed the toga virilis should send a certain coin to the Temple of Youth, Dionys. iv. 15.

Parents and guardians permitted young men to assume (dabant) the toga virilis, sooner or later than the age of seventeen, as they judged proper, Cic. Att. vi. 1. Suet. Aug. 8. Cal. 10. Cl. 43. Ner. 7. under the emperors, when they had completed the fourteenth year, Tacit. Ann. xii. 41. xiii. 15. Before this, they were considered as part of the family, (pars domûs) afterwards of the state, (republicæ), Tacit. de Mor. Germ. 13.

Young men of rank, after putting on the toga virilis, commonly lived in a separate house from their parents, Suet. Tib. 15. Domit. 2. It was, however, customary for them, as a mark of modesty, during the first whole year, to keep (cohibere) their right arm within the toga, Cic. Cœl. 5. and in their exercises in the Campus Martius never to expose themselves quite naked, as men come to maturity sometimes did, Ibid.

The ancient Romans had no other clothing but the toga, Gell. vii. 12. In imitation of whom, Cato used often to go dressed in this manner, and sometimes even to sit on the tribunal, when prætor, (campestri sub toga cinctus), Ascon. in Cic. Val. Max. iii. 6. 7. Hence Exigua toga Catonis, Hor. Ep. i. 19. 13. hirta, Lucan. ii. 386. because it was straight (arcta) and coarse, (crassa vel pinguis), Horat. Sat. i. 3. 15. Juvenal. ix. 28. Martial. iv. 19. Nor did candidates for offices wear any thing but the toga.

The Romans afterwards wore below the toga a white woollen vest called TUNICA, which came down a little below the knees before, and the middle of the legs behind, Quinctil. xi. 3. at first without sleeves. Tunics with sleeves, (CHIRODOTE vel tunica manicata), or reaching the ankles, (talares), were reckoned effeminate, Cic. Cat. ii. 10. Virg. Æn. ix. 616. Gell. vii. 12. But under the emperors these came to be used with fringes at the hands, (ad manus fimbriata), from the example of Cæsar, Suet. Jul. 45. longer or shorter according to fancy, Horat. Sat. i. 2. 25. Prop. iv. 2. 28. Those who wore them were said to be MANULEATI, Suet. Cal. 52.

The Tunic was fastened by a girdle or belt (CINGULUM, cinctus, -ûs, ZONA vel Balteus) about the waist, to keep it tight, which also served as a purse (pro marsupio vel crumenâ), in which they kept their money, Gell. xv. 2. Plaut. Merc. v. 2. 84. Suet. Vit. 16. Horat. Ep. ii. 2. 40. hence incinctus tunicam mercator, Ovid. Fast. v. 675. The purse commonly hung from the neck, Plaut. Truc. iii. 2. 7. and was said decollâsse, when it was taken off; hence decollare, to deceive, Id. Cap. iii. 1. 37.

It was also thought effeminate to appear abroad with the tunic slackly or carelessly girded: hence the saying of Sylla concerning Cæsar to the Optimates, who interceded for his life, UT MALE PRÆCINCTUM FURBUM CAVERENT, Suet. Jul. 46. Dio. 43. 43. For this also Mæcenas was blamed, Senec. Ep. 14. Hence cinctus, præcinctus and succinctus, are put for industrius, expeditus, vel gnavus, diligent, active, clever, Horat. Sat. i. 5. 6. ii. 6. 107. because they used to gird the tunic when at work, Id. Sat. ii. 8. 10. Ovid. Met. vi. 59. and Discinctus for iners, mollis, ignavus; thus, Discinctus nepos, a dissolute spendthrift, Hor. Epod. i. 34. So Pers. iii. 31. Discincti Afri, Virg. Æn. viii. 724. effeminate, or simply ungirt; for the Africans did not use a girdle, Sil. iii. 236. Plaut. Pæn. v. 2. 48.

The Romans did not seem to have used the girdle at home or in private; hence discincti ludere, i. e. domi, with their tunics ungirt, Horat. Sat. ii. 1. 73. discinctaque in otia natus, formed for soft repose: Ovid. Amor. i. 9. 41. for they never wore the toga at home, but an undress, (vestis domestica, vel vestimenta), Suet. Aug. 73. Vit. 8. Cic. de Fin. ii. 24. Plin. Ep. v. 6. f. Hence the toga and other things which they wore only abroad were called FORENSIA, Suet. Aug. 74. Cal. 17. or VESTITUS FORENSIS, Cic. ibid. and VESTIMENTA FORENSIA, Columel. xii. 45. 5.

The tunic was worn by women as well as men; but that of the former always came down to their feet, and covered their arms, Juvenal. vi. 445. They also used girdles both before and after marriage, Festus. in CINGULUM; Martial. xiv. 151. Ovid. Amor. i. 7. 46.

The Romans do not seem to have used a belt above the toga. But this point is strongly contested.

Young men when they assumed the toga virilis, and women when they were married, received from their parents a tunic wrought in a particular manner, called TUNICA RECTA, or REGILLA, Festus. Plin. viii. 48. s. 74.

The senators had a broad stripe of purple (or rather two stripes, fasciæ vel plagulæ, Varr. de Lat. ling. viii. 47.) sewed on the breast of their tunic, Horat. Sat. i. 6. 28. called LATUS CLAVUS, Ovid. Trist. iv. 10. 29 & 35. which is sometimes put for the tunic itself, Suet. Jul. 45. or the dignity of a senator, Id. Tib. 35. Claud. 24. Vesp. 2. 4. The Equites, a narrow strip, ANGUSTUS CLAVUS, Vell. ii. 88. called also PAUPER CLAVUS, Stat. Silv. v. 2. 17. arctum lumen purpuræ, Ib. iv. 5. 42.

Augustus granted to the sons of senators the right of wearing the latus clavus, after they assumed the toga virilis, and made them tribunes and prefects in the army; hence called TRIBUNI ET PRÆFECTI LATICLAVI, Suet. Aug. 38. Ner. 26. Domit. 10. The tribunes chosen from the Equites were called ANGUSTICLAVI, Suet. Oth. 10. Galb. 10. They seem to have assumed the toga virilis and latus clavus on the same day, Plin. Ep. viii. 23.

Generals in a triumph wore with the toga picta, an embroidered tunic, (TUNICA PALMATA,) Liv. x. 7. Martial. vii. 1. Plin. ix. 36. s. 60. called also Tunica Jovis, because the image of that god in the Capitol was clothed with it, Juvenal. x. 38. Tunics of this kind used to be sent by the senate to foreign kings as a present, Liv. xxvii. 4. xxx. 15. xxxi. 11.

The poor people who could not purchase a toga, wore nothing but a tunic; hence called TUNICATUS POPULUS or POPELLUS, Horat. Ep. i. 7. 65. TUNICATI, Cic. in Rull. ii. 34. Foreigners at Rome seem also to have used the same dress; (hence homo tunicatus is put for a Carthaginian, Plaut. Pæn. v. 3. 2.) and slaves, Id. Amphit. i. 1. 213. Senec. Brev. vit. 12. likewise gladiators, Juvenal. ii. 143.

In the country, persons of fortune and rank used only the tunic, Juvenal. iii. 179. In winter they wore more than one tunic. Augustus used four, Suet. Aug. 82.

Under the tunic, the Romans wore another woollen covering next the skin like our shirt, called INDUSIUM or SUBUCULA, Horat. Ep. i. 1. 95. Suet. Ibid. and by later writers, Interûlia and Camisia. Linen clothes (vestes lineæ, Plin. xii. 6.) were not used by the ancient Romans, and are seldom mentioned in the classics. The use of linen was introduced under the emperors from Egypt, Plin. Praef. whence Sindon vel vestis Byssinæ, fine linen. Girls wore a linen vest or shift called SUPPARUM vel -us, Plaut. Rud. i. 2. 91. Lucan. ii. 363. Festus.

The Romans in later ages wore above the toga a kind of great-coat called LACERNA, Juvenal. ix. 29. open before and fastened with clasps or buckles, (FIBULÆ, which were much used to fasten all the different parts of dress, Virg. Æn. iv. 139. Ovid. Met. viii. 318. except the toga.) especially at the spectacles, Martial. xiv. 137. to screen them from the weather, with a covering for the head and shoulders, (capitium, quod capit pectus. Varr. L. L. iv. 30.) called CUCULLUS, Juvenal. vi. 118. 329. Martial. xi. 99. They used to lay aside the lacerna, when the emperor entered, Suet. Claud. 6. It was at first used only in the army, Paterc. ii. 80. Ovid. Fast. ii. 745. Prop. iii. 10. 7. but afterwards also in the city.

During the civil wars, when the toga began to be disused, the lacerna came to be worn in place of it, to such a degree, that Augustus one day seeing from his tribunal a number of citizens in the assembly dressed in the lacerna, (pullati vel lacernati), which was commonly of a dark colour, Martial. xiv. 129. repeated with indignation from Virgil, "Romanos rerum dominos gentemque togatum." Æn. i. 282. and gave orders to the ediles not to allow any one to appear in the forum or circus in that dress, Suet. Aug. 40. It was only used by the men, Scholias. in Juvenal. i. 62. and at first was thought unbecoming in the city, Cic. Phil. ii. 30. It was sometimes of various colours and texture, Juvenal. i. 27. ix. 28. Martial. ii. 19.

Similar to the lacerna was the IÆNA, (χλαων) a Grecian robe or mantle thrown over the pallium, Serv. ad Virg. Æn. v. 262. Festus. Martial. xii. 36. xiv. 13. 136.

The Romans had another kind of great coat or surtout, resembling the lacerna, but shorter and straighter, called PENŪLA, which was worn above the tunic, Suet. Ner. 48. having likewise a hood, (caput vel capitium.) Plin. xxii. 15. used chiefly on journeys and in the army, Cic. Att. xiii. 33. Mil. 10. Sext. 38. Juv. v. 78. Senec. Ep. 87. N. Q. iv. 6. also in the city, Suet. Cic. 52. Lamprid. Alex. Sev. 27. sometimes covered with a rough pile of hair for the sake of warmth, called GAUSAPA, sing. et plur. vel e; Petron. 28. Ovid. Art. Am. i. 30J. Pers. vi. 46. or Gausapina, panula, Martial. vi. 59. xiv. 145. 147. of various colours, and common to men and women, Ibid. sometimes made of skins, SCORTEA, Festus. Martial. xiv. 130.

The military robe of the Romans was called SAGUM, an open woollen garment, which was drawn over the other clothes and fastened before with clasps; Suet. Aug. 26. Sil. xvii. 531. in dangerous conjunctures worn also in the city, by all, except those of consular dignity, Cic. Phil. viii. 11. as in the Italic war for two years, Liv. Epit. 72 & 73. Paterc. ii. 16. Distento sago impositum in sublime jactare, to toss in a blanket, Suet. Oth. 2. Martial. i. 4. 7.

The Romans wore neither stockings nor breeches, but used sometimes to wrap their legs and thighs with pieces of cloth, (FASCIAE, vel -iola, filets, bands, or rollers,) named from the parts which they covered, TIBIALIA, and FEMINALIA, or Femoratia, i. e. tegumenta tibiarum et femorum, Suet. Aug. 82. similar to what are mentioned, Exod. xxviii. 42. Levit. vi. 10. xvi. 4. Ezek. xlv. 18. used first, probably, by persons in bad health; Cic. Brut. 60. Horat. Sat. ii. 3. 255. Quinctil. xi. 3. 144. but afterwards by the delicate and effeminate, Cic. Att. ii. 3. Har. resp. 21. Suet. Aug. 82. who likewise had mufflers to keep the throat and neck warm, called FOCCALIA vel Focale, sing. (a faucibus), Horat. et Quinctil. ibid. Martial. v. 41. vi. 41. xiv. 142. used chiefly by orators, Ibid. et Gell. xi. 9.

Some used a handkerchief (SUDARIUM) for that purpose, Suet. Ner. 51.

Women used ornaments round their legs, (ornamenta circa crura,) called PERISCHELIDES, Horat. Ep. i. 17. 56.

The Romans had various coverings for the feet, (calceamenta vel tegumenta pedum, Cic. Tusc. v. 32.) but chiefly of two kinds. The one (CALCEUS, ἰσοδῆμα, a shoe,) covered the whole foot, somewhat like our shoes, and was tied above with a latchet or lace, a point or string, (CORRIGIA, LORUM vel LIGULA,) Cic. Divin. ii. 40. Martial. ii. 29. 57. The other (SOLEA, σανδάλιον, a slipper or sandal, quod solo pedis subjiciatur, FESTUS,) covered only the sole of the foot; and was fastened on with leathern thongs or strings, (teretibus habentis vel obstrigillis vincta, Gell. xiii. 21. amentis, Plin. xxxiv. 6. s. 14. hence called VINacula, Ovid. Fast. ii. 324. Of the latter kind there were various sorts; CREPIDÆ, vel -DULÆ, lb. Cic. Rabir. Post. 27. Horat. Sat. i. 3. 127. GALLICÆ, Cic. Phil. ii. 30. Gell. xiii. 21. &c. and those who wore them were said to be discalceati, (αυροδῆροι,) pedibus intectis, Tacit. Ann. ii. 59.

The Greeks wore a kind of shoes, called PHECASIA, Senec. de benef. vii. 21.

The calcei were always worn with the toga when a person went abroad, Cic. ibid. Plin. Epist. vii. 3. Suet. Aug. 73. whence he put them off, (calceos et vestimenta mutavit,) and put on (inducebat vel inducebat) slippers, when he went on a journey, Cic. Mil. 10. Caligula permitted those who chose, to wear slippers in the theatre, Dio. lix. 7. as he himself did in public, Suet. 52.

Slippers (soleæ) were used at feasts, Plaut. Truc. ii. 4. 13. Horat. Sat. ii. 8. 77. Ep. i. 13. 15. but they put them off when about to eat, Martial. iii. 50. It was esteemed effeminate for a man to appear in public in slippers, (soleatus,) Cic. Har. Resp. 21. Verr. v. 33. Plin. 6. Liv. xxix. 19. Suet. Cal. 32. Slippers were worn by women in public, Plaut. Truc. li. 8.

The shoes of senators were of a black colour, and came up to the middle of their legs, Horat. Sat. i. 6. 27. They had a golden or silver crescent (luna vel lunula, i. e. C) on the top of the foot, Juvenal. vii. 192: hence the shoe is called lunata pellis, Martial. i. 50. and the foot lunata planta, Id. ii. 29. This seems to have been peculiar to Patrician senators, Scholiast. in Juvenal. hence it is called PATRICIA LUNA, Stat. Sylv. v. 2. 28.

The shoes of women were generally white, Ovid. Art. Am. iii. 271. sometimes red, scarlet, or purple, (rubri, mullei, et purpurei,) Pers. v. 169. Virg. Ecl. vii. 32. Æn. i. 341. yellow, (lutei vel cerei,) Catull. lix. 9. &c. adorned with embroidery and pearls, particularly the upper leathers or upper parts, (crepidarum obstragula,) Plin. ix. 35. s. 56.

Men's shoes were generally black; some wore them scarlet or red, Martial. ii. 29. 8. as Julius Cæsar, Dio. xliii. 43. and especially under the emperors, adorned with gold, silver, and precious stones, Plaut. Bacch. ii. 3. 97. Senec. ii. 12. Plin. xxxvii. 2. They were sometimes turned up at the point, in the form of the letter f, called Calcei repandi, Cic. de Nat. D. i. 30.

The senators are said to have used four lachets to tie their shoes, and plebeians only one, Ibid. xix. 34. Senec. de Tranquill. Anim. 2.

The people of ancient Latium wore shoes of unwrought leather, (ex corio crudo), called PERONES, Virg. Æn. vii. 90. as did also the Marsi, Hernici, and Vestini, who were likewise clothed in skins, Juvenal. xiv. 195. &c It was long before they learned the use of tanned leather, (ΑΛΟΥΤΑ; ex alumine, (of alum.) quo pelles subigebantur, ut molliores fierent.) which was made of various colours, Martial. ii. 29. vii. 34.

The poor people sometimes wore wooden shoes, (soleæ lignæ), which used to be put on persons condemned for parricide, Auct. ad Herenn. i. 13. de Invent. ii. 50.

Similar to these were a kind of shoes worn by country people, called SCULPONÆ, Cato de re R. 59. with which they sometimes struck one another in the face, (os batuebant), Plaut. Cas. ii. 8. 59. as courtesans used to treat their lovers, (commitigare sandalio caput), Terent. Eun. v. 8. 4. Thus Omphale used Hercules, Id.

The shoes of the soldiers were called CALIGÆ, sometimes shod with nails, (clavis suffixa;) those of the comedians, SOCCEI, slippers, often put for soleæ; of the tragedians, COTURNI.

The Romans sometimes used socks or coverings for the feet, made of wool or goat's hair, called UDONES, Martial. xiv. 140.

The Romans also had iron shoes (SOLEÆ FERRÆ) for mules and horses, not fixed to the hoof with nails, as among us, but fitted to the foot, so that they might be occasionally put on and off, Catull. xviii. 26. Suet. Ner. 30. Vesp. 23. Plin. xxx. 11. s. 49. sometimes of silver or gold: (Poppea conjux Neronis delicatioribus jumentis suis soleas ex auro quoque induere.) Id. xxxiii. 11. s. 49. Dio. lxii. 28.

Some think that the ancients did not use gloves, (chirothecæ, vel manicæ.) But they are mentioned both by Greek and Roman writers, Homer. Odys. 24. Plin. Ep. iii. 5. with fingers (digitalia, -um,) Varr. R. R. i. 55. and without them; what we call mittens.

The ancient Romans went with their head bare, (capite aperto), as we see from ancient coins and statues, except at sacred rites, games, festivals, on journey, and in war. Hence, of all the honours decreed to Cæsar by the senate, he is said to have been chiefly pleased with that of always wearing a laurel crown, because it covered his baldness, Suet. Jul. 45. which was reckoned a deformity among the Romans, Ovid. Art. Am. iii. 250. Tacit. Annal. iv. 57. Suet. Domit. 18. Juvenal. iv. 38. as among the Jews, II. Kings, ii. 23.

They used, however, in the city, as a screen from the heat or wind, to throw over their head the lappet of their gown, (laciniam vel sium toga in caput rejicere), which they took off when they met any one to whom they were bound to show respect, as the consuls, &c. Plutarch. in Pomp. et quæst. Rom. 10.

The Romans veiled their heads at all sacred rites but those of Saturn, Sero. in Virg. Æn. iii. 405. Liv. i. 26. in cases of sudden and extreme danger; Plaut. Most. ii. 1. 77. Petron. 7. 90. in grief or despair; as when one was about to throw himself into a river, or the like, Horat. Sat. ii. 3. 37. Liv. iv. 12. Thus Cæsar, when assassinated in the senate house; Suet. Cæs. 82. Pompey, when slain in Egypt; Dio. xlii. 5. Crassus, when defeated by the Parthians; Plutarch. Appius, when he fled from the Forum. Liv. iii. 49. So also criminals, when executed, Liv. i. 26. Sil. xi. 259.

At games and festivals the Romans wore a woollen cap or bonnet, (PILEUS, vel -um,) Horat. Ep. i. 13. 15. Martial. xi. 7. xiv. 1. Suet. Ner. 57. Senec. Epist. 18. which was also worn by slaves, hence called PILEATI, when made free; Liv. xxiv. 16. Plaut. Amph. i. 303. or sold, Gell. vii. 8. whence pileus is put for liberty; Suet. Tib. 4. Martial. ii. 48. 4. likewise by the old and sickly, Ovid. Art. Am. i. 733.

The Romans on journey used a round cap like a helmet, (GALE-RUS, vel -um,) Virg. Æn. vii. 688. or a broad-brimmed hat, (PETASUS,) Suet. Aug. 82. Hence petasatus, prepared for a journey, Cic. Fam. xv. 17. Caligula permitted the use of a hat similar to this in the theatre, as a screen from the heat, Dio. lix. 7.

The women used to dress their hair in the form of a helmet or Galerus, mixing false hair (crines ficti vel suppositi) with it, Scholias in Juvenal. vi. 120.—So likewise warriors, Sil. i. 404. who sometimes also used a cap of unwrought leather, (CUDO, vel -on,) Sil. viii. 494. xvi. 59.

The head-dress of women, as well as their other attire, was different at different periods. At first it was very simple. They seldom went abroad; and when they did, they almost always had their faces veiled. But when riches or luxury increased, dress became with many the chief object of attention; hence a woman's toilet and ornaments were called MUNDUS MULIEBRIS, her world, Liv. xxxiv. 7.

They anointed their hair with the richest perfumes, Ovid. Met. v. 53. Tibull. iii. 4. 28. and sometimes painted it, Tib. i. 9. 43. Ovid. Art. Am. iii. 163. (comam rutilabant vel incendebant,) and made it appear a bright yellow, with a certain composition or wash, a lixivium or ley; (lixivio vel -viâ, cinere vel cinere lixivii, Val. Max. ii. 1. 5. Plin. xvi. 20. Spumâ Batavâ, vel causticâ, i. e. sapone, with soap, Martial. viii. 33. 20. xiv. 26. Suet. Cal. 47. Plin. xxviii. 12. s. 51.) but never used powder, which is a very late invention; first introduced in France about the year 1593.

The Roman women frizzled or curled their hair with hot irons, (calido ferro vel calamistris vibrabant, crispabant, vel intorquebant,) Virg. Æn. xii. 100. Cic. Brut. 75. hence coma calamistrata, frizzled hair; Cic. Sext. 8. Homo calamistratus, by way of contempt; Cic. post red. in Sen. 6. Plaut. Asin. iii. 3. 37; and sometimes raised it to a great height by rows and stories of curls; Juvenal. vi. 501. Hence ALTUM CALIENDRUM, i. e. capillitium adulterinum vel capillamentum, Suet. Cal. 11. in galeri vel galeæ modum suggestum, Ter-tull. de Cult. Fem. 7. the lofty pile of false hair, Horat. Sat. i. 8. 48.

suggestus, vel -um comæ, as a building, Stat. Sylv. i. 2. 114. Coma in gradus formata, into stories; Suet. Ner. 51. Quinctil. xii. Flexus cincinnorum vel annulorum, the turning of the locks or curls, finibriæ vel cirri, the extremities or ends of the curls; Cic. Pis. 11. Juvenal. xiii. 165. The locks seem to have been fixed by hairpins; (crinales acus.) Propert. iii. 9. 52. Dio. li. 14.

The slaves who assisted in frizzling and adjusting the hair, (in crine componendo.) were called CINIFLONES or CINERARI, Horat. Sat. i. 2. 98. who were in danger of punishment if a single lock was improperly placed, (si unus de toto peccaverat orbe comarum annulus, incerta non bene fixus acu;) the whip (TAUREA, i. e. flagrum vel scutica de pene taurino) was presently applied, Juvenal. vi. 491. or the mirror, (SPECULUM.) made of polished brass or steel, of tin or silver, Plin. xxxiv. 17. s. 48. was aimed at the head of the offender, Martial. ii. 66. A number of females attended, who did nothing but give directions, Juvenal. ibid. Every woman of fashion had at least one female hair-dresser (ORNATRIX.) Ovid. Amor. i. 14. 16. ii. 7. 17 & 23.

The hair was adorned with gold, and pearls, and precious stones, Ovid. Her. xv. 75. xxi. 89. Manil. v. 518. sometimes with crowns or garlands and chaplets of flowers, (coronæ et sortæ.) Plaut. Asin. iv. 1. 58. bound with fillets or ribands of various colours, (crinales vitæ vel fasciæ.) Ovid. Met. i. 477. iv. 6.

The head-dress and ribands of matrons were different from those of virgins, Propert. iv. 12. 34. Virg. Æn. ii. 168.

Ribands (VITTÆ) seem to have been peculiar to modest women; hence Vitta tenues, insigne pudoris, Ovid. Art. Am. i. 31. Nil mihi cum vitta, i. e. cum muliere pudica et casta, Id. Rem. Am. 386. and, joined with the STOLA, were the badge of matrons, Id. Trist. 247; hence Ei vos, quis vitta longaque vestis abest, i. e. impudicæ, Id. Fast. iv. 134.

Immodest women used to cover their heads with mitres, (MITRÆ vel mitellæ.) Juvenal. iii. 66. Serv. in Virg. Æn. iv. 216. Cic. de Resp. Harusp. 21.

Mitres were likewise worn by men, though esteemed effeminate, Cic. Rabir. Post. 10. and, what was still more so, coverings for the cheeks, tied with bands (redunicula vel ligamina) under the chin, Virg. ibid. et ix. 616. Propert. ii. 29.

An embroidered net or caul (reticulum auratum) was used for enclosing the hair behind, Juvenal. ii. 96. called vesica, from its thinness, Martial. viii. 33. 19.

Women used various cosmetics, (medicamina vel lenecinia.) and washes or wash-balls (smegmata) to improve their colour, Ovid. Met. Tuc. 51. &c. Senec. Helv. 16. They covered their faces with a thick paste, (multo pane vel tectorio.) which they wore at home, Juvenal. vi. 460. &c.

Poppæa, the wife of Nero, invented a sort of pomatum or ointment to preserve her beauty, called from her name POPPÆANUM, made of asses' milk, ibid. et Plin. xi. 41. xxviii. 12. s. 50. in which she used also to bathe. Five hundred asses are said to have been daily milked for this purpose; and when she was banished from Rome fifty asses attended her, ibid. et Dio. lxxii. 28. Some men imitated the women in daubing their faces; thus Otho, (faciem pane madido linere quotidie consuevit.) Suet. Oth. 12. Juvenal. ii. 107. Pumice stones were used to smooth the skin, Plin. xxxvi. 21. s. 42.

Paint (FUCUS) was used by the Roman women as early as the days of Plautus: ceruse or a white lead (cerussa), or chalk, (creta), to whiten the skin, and vermilion (minum, purpurissum vel rubrica) to make it red, Plaut. Most. i. 3. 101 & 118. Truc. ii. 11. 35. Ovid. Art. Am. iii. 199. Horat. Epod. 12. 10. Martial. ii. 41. viii. 33. 17. Hence, fucata, cerussata, cretata, et minionata, painted, Ibid. in which also the men imitated them, Cic. Pis. 11.

The women used a certain plaster which took off the small hairs from their cheeks; or they pulled them out by the root (radicitus, vellebant) with instruments called VOLSELLÆ, tweezers, Martial. ix. 28. which the men likewise did, Id. viii. 47. Suet. Cas. 45. Galb. 22. Oth. 12. Quinctil. i. 6. 44. v. 9. 14. Proam. viii. 19. The edges of the eyelids and eyebrows they painted with a black powder or soot, (fuligine collinebant), Tertul. de cult. fœm. 5. Juvenal. ii. 3. Plin. Ep. vi. 2.

When they wanted to conceal any deformity on the face, they used a patch, (SPLENIUM vel emplastrum), Martial. ii. 29. 8. sometimes like a crescent, lunatum.) Id. viii. 33. 22. also for mere ornament, Plin. Ep. vi. 2. Hence spleniatus, patched, Martial. x. 22. Regulus, a famous lawyer under Domitian, used to anoint (circumlinere) his right or left eye, and wear a white patch over one side or the other of his forehead, as he was to plead either for the plaintiff or defendant, (dextrum, si a v. pro petitore; alterum, si a possessore esset acturus), Plin. Ep. vi. 2.

The Romans took great care of their teeth by washing and rubbing them, Plin. Ep. viii. 18. Plin. xxxi. 10. Martial. xiv. 22. 56. When they lost them, they procured artificial teeth of ivory, Horat. Sat. i. 8. 48. Martial. i. 20. 73. ii. 41. v. 44. xii. 23. If loose, they bound them with gold, Cic. Legg. ii. 24. It is said Æsculapius first invented the pulling of teeth, (dentis evulsionem), Cic. Nat. D. iii. 57.

The Roman ladies used ear-rings, (INAURES) of pearls, (marginata, baccæ, vel uniones), Horat. Epod. viii. 14. Sat. ii. 3. 241. three or four to each ear, Plin. ix. 35. s. 56. Senec. de Benef. vii. 9. sometimes of immense value; Suet. Jul. 50. Plin. ix. 35. s. 37. hence, Uxor tua locupletis domûs auribus censum gerit, Senec. Vit. Beat. 17. and of precious stones, Ovid. Art. Am. i. 432: also necklaces or ornaments for the neck, (MONILIA), made of gold, and set with gems, Virg. Æn. i. 658. Ovid. Met. x. 264. Cic. Verr. iv. 18. which the men also used, Suet. Galb. 18. Ovid. Met. x. 115. Plin. ix. 35. But the ornament of the men was usually a twisted chain, (torquis, v. -es), VJrg. Æn. vii. 351. or a circular plate of gold, (circulus auri vel aureus), Virg. Æn. 559. also a chain composed of rings, (catena, catella, vel catenula), used both by men and women, Liv. xxxix. 31. Horat. Ep. i. 17. 55. Ornaments for the arms were called ARMILLÆ.

There was a female ornament called SEGMENTUM, worn only by matrons, Val. Max. v. 2. 1. which some suppose to have been a kind of necklace, Serv. in Virg. Æn. i. 658. Isid. xix. 31. but others, more properly, an embroidered riband, (fascia, lania, vel vitta intexta auro,) or a purple fringe, purpurea, fimbria, vel instita,) sewed to the clothes, Scholias. in Juv. ii. 124. vi. 89. Ovid. Art. Am. iii. 169. Hence Vestis, segmentata, an embroidered robe, or having a purple fringe, (a crebis sectionibus,) Plaut.

The Roman women used a broad riband round the breast, called STROPHIUM, which served instead of a bodice or stays, Catul. lxxiii. 65. They had a clasp, buckle, or bracelet on the left shoulder, called SPINTHER, or Spinter, Festus. Plaut. Men. iii. 3. 4.

The ordinary colour of clothes in the time of the republic was white; but afterwards the women used a great variety of colours, according to the mode, or their particular taste, Ovid. Art. Am. iii. 187.

Silk (vestis serica bombycina) was unknown to the Romans till towards the end of the republic. It is frequently mentioned by writers after that time, Virg. G. ii. 121. Horat. Epod. viii. 15. Suet. Cal. 52. Martial. iii. 82. viii. 33. 68. ix. 38. xi. 9. 28. 50. Juvenal. vi. 259. The use of it was forbidden to men, Tacit. Annal. ii. 33. Vopisc. Tacit. 10.

Heliogabalus is said to have been the first who wore a robe of pure silk, (vestis holoserica;) before that time it used to be mixed with some other stuff, (subsericum.) Lamprid. in Elagab. 26. 29. The silk, which had been closely woven in India, was unravelled, and wrought anew in a looser texture, intermixed with linen or woollen yarn, Plin. vi. 20. so thin that the body shone through it, (ut transluceret,) Ibid. first fabricated in the island Cos; Plin. xi. 22. s. 26. Hence Vestes Coæ for sericæ vel bombycinæ, tenues vel pellucidæ, Tibull. ii. 3. 57. Propert. i. 2. 2. Horat. Sat. i. 2. 101. Ventus textilis, v. nebula, Petron. 35. The Emperor Aurelian is said to have refused his wife a garment of pure silk, on account of its exorbitant price, Vopisc. in Aurel. 45.

Some writers distinguish between vestis bombycina and sericæ. The former they make to be produced by the silk-worm (bombyx;) the latter from a tree in the country of the Seres, (sing. Ser.) in India. But some writers confound them. It seems doubtful, however, if sericum was quite the same with what we now call silk, Plin. xi. 22. s. 25. xxiv. 12. s. 66, &c.

Silk worms (bombyces) are said to have been first introduced at Constantinople by two monks in the time of Justinian, A. U. 551. Procop. de Bell. Goth. iv. 17. The Romans were long ignorant of the manner in which silk was made.

Clothes were distinguished, not only from their different texture and colour, but also from the place where they were manufactured; thus, Vestis aurea, aurata, picta, embroidered with gold; purpurea, conchylata, Cic. Phil. ii. 27. ostro vel murice, tincta, punicea, Tyrea vel Sarrana, Sidonia, Assyria, Phania; Spartana, Melibæa; Getula, Pana, vel Punica, &c. PURPLE* dyed with the juice of a kind of shell-fish, called PURPURA OR MUREX; found chiefly at Tyre in Asia; in Meninx, -gis, an island near the Syrtis Minor, and on the Getulian shore of the Atlantic ocean, in Africa; in Laconica, in Europe, Plin. ix. 36. s. 60. The most valued purple resembled the colour of clot- ted blood, of a blackish shining appearance; whence blood is called by Homer, purpureus, Plin. ix. 38. s. 62. Under Augustus, the vio- let colour (violacea purpura) came to be in request; then the red (rubra Tarentina) and the Tyrian twice dyed, (Tyria dibapha, i. e. bis tincta), Plin. ix. 39. s. 63. Horat. Od. ii. 16. 35. Vestis coccinea, vel cocco tincta, scarlet, Martial. v. 24. also put for purple, Horat. Sat. vi. 102 & 106. Melitensis, e gossypio vel xylo, cotton, Cic. Verr. ii. 72. Plin. xix. 1. COA, i. e. Serica vel bombycina et purpura, fine silk and purple made in the island Cos or Coos, Horat. Od. iv. 13. 13. Sat. i. 2. 101. Tib. ii. 4. 29. Juvenal. viii. 101. Phrygiâna, vel -iona, i. e. acu contexta et aureis filis decora, needle-work or embroi- dery, Plin. viii. 48. s. 74. Others read here Phryxiana, and make it a coarse shaggy cloth; freeze, opposed to rasa, smoothed, without hairs; Virgata, striped, Virg. Æn. viii. 660. Scutulata, spotted or figured, Juvenal. ii. 97. like a cobweb, (araneorum tela), which Pli- ny calls rete scutulatum, xi. 24. Galbâna vel -ina, green or grass- coloured, Juvenal. ibid. (color herbarum), Martial. v. 24. worn chief- ly by women; hence Galbanatus, a man so dressed, Id. iii. 82. 5. and Galbani mores, effeminate, i. 97. Amethystina, of a violet or wine-colour, Ibid. & ii. 57. xiv. 154. Juvenal. vii. 136. prohibited by Nero, Suet. 32. as the use of the vestis conchiliati, a particular kind of purple, was by Cæsar, except to certain persons and ages, and on certain days, Suet. Jul. 43. Crocôta, a garment of a saffron colour, (crocei coloris), Cic. Resp. Har. 21. Sindon, fine linen from Egypt and Tyre, Martial. ii. 16. iv. 19. 12. xi. 1. Vestis atra vel pulla, black or iron gray, used in mourning, &c.

In private and public mourning, the Romans laid aside their orna- ments, their gold and purple, Liv. ix. 7. xxxiv. 7.

No ornament was more generally worn among the Romans than rings, (ANNULI.) This custom seems to have been borrowed from

* Bruce in his travels affirms, that though he caused the waters to be carefully dragged for the Murex, near Tyre, no such shell-fish was to be found there, and he therefore hastily concludes, that the Tyrians, &c. who dyed purple, framed the story of a dye made from the Murex, &c. only to conceal their knowledge of cochineal. But there were many other places, besides Tyre, where purple was manufactured, particularly at Tarentum, now Taranto, in Italy, where Ulysses in his travels, says immense heaps of these shells are still to be seen. It is said that this shell-fish is also found on the coasts of Guayaquil and Gautimala in PERRU. It is of the size of a large walnut, and adheres to the rocks that are washed by the sea. The fluid may be ex- tracted by squeezing without killing the fish; but if the operation be often repeated, the fish dies. There are many species of the Murex. Various shades in the dye were produced from other shell-fish, particularly from a kind of Buccinum: but the finest tint was gotten from the Murex. These species of shells are found in various parts of the Mediterranean, but the use of them is now superseded by Cochineal.

the Sabines, Liv. i. 11. The senators and equites wore golden rings, Liv. xxiii. 12. xxvi. 36. also the legionary tribunes, Appian. de Bell. Punic. 63. Anciently none but the senators and equites were allowed to wear gold rings, Dio. xviii. 45.

The plebeians wore iron rings, Stat. Sylv. iii. 2. 144. unless when presented with a golden one for their bravery in war, Cic. Verr. iii. 80. or for any other desert, Suet. Jul. 39. Cic. Fam. x. 31. Macrob. Sat. ii. 10. Under the emperors, the right of wearing a golden ring was more liberally conferred, and often for frivolous reasons, Plin. xxxiii. 1 & 2. Suet. Galb. 14. Vitell. 12. Tacit. Hist. iv. 3. At last, it was granted by Justinian to all citizens, Novell. 78. Some were so finical with respect to this piece of dress, as to have lighter rings for summer and heavier for winter, Juvenal. i. 28. hence called Semestres, Id. vii. 89.

The ancient Romans usually wore but one ring, on the left hand, on the finger next the least : hence called DIGITUS ANNULARIS, Gell. x. 10. Macrob. vii. 13. But in later times, some wore several rings, Horat. Sat. ii. 7. 9. some, one on each finger, Martial. v. 62. 5. or more, Id. v. 11. xi. 60. which was always esteemed a mark of effeminacy.

Rings were laid aside at night and when they bathed, Ibid. Terent. Heaut. iv. 1. 42. Ovid. Amor. ii. 15. 23. also by suppliants, Liv. xliii. 16. Val. Max. viii. 1. 3. and in mourning, Liv. ix. 7. Suet. Aug. 101. Isidor. xix. 31.

The case (capsula) where rings were kept, was called DACTYLOTHECA, Martial. xi. 60.

Rings were set with precious stones (gemmæ) of various kinds ; as jasper, (jaspis), sardonyx, adamant, &c. Martial. ii. 50. v. 11. on which were engraved the images of some of their ancestors or friends, or a prince or a great man, Cic. Cat. iii. 5. Fin. v. 1. Ovid. Trist. i. 6. 5. Plin. Ep. x. 16. Suet. Tib. 58. Senec. de ben. iii. 26. or the representation of some signal event, Suet. Galb. x. or the like, Plin. xxxvii. 1. Plaut. Curc. iii. 50. Thus on Pompey's ring were engraved three trophies, Dio. xlii. 18. as emblems of his three triumphs over the three parts of the world, Europe, Asia, and Africa, Cic. Sext. 61. Pis. 13. Balb. 4 & 6. Plin. vii. 26. On Cæsar's ring, an armed Venus, Dio. xliii. 43. on that of Augustus, first a sphinx, afterwards the image of Alexander the Great, and at last his own, which the succeeding emperors continued to use, Plin. 37. 1. Suet. Aug. 50. Dio. li. 3.

Nonius, a senator, is said to have been proscribed by Antony for the sake of a gem in his ring, worth 20,000 sesterces, Plin. xxxvii. 6. s. 21.

Rings were used chiefly for sealing letters and papers, (ad tabulas obsignandas, ANNULUS SIGNATORIUS.) Macrob. Sat. vii. 13. Liv. xxvii. 28. Tacit. Annal. ii. 2. Martial. ix. 89. also cellars, chests, casks, &c. Plaut. Cas. ii. 1. 1. Cic. Fam. xvi. 26. They were affixed to certain signs or symbols, (symbola, v. -i) used for tokens, like what we call Tallies, or Tally-sticks, and given in contracts instead of a bill or bond, Plaut. Bacch. ii. 3. 29. Pseud. i. 1. 53. ii. 2. 53. iv. 7. 104. or for any sign, Justin. ii. 12. Rings used also to be given by those who agreed to club for an entertainment, (qui coëderunt, ut de symbolis essent, i. e. qui communi sumptu erant una canaturi,) to the person commissioned to bespeak it, (qui ei rei præfectus est,) Ter. Eun. ii. 4. 1. Plaut. Stich. iii. 1. 28 & 34. from symbola, a shot or reckoning; hence symbolam dare, to pay his reckoning, Ter. And. i. 1. 61. Asymbolus ad cœnam venire, without paying, Id. Phorm. ii. 2. 25. Gell. vi. 13. The Romans anciently called a ring ungulus, from unguis, a nail; as the Greeks, δακτυλος, from δακνυλος, a finger; afterwards both called it symbolus, v. -um, Plin. xxxiii. 1. s. 4.

When a person at the point of death delivered his ring to any one, it was esteemed a mark of particular affection, Curt. x. 5. Justin. xii. 15. Val. Max. vii. 88.

Rings were usually pulled off from the fingers of persons dying, Suet. Tib. 83. Cal. 12. but they seem to have been sometimes put on again before the dead body was burnt, Prop. iv. 7. 9.

Rings were worn by women as well as men, both before and after marriage, Horat. Od. i. 9. 23. Terent. Hec. iv. i. 59. v. 3. 30. It seems any free woman might wear a golden one, Plaut. Cas. iii. 5. 63. and Isidorus says, all free men, xix. 32. contrary to other authors. A ring used to be given by a man to the woman he was about to marry, as a pledge of their intended union, (ANNULUS PRONUBUS,) Juvenal. vi. 27. a plain iron one (ferreus sine gemma) according to Pliny, xxxi. 1. But others make it of gold, Tertull. Apolog. 6. Isid. xix. 32. Those who triumphed also wore an iron ring, Plin. 33. i. s. 4.

The ancient Romans, like other rude nations, suffered their beards to grow, Liv. v. 41. (hence called barbati, Cic. Mur. 12. Cæli. 14. Fin. iv. 23. Juvenal. iv. 103. but barbatus is also put for a full grown man, Horat. Sat. ii. 3. 249. Juvenal. x. 56. Martial. viii. 52.) till about the year of the city 454, one P. Ticinius Mænas or Mæna brought barbers from Sicily, and first introduced the custom of shaving at Rome, Plin. vii. 59. which continued to the time of Hadrian, who, to cover some excrescences on his chin, revived the custom of letting the beard grow, Spartian. Adrian. 26. but that of shaving was soon after resumed.

The Romans usually wore their hair short, and dressed it (cæsariem, crines, capillos, comam vel comas, pectebant vel comebant), with great care, especially in later ages, when attention to this part of dress was carried to the greatest excess, Senec. de brev. vitæ, 12. Ointments and perfumes were used even in the army, Suet. Cæs. 67.

When young men first began to shave, (cum barba resecta est, Ovid. Trist. iv. 10. 58.) they were said ponere barbam, Suet. Cal. 10. The day on which they did this was held as a festival, and presents were sent them by their friends, Juvenal. iii. 187. Martial. iii. 6.

Their beard was shaven for the first time sooner or later at pleasure ; sometimes when the toga virilis was assumed, Suet. Cal. 10. but usually about the age of twenty-one, Macrob. in Som. Scip. i. 6. Augustus did not shave till twenty-five. Dio. xlviii. 34.—Hence young men with a long down (lanugo) were called Juvenes barbati, Cic. Att. i. 14. or bene barbati, Id. Cat. ii. 10.

The first growth of the beard (prima barba vel lanugo) was consecrated to some god, Petron. 29. thus Nero consecrated his in a golden box, (prixide aureâ), set with pearls, to Jupiter Capitolinus, Suet. Ner. 12. At the same time, the hair of the head was cut and consecrated also, usually to Apollo, Martial. i. 32. sometimes to Bacchus, Stat. Theb. viii. 493. Till then they wore it uncut, either loose, Horat. Od. ii. 5. 23. iii. 20. 13. iv. 10. 3. or bound behind in a knot, (renodabant, vel nodo religabant), Id. Epod. xi. 42. Hence they were called CAPILLATI, Petron. 27.

Both men and women among the Greeks and Romans used to let their hair grow (pascere, alere, nutrire, promittere vel submittere) in honour of some divinity, not only in youth, but afterwards, Virg. Æn. vii. 391. Stat. Sylv. iii. Præf. et carm. 4. 6. Theb. ii. 253. vi. 607. Censorin. de D. N. 1. Plutarch. in Thes. as the Nazarites among the Jews, Numb. vi. 5. So Paul, Acts, xviii. 18.

The Britons in the time of Cæsar shaved the rest of their body, all except the head and upper lip, Cæs. B. C. v. 10.

In grief and mourning, the Romans allowed their hair and beard to grow, (promittebant vel submittebant), Liv. vi. 16. Suet. Jul. 67. Aug. 23. Cal. 24. or let it flow dishevelled, (solvebant), Liv. i. 26. Torent. Heaut. ii. 3. 45. Virg. Æn. iii. 65. Ovid. Fast. ii. 813. tore it, (lacerabant vel evellebant), Cic. Tusc. iii. 26. Curt. x. 5. or covered it with dust and ashes, Virg. Æn. xii. 609. Catull. xlv. 224. The Greeks, on the contrary, in grief, cut their hair and shaved their beard, Senec. Benef. v. 6. Plutarch. in Pelopid. et Alexand. Bion. Etyll. 1. 81. as likewise did some barbarous nations, Suet. Cal. 5. It was reckoned ignominious among the Jews to shave a person's beard, 2 Sam. x. 4. Among the Catti, a nation of Germany, a young man was not allowed to shave or cut his hair till he had slain an enemy, Tacit. de Mor. Germ. 31. So Civilis acted in consequence of a vow, Id. Hist. iv. 61.

Those who professed philosophy also used to let their beard grow, to give them an air of gravity, Horat. Sat. i. 3. 133. ii. 3. 35. Art. Post. 297. Hence Barbatus magister for Socrates, Pers. iv. 1. but liber barbatus, i. e. villosus, rough, Martial. xiv. 84. barbatus vivit, without shaving, Id. xi. 85. 18.

Augustus used sometimes to clip (tondere forcicè) his beard, and sometimes to shave it, (radere novaculâ, i. e. radendam curare vel facere), Suet. Aug. 79. So Martial. ii. 17. Some used to pull the hair from the root, (pilos vellere), with an instrument called VoxSELLA, nippers or small pincers, Plaut. Curc. iv. 4. 22. Suet. Cæs. 45. not only of the face, but of the legs, &c. Id. Jul. 45. Aug. 68. Galb. 22. Oth. 12. Martial. v. 62. viii. 46. ix. 28. Quinctil. i. 6. v. 9. viii. proæm. or to burn them out with the flame of nut shells, (su- burere nucæ ardenti;) Suet. Aug. 68. or of walnut-shells, (adurert candentibus juglandium putaminibus;) as the tyrant Dionysius did, Cic. Tusc. v. 20. Off. ii. 7. or with certain ointment called PSILOTHRUM vel DROPAX, Martial. iii. 74. vi. 93. x. 65. or with hot pitch or rosin, which Juvenal calls calidi fascia visci, ix. 14. for this purpose certain women were employed, called USTRICULÆ, Tertull. de pall. 4. This pulling of the hairs, however, was always reckoned a mark of great effeminacy, Gell. vii. 12. Cic. Ross. Com. 7. Plin. Ep. 29. l. s. 8. except from the arm-pits; (alæ vel axilla;) Horat. Epod. xii. 5. Senec. Ep. 114. Juvenal. xi. 157. as likewise to use a mirror when shaving, Juvenal. ii. 99. Martial. vi. 64. 4.

The Romans under the emperors began to use a kind of peruke or periwig, to cover or supply the want of hair, called CAPILLAMENTUM, Suet. Cal. 11. or GALERUS, Juvenal. vi. 120. or GALERICULUM, Suet. Oth. 12. The false hair, (crines ficti, vel suppositi;) seems to have been fixed on a skin, Martial. xiv. 50. This contrivance does not appear to have been known in the time of Julius Cæsar, Suet. Jul. 45. at least not used by men; for it was used by women, Ovid. Amor. i. 14. 45.

In great families there were slaves for dressing the hair and for shaving, (TONSOIRES;) Ovid. Met. xi. 182. Martial. vi. 52. and for cutting the nails, Plaut. Aul. ii. 4. 33. Tibull. i. 8. 11. Val. Max. iii. 2. 15. sometimes female slaves did this, (TONSTRICES;) Cic. Tusc. v. 20. Plaut. Truc. iv. 3. 59.

There were for poorer people public barbers' shops or shades, (TONSTRINÆ;) much frequented, Ter. Phorm. i. 2. 39. Horat. Ep. i. 7. 50. where females also used to officiate, Martial. ii. 17.

Slaves were dressed nearly in the same manner with the poor people, (See page 352—53.) in clothes of a darkish colour, (pullati;) and slippers, (crepidati;) hence vestis servilis, Cic. Pis. 38. Servilis habitus, Tacit. Hist. iv. 36.

Slaves in white are mentioned with disapprobation, Plaut. Casin. ii. sc. Suet. Dom. 12. They wore either a straight tunic, called EXOMIS or DIPHThERA, Gell. vii. 12. Hesych. 16. or a coarse frock, (lacerna et cucullus;) Horat. Sat. ii. 7. 54. Juvenal. iii. 170. Martial. x. 76.

It was once proposed in the senate, that slaves should be distinguished from citizens by their dress; but it appeared dangerous to discover their number, Senec. de clem. i. 24. Epist. 18.

Slaves wore their beard and hair long. When manumitted, they shaved their head and put on a cap, (pileus;) Juvenal. v. 171. Plaut. Amphit. i. 1. 306. See p. 43.

In like manner, those who had escaped from shipwreck shaved their head, Plaut. Rud. v. 2. 16. Juvenal. xli. 81. Lucian. in Ermostim. In calm weather, mariners neither cut their hair nor nails, Petron. 104. Those accused of a capital crime, when acquitted, cut their hair and shaved, and went to the capitol to return thanks to Jupiter, Martial. ii. 74. Plin. Ep. 7. 27.

The ancients regarded so much the cutting of the hair, that they believed no one died, till Proserpina, either in person or by the ministrations of Atröpos, cut off a hair from the head, which was considered as a kind of first fruits of consecration to Pluto, Virg. Æn. iv. 698. Hor. Od. i. 28. 20.

II. ROMAN ENTERTAINMENTS, EXERCISES, BATHS, PRIVATE GAMES, &c.

THE principal meal of the Romans was what they called COENA, supper; supposed by some to have been anciently their only one, Isidor. xx. 2.

✓ The usual time for the cæna was the ninth hour, or three o'clock after noon in summer, Cic. Fam. ix. 28. Martial. iv. 8. 6. and the tenth hour in winter, Auct. ad Herenn. iv. 51. Plin. Ep. iii. 1. It was esteemed luxurious to sup more early, Juvenal. i. 49. Plin. Pan. 49.

✓ An entertainment begun before the usual time, and prolonged till late at night, was called CONVIVIVM INTEMPESTIVUM; if prolonged till near morning, COENA ANTELUCCANA, Cic. Cat. ii. 10. Cic. Arch. 6. Mur. 6. Verr. iii. 25. Sen. 14. Att. ix. 1. Senec. de irâ, ii. 28. Suet. Cal. 45. Such as feasted in this manner, were said epulari vel vivere DE DIE, Liv. xxv. 23. Cat. 47. 6. Suet. Ner. 27. Curt. v. 22. and IN DIEM vivere, when they had no thought of futurity, Cic. Phil. ii. 34. Tusc. v. 11. Orat. ii. 40. Phil. Ep. v. 5. a thing which was subject to the animadversion of the censors.

About mid-day the Romans took another meal, called PRANDIVM, dinner, which anciently used to be called COENA, (κοινον, i. e. cibus communis, a pluribus sumptus, Plutarch. Sympos. viii. 9. Isid. xx. 2. quod Plinius alludere videtur, Ep. ii. 6.) because taken in company, and food taken in the evening was called (cibus vespertinus), VESPERNA; Festus in COENA. But when the Romans, upon the increase of riches, began to devote longer time to the cæna or common meal, that it might not interfere with business it was deferred till the evening; and food taken at mid-day was called PRANDIVM.

At the hour of dinner the people used to be dismissed from the spectacles, Suet. Claud. 34. Cal. 56. 58; which custom first began A. U. 693. Dio. xxxvii. 46.

They took only a little light food (cibum levem et facilem sumebant, v. gustabant.) Plin. Ep. iii. 4. for dinner without any formal preparation; Cels. i. 3. Horat. Sat. i. 6. 127. ii. 4. 22. Senec. Epist. 84. Martial. xiii. 30. but not always so, Plaut. Pan. iii. 5. 14. Cic. Verr. i. 19. Horat. Sat. ii. 3. 245. Suet. Claud. 33. Domit. 21.

Sometimes the emperors gave public dinners to the whole Roman people, Suet. Jul. 38. Tib. 20.

A dinner was called PRANDIVM CANINUM vel abstemium, at which no wine was drunk, (quod canis vino caret.) Gell. xiii. 29.

In the army, food taken at any time was called PRANDIVM, Liv. xxviii. 14. and the army after it, PRANSUS PARATUS, Gell. xv. 12.

Besides the prandium and cana, it became customary to take in the morning a breakfast, (JENTACULUM,) Plaut. Curc. i. 1. 72. Suet. Vitel. 13. Martial. xiii. 31. xiv. 223. and something delicious after supper to eat with their drink, called COMISSATIO, Suet. Vitel. 13. Domit. 21. They used sometimes to sup in one place, and take this after-repast in another, Ibid. Liv. xl. 7. 9. Plaut. Most. i. 4. 5.

As the entertainment after supper was often continued till late at night, Suet. Tit. 7. hence COMISSARI, to feast luxuriously, to revel, to riot, (καμαζαν, α καμη, vicus, Festus vel potius a Κωμος, Comus, the god of nocturnal merriment and feasting among the Greeks,) Hor. Od. iv. 1. 9. Quinct. xi. 3. 57. COMISSATIO, a feast of that kind, revelling or rioting after supper, Cic. Cat. ii. 5. Mur. 6. Cal. 15. Martial. xii. 48. 11. COMISSATOR, a person who indulged in such feasting, a companion or associate in feasting and revelling, Ter. Adolph. v. 2. 8. Liv. xl. 7. Martial. iv. 5. 3. ix. 62. 15. Petron. 65. Gell. iv. 14. Hence Cicero calls the favourers of the conspiracy of Catiline, after it was suppressed, COMISSATORES CONJURATIONIS, Att. i. 16.

Some took food betwixt dinner and supper, called MERENDA, (quia vulgò debatur iis, qui ære merebant, i. e. mercenariis, antequam labore mitterentur; a domino seu conductore,) Plaut. Most. iv. 2. 50. or ANTECENA, vel -ium, Isidor. xl. 22.

The ancient Romans lived on the simplest fare, chiefly on pot-tage, (puls,) or bread and pot-herbs: (hence every thing eaten with bread or besides bread, was afterwards called PULMENTUM or PULMENTARIUM, (βρωμιον, opsonium, called in Scotland, Kitchen,) Plin. xviii. 8. Varro. de Lat. Ling. iv. 22. Horat. Sat. ii. 2. 20. Ep. i. 18. 49. Senec. Ep. 87. Phædr. iii. 7. 23. Juvenal. vii. 185. xiv. 171. (Uncta pulmentaria, i. e. lauta et delicata fercula, nice delicate dishes, Pers. iii. 102.) Their chief magistrates, and most illustrious generals, when out of office, cultivated the ground with their own hands, sat down at the same board, and partook of the same food with their servants; as Cato the Censor, Plutarch. They sometimes even dressed their dinner themselves, as CURIUS, Plin. xix. 5. s. 26. Juvenal. xi. 79. or had it brought them to the field by their wives, Martial. iv. 64.

But when riches were introduced by the extension of conquest, the manners of the people were changed, luxury seized all ranks, Savior armis luxuria incubuit, victumque ulciscitur orbem, Juvenal. vi. 291. The pleasures of the table became the chief object of attention. Every thing was ransacked to gratify the appetite, (vescendi causâ terrâ marique omnia exquirere, &c. Sall. Cat. 13. Gustus, i. e. dapes delicatas, dainties, elementa per omnia quærunt, Juvenal. xi. 14.)

✓ The Romans at first sat at meals, Ovid. Fast. vi. 305. Serv. in Virg. Æn. vii. 176. as did also the Greeks. Homer's heroes sat on separate seats (θρονοι, solia,) around the wall, with a small table before each, on which the meat and drink were set, Odys. i. iii. &c.

vii. & viii. So the Germans, Tacit. 22. and Spaniards, Strab. ii. p. 155.

✓ The custom of reclining (accumbendi), on couches, (LECTI vel TORI), was introduced from the nations of the east ; at first adopted only by the men, Val. Max. ii. 1. 2. but afterwards allowed also to the women. It was used in Africa, in the time of Scipio Africanus the elder, Liv. xviii. 28.

The images of the gods used to be placed in this posture in a Lectisternium ; that of Jupiter reclining on a couch, and those of Juno and Minerva erect on seats, Val. Max. ii. 1. 2.

✓ Boys and young men below seventeen, sat at the foot of the couch of their parents or friends, (in imo lecto vel subsellio, vel ad lecti fulcra assidebant,) Suet. Aug. 64. at a more frugal table, (propria et parcior mensâ,) Tacit. Ann. xiii. 16, sometimes also girls, Suet. Claud. 32. and persons of low rank, Plaut. Stich. iii. 2. 32. v. 4. 21. Donat. in Vit. Terent.

✓ The custom of reclining took place only at supper. There was no formality at other meals. Persons took them alone or in company, either standing or sitting, Suet. Aug. 78.

✓ The place where they supped was anciently called CCENACULUM, in the higher part of the house, Varro. de Lat. Ling. iv. 33. whence the whole upper part, or highest story of a house, was called by that name, Liv. xxxix. 40. Suet. Vit. 7. afterwards CCENATIO, Suet. Ner. 31. Juvenal. vii. 183, or TRICLINIUM, Cic. Att. 53. Suet. Cæs. 43. Tib. 72. because three couches (τρεις κλνας, tres lecti, triclinares vel discubitorii), were spread (sternebantur), around the table, on which the guests might recline, Serv. in Virg. Æn. i. 608.

✓ On each couch there were commonly three. They lay with the upper parts of the body reclined on the left arm, the head a little raised, the back supported by cushions, (pulvini, v. -illi), and the limbs stretched out at full length, or a little bent ; the feet of the first behind the back of the second, and his feet behind the back of the third, with a pillow between each. The head of the second was opposite to the breast of the first, so that, if he wanted to speak to him, especially if the thing was to be secret, he was obliged to lean upon his bosom, (in sinu recumbere, Plin. Ep. iv. 22.) thus, John, xiii. 23. In conversation, those who spoke raised themselves almost upright, supported by cushions. When they ate, they raised themselves on their elbow, Horat. Od. i. 27. 8. Sat. ii. 4. 39. and made use of the right hand, sometimes of both hands ; for we do not read of their using either knives or forks : hence Manus uncta, Hor. Ep. i. 16. 23.

He who reclined at the top, (ad caput lecti), was called SUMMUS vel primus, the highest ; at the foot, IMUS vel ultimus, the lowest ; between them, MEDIUS, which was esteemed the most honourable place, Virg. ib. Horat. Sat. ii. 8. 20.

If a consul was present at a feast, his place was the lowest on the middle couch, which was hence called LOCUS CONSULARIS, because there he could most conveniently receive any messages that were sent to him, Plutarch. Sympos. ii. 3. The master of the feast reclined at the top of the lowest couch, next to the consul.

Sometimes on one couch there were only two, sometimes four, Horat. Sat. i. 4. 86. It was reckoned sordid to have more, Cic. Pis. 27.

Sometimes there were only two couches in a room; hence called BICLINIUM, Quinctil. i. 5. Plaut. Bacch. iv. 5. 69 & 102.

The number of couches depended on that of the guests, which Varro said ought not to be below the number of the Graces, nor above that of the Muses, Gell. xiii. 11. So in the time of Plautus, the number of those who reclined on couches did not exceed nine, Stich. iii. 2. 31. iv. 2. 12. The persons whom those who were invited had liberty to bring with them, were called UMBRÆ, uninvited guests, Hor. Sat. ii. 8. 22. Ep. i. v. 28.

The bedsteads (SPONDÆ) and feet (FULCRA vel pedes) were made of wood, Ovid. Met. viii. 656. sometimes of silver or gold, Suet. Jul. 49. or adorned with plates (bractea vel lamina) of silver, Suet. Cal. 22. Martial. viii. 35. 5. On the couch was laid a mattress or quilt, (CULCITA, Juvenal. v. 17. Plin. xix. l. vel MATTA, Ovid. Fast. vi. 680.) stuffed with feathers or wool, Cic. Tusc. iii. 19. anciently with hay or chaff, (fæno vel acere aut paleâ), Varro. de Lat. Ling. iv. 35. All kinds of stuffing (omnia farcimina) were called TOMENTUM, quasi tondimentum, Suet. Tib. 54. Martial. xi. 22. xiv. 150.

A couch with coarse stuffing, (conciisa pulsus, i. e. arundines palustris), a pallet, was called Tomentum CIRCENSE, because such were used in the circus; or opposed to Tomentum LANGONICUM, v. LEUCONICUM, Martial. xiv. 160. Sen. de Vit. Beat. 25.

At first, couches seemed to have been covered with herbs or leaves, Ovid. Fast. i. 200 & 205. hence LECTUS, a couch, (quod herbis et frondibus lectis incubabant), Varro. de Lat. Ling. iv. 35. vel TORUS, (quia veteres super herbam tortam discumbebant, Id. et Serv. in Virg. Æn. i. 708. v. 388. vel, ut alii dicunt, quod lectus toris, i. e. funibus tenderatur, Horat. Epod. xii. 12.) or with straw (stramen vel stramentum), Plin. viii. 48. Horat. Sat. ii. 3. 117.

The cloth or ticking which covered the mattress or couch, the bed-covering (operimentum vel involucrum), was called TORAL, Horat. Sat. ii. 4. 84. Ep. i. 5. 22. by later writers, Torale Lintheum, or SEGESTRE, v. -trum, -trium, Varro. ibid.; or LODIX, which is also put for a sheet or blanket, Juvenal. vi. 194. vii. 66. Martial. xiv. 148. 152. Lodicula, a small blanket or flannel coverlet for the body, Suet. Aug. 83.

On solemn occasions, the couches were covered with superb cloth, with purple and embroidery, (STRAGULA VESTIS), Cic. Verr. ii. 19. Liv. xxxiv. 7. Horat. Sat. ii. 2. 3. 118. picta stragula, Tibull. i. 2. 79. Textile stragulum, an embroidered coverlet, with a beautiful mattress below (pulcherrimo strato), Cic. Tusc. v. 21. but some read here pulcherrimè; as, Lectus stratus conchyliato pe- ristromate, bespread with a purple covering, Cic. Phil. ii. 27. also ATTALICA peripelasmata, Cic. Verr. iv. 12. much the same with what Virgil calls superba aulaa, fine tapestry, Æn. i. 697. said to have been first invented at the court (in aula, hinc AULÆA) of Attalus, king of Pergamus, Plin. viii. 48. Babylonica peristromata consutaque tapetia, wrought with needle-work, Plaut. Stich. ii. 2. 54.

Hangings (aulæa) used likewise to be suspended from the top of the room to receive the dust, Horat. Sat. ii. 8. 54. Serv. in Virg. Æn. i. 697.

Under the emperors, instead of three couches, was introduced the use of one of a semicircular form, thus C; called SIGMA, from the Greek letter of that name, which usually contained seven, Martial. ix. 48. sometimes eight, called also STIBADIUM, Id. xiv. 87. But in later ages the custom was introduced, which still prevails in the East, of sitting or reclining on the floor at meat, and at other times, on cushions, ACCUBITA, Scholiast. in Juvenal. v. 17. Lamprid. Helio. 19 & 25. covered with cloths, ACCUBITALIA, Treb. Pollip. in Claud. 14.

The tables (MENSÆ) of the Romans were anciently square, and called CIBILLÆ, Varro. de Lat. Ling. iv. 25. Festus; on three sides of which were placed three couches; the fourth side was left empty for the slaves to bring in and out the dishes. When the semicircular couch or the sigma came to be used, tables were made round, Juvenal. i. 137.

The tables of the great were usually made of citron or maple wood, and adorned with ivory, Cic. Verr. iv. 17. Martial. xiv. 89 & 90. ii. 43. Plin. xiii. 15. s. 29.

The tables were sometimes brought in and out with the dishes on them; hence Mensam APPONERE, Plaut. Asin. v. 1. 2. Id. Most. i. 3. 150. iii. 1. 26. Cic. Att. xiv. 21. Ovid. Met. viii. 570. et AUFERRERE, Plaut. Amph. ii. 2. 175. vel REMOVERE, Virg. Æn. i. 220. &c. 627; but some here take mensæ for the dishes. Sometimes the dishes were set down on the table; hence cibum, lances, patinas, vel cœnam mensis APPONERE, Virg. Æn. iv. 602. Cic. Tusc. v. 32. Verr. iv. 22. Att. vi. 1. Epulis mensas onerare, Virg. G. iv. 388. DEMERE vel TOLLERE, Plat. Mil. iii. 1. 55, &c.

MENSA is sometimes put for the meat or dishes, (lanx, patina, pastella vel discus;) hence PRIMA MENSA, for prima fercula, the first course, the meat; Macrob. Sat. vii. 1. SECUNDA MENSA, the second course, the fruits, &c. bellaria, or the dessert, Cic. Att. xiv. 6. Fam. xvi. 21. Virg. G. ii. 101. Nep. Ages. 6. Mittere de mensa, to send some dish, or part of a dish, to a person absent, Cic. Att. v. 1. Dæpen mensæ brevis, a short meal, a frugal table, Horat. Art. p. 198. mensa opima, Sil. x. 283.

Virgil uses mensæ for the cakes of wheaten bread (adoreæ liba vel cereale solum. SOLUM omne dicitur, quod aliquid sustinet, Serv. in Virg. Ecl. vi. 35. Æn. v. 119. Ovid. Met. i. 73.) put under the meat, which he calls orbes, because of their circular figure, and quadra, because each cake was divided into four parts, quarters, or quadrants, by two straight lines drawn through the centre, Virg. Æn. vii. 116. Hence alienâ vivere quadrâ, at another's expense or table, Juvenal. v. 2. findetur quadrâ, i. e. frustum panis, the piece of bread, Horat. Ep. i. 17. 49. So quadrâ placentæ vel casei, Martial. vi. 75. xii. 32. 18.

A table with one foot was called MONOPODIUM. These were of a circular figure, (orbis,) used chiefly by the rich, and commonly adorned with ivory and sculptures, Juvenal. i. 138. xi. 123.

A side-board was called ABACUS, Liv. xxxix. 6. Cic. Verr. iv. 16. 25. Tusc. v. 21. or DELPHICA, sc. mensa, Vet. Schol. in Juvenal. iii. 204. Martial. xii. 67. Cic. Verr. iv. 59. LAPIS ALBUS, i. e. mensa marmorea, Horat. Sat. i. 6. 116.

The table of the poorer people commonly had three feet, (TRIPES,) Horat. Sat. i. 3. 23. Ovid. Met. viii. 661. and sometimes one of them shorter than the other two, Ovid. Met. viii. 661. Hence inæquales mensæ, Martial. i. 56. 11.

The ancient Romans did not use table-cloths, (mantilia,) but wiped the table with a sponge, Martial. xiv. 44. or with a coarse cloth, (gausæpe), Horat. Sat. ii. 8. 11.

Before the guests began to eat, they always washed their hands, and a towel (MANTILE, v. -tele, -telle, -um, v. -ium,) was furnished them in the house where they supped, to dry them, Virg. Æn. i. 702. G. iv. 377. But each guest seems to have brought with him, from home, the table-napkin (MAPPA) or cloth, which he used in time of eating to wipe his mouth and hands, Martial. xii. 29. Horat. ii. 8. 63. but not always, Hor. Ep. i. 5. 22. The mappa was sometimes adorned with a purple fringe, (lato clavo,) Mart. iv. 46. 17.

The guests used sometimes, with the permission of the master of the feast, to put some part of the entertainment into the mappa, and give it to their slaves to carry home, Mart. ii. 32.

Table-cloths (lintea villosa, gausæpa vel mantilia,) began to be used under the emperors, Martial. xiv. 138. xii. 29. 12.

In latter times the Romans before supper used always to bathe, Plaut. Stich. v. 2. 19. The wealthy had baths, (BALNEUM, vel Balineum, plur. -næ vel a,) both cold and hot, at their own houses, Cic. de Orat. ii. 55. There were public baths (BALNEA) for the use of the citizens at large, Cic. Cæl. 26. Horat. Ep. i. 1. 92. where there were separate apartments for the men and women, (balnea virilia et muliebria,) Varro de Lat. Ling. viii. 42. Vitruv. v. 10. Gell. x. 3. Each paid to the bath-keeper (balneator) a small coin, (quadrans;) Horat. Sat. i. 3. 137. Juvenal. vi. 446. Hence res quadrantaria for balneum, Senec. Epist. 86. Quadrantaria permutatis, i. e. pro quadrante copiam sui fecit, Cic. Cæl. 26. So quadrantaria is put for a mean harlot, Quinctil. viii. 6. Those under age paid nothing, Juvenal. vi. 446.

The usual time of bathing was two o'clock (octava hora) in summer, and three in winter, Plin. Ep. iii. 1. Martial. x. 48. on festival days sooner, Juvenal. xi. 205.

The Romans before bathing took various kinds of exercise, (exer- citationes campestris, post decisa negotia campo, sc. Martio, Hor. Ep. i. 1. 59.) as the ball or tennis, (PILA,) Horat. Sat. i. 5. 48. throwing the javelin, and the DISCUS or quoit, a round bullet of stone, iron, or lead, with a thong tied to it, Horat. Od. i. 8. 11. the PALUS, or PALABIA, Juvenal. vi. 246. (see p. 317.) riding, running, leaping, &c. Suet. Aug. 83. Martial. vii. 31.

There were chiefly four kinds of balls; 1.—PILA TRIGONALIS vel TRIGON, so called, because those who played at it, were placed in a triangle, (τρίγωνον,) and tossed it from one to another; he who first let it come to the ground was the loser.—2. FOLLIS vel folliculum, inflated with wind like our foot-ball, which, if large, they drove with the arms, and simply called PILA, Prop. iii. 12. 5. or PILA VELOX, Horat. Sat. ii. 2. 11. if smaller, with the hand, armed with a kind of gauntlet; hence called FOLLIS PUGILLATORIUS, Plaut. Rud. iii. 4. 16. Martial. xiv. 47.—3. PILA PAGANICA, the village-ball, stuffed with feathers; less than the follis, but more weighty, Martial. xiv. 45.—4. HARPASTUM, (ab ἀρπάζω, rapiō), the smallest of all, which they snatched from one another, Martial. iv. 19. vii. 31. Suet. Aug. 83.

Those who played at the ball, were said ludere raptim, vel pilam revocare cadentem, when they struck it rebounding from the ground; when a number played together in a ring, and the person, who had the ball, seemed to aim at one, but struck another, ludere datatim, vel non sperato fugientem reddere gestus; when they snatched the ball from one another, and threw it aloft, without letting it fall to the ground, ludere expulsim, vel pilam geminare volentem, Lucan. ad Pison. 173. Plaut. Curc. ii. 3. 17. Isidor. i. 21.

✓ In country villas there was usually a tennis-court, or place for playing at the ball, and for other exercises, laid out in the form of a circus; hence called SPHÆRISTERIUM, Suet. Vesp. 20. Plin. Ep. ii. 17. v. 6.

✓ Young men and boys used to amuse themselves in whirling along a circle of brass or iron, set round with rings, as our children do wooden hoops. It was called TROCHUS, (α τροχῶ, curro), and Græcus trochus, because borrowed from the Greeks, Horat. Od. iii. 24. 57. Martial. xi. 22. xiv. 169. The top (TURBO vel buxum) was peculiar to boys, Virg. Æn. vii. 378. Pers. iii. 51. Some confounded these two, but improperly.

Those who could not join in these exercises, took the air on foot, in a carriage, or a litter.

There were various places for walking, (AMBULACRA vel AMBULATIONES, ubi spatiarentur), both public and private, under the open air, or under covering, Cic. Dom. 44. Orat. ii. 20. Att. xiii. 29. ad Q. Frat. iii. 17. Gell. i. 2. Horat. Od. ii. 15. 16. Ep. i. 10. 22. Juvenal. iv. 5. vi. 60.

Covered walks, (PORTICUS, porticos or piazzas,) were built in different places, chiefly round the Campus Martius and Forum, supported by marble pillars, and adorned with statues and pictures, some of them of immense extent; as those of Claudius, Martial. de Spect. ii. 9. of Augustus, Suet. 31. of Apollo, Prop. ii. 31. I. Ovid. Trist. iii. 1. 59. of Nero, Suet. Ner. 31. of Pompey, Cic. de Fat. 4. Ovid. Art. Am. i. 67. of Livia, Plin. Ep. i. 5. &c.

Porticos were employed for various other purposes besides taking exercise. Sometimes the senate was assembled, and courts of justice held in them.

A place set apart for the purpose of exercise on horseback or in vehicles, was called GESTATIO. In villas it was generally contiguous to the garden, and laid out in the form of a circus, Plin. Epist. i. 3. ii. 17.

An enclosed gallery, with large windows to cool it in summer, was called CRYPTOPORTICUS, Plin. Epist. ii. 17. v. 6. commonly with a double row of windows, Id. vii. 21.

Literary men, for the sake of exercise, (stomachi causâ,) used to read aloud, (clarè et intentè legere,) Plin. Ep. ix. 36.

As the Romans neither wore linen, nor used stockings, frequent bathing was necessary both for cleanliness and health, especially as they took so much exercise.

Anciently they had no other bath but the Tiber. They indeed had no water but what they drew from thence, or from wells in the city and neighbourhood; as the fountain of Egeria, at the foot of Mount Aventine Liv. i. 19. Ovid. Fast. iii. 273. Juvenal. iii. 13. of Mercury, Ovid. Fast. v. 673. &c.

The first aqueduct at Rome was built by Appius Claudius, the censor, about the year of the city 441. Diodor. xx. 36. Seven or eight aqueducts were afterwards built, which brought water to Rome from the distance of many miles, in such abundance that no city was better supplied.

The aqueducts were constructed at a prodigious expense, carried through rocks and mountains, and over valleys, supported on stone or brick arches. Hence it is supposed the Romans were ignorant that water conveyed in pipes rises to the height of its source, whatever be the distance or inequality of ground through which it passes. It is strange they did not discover this fact, considering the frequent use they made of pipes (fistulæ) in conveying water. That they were not entirely ignorant of it, appears from Pliny, who says, Aqua in vel e plumbo subit altitudinem exortûs sui, water in leaden pipes rises to the height of its source, xxxi. 6. s. 31. The truth is, no pipes could have supported the weight of water conveyed to the city in the Roman aqueducts.

The waters were collected in reservoirs, called CASTELLA, and thence distributed throughout the city in leaden pipes, Plin. xxxvi. 15. Horat. Ep. i. 10. 20.

When the city was fully supplied with water, frequent baths were built, both by private individuals and for the use of the public; at first, however, more for utility than show, (in usum, non oblectamentum,) Senec. Ep. 86.

It was under Augustus that baths first began to assume an air of grandeur, and were called THERMÆ, (θερμαί, calores, i. e. calidæ aqua, Liv. xxxvi. 15.) bagnios or hot baths, although they also contained cold baths. An incredible number of these were built up and down the city, Plin. Epist. iv. 8. authors reckon above eight hundred, many of them built by the emperors with amazing magnificence. The chief were those of Agrippa, near the Pantheon, Dio. liii. 27. Martial. iii. 20. of Nero, Martial. vii. 33. Stat. Silv. i. 5. 61. of Titus, Suet. 7. of Domitian, Suet. 5. of Caracalla, Antoninus, Dioclesian, &c. Of these splendid vestiges still remain.

The basin (labrum aut lacus) where they bathed, was called BAPTISTERIUM. NATATIO or PISCINA. The cold bath was called FRIGIDARIUM, sc. ahenum v. balneum; the hot, CALDARIUM, and the tepid, TEPIDARIUM. The cold bath room was called CELLA FRIGIDARIA; and the hot, CELLA CALDARIA, Plin. Epist. v. 5. Vitruv. v. 10. the stove-room, HYPOCAUSTON, or VAPOARIUM, Cic. Q. Fratr. iii. 1. warmed by a furnace (propigneum vel præfurnium) below, Plin. Ep. ii. 17. adjoining to which were sweating rooms, (SUDATORIA, Senec. Epist. 52. vel ASSA, sc. balnea; Cic. Q. Fratr. iii. 1. ;) the undressing room was named AFODITARIUM, Cic. ibid. Plin. Ep. v. 6. the perfuming room, UNCTUARIUM, ii. 17. Several improvements were made in the construction of baths in the time of Seneca, Epist. 90.

The Romans began their bathing with hot water, and ended with cold. The cold bath was in great repute, after Antonius Musa recovered Augustus from a dangerous disease by the use of it; Suet. Aug. lix. 81. Plin. xxix. 1. Horat. Ep. i. 15. but fell into discredit after the death of Marcellus, which was occasioned by the injudicious application of the same remedy, Dio. liiii. 30.

The person who had the charge of the bath was called BALNEATOR, Cic. Cal. 26. Phil. xiii. 12. He had slaves under him, called CAPSARI, who took care of the clothes of those who bathed.

The slaves who anointed those who bathed, were called ALIPTÆ, Cic. Fam. i. 9. 35. Juvenal. iii. 76. vi. 421. or UNCTORES, Martial. vii. 31. 6. xii. 71. 3.

The instruments of an Aliptes were a curry-comb or scraper, (STRIGILIS, v. il.) to rub off (ad defricandum et destringendum vel radendum) the sweat and filth from the body; made of horn or brass, sometimes of silver or gold, Suet. Aug. 80. Horat. Sat. ii. 7. 110. Pers. v. 126. Martial. xiv. 51. Senec. Epist. 95. whence strigmenta for sordes;—towels or rubbing cloths, (LINTEA,)—a vial or cruet of oil, (GUTTUS,) Juvenal. xi. 158. usually of horn, (cornus;) hence a large horn was called RHINOCEROS, Juvenal. iii. 263. vii. 130. Martial. xiv. 52. 53. Gell. xvii. 8. a jug: (AMPULLA,) Plaut. Stich. i. 3. 77. Pers. i. 3. 44. and a small vessel called Lenticula, a Chrismatory.

The slave who had the care of the ointments was called UNGUENTARIUS, Serv. in Virg. Æn. i. 697.

As there was a great concourse of people at the baths, poets sometimes read their compositions there; Horat. Sat. i. 4. 73. Martial. iii. 44. 10. as they also did in the porticos and other places, Juve-

nal. i. 12. vii. 39. Plin. Epist. i. 13. iii. 18. vii. 17. viii. 12. Suet. Aug. 89. Claud. 41. Domit. 2. chiefly in the months of July and August, Plin. Epist. viii. 21. Juvenal. iii. 9.

✓ Studious men used to compose, hear, or dictate something while they were rubbed and wiped, Suet. Aug. 85. Plin. Epist. iii. 5. iv. 14.

✓ Before bathing, the Romans sometimes used to bask themselves in the sun, (sole uti,) Plin. Ep. iii. 5. vi. 16. Sen. Ep. 73. In sole, si caret vento, ambulet nudus, sc. Spurrina, Plin. Ep. iii. 1.

Under the emperors, not only places of exercise, (gymnasia et palestræ,) but also libraries, (bibliothecæ,) were annexed to the public baths, Senec. de Tranquil. An. 9.

The Romans after bathing dressed for supper. They put on the SYNTHESIS (vestis canatoria vel accubatoria) and slippers; which, when a person supped abroad, were carried to the place by a slave, with other things requisite; a mean person sometimes carried them himself, Horat. Ep. i. 13. 15. It was thought very wrong to appear at a banquet without the proper habit, Cic. Vat. 12. as among the Jews, Matth. xxii. 11.

✓ After exercising and bathing, the body required rest; hence probably the custom of reclining on couches at meat. Before they lay down, they put off their slippers, that they might not stain the couches, Martial. iii. 50. Horat. Sat. ii. 8. 77.

✓ At feasts the guests were crowned with garlands of flowers, herbs, or leaves, (serta, coronæ, vel corollæ,) tied and adorned with ribands, (vittæ, tenæ, vel lemnisci,) or with the rind or skin of the linden tree, (philyra,) Horat. Od. ii. 7. 23. ii. 11. 13. Sat. ii. 3. 256. Virg. Ecl. vi. 16. Juvenal. v. 36. xv. 50. Martial. xiii. 127. Ovid. Fast. v. 337. Plin. xvi. 14. These crowns, it was thought, prevented intoxication: hence cum coronâ ebrius, Plaut. Pseud. v. 2. Amph. iii. 4. 16.

Their hair also was perfumed with various ointments; (unguenta vel aromata,) nark or spikenard, NARDUM, vel -us, MALOBATHERUM ASSYRIUM, Horat. ibid. Martial. iii. 12. AMOMUM, Virg. Ecl. iii. 89. iv. 25. BALSAMUM ex Judæa, Plin. xii. 25. s. 54. &c.—When foreign ointments were first used at Rome, is uncertain; the selling of them was prohibited by the censors, A. U. 565. Plin. xiii. 3. s. 5.

✓ The Romans began their feasts by prayers and libations to the gods: (deos invocabant, Quintilian. v. pr. Libare diis dapes et bene precari, Liv. xxxix. 43.) They never tasted any thing without consecrating it; Tibull. i. 1. 19. They usually threw a part into the fire as an offering to the Lares, therefore called DII PATELLARII, Plaut. Cist. ii. 1. 46. Hence DAPES LIBATÆ; Horat. Sat. ii. 6. 67. and when they drank, they poured out a part in honour of some god on the table, which was held sacred as an altar, Macrob. Sat. iii. 11. Virg. Æn. i. 736. Sil. vii. 185. 748. Plaut. Curc. i. 2. 31. Ovid. Amor. i. 4. 27. with this formula, LIBO TIBI, Tacit. Annal. xv. 64.

The table was consecrated by setting on it the images of the Lares and salt-holders, (salinorum appositu,) Arnob. ii.

Salt was held in great veneration by the ancients. It was always used in sacrifices, Horat. Od. iii. 23. 20. Plin. xxxi. 7. s. 41. thus also Moses ordained, Levit. ii. 13. It was the chief thing eaten by the ancient Romans with bread and cheese, Plin. ibid. Horat. Sat. ii. 2. 17. as cresses, (nasturtium) by the ancient Persians, Cic. Tusc. v. 34. Hence SALARIUM, a salary or pension, Plin. ibid. Suet. Tib. 46. Martial. iii. 7. thus, Salaria multis subtraxit, quos otiosos videbat accipere, sc. Antoninus Pius, Capitolin. in vita ejus, 7.

A family saltcellar (paternum salinum, sc. vas) was kept with great care, Horat. Od. ii. 16. 14. To spill the salt at table was esteemed ominous, Festus. Setting the salt before a stranger was reckoned a symbol of friendship, as it still is by eastern nations.

From the savour which salt gives to food, and the insipidity of unsalted meat, sal was applied to the mind, Plin. xxxi. 7. s. 41. hence SAL, wit or humour; salsus, witty; insalsus, dull, insipid; sales, witty sayings; sal Atticum, sales urbani, Cic. Fam. ix. 15. Sales intra pomaria nati, polite raillery or repartees, Juvenal. ix. 11. Sal niger, i. e. amari sales, bitter raillery or satire, Horat. Ep. ii. 2. 60. but in Sat. ii. 4. 74. sal nigrum means simply black salt.

Sal is metaphorically applied also to things; thus, Tectum plus salis quam sumptus habebat, neatness, taste, elegance, Nep. Att. 13. Nulla in corpore mica salis, Catull. 84. 4.

The custom of placing the images of the gods on the table, prevailed also among the Greeks and Persians, particularly of Hercules; hence called EPITRAPEZIUS, Stat. Sylv. iv. 6. 60. Martial. ix. 44. and of making libations, Curt. v. 8.

In making an oath or a prayer, the ancients touched the table as an altar, Ovid. Amor. i. 4. 27. and to violate it by any indecent word or action was esteemed impious, Juvenal. ii. 110. To this Virgil alludes, Æn. vii. 114.

As the ancients had not proper inns for the accommodation of travellers, the Romans, when they were in foreign countries, or at a distance from home, used to lodge at the houses of certain persons, whom they in return entertained at their houses in Rome.—This was esteemed a very intimate connexion, and called HOSPITIUM, or Jus Hospitii, Liv. i. 1. Hence HOSPES is put both for an host or entertainer, and a guest, Ovid. Met. x. 224. Plaut. Most. ii. 2. 48. Cic. Deiot. 3. Accipere hospitem non multi cibi sed multi joci, Cic. Fam. ix. 26. Divertere ad hospitem, De Divin. i. 27. s. 57. Fin. v. 2. Hospitium, cum aliquo facere, Liv. et Cic. Jungimus hospitio dextras, sc. in Virg. Æn. iii. 83. Hospitio conjungi, Cic. Q. Fr. i. 1. Hospitio aliquem excipere et accipi; renunciare hospitium ei, Cic. Verr. ii. 36. Liv. xxv. 18. Amicitiam ei more majorum renunciare, Suet. Cal. 3. Tacit. Ann. ii. 70. Domo interdicerere, Id. Aug. 66. Tacit. Ann. vi. 29.

This connexion was formed also with states, by the whole Roman people, or by particular persons, Liv. ii. 22. v. 28. xxxvii. 54. Cic. Verr. iv. 65. Balb. 18. Cas. B. G. i. 31. Hence Clientelæ, hospitiaque provincialia, Cic. Cat. iv. 11. Publici hospitii jura, Plin. iii. 4.

Individuals used anciently to have a tally, (TESSERA hospitalitatis), or piece of wood cut into two parts, of which each party kept one, Plaut. Pœn. v. 1. 22. & 2. 92. They swore fidelity to one another by Jupiter : hence called HOSPITALIS, Cic. Q. Fr. ii. 11. Hence a person who had violated the rights of hospitality, and thus precluded himself access to any family, was said CONFREGISSE TESSERAM, Plaut. Cist. ii. 21.

A league of hospitality was sometimes formed by persons at a distance, by mutually sending presents to one another, quæ militi dona, hospitio quum jungeret absens Cædricus, Virg. Æn. ix. 361.

The relation of hospites was esteemed next to that of parents and clients, Gell. i. 13. To violate it was esteemed the greatest impiety, Virg. Æn. v. 55. Cic. Verr. v. 42.

The reception of any stranger was called Hospitium, or plur. -ia, Ovid. Fast. vi. 536. and also the house or apartment in which he was entertained : thus, hospitium sit tua villa meum, Ovid. Pont. l. 8. 69. Divisi in hospitia, lodgings, Liv. ii. 14. HOSPITALE cubiculum, the guest-chamber, Liv. i. 58. Hospitio utebatur Tulli, lodged at the house of, Ib. 35. Hence Florus calls Ostia, Maritimum urbis hospitium, i. 4. So Virgil calls Thrace, Hospitium antiquum Trojæ, a place in ancient hospitality with Troy, Æn. iii. 15. Linqere pollutum hospitium, i. e. locum in quo jura hospitii violata fuerant, Ib. 61.

The Roman nobility used to build apartments (domunculae) for strangers, called HOSPITALIA, on the right and left end of their houses, with separate entries, that, upon their arrival, they might be received there, and not into the peristyle or principal entry ; (PERISTYLIUM, so called because surrounded with columns,) Vitruv. vi. 10. Suet. Aug. 82.

The CÆNA of the Romans usually consisted of two parts, called MENSA PRIMA, the first course, consisting of different kinds of meat ; and MENSA SECUNDA vel ALTERA, second course, consisting of fruits and sweetmeats, Serv. in Virg. Æn. i. 216. 723. viii. 283.

In later times, the first part of the cæna was called GUSTATIO, Petron. 22. 31. or GUSTUS, consisting of dishes to excite the appetite, a whet, Martial. xi. 32. 53. and wine mixed with water and sweetened with honey, called MULSUM ; Horat. Sat. ii. 4. 26. Cic. Tusc. iii. 19. Orat. ii. 70. Fin. ii. 5. s. 17. Plin. xxii. 24. whence what was eaten and drunk (antecæna) to whet the appetite, was named PROMULSIS, Cic. fam. ix. 16. 23. Senec. Ep. 123. and the place where these things were kept, PROMULSIDIARIUM, v. -re, or GUSTATORIUM, Petron. 31. Plin. Ep. v. 6. Martial. xiv. 88. Plin. ix. 12.

But gustatio is also put for an occasional refreshment through the day, or for breakfast, Plin. Ep. iii. 5. vi. 16. Suet. Aug. 76. Vopisc. Tac. 11.

The principal dish at supper was called CÆNÆ CAPUT vel POMPA, Martial. x. 31. Cic. Tusc. 34. Fin. ii. 8.

The Romans usually began their entertainments with eggs, and ended, with fruits : hence AB OVO, USQUE AD MALA, from the beginning to the end of supper, Horat. Sat. i. 3. 6. Cic. Fam. 20.

The dishes (edulia) held in the highest estimation by the Romans are enumerated, Gell. vii. 16. Macrob. Sat. ii. 9. Stat. Silv. iv. 6. 8. Martial. v. 79. ix. 48. xi. 53. &c. a peacock, (PAVO, v. -us,) Horat. Sat. ii. 2. 23. Juvenal. i. 143. first used by Hortensius, the orator, at a supper, which he gave when admitted into the college of priests ; (aditiali canō sacerdotii,) Plin. x. 20. s. 23. a pheasant, (PHASIANA, ex Phasi Colchidis fluvio,) Martial. iii. 58. xiii. 72. Senec. ad Helv. 9. Petron. 79. Manil. v. 372. a bird called Attāgen vel -ina, from Ionia or Phrygia, Horat. Epod. ii. 54. Martial. xiii. 61. a guinea-hen ; (avis Afra, Horat. ibid. Gallina Numidica vel Africana, Juvenal. xi. 142. Martial. xiii. 73.) a Melian crane, an Ambracian kid ; nightingales, luscinia ; thrushes, turdi ; ducks, geese, &c. TOMACULUM, (α τσάβυλα,) vel IŒCIUM, (ab insēco) sausages or puddings, Juvenal. x. 355. Martial. i. 42. 9. Petron. 31.

Sometimes a whole boar was served up ; hence called ANIMAL PROPTER CONVIVIA NATUM, Juvenal. i. 141. and PORCUS TROJANUS, stuffed with the flesh of other animals, Macrob. Sat. ii. 9.

The Romans were particularly fond of fish, Macrob. Sat. ii. 11. Mulus, the mullet ; rhombus, thought to be the turbot ; muræna, the lamprey ; scarus, the scar or schar ; accipenser, the sturgeon ; lupus, a pike, &c. but especially of shell-fish, pisces testacei, pectines, pectunculi, vel CONCHYLIA, ostrea, oysters, &c. which they sometimes brought all the way from Britain, Rutupinoque edita fundo, from Rutupia, Richborough in Kent, Juvenal. iv. 141. also snails, (cochlea,) Plin. Ep. i. 15.

Oyster-beds (ostrearum vivaria) were first invented by one Sergius Arata, before the Marsic war, A. U. 660. on the shore of Baize, (in Baiano,) and on the Lucrine lake, Plin. ix. 54. s. 79. Hence Lucrine oysters are celebrated Horat. Epod. 2. 49. Some preferred those of Brundisium : and to settle the difference, oysters used to be brought from thence and fed for some time on the Lucrine lake, Plin. Ibid.

The Romans used to weigh their fishes alive at table ; and to see them expire was reckoned a piece of high entertainment, Plin. ix. 17. s. 30. Senec. Nat. Q. iii. 17 & 18.

The dishes of the second table or the dessert, were called BELLARIA ; including fruits, poma vel mala, apples, pears, nuts, figs, olives, grapes, Pistachia, vel -a, Pistachio nuts ; amygdala, almonds ; uva passa, dried grapes, raisins ; caricæ, dried figs ; palmyla, caryōla, vel dactyli, dates, the fruit of the palm tree ; bolēti, mushrooms, Plin. Ep. i. 7. nuclei pinei ; the kernels of pine-nuts ; also sweetmeats, confects, or confections, called Edulia mellita vel dulciaria ; cupedia, crustula, liba, placentæ, ortologāni, cheese-cakes, or the like : coptæ, almond-cakes ; scriblita, tarts, &c. whence the maker of them, the pastry-cook, or the confectioner, was called Pistor vel conditor dulciarius, placentarius, libarius, crustularius, &c.

There were various slaves who prepared the victuals, who put them in order, and served them up.

Anciently the baker and cook (pistor et coquus vel cocus) were the same, Festus. An expert cook was hired occasionally, Plaut. Aul. ii. 4. 185. Pseud. iii. 2. 3 & 20. whose distinguished badge was a knife which he carried, Id. Aul. iii. 2. 3. But after the luxury of the table was converted into an art, cooks were purchased at a great price, Liv. xxxix. 6. Plin. ix. 17. s. 31. Martial. xiv. 220. Cooks from Sicily in particular were highly valued, Athen. xiv. 23. hence Sicula dapes, nice dishes, Horat. Od. iii. 1. 18.

There were no bakers at Rome before A. U. 580; baking was the work of the women, Plin. xviii. 11. s. 28. Varro. de Re Rust. ii. 10. but Plutarch says, that anciently Roman women used neither to bake nor cook victuals, Quæst. Rom. 84. s. 85.

The chief cook who had the direction of the kitchen, (qui coquina præerat), was called ARCHIMAGIRUS, Juvenal. ix. 109. The butler who had the care of provisions, PROMUS CONDUS, Procurator, peni, PÆNUS autem omne quo vescuntur homines, Cic. de Nat. D. iii. 27.) Plaut. Pseud. ii. 2. 14. Horat. Sat. ii. 2. 16. He who put them in order, STRUCTOR, Martial. ix. 48. Juvenal. vii. 184. and sometimes carved, Id. v. 120. xi. 136. the same with CARPTOR, Carpus, or Scissor, Id. ix. 110. He who had the charge of the hall, ATRIENSIS, Cic. Parad. v. 2.

They were taught carving as an art, and performed it to the sound of music; hence called CHIRONOMONTES vel gesticulatores; Juvenal. v. 121. xi. 137. Petron. 35. 36.

The slaves who waited at the table were properly called MINISTRUM; lightly clothed in a tunic, and girt, (succincti vel alte cincti, Horat. Sat. ii. 6. 107. ii. 8. 10.) with napkins, (linteis succincti, Suet. Cal. 26.) who had their different tasks assigned them: some put the plate in order, (argentum ordinabant), Senec. de brev. Vit. 12. some gave the guests water for their hands, and towels to wipe them; Petron. 31. some served about the bread; some brought in the dishes, (opsonia inferebant), and set cups, Virg. Æn. i. 705. &c. some carved; some served the wine, Juvenal. v. 56. 59. &c. In hot weather, there were some to cool the room with fans (flabella), and to drive away the flies, Martial. iii. 82.—Maid-servants, (famulæ) also sometimes served at table, Virg. Æn. i. 703. Suet. Tib. 42. Curt. v. 1.

When a master wanted a slave to bring him any thing, he made a noise with his fingers, (digitis crepuit), Martial. Ibid. & vi. 89. xiv. 119. Petron. 27.

The dishes were brought in, either on the tables themselves, or more frequently on frames, (FERCULA vel REPOSTORIA,) each frame containing a variety of dishes, Petron. xxxv. 66. Plin. xviii. 2. s. 5. xxxiii. 11. s. 49 & 52. hence Præbere cœnam trinis vel senis ferculis, i. e. missibus, to give a supper of three or six courses, Suet. Aug. 74. Juvenal. i. 94. But fercula is also sometimes put for the dishes or the meat, Horat. Sat. ii. 6. 104. Martial. iii. 50. ix. 83.

x. 32. Auson. Epigr. 8. Juvenal. xi. 64. So MENŒ; thus Mensas, i. e. lances magnas instar mensarum, repositoriis imponere, Plin. xxxiii. 11. s. 49. Petron. 34. 47. 68. Sometimes the dishes, (patinae vel catini;) were brought in and set down separately, Horat. Sat. ii. 8. 42. ii. 2. 39.

A large platter (lanx vel scutella) containing various kinds of meat, was called MAZONOMUM, (a μαζω, tribuo, et μαζα, edulium quoddam e farina et lacte;) which was handed about, that each of the guests might take what he chose, Id. viii. 86. Vitellius caused a dish of immense size to be made, Plin. xxxv. 12. s. 46. which he called the Shield of Minerva, filled with an incredible variety of the rarest and nicest kinds of meat, Suet. Vit. 13.

At a supper given to the emperor by his brother, upon his arrival in the city, (cæna adventitia;) 2000 of the most choice fishes, and 7000 birds, are said to have been served up. Vitellius used to breakfast, dine, and sup with different persons the same day, and it never cost any of them less than 400,000 sesterces, about 3229*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.* sterling, Ibid. Thus he is said to have spent in less than a year Novies millies H. S. i. e. 7,265,625*l.* Dio. lxxv. 3. Tacit. Hist. ii. 95.

An uncommon dish was introduced to the sound of the flute, and the servants were crowned with flowers, Macrob. Sat. ii. 12.

↳ In the time of supper, the guests were entertained with music and dancing, Petron. 35. 36. sometimes with pantomimes and play-actors, Plaut. Stich. ii. 2. 56. Spartian. Adrian. 26. with fools (moriones), and buffoons, Plin. Ep. ix. 17. and even the gladiators, Capitolin. in Vero. 4. but the more sober had only persons to read or repeat select passages from books, (ANAGNOSTÆ vel ACROAMATÆ;) Cic. Att. i. 12. Fam. v. 9. Nep. Att. xiii. 14. Suet. Aug. 78. Plin. Ep. i. 15. iii. 5. vi. 31. ix. 36. Gell. iii. 19. xiii. 11. xix. 7. Martial. iii. 50. Their highest pleasure at an entertainment arose from agreeable conversation, Cic. Sen. 14. Horat. Sat. ii. 6. 70.

To prevent the bad effects of repletion, some used after supper to take a vomit: thus Cæsar (occubuit, vomitum, agebat, i. e. post cænam vomere volebat, ideoque largius edebat;) Cic. Att. xiii. 52. Dejot. 7. also before supper and at other times, Suet. Vit. 13. Cic. Phil. 14. Cels. i. 3. Vomunt, ut edant; edunt, ut vomant, Senec. ad Helv. 9. Even women, after bathing before supper, used to drink wine and throw it up again, to sharpen their appetite, (Fulerni sextarius alter ducitur ante cibum, rabidam facturum orexim;) Juvenal. vi. 427.

A sumptuous entertainment (cæna lauta, opima vel opipara;) was called AUGURALIS, Cic. Fam. vii. 26. PONTIFICALIS, vel Pontificum, Hor. Od. ii. 14. 28. SALIARIS, Id. i. 37. Cic. Att. v. 9. because used by these priests; or DUBIA, ubi tu dubites, quid sumas potissimum, Ter. Phor. ii. 2. 28. Hor. Sat. ii. 2. 76.

When a person proposed supping with any one without invitation, or, as we say, invited himself; (cænam ei condixit, vel ad cænam;) Cic. Fam. i. 9. Suet. Tib. 42. he was called HOSPES OBLATUS, Plin.

Præf. and the entertainment, SUBITA CONDUCTAQUE COENULA, Suet. Claud. 21.

An entertainment given to a person newly returned from abroad, was called Cæna ADVENTITIA vel -toria, Suet. Vit. 13. vel VIATICA; Plaut. Bacch. i. 1. 61. by patrons to their clients, Cæna RECTA, opposed to SPORTULA, Martial. viii. 50. by a person, when he entered on an office, COENA ADITIALES vel ADJICIALIS, Suet. Claud. 9. Senec. Ep. 95. 123.

Clients used to wait on their patrons at their houses early in the morning, to pay their respects to them, (salutare,) Martial. ii. 18. 3. iii. 36. iv. 8. Juvenal. i. 128. v. 19. and sometimes to attend them through the day wherever they went, dressed in a white toga, Id. vii. 142. Martial. 56. 13. hence called ANTEAMBULONES, Id. iii. 7. NIVVI QUIRITES: and from their number, TURBA TOGATA, et PRÆCEDENTIA LONGI AGMINIS OFFICIA, Juv. i. 96. viii. 49. x. 44. On which account, on solemn occasions they were invited to supper, Juv. v. 24. Suet. Claud. 21. and plentifully entertained in the hall. This was called COENA RECTA, i. e. justa et solemnis adeoque lauta et opipæra, a formal, plentiful supper; hence convivari rectâ sc. cæna, Suet. Aug. 74. rectè et dapsilè, i. e. abundantur, to keep a good table, Id. Vesp. 19. So Vivere rectè, vel cum recto apparatu, Senec. Epist. 110. 122.

But upon the increase of luxury, it became customary under the emperors, instead of a supper, to give each, at least of the poorer clients, a certain portion or dole of meat to carry home in a pannier or small basket, (SPORTULA;) which likewise being found inconvenient, money was given in place of it, called also SPORTULA, to the amount generally of 100 quadrantes, or 25 asses, i. e. about 1s. 7d. sterling each, Juvenal. i. 95. 120. Martial. i. 60. iii. 7. xi. 75. sometimes to persons of rank, to women as well as men, Ibid. This word is put likewise for the hire given by orators to those whom they employed to applaud them while they were pleading, Plin. Ep. ii. 14.

SPORTULÆ, or pecuniary donations instead of suppers, were established by Nero, Suet. Ner. 16. but abolished by Domitian, and the custom of formal suppers restored, Suet. Domit. 7.

The ordinary drink of the Romans at feasts was wine, which they mixed with water, and sometimes with aromatics or spices, Juvenal. vi. 302. They used water either cold or hot, Id. v. 63. Martial. viii. 67. 7. i. 12. xiv. 105. Plaut. Curc. ii. 3. 13. et Mil. iii. 2. 22.

A place where wine was sold (taberna vinaria) was called CENOPOLIUM; were mulled wines and hot drinks were sold, THERMOPOLIUM, Plaut. Ibid. et Rud. ii. 6. 43. Pseud. ii. 4. 52.

Wine anciently was very rare. It was used chiefly in the worship of gods. Young men below thirty, and women all their lifetime, were forbidden to drink it, unless at sacrifices, Val. Max. ii. 1. 5. vi. 3. Gell. x. 23. Plin. xiv. 13. whence, according to some, the custom of saluting female relations, that it might be known whether they had drunk wine, Ibid. & Plutarch. Q. Rom. 6. But afterwards, when wine became more plentiful, these restrictions were removed;

which Ovid hints was the case in the time of Tarquin the Proud, Fast. ii. 740.

Vineyards came to be so much cultivated, that it appeared agriculture was thereby neglected : on which account Domitian, by an edict, prohibited any new vineyards to be planted in Italy, and ordered at least the one half to be cut down in the provinces, Suet. Lom. 7. But this edict was soon after abrogated, ib. 14.

The Romans reared their vines by fastening them to certain trees, as the poplar and the elm ; whence these trees were said to be married (maritari) to the vines, Horat. Epod. ii. 10. and the vines to them, (duci ad arbores vi duas, i. e. vitibus tanquam uxoribus per civilia bella privatas, Id. Od. iv. 5. 30.) and the plane tree, to which they were not joined, is elegantly called CÆLÆS, Id. ii. 15. 4.

Wine was made anciently much in the same manner as it is now. The grapes were picked (decerpabantur) in baskets, (quali, quasilli, fasci, fiscinæ, vel fiscellæ) made of osier, and stamped, (calcabantur.) The juice was squeezed out by a machine called TORCULUM, -ar, -are, vel -arium, or PRELUM, a press : Torcular was properly the whole machine, and prelum, the beam which pressed the grapes, (trabs qua uva premitur,) Serv. in Virg. G. ii. 242. Vitruv. vi. 9. The juice was made to pass (transmittebatur) through a strainer, (SACCUS vel COLUM,) Martial. xii. 61. 3. xiv. 104. and received into a large vault or tub, (LACUS,) Ovid. Fast. iv. 888. Plin. Epist. ix. 20. or put into a large cask, DOLIUM, (Cupa vel Seria,) made of wood or potter's earth, until the fermentation was over (donec deferbuerit) ; hence VINUM DOLIARE, Plaut. Pseud. ii. 2. 64. The liquor which came out without pressing, was called Protrōpium, or mustum lixivium, Plin. xiv. 9. Columel. lxii. 41.

The must or new wine (MUSTUM) was refined, (defœcabatur,) by mixing it with the yolks of pigeons' eggs; Horat. Sat. ii. 4. 56. the white of eggs is now used for that purpose. Then it was poured (diffusum) into smaller vessels or casks, (amphoræ vel cadi,) made usually of earth ; hence called TESTÆ, Horat. Od. iii. 21. 4. covered over with pitch or chalk, (oblita vel picata et gypsata,) and bunged or stopped up, (obturata ;) hence relinere vel delinere dolium, vel cadum, to open, to pierce, Terent. Heaut. iii. 1. 51. Wine was also kept in leathern bags, (UTRES,) Plin. xxviii. 18. From new wine, a book not ripe for publication is called musteus liber, by Pliny, Ep. viii. 21.

On each cask was marked the name of the consuls, or the year when it was made, Horat. Od. i. 20. iii. 8. 12. & 28. 8. Ep. i. 5. 4. hence, Nunc mihi fumosos veteris proferte Falernos, Consulibus, (sc. cados,) Tibull. ii. 1. 27. and the oldest was always put farthest back in the cellar ; hence Interiore nota Falerni, with a cup of old Falernian wine, Horat. Od. ii. 3. 8.

When a cask was emptied, it was inclined to one side, and the wine poured out. The Romans did not use a siphon or spigget as we do ; hence vertere cadum, to pierce, to empty, Id. iii. 29. 2. Invertunt Alphanis (sc. poculis) vinaria tota, (sc. vasa, i. e. cados v. lagenas,) turn over whole casks into large cups made at Allifæ, a town in Samnium, Id. Sat. ii. 8. 39.

Sometimes wine was ripened, by being placed in the smoke above a fire, Id. Od. iii. 8. 11. Plin. xiv. 1. s. 3. Martial. iii. 81. x. 36. or in an upper part of the house, (in horreo vel apotheca editore;) whence it was said descendere, Horat. Od. iii. 21. 7. Often it was kept to a great age, Id. Od. iii. 14. 18. Cic. Brut. 286. Juvenal. v. 30. Pers. iv. 29. Vell. ii. 7. Wine made in the consulship of Opimius, A. U. 633. was to be met with in the time of Pliny, near 200 years after, (in speciem asperi mellis redactum.) Plin. xiv. 4. s. 6. Martial. i. 27. 7. ii. 40. 5. In order to make wine keep, they used to boil (decoquere, Virg. G. i. 295.) the must down to one half, when it was called DEFRUTUM; to one third, SAPA, Plin. xiv. 9. s. 11. and to give it a flavour, (ut odor vino contingeret, et saporis quædam acumina,) they mixed it with pitch and certain herbs: when they were said CONDIRE, MEDICARI vel concinare vinum, Plin. xiv. 20. s. 25. Columell. xii. 19. 20. 21. Cato de Re Rust. 114 & 115.

Wines were distinguished chiefly from the places where they were produced; in Italy, the most remarkable were Vinum Falernum, Masicum, Calenum, Cæcæbum, Albanum, Sentinum, Surrentinum, &c. Plin. 23. 1. s. 20. Foreign wines, Chium, Lesbium, Leucadium, Coum, Rhodium, Naxium, Mamertinum, Thasium, Mæonium vel Lydium, Marcoticum, &c. Plin. xiv. 6. s. 8. &c. Also from its colour or age, Vinum album, nigrum, rubrum, &c. Id. 9. s. 11. 12. Vetus, novum, recens, hornum, of the present year's growth; trimum, three years old; molle, lenè, vetustate edentulum, mellow; asperum vel austerum, harsh; merum vel meracum, pure, unmixed; meracius, i. e. fortius, strong, Cic. Nat. D. iii. 31.

✓ The Romans set down the wine on the table (alteris mensis,) with the desserts, (cum bellariis,) and before they began drinking, poured out libations to the gods, Virg. Æn. i. 730. viii. 278. 283. G. ii. 101. This by a decree of the senate was done also in honour of Augustus after the battle of Actium, Dio. li. 19. Horat. Od. iv. 5. 31.

The wine was brought in to the guests in earthen vases (AMPHORÆ, vel Testæ,) with handles, (ansatæ,) hence called DIOTÆ, Horat. i. 9. 8. or in big-bellied jugs or bottles (AMPULLE) of glass, (vitrea,) leather, (coriacea,) or earth, (figlina,) Plin. Epist. iv. 30. Suet. Domit. 21. Martial. vi. 35. 3. xiv. 110. on each of which were affixed labels or small slips of parchments, (TITULI vel PITACTA, i. e. schedulæ e membrana excisæ, vel tabellæ,) giving a short description of the quality and age of the wine; thus, FALERNUM, OPMIANUM ANNORUM CENTUM, Petron. 34. Juvenal. v. 34. Sometimes different kinds of wine and of fruit were set before the guests according to their different rank, Plin. Ep. ii. 6. Martial. iii. 82. iv. 86. vi. 11. 49. Suet. Cæs. 48. Spartian. Adrian. 17. Juvenal. v. 70. whence VINUM DOMINICUM, the wine drunk by the master of the house, Petron. 31. and cænare civiliter, to be on a level with one's guest, Juvenal. v. 112.

The wine was mixed (misceretur vel temperabatur,) with water in a large vase or bowl, called CRATER, v. -ra, whence it was poured into cups, (POCULA.) Ovid. Fast. v. 522.

Cups were called by different names; Calices, phialæ, patæra, canthari, carchesia, ciboria, scyphi, cymbia, scaphia, batiola, cululli, amystides, &c. and made of various materials; of wood, as beech, fagina, sc. pocula, Virg. Ecl. iii. 37. of earth, ficilia, of glass, VITREA, Martial. i. 38. Juvenal. ii. 95. which when broken used to be exchanged for brimstone matches, (sulphurata ramenta.) Martial. i. 42. 4. x. 3. Juvenal. v. 49. of amber, succina, Id. ix. 50. of brass, silver, and gold, sometimes beautifully engraved; hence called TOREUMATA, i. e. vasa sculpta vel cæolata, Cic. Verr. iv. 18. ii. 52. Pis. 27. or adorned with figures, (signa vel sigilla) affixed to them, called CRUSTÆ or EMBLEMATA, Cic. Verr. iv. 23. Juvenal. i. 76. Martial. viii. 51. 9. which might be put on and taken off at pleasure, (exemptilia.) Cic. ibid. 22 & 24. or with gems, sometimes taken off the fingers for that purpose, Juvenal. 5. 41. hence called CALICES GEMMATI vel AURUM GEMMATUM, Martial. xiv. 109.

Cups were also made of precious stones, Virg. G. ii. 506. of crystal, Senec. de Ira. iii. 40. of amethyst and murra or porcelain, (pocula murrina.) Martial. ix. 60. 13. x. 49. Plin. xxxiii. 1. xxxvii. 2. &c.

Cups were of various forms; some had handles (ANSÆ vel NASI) Virg. Ecl. vi. 17. Juvenal. v. 47. usually twisted, (TORTILES,) Ovid. Ep. xvi. 252. hence called CALICES PTERATI, i. e. alati vel ansati, Plin. xxxvi. 26. Some had none.

There were slaves, usually beautiful boys, (pueri eximia facie, Gell. xv. 12.) who waited to mix the wine with water, and serve it up; for which purpose they used a small goblet, called CYATHUS, to measure it, Plaut. Pers. v. 2. 16. containing the twelfth part of a sextarius, nearly a quart English; hence the cups were named from the parts of the Roman AS, according to the number of cyathi which they contained; thus, SEXTANS, a cup which contained two cyathi; TRIENS vel Triental, three; QUADRANS, four, &c. Suet. Aug. 77. Martial. viii. 51. 24. ix. 95. xi. 37. Pers. iii. 100. and those who served with wine, were said, AD CYATHOS STARE, Suet. Jul. 49. AD CYATHUM STATUI, Hor. Od. i. 26. 8. OF CYATHISSARI, Plaut. Men. ii. 2. 29.

They used also a less measure for filling wine and other liquors, called LIGULA or Lingula, and COCHLEARE, vel -ar, a spoon, the fourth part of a cyathus, Martial. v. 20. viii. 33. 23. xiv. 121.

The wine was sometimes cooled with snow, by means of a strainer, COLUM NIVARIUM, Martial. xiv. 103. vel SACCUS NIVARIUS, Id. 104. or by pouring snow-water upon it, Id. v. 65. 417. xiv. 117. Senec. Ep. 79. Plin. xix. 4. s. 19.

The Romans used to drink the health of one another; thus, BENE MIHI, BENE VOBIS, &c. Plaut. Pers. v. 1. 20. sometimes in honour of a friend or mistress, Id. & Horat. Od. i. 27. 9. and used to take as many cyathi as there were letters in the name, Tibull. ii. 1. 31.

Martial. i. 72. or as they wished years to them; hence they were said, Ad numerum bibere, Ovid. Fast. iii. 531. A frequent number was three, in honour of the Graces; or nine, of the Muses, Horat. Od. iii. 19. 11. Auson. Eidyll. xi. 1. The Greeks drank first in honour of the gods, and then of their friends; hence GRÆCO MORE BIBERE, Cic. Ver. i. 26. et ibi Ascon. They began with small cups and ended with larger, Ibid. They used to name the person to whom they handed the cup; thus, PROPINO TIBI, &c. Cic. Tusc. i. 40. Plaut. Stich. v. 4. 26 & 30. Ter. Eun. v. 9. 57. Virg. Æn. i. 728. Martial. i. 69. vi. 44. Juvenal. v. 127.

A skeleton was sometimes introduced at feasts in the time of drinking; or the representation of one, (larva argentea), Petron. 34. in imitation of the Egyptians, Herodot. ii. 78. s. 74. Plutarch. in convivio. Sapiens. 6. upon which the master of the feast, looking at it, used to say, VIVAMUS, DUM LICET ESSE BENE, Petron. ib. Πῖνε τε καὶ εὖ πῖνε, σὸς τε γὰρ ἀνοδὼν χρόνος, Drink and be merry, for thus shalt thou be after death, Herodot. ibid.

The ancients sometimes crowned their cups with flowers, Virg. Æn. iii. 525. Tibull. ii. 5. 98. But coronare cratera vel vina, i. e. pocula, signifies also to fill with wine, Virg. G. ii. 528. Æn. i. 724. vii. 147.

The ancients at their feasts appointed a person to preside by throwing the dice, whom they called ARBITER BIBENDI, Magister vel Rex convivii, modiperator vel modimperator, (συννοδιαρχος.) dictator, dux, strategus, &c. He directed every thing at pleasure, Horat. Od. i. 4. 18. ii. 7. 25. Cic. Sen. 14. Plaut. Stich. v. 4. 20.

When no director of the feast was appointed, they were said Culpâ potare magistrâ, to drink as much as they pleased, (culpabatur ille qui multum biberet, excess only was blamed,) Horat. Sat. ii. 2. 123. Some read cuppa vel cupa, but improperly; for cupa signifies either a large cask or tun, which received the must from the wine-press; or it is put for copa vel caupa, a woman who kept a tavern,) (quæ cauponam vel tabernam exerceret.) Suet. Ner. 27. or for the tavern itself; whence it was thought mean for a person to be supplied with wine, or from a retailer, (de propola vel propala); Cic. Pis. 27. Suet. Claud. 40.

✓ During the intervals of drinking, they often played at dice, (ALEA.) Plaut. Curc. ii. 3. 75. of which there were two kinds, the tesseræ and tali, Cic. Sen. 16.

The TESSERÆ had six sides, marked I. II. III. IV. V. VI. like our dice: the TALI had four sides longwise, for the two ends were not regarded. On one side was marked one point, (unio, an ace, called CANIS: on the opposite side six, SEMO, sice); on the two other sides, three and four, (ternio et quaternio.) In playing they used three tesseræ and four tali. They were put in the box made in the form of a small tower, straight-necked, wider below than above, and fluted in ringlets, (intus gradus excisos habens.) called FRI-TILLUS, pyrgus, turris, turricula, phimus, orca, &c. and being shaken, were thrown out upon the gaming-board or table, (FORUS, alveus, vel tabula lusoria aut aleatoria.) The highest or most fortunate throw (jactus, bolus vel manus), called VENUS, or JACTUS VENEREUS, vel BASILICUS, was, of the tesseræ, three sixes; of the tali, when all of them came out different numbers. The worst or lowest throw, (jactus pessimus vel damnosus), called CANES vel Canicula, vel vulturii, was, of the tesseræ, three aces; of the tali, when they were all the same. The other throws were valued from their numbers, Cic. Divin. i. 13. ii. 21 & 59. Suet. Aug. 71. Ovid. Art. Am. ii. 203. Trist. ii. 474. Propert. iv. 9. 20. Plaut. Asin. v. 2. 55. Hor. Sat. ii. 7. 17. Pers. Sat. iii. 49. Martial. xiv. 14. &c. When any one of the tali fell on the end, (in caput.) it was said rectus cadere vel assistere, Cic. Fin. iii. 16. and the throw was to be repeated. The throw called Venus determined the direction of the feast. (Archiposia in computatione principatus, magistrerium, Cic. Senect. 14. vel Regnum vini, Horat. Od. i. 4. 18.) While throwing the dice, it was usual for a person to express his wishes, to invoke or name a mistress, or the like, Plaut. Asin. v. 2. 55. iv. 1. 35. Captiv. i. 1. 5. Curc. ii. 3. 78.

They also played at odds or evens, (PAR IMPAR ludebant.) Suet. Aug. 71. and at a game called DUODECIM SCRIPTA, vel Scriptula, or bis sena puncta, Cic. Orat. i. 50. Non Marcell. ii. 781. Quintil. xi. 2. Martial. xiv. 17. on a square table, (tabula vel alveus), divided by twelve lines, (lineæ vel scripta), on which were placed counters, (CALCULI, Latrones v. Latrunculi.) of different colours. The counters were moved (pramovebantur.) according to throws (boli vel jactus) of the dice, as with us at gammon. The lines were intersected by a transverse line, called LINEA SACRA, which they did not pass without being forced to it. When the counters had got to the last line, they were said to be inciti vel immoti, and the player, ad incitas, vel -a redactus, reduced to extremity, Plaut. Pæn. iv. 2. 86. Trin. ii. 4. 136. unam calcem non posse ciere, i. e. unum calculum movere, not to be able to stir, lb. In this game there was room both for chance and art, Ter. And. iv. 7. 21. Ovid. Art. Am. ii. 203. iii. 363. Auson. Prof. i. 25. Martial. vii. 71. xiv. 20.

Some exclude the tali, or tesseræ from this game, and make it the same with chess among us. Perhaps it was played both ways. But several particulars concerning the private games of the Romans are not ascertained.

All games of chance were called ALEA, and forbidden by the Cornelian, Publician, and Titian laws, Horat. Od. iii. 24. 58. except in the month of December, Martial. iv. 14. 7. v. 85. xiv. 1. These laws, however, were not strictly observed. Old men were particularly fond of such games, as not requiring bodily exertion, Cic. Sen. 16. Suet. Aug. 71. Juvenal. xiv. 4.

The character of gamester (ALEATORES vel aleones) was held infamous, Cic. Cat. ii. 10. Plin. ii. 27.

Augustus used to introduce at entertainments a kind of diversion, similar to what we call a lottery; by selling tickets, (sortes.) or sealed tablets, apparently equivalent, at an equal price; which, when opened or unsealed, entitled the purchasers to things of very unequal value, (res inequalis sima;) as, for instance, one to 100 gold pieces, another to a pick-tooth, (dentiscalpium), a third to a purple robe, &c. In like manner, pictures with the wrong side turned to the company, (aversas tabularum picturas in convivio venditare solebat), so that, for the same price, one received the picture of an Apelles, of a Zeuxis, or a Parrhasius, and another the first essay of a learner, Suet. Aug. 75. So Heliogabalus, Lamprid. in vita ejus, 21.

There was a game of chance, (which is still common in Italy, chiefly, however, among the vulgar, called the game of Morra), played between two persons, by suddenly raising or compressing the fingers, and at the same instant guessing each at the number of the other; when doing thus, they were said MICARE DIGITIS, Cic. divin. ii. 41. Off. iii. 23. Suet. Aug. 13. As the number of fingers stretched out could not be known in the dark, unless those who played had implicit confidence in one another; hence in praising the virtue and fidelity of a man, he was said to be DIGNUS QUICUM IN TENEBRIS MICES, Cic. Off. iii. 19. Fin. ii. 16. s. 52.

✓ The Romans ended their repasts in the same manner they began them, by libations and prayers, Ovid. Fast. ii. 653. The guests drank to the health of their host, and under the Cæsars, to that of the emperor, Ibid. et Petron. 60. When about to go away, they sometimes demanded a parting cup in honour of Mercury, that he might grant them a sound sleep, Martial. Delphin. i. 72.

The master of the house, (herus, dominus, parochus, cœnæ magister, convivator, Horat. Sat. ii. 8. 35. Martial. xii. 48. Gell. xiii. 11.) used to give the guests certain presents at their departure, called Apophorëta, Suet. Aug. 75. Gal. 55. Vesp. 19. Martial. xiv. 1. Petron. 60. or XENIA, which were sometimes sent to them, Plin. Epist. vi. 31. Vitruv. vi. 10. Martial. xiii. 3. XENIUM is also put for a present sent from the provinces to an advocate at Rome, Plin. Ep. v. 14. or given to the governor of a province, Digest.

The presents given to guests being of different kinds, were sometimes distributed by lot, Martial. xiv. 1. 5.—40. 144. 170. or by some ingenious contrivance, Petron. 41.

III. ROMAN RITES of MARRIAGE.

A LEGAL marriage* (justum matrimonium) among the Romans

* In the state of New-York, there is no form of marriage prescribed by law. This seems to be a defect in our legal code. The validity of the marriage is a subject to be determined by the jury, as a matter of fact. Cohabitation, acknowledgment of a woman to be one's wife, authorizing persons to accredit her as such, &c. may be adduced as proofs of marriage—connexion to be decided on by the Jury. But, under a charge of bigamy, in order to conviction, an actual previous marriage must be proved.

The first inhabitants of Greece lived together without marriage. Europa, king of Athens, is said to have been the first author of this honourable institution among that people. After the Grecian Commonwealths were settled, marriage was very much was made in three different ways, called usus, confarreatio, and coemptio.

1. USUS, usage or prescription, was when a woman, with the consent of her parents or guardians, lived with a man for a whole year, (matrimonii causâ,) without being absent three nights: and thus became his lawful wife or property by prescription, (usu capta fuit.) Gell. iii. 2. If absent for three nights, (trinoctium,) she was said esse usurpata, or isse usurpatum sc. suum jus, to have interrupted the prescription, and thus prevented a marriage, Usurpatio est enim usucapionis interruptio, Gell. iii. 2. D. 41. 3. 2. See p. 54.

2. CONFARREATIO was when a man and woman were joined in marriage by the Pontifex Maximus, or Flamen Dialis, in presence of at least ten witnesses, by a set form of words, and by tasting a cake made of salt, water, and flour, called FAR, or PANIS FARREUS, vel Farreum libum; which was offered with a sheep in sacrifice to the gods, Dionys. ii. 25. Serv. ad Virg. G. i. 31. Æn. iv. 104. Plin. xviii. 2.

encouraged by their laws, (as it was among the Romans, though without much effect) and celibacy discountenanced, and in some places punished. The Athenians had an express law, that commanders, orators, and persons intrusted with public affairs, should be married men. Polygamy was not commonly tolerated in Greece. The time of marriage was different in different States. The Spartans were not permitted to marry till they arrived at their full strength, and the Athenian laws are said to have directed that man should not marry till they were 35 years of age. The season of the year, which they preferred for that purpose, was the winter, and especially the month of January, hence called Ἰαννουαίος. Incestuous mixtures, though practised among the barbarous nations, were reckoned scandalous among the Greeks; though among them, as originally among the Hebrews, it seems to have been lawful to marry a half sister, as appears manifest in the case of Miltiades and Abraham. Most of the Grecian states required their citizens to match only with citizens. The usual ceremony, in promising fidelity among the Greeks, was kissing each other, or giving their right hands, which was a general form of ratifying all agreements. Before the marriage was solemnized, the gods were to be consulted, and their aid implored by prayers and sacrifices, by the parents or nearest relations.

In Germany they have a kind of marriage called Marganatio, wherein a man of quality contracting with a woman of inferior rank, gives her the left hand in lieu of the right; and stipulates in the contract, that the wife shall continue in her former rank; and that the children shall be of the same, so that they become bastards as to matters of inheritance, though they are legitimate in effect. They cannot bear the name or arms of the family. None but Princes and great Lords of Germany are allowed this kind of marriage; but the universities of Leipsc and Jena have declared against the validity of such contracts.

The Turks have three kinds of marriages, and three sorts of wives: legitimate, wives in Kebin, and slaves. They marry the first, hire the second, and buy the third. Among the savage nations in Asia, Africa, or America, the wife is commonly bought by the husband, from her father, or relations having authority over her. The conclusion of a bargain for this purpose, together with the payment of the price, has therefore become the usual form or solemnity in the celebration of their marriages.

The Hebrews also purchased their wives, by paying down a competent dowry for them; and Aristotle makes the purchase of their wives among the ancient Grecians an argument to prove them an uncivilized people.

By our law, all persons may marry, but such as are prohibited by the law of God. The legal disabilities are, therefore, 1. Too near relationship by consanguinity, or affinity. 2. Pre-contract, or another husband or wife living. 3. Want of age sufficient to contract matrimony; thus: if a boy under 14, or girl under 12, marries, when either comes to the age of consent, they may disagree, and declare the marriage void. 4. Bodily infirmity or incapacity of performing the duties of marriage.

See Encycl. Brit. Article Marriage.

This was the most solemn form of marriage, and could only be dissolved by another kind of sacrifice, called DIFFARREATIO, Festus. By it, a woman was said to come into the possession or power of her husband, by the sacred laws, (κατὰ νόμους ἱεραὶ ἀνδρὶ συνέλθεσθαι, in manum, i. e. poteſtatem viri convenire.) She thus became partner of all his substance and sacred rites; those of the Penates as well as of the Lares, (see p. 242.) If he died intestate, and without children, she inherited his whole fortune as a daughter. If he left children, she had an equal share with them. If she committed any fault, the husband judged of it in company with her relations, and punished her at pleasure, Dionys. ii. 25. Plin. xiv. 13. Suet. Tib. 35. Tacit. Ann. xiii. 32. The punishment of women publicly condemned, was sometimes also left to their relations, Liv. xxxix. 18. Val. Max. vi. 3. b.

The children of this kind of marriage were called PATRIMI et MATRIMI, Serv. ibid. often employed for particular purposes in sacred solemnities, Liv. xxxvii. 3. Cic. Resp. Har. 11. Tacit. Hist. iv. 53. Certain priests were chosen only from among them; as the Flamen of Jupiter, Tacit. Annal. iv. 16. and the Vestal Virgins, Gell. i. 12. According to Festus, those were so called whose parents were both alive: if only the father was alive, Patrimi, vel -es; if only the mother, matrimi, vel -es. Hence Minerva is called PATRIMA VIRGO, Catull. i. 9. because she had no mother; and a man who had children, while his own father was alive, PATER PATRIMUS, Festus.

This ceremony of marriage in later times fell much into disuse, Tacit. Annal. iv. 16. Hence Cicero mentions only two kinds of marriage, USUS and COEMPTIO, pro Flacc. 34.

3. COEMPTIO was a kind of mutual purchase, (emptio venditio), when a man and woman were married, by delivering to one another a small piece of money, and repeating certain words, Cic. Orat. i. 57. The man asked the woman, if she was willing to be the mistress of his family, AN SIBI MATER FAMILIAS ESSE VELLE? She answered, that she was, SE VELLE. In the same manner, the woman asked the man, and he made a similar answer, Boeth. in Cic. Topic. 3.

The effects of this rite were the same as of the former. The woman was to the husband in the place of a daughter, and he to her as a father, Serv. in Virg. G. 1. 31. She assumed his name, together with her own; as, Antonia Drusi, Domitia Bibuli, &c.—She resigned to him all her goods, Ter. Andr. i. 5. 61. Cic. Top. iv. and acknowledged him as her lord and master, (DOMINUS), Virg. Æn. iv. 103. 214. The goods which a woman brought to her husband, besides her portion, were called PARAPHERNA, -orum, or bona paraphernalia. In the first days of the republic, dowries were very small; that given by the senate to the daughter of Scipio was only 11,000 asses of brass, 35*l.* 10*s.* 5*d.* sterling; and one Meguillia was surnamed DOTATA, or the great fortune, because she had 50,000 asses, i. e. 161*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.* sterling, Val. Max. iv. 4. 10. But afterwards, upon the increase of wealth, the marriage-portions of women became greater, Decies centena, sc. sestertia, 8072l. 18s. 4d. sterling; Martial. ii. 65. 5. xi. 24. 3. Juvenal. vi. 136. the usual portion of a lady of Senatorian rank, Juvenal. x. 355. Some had ducenties, 161,458l. 6s. 8d. sterling; Martial. v. 38. 34.

Sometimes the wife reserved to herself (recepit, Cic. Orat. ii. 55. Topic. 26. vel exceptit, i. e. in usum suum reservavit) a part of the dowry; hence called DOS RECEPTICIA, DIGEST, and a slave, who was not subject to the power of her husband, SERVUS RECEPTICIUS, Gell. xvii. 6. or DOTALIS, Plaut. Asin. i. 1. 72.

Some think that comptio was used as an accessory-rite to confarreatio, and retained when the primary rite was dropt; from Cic. Flacc. 34.

The rite of purchase in marriage was not peculiar to the Romans; but prevailed also among other nations, as the Hebrews, Gen. xxix. 18. 1. Sam. xviii. 25. the Thracians, Xenoph. Anab. vii. Herodot. Terpsich. init. the Greeks, Euripid. Med. 232. the Germans, Tacit. de Mor. G. 18. &c. the Cantabri, in Spain, Strab. iii. 165. So in the days of Homer, Odys. viii. 317. to which Virgil alludes, G. i. 31.

Some say, that a yoke (jugum) used anciently to be put on a man and woman about to be married, whence they were called CONJUGES, Serv. in Virg. Æn. iv. 16. But others think this expression merely metaphorical; as, Horat. Od. ii. 5. Plaut. Curc. i. 1. 50.

A matrimonial union betwixt slaves was called CONTUBERNIUM; the slaves themselves CONTUBERNALES, (see p. 48.) or when a free man lived with a woman not married, (CONCUBINATUS), Suet. Vesp. 3. in which case the woman was called CONCUBINA, Cic. de Orat. i. 40. PELLACA, Suet. Vesp. 21. or PELLEX, quæ propriè fuit ejus, quæ uxorem haberet, Festus. Plaut. Rud. v. 4. 3. Gell. iv. 3. thus, PELLEX REGINÆ, Suet. Cas. 49. FILIÆ, Cic. Cluent. 70. Juvenal. ii. 57. SORORIS, Ovid. Met. vi. 537. Epist. 9. 132. Jovis; i. e. Io, Ib. xiv. 95. et alibi passim.

Married women were called MATRONÆ, or matres familias, Gell. xviii. 6. opposed to meretrices, prostitutæ, scortâ, &c.

There could be no just or legal marriage (NUPTIÆ) justum matrimonium, connubium, conjugium, vel consortium, i. e. eadem fortuna aut conditio, (for better, for worse,) unless between Roman citizens; NON ERAT CUM EXTERNO CONNUBIUM, Senec. Ben. iv. 35. without a particular permission for that purpose, obtained first from the people or senate, and afterwards from the emperors, Liv. xxxviii. 36. Ulpian. Fragm. v. 4. Conjuge barbara TURPIS maritus vixit, Horat. Od. iii. 5. 5. Anciently, a Roman citizen was not allowed even to marry a freed-woman, Liv. xxxix. 19. hence Antony is reproached by Cicero for having married Fulvia, the daughter of a freed-man, Plin. ii. 2. iii. 6. as he afterwards was detested at Rome for marrying Cleopatra, a foreigner, before he divorced Octavia; but this was not esteemed a legal marriage, Plutarch. in Anton.

By the LEX PAPIA POPPÆA, a greater freedom was allowed. Only senators and their sons and grandsons were forbidden to marry a freed-woman, an actress, or the daughter of an actor, Dio. liv. 16. But it was not till Caracalla had granted the right of citizenship to the inhabitants of the whole empire, that Romans were permitted freely to intermarry with foreigners.

The Romans sometimes prohibited intermarriages between neighbouring districts of the same country, Liv. viii. 14. ix. 43. xlv. 29. and, what is still more surprising, the states of Italy were not allowed to speak the Latin language in public, nor their criers to use it in auctions, without permission, Liv. xl. 42.

The children of a Roman citizen, whether man or woman, and a foreigner, were accounted spurious, and their condition little better than that of slaves, Liv. xliii. 3. They were called HYBRIDÆ or Ibrida, vel -des, Horat. Sat. i. 7. 2. Suet. Aug. 19. the general name of animals of a mixed breed, or produced by animals of a different species, mongrels, (animalia, ambigēna; vel bigenēra, musimōnes, Umbri, &c.) as a mule, from a horse and an ass; a dog, from a hound and a cur, (canis ex venatico et gregario), Plin. viii. 5. hence applied to those sprung from parents of different nations, Hirt. de Bell. Afr. 19. Martial, vi. 39. viii. 22. and the words compounded from different languages.

The children of a lawful marriage were called LEGITIMI; all others ILLEGITIMI. Of the latter, there were four kinds: NATURALES, ex concubina; SPURII, ex meretrice vel scorto et incerto patre; Plutarch. Q. Rom. 101. ADULTERINI et INCESTUOSI. There were certain degrees of consanguinity, within which marriage was prohibited, as between a brother and sister; an uncle and niece, &c. Such connexion was called INCESTUS, -ūs, vel -um, Suet. Cl. 26. Ner. 5. Tacit. Ann. xii. 4. 5 & 8. or with a Vestal Virgin, Suet. Domit. 8. These degrees were more or less extended, or contracted, at different times, Plutarch. Quæst. Rom. 6. Tacit. Ann. xii. 6. 7. Liv. i. 42 & 46. xlii. 34. Suet. Aug. 63. Claud. 26.

Polygamy, or a plurality of wives, was forbidden among the Romans, Suet. Jul. 52. Cic. de Orat. i. 40.

The age of puberty or marriage,* was from fourteen for men, and twelve for girls, Festus.

A custom prevailed of espousing infants, to avoid the penalties of the law against bachelors: but Augustus ordained, that no nuptial engagement should be valid, which was made more than two years before the celebration of the marriage; that is, below ten, Dio. liv. 16. lvi. 7. Suet. Aug. 34. This, however, was not always observed, l. 17. Digest. xxiii. tit. i. de Sponsal.

No young man or woman was allowed to marry without the consent of the parents or guardians, Cic. Flacc. 35. Hence a father was said spondere, vel despondere filiam aut filium, Cic. Att. i. 3. Ter. And. i. 1. 75. Tacit. Agric. 9. adding these words, QUÆ RES RECTE VERTAT: OF DII BENE VERTANT, Plaut. Aul. ii. 2. 41 & 49. ii. 3. 4.

* See next note following.

There was a meeting of friends, usually at the house of the woman's father or nearest relation, to settle the articles of the marriage contract, which was written on tables (legitimæ tabellæ.) and sealed, Juvenal. ii. 119. vi. 25 & 199. x. 336. This contract was called SPONSALIA, -orum, vel -ium, espousals; the man who was betrothed or affianced, SPONSUS, and the woman SPONSA, Gell. iv. 4. Suet. Aug. 53. Cl. 12. or PACTA, Plaut. Pæn. v. 3. 38. Trin. ii. 4. 99. as before, SPERATA, Id. Amphit. ii. 2. 44. and SPERATUS, Ovid. Ep. xi. prope finem. The contract was made in the form of a stipulation, AN SPONDES? SPONDEO. Then likewise the dowry was promised, Plaut. Trin. v. 2. 34. Terent. And. v. 4. 47. to be paid down on the marriage day, Suet. Cl. 26. Juvenal. x. 335. or afterwards, usually at three separate payments, (tribus pensionibus.) Cic. Att. xi. 4. 23. & ult. On this occasion, there was commonly a feast; and the man gave the woman a ring, (annulus pronubus.) by way of pledge, Juvenal. vi. 27. which she put on her left hand, on the finger next the least; because it was believed a nerve reached from thence to the heart, Macrob. Sat. vii. 15.

Then also a day was fixed for the marriage, Ter. And. i. 1. 75. Certain days were reckoned unfortunate; as the Kalends, Nones, and Ides, and the days which followed them, particularly the whole month of May, MENSE MALUM MAJO NUBERE VULGUS AIT, Ovid. Fast. v. 490. Plutarch. Q. Rom. 85. and those days which were called ATRI, marked in the kalendar with black; also certain festivals, as that of the Salii, Parentalia, &c. Macrob. Sat. i. 15. But widows might marry on those days, Ibid. Plut. Q. Rom. 103.

The most fortunate time was the middle of the month of June, Ovid. Fast. vi. 221. Plutarch. Ibid.

If after the espousals either of the parties wished to retract (sponsalia dissolvere, infirmare, vel infringere.) which they expressed thus, CONDITIO NE TUA NON UTOR, it was called REPUDIUM. Hence, Repudiatu s repeto r, after being rejected, I am sought back, Ter. And. i. 5. 15. and when a man or woman, after signing the contract, sent notice that they wished to break off the match, they were said, Repudium ei vel amicis ejus mittere, remittere, vel renunciare, Ter. Phorm. iv. 3. 72. v. 6. 35. Plaut. Aul. iv. 10. 69. But Repudiare also signifies, to divorce either a wife, Suet. Cæs. i. or a husband, Quinctil. vii. 8. 2.

On the wedding-day, the bride was dressed in a long white robe bordered with a purple fringe, or embroidered ribands, (segmenta et longi habitus, Juvenal. ii. 124.) thought to be the same with TUNICA RECTA, Plin. viii. 48. bound with a girdle, Lucan. ii. 362. made of wool, (ZONA vel cingulum laneum.) tied in a knot, called nodus Herculeus, which the husband untied (solvebat), Ovid. Ep. ii. 116. Festus. Her face was covered (NUBEBATUR) with a red or flame-coloured veil, (luteum FLAMMEUM.) vel -us, to denote her modesty, Lucan. ii. 361. Juvenal. ii. 124. vi. 224. et Scol. in loc. x. 334. Martial. xii. 42. Plin. xxi. 8. hence NUBERE, sc. se viro, to marry a husband: dare, vel collocare filiam nuptum v. nuptui, i. e. in matrimonium dare, to marry a daughter, or dispose of her in marriage. Her hair was divided into six locks with the point of a spear, Plut. in Romul. et Quæst. 86 vel 87. Ovid. Fast. ii. 560. and crowned with flowers, Catull. lix. 6. Her shoes were of the same colour with her veil, (lutei socci), Catull. lix. 10. Plaut. Cas. prol. 89. Cic. Cluent. 5. Divin. i. 16. Liv. xlii. 12. Suet. Cl. 26. Tacit. Ann. xi. 27. Val. Max. ix. 1.

No marriage was celebrated without consulting the auspices, Juv. x. 336. Cic. Div. i. 16. Cluent. 5 & 16. Plaut. Cas. prol. 86. Suet. Claud. 26. Tacit. Ann. xi. 27. Lucan. ii. 371. and offering sacrifices to the gods, especially to Juno, the goddess of marriage, Virg. Æn. iv. 59. Anciently, a hog was sacrificed, Varro. R. R. ii. 4. The gall of the victim was always taken out, and thrown away, to signify the removal of all bitterness from marriage, Plutarch. præcep. conjug. The marriage ceremony was performed in the house of the bride's father, or nearest relation. In the evening, the bride was conducted (DUCEBATUR vel deducebatur) to her husband's house. She was taken apparently by force (abripiebatur) from the arms of her mother or nearest relation, in memory of the violence used to the Sabine women. Three boys, whose parents were alive, attended her; two of them, supporting her by the arm, and the third bearing a flambeau of pine or thorn before, (Tæda pinea vel spinea), Festus; Catull. lix. 15. Plin. xvi. 18. Propert. iv. 12. 46. There were five other torches carried before her, (called FACES NUPTIALES, Cic. Cluent. 6. MARITÆ, Ovid. Ep. xi. 101. LEGITIMÆ, Lucan. ii. 356.) Plutarch. Q. Rom. 2. Hence TÆDA is put for marriage, Virg. Æn. iv. 18. Ovid. Met. iv. 60.

Maid-servants followed with a distaff, a spindle and wool; (colus compta, et fusus cum stamine), intimating, that she was to labour at spinning, as the Roman matrons did of old, Plin. viii. 48. s. 74. Ovid. Fast. ii. 741. Liv. i. 57. and as some of the most illustrious did in later times. Augustus is said to have seldom worn any thing but the manufacture of his wife, sister, daughter, and nieces, at least for his domestic robes, Suet. Aug. 73.

A boy, named CAMILLUS, carried in a covered vase, called CUMERUM, vel -a, the bride's utensils, (NUBENTIS UTENSILIA), Festus; and playthings for children, (CREPUNDIA), Plaut. Cist. iii. 1. 5. Rud. iv. 4. 110.

A great number of relations and friends attended the nuptial procession, (pompam nuptialem ducebant), which was called OFFICIUM, Juvenal. ii. 132. vi. 202. Suet. Cal. 25. Claud. 26. Ner. 28. Hence DUCERE uxorem, sc. domum, to marry a wife. The boys repeated jests and raileries (sales et convicia) as she passed along, Lucan. ii. 369. Festus. Catull. lix. 127.

The door and door-posts of the bridegroom's house were adorned with leaves and flowers, and the rooms with tapestry, Juvenal. vi. 51. 79 & 226.

When the bride came thither, being asked who she was, she answered, UBI TU CAIUS, IBI EGO CALIA, i. e. Ubi tu Dominus et pater familias, ubi ego Domina et mater familias. A new-married woman was called CAIA, from Cnia Cacia or Tanaquil, the wife of Tarquinius Priscus, who is said to have been an excellent spinster (lanifica) and housewife, Cic. Mur. 12. Quinctil. i. 7. Festus. Her distaff and spindle were kept in the temple of Sangus or Hercules, Plin. viii. 48. s. 74.

The bride bound the door-posts of her husband with woollen fillets, Plin. xxix. 2. s. 9. Lucan. ii. 355. Serv. in Virg. Æn. iv. 458. and anointed (ungebat) them with the fat of swine or wolves, to avert fascination or enchantments; whence she was called UXOR, quasi UNXOR, Serv. ibid. Plin. xviii. 9. s. 37.

She was lifted over the threshold, Lucan. ibid. Plutarch. in Romul. et quest. Rom. 29. or gently stepped over it, Plaut. Cas. iv. 4. 1. It was thought ominous to touch it with her feet, because the threshold was sacred to Vesta, the goddess of virgins, Serv. in Virg. Ecl. viii. 20.

Upon her entry, the keys of the house were delivered to her, to denote her being intrusted with the management of the family, Festus. A sheep's skin was spread below her; intimating, that she was to work at the spinning of wool, Plutarch. quest. Rom. 31. Both she and her husband touched fire and water; because all things were supposed to be produced from these two elements, Plutarch. Q. Rom. 1. Varro de L. L. iv. 10. Ovid. Fast. iv. 792. Art. Am. ii. 598. with the water they bathed their feet, Serv. in Virg. Æn. iv. 167.

The husband on this occasion gave a feast (CÆNA NUPTIALIS) to his relations and friends, to those of the bride and her attendants, Plaut. Curc. v. 2. 62. Suet. Cal. 25. Juvenal. vi. 201.

Musicians attended, who sang the nuptial song, (EPITHALAMIUM,) HYMENÆUS vel -um, vel THALASSIO, Martial. iii. 93. 25. Catull. 61. Ter. Adolph. v. 7. 7. Stat. Sylv. ii. 7. 87. They often repeated, Io HYMEN HYMENÆE, Plaut. Cas. iv. 3. and THALASSIO, Martial. i. 36. 6. from Hymen, the god of marriage among the Greeks; and Thalassus among the Romans, ibid. Martial. xiii. 42. 5. or from one Talassius, who lived in great happiness with his wife, Festus, Liv. i. 9. as if to wish the new-married couple the like felicity, Plutarch. in Pomp. (or from θαλασσια, lanificium, Plutarch. in Romulo.) The words used also to be resounded by the attendants of the bride on the way to her husband's house, Martial. ibid. Ovid. Ep. xii. 143. xiv. 27. Hence Hymenæos canere, to sing the nuptial song, Virg. Æn. vii. 398. vel Hymenæa, sc. carmina, Ovid. Art. Am. i. 563. Hymenæi inconcessi, forbidden nuptials, Virg. Æn. i. 651. vetiti. vi. 623.

After supper, the bride was conducted to her bed-chamber (in thalamum) by matrons who had been married only to one husband, called Pronuba, Festus; and laid (collocabatur) in the nuptial couch, (lectus genialis), which was magnificently adorned, Catull. lix. 188. and placed in the hall, (in atrio vel aula, Horat. Ep. i. 1. 87.) opposite (adversus) to the door, and covered with flowers, Cic.

Cluent. 5. Catull. lix. 192. Donat. in Ter. Eun. iii. 5. 45. Juvenal. x. 334. Tacit. Ann. xv. 37. Propert. iv. 11. 81. Gell. xvi. 9. sometimes in the garden, Juvenal. x. 334. If it had ever been used for that purpose before, the place of it was changed, Propert. iv. 12. 85. iv. 9. 59. There were images of certain divinities around, SUBIGUS, PERTUNDA, &c. Arnob. iv. Augustin. de civ. Dei. vi. 9. Nuptial songs were sung by young women before the door till midnight, Ovid. Fast. iii. 675. 695. hence called EPITHALAMIA. The husband scattered nuts among the boys, Plin. xv. 22. Serv. in Virg. Ecl. viii. 30. Catull. lix. 131. intimating that he dropt boyish amusements, and thenceforth was to act as a man. Hence nucēs reliquere, to leave trifles, and mind serious business, Pers. i. 10. or from boys playing with nuts in the time of the Saturnalia, Suet. Aug. 83. Martial. v. 85. xiv. 1. 12. which at other times was forbidden, ib. 18. Young women, when they married, consecrated their playthings and dolls or babies (PUPÆ) to Venus, Pers. ii. 70. The guests were dismissed with small presents, (Apophoreta), Martial. xiv. 1. Juvenal. vi. 202.

Next day, another entertainment was given by the husband, called REPOTIA, -orum, Festus. Horat. Sat. ii. 2. 60. when presents were sent to the bride by her friends and relations; and she began to act as mistress of the family, by performing sacred rites, Macrob. Sat. i. 15.

A woman after marriage retained her former name; as Julia, Tullia, Octavia, Paula, Valeria, &c. joined to that of her husband; as CATONIS MARCIA, Lucan. ii. 344. Julia Pompeii, Terentia Ciceronis, Livia Augusti, &c.

Divorce, (DIVORTIUM), or a right to dissolve the marriage, was by the law of Romulus permitted to the husband, but not to the wife, Plutarch. in Romulo; as by the Jewish law, Deutr. xxiv. 1. not however without a just cause. Festus in SONTICUM. A groundless or unjust divorce was punished with the loss of effects; of which one half fell to the wife, and the other was consecrated to Ceres, Plutarch. ibid.

A man might divorce his wife,* if she had violated the conjugal faith, used poison to destroy his offspring, or brought upon him supposititious children; if she had counterfeited his private keys, or even drunk wine without his knowledge, Plutarch. ibid. Gell. x. 23. Plin. xiv. 12. In these cases, the husband judged together with his

* By the law of the State of New-York, a Divorce a vinculo matrimonii is allowable only in case of adultery. The Chancellor is the judge.

The Legislator have, however, granted divorces by law on other grounds.

In Scotland, the parties living together, as man and wife, or declaring themselves so before witnesses, makes a valid though informal marriage.

The propriety of the marriage union will appear from this circumstance, that from the registers kept, and computations made by Grant, Dunham, Price, and others, the proportions of males born, to females, is as 14 to 13; and that the number of males that die in infancy, considerably exceed that of the females; besides, the peculiar disasters to which males are liable prove an additional cause of the diminution of the number of males.—See Encycl. Britl. Article Marriage.

wife's relations, Dionys. ii. 25. This law is supposed to have been copied into the twelve tables, Cic. Phil. ii. 28.

Although the law allowed husbands the liberty of divorce, there was no instance of its being exercised for about 520 years. Sp. Carvelius Ruga was the first who divorced his wife, although fond of her, because she had no children, on account of the oath he had been forced to take by the censors, in common with the other citizens, usorum se liberam quærendorum gratiâ habiturum, that he would marry to have children, Gell. iv. 3. Val. Max. ii. 1. 4. Dionys. ii. 25.

Afterwards divorces became very frequent; not only for important reasons, Suet. Aug. 62. Claud. 26. Ner. 35. but often on the most frivolous pretexts, Val. Max. vi. 3. 11 & 12. Dio. 46. 18. Plutarch. in L. Paulloet Ciceron. Juvenal. vi. 147. Cæsar, when he divorced Pompeia, the niece of Sylla, because Clodius had got admission to his house in the garb of a music-girl, at the celebration of the sacred rites of the Bona Dea, Cic. Sext. 34. declared that he did not believe any thing that was said against her, but that he could not live with a wife who had once been suspected, Dio. 37. 45. Suet. Cæs. 6. Cic. Att. 1. 12.

If a wife was guilty of infidelity, she forfeited her dowry, Val. Max. viii. 2. 3. but if the divorce was made without any fault of hers, the dowry was restored to her. When the separation was voluntary on both sides, (cum BONA GRATIA, a se invicem discedebant.) she sometimes also retained the nuptial presents of her husband, Ovid. de Rem. Am. 669.

In the later ages of the republic, the same liberty of divorce was exercised by the women as by the men. Some think that right was granted to them by the law of the twelve tables, in imitation of the Athenians, Plutarch. in Alcibiade. This, however, seems not to have been the case: for it appears, they did not enjoy it even in the time of Plautus; Mercat. iv. 6. only if a man was absent for a certain time, his wife seems to have been at liberty to marry another, Plaut. Stich. i. 1. 29. Afterwards, some women deserted their husbands, so frequently and with so little shame, that Seneca says, they reckoned their years not from the number of Consuls, but of husbands, de benef. iii. 16. So Juvenal. Fiunt octo mariti quinque per autumnos, vi. 228. Martial. vi. 7. often without any just cause, Cic. Fam. viii. 7. But a freed-woman, if married to her patron, was not permitted to divorce him, (ei repudium mittere.)

Augustus is said to have restricted this license of BONA GRATIA divorces, as they are called, Suet. Aug. 34. and likewise Domitian. They still however prevailed, although the women who made them were by no means respectable, Quæ nubit toties, non nubit, adultera lege est, Martial. vi. 7.

The man was said ἀποσπασθῆναι, dimittere uxorem; and the woman ἀπολιπίσθαι, relinquere vel deserere virum; both, Facere divortium cum uxore vel viro, a viro, vel ab uxore, Cic. Fam. viii. 7. D. 24. 3. 34.

A divorce anciently was made with different ceremonies, according to the manner in which the marriage had been celebrated.

A marriage contracted by confarreatio, was dissolved by a sacrifice called DIFFARREATIO, Festus; which was still in use in the time of Plutarch, when a separation (discidium) took place betwixt the Flamen of Jupiter and his wife, (Flaminica.) Quæst. Rom.

A marriage contracted by coemptio, was dissolved by a kind of release, called REMANCIPATIO, Id. In this manner, Cato is supposed to have voluntarily given away his wife Marcia to Hortensius, Plutarch. in Cat. and Tiberius Nero, his wife Livia to Augustus, even when big with child, Tacit. Ann. v. l. Dio. 48. 44. Vell. II. 94.

In later times, a divorce was made with fewer ceremonies; in presence of seven witnesses, the marriage-contract was torn, (Tabulæ nuptiales vel dotales frangebantur.) Tacit. Ann. xi. 30. Juvenal. ix. 75. the keys were taken from the wife, (claves adimebantur.) Cic. Phil. ii. 28. then certain words were pronounced by a freed-man, or by the husband himself, RES TUAS TIBI HABE VEL -ETO; TUAS RES TIBI AGITO; EXI, EXI OCYUS; VADE FORAS, I FORAS, MULIER; CEDE DOMO, Plaut. Casin. ii. 2. 36. Cic. de Orat. i. 40. Plaut. Amph. iii. 2. 47. Ovid. Ep. xii. 134. Juv. vi. 145. Mart. x. 42. xi. 105. l. 2 & 9. D. de divort. Hence Exigere foras, vel ejicere, to divorce, Cic. Phil. ii. 28.

If the husband was absent, he sent his wife a bill of divorce (nuncium remittebat.) Cic. Att. i. 10. on which similar words were inscribed. This was called matrimonii RENUNCIATIO.

If the divorce was made without the fault of the wife, her whole portion was restored to her; sometimes all at once, but usually by three different payments, Cic. Att. xi. 4. 23. 25.

There was sometimes an action, (ACTIO MALE TRACTATIONIS.) to determine by whose fault the divorce was made, Cic. Top. 4. Quintil. vii. 3. declam. viii. 18. 383. When the divorce was made by the wife, she said, VALEAS, TIBI HABEAS TUAS RES, REDDAS MEAS; Plaut. Amph. iii. 2. 47.

Divorces were recorded in the public registers (acta.) Cic. Fam. viii. 7. Senec. de benef. as marriages, Juvenal. ii. 136. births, Id. ix. 84. and funerals, Suet. Ner. 39.

Widows were obliged to wear mourning for their husbands at least ten months, Senec. Epist. 65. and if they married within that time they were held infamous, L. 2. C. de secund. nupt. but men were under no such restriction.

M. Antoninus, the philosopher, after the death of his wife Faustina, lived with a concubine, (ne tot liberis superduceret novercam.) that he might not bring in a step-mother on his children, Capitolin. in vita ejus, fin.

Second marriages in women were not esteemed honourable, and those who had been married but to one husband, or who remained in widowhood, were held in particular respect: hence UNIVIRA is often found in ancient inscriptions, as an epithet of honour. So

UNI NUPTA, Propert. iv. ult. Such as married a second time were not allowed to officiate at the annual sacred rites of Female Fortune, (Fortuna muliebris.) Dionys. viii. 56. Val. Max. I. 8. 4. Serv. in Virg. Æn. iv. 19. Festus in Pudicitia signum. Among the Germans, second marriages were prohibited by law, Tacit. de Mor. Germ. 19.

IV. ROMAN FUNERALS.

THE Romans paid the greatest attention to funeral rites, because they believed that the souls of the unburied were not admitted into the abodes of the dead ; or at least wandered a hundred years along the river Styx before they were allowed to cross it ; for which reason, if the bodies of their friends could not be found, they erected to them an empty tomb, (TUMULUS INANIS, κενοταφιον, Cenotaphium.) at which they performed the usual solemnities, Virg. Æn. iii. 304. vi. 326. 505. Stat. Theb. xii. 162. and if they happened to see a dead body, they always threw some earth upon it, ib. 365. Horat. Od. i. 28. 23 & 36. and whoever neglected to do so, was obliged to expiate his crime by sacrificing a hog to Ceres, Festus in PRÆCIDANEA AGNA : hence no kind of death was so much dreaded as shipwreck, Ov. Trist. i. 2. 51. Hence also, Rite condere manes, to bury in due form, Plin. Ep. vii. 27. Condere animam sepulchro, Virg. Æn. iii. 68. See Plaut. Most. ii. 2. 66. Suet. Cal. 59. and to want the due rites was esteemed the greatest misfortune, Ovid. Ep. x. 119,

When persons were at the point of death, their nearest relation present endeavoured to catch their last breath with their mouth, (extremum spiritum ore excipere :) Cic. Ver. v. 45. Virg. Æn. vi. 684. for they believed that the soul or living principle (ANIMA) then went out at the mouth : hence the soul of an old person (anima senilis) was said in primis labris esse, Senec. Ep. 30. or in ore primo teneri, Id. Herc. fur. 1310. so ANIMAM agere, to be in the agony of death, Liv. xxvi. 14. Cic. Fam. viii. 13. Tusc. i. 9. Senec. Ep. 101. Animam dare, efflare, exhalare, exspirare, effundere, &c. to die.

They now also pulled off their rings, Suet. Tib. 73. Plin. xxxi. 1. which seem to have been put on again before they were placed on the funeral pile. Propert. iv. 7. 9.

The nearest relation closed the eyes and mouth of the deceased, Virg. Æn. ix. 487. Ovid. Her. i. 102 & 113. ii. 120. x. 120. Lucan. iii. 740. probably to make them appear less ghastly, Suet. Ner. 49. The eyes were afterwards opened on the funeral pile, Plin. xi. 37. s. 55. When the eyes were closed, they called (inclamabant) upon the deceased by name several times at intervals, Ovid. Trist. iii. 3. 43. repeating AVE or VALE, Catull. xcvi. 10. Ovid. Met. x. 62. Fast. iv. 852. whence corpora nondum conclamata, just expiring, Lucan. ii. 23. and those who had given up their friends for lost, or supposed them dead, were said eos conclamavisse, Liv. iv. 40. so when a thing was quite desperate, it was expressed by the words CONCLAMATUM EST, all is over, Ter. Eun. ii. 3. 56.

The corpse was then laid on the ground, Ov. Trist. iii. 3. 40.

Hence DEPOSITUS : for in ultimo positus, desperata salutis, desperate, dying, past hopes of recovery, Id. ex Pont. ii. 2. 47. Trist. iii. 3. 40. Virg. Æn. xii. 395. Cic. Verr. i. 2. or from the ancient custom of placing sick persons at the gate, to see if any that passed had ever been ill of the same disease, and what had cured them, Serv. in Virg. Æn. xii. 395. Strab. iii. p. 155. xvi. 746. Herodot. i. 197. Hence DEPONERE aliquem vino, to intoxicate, Plaut. Aul. iii. 6. 39. Positi artus, dead, Ovid. Her. x. 122. so compositus vino somnoque, overpowered, Ovid. Amor. i. 4. 51. ii. 5. 22.

The corpse was next bathed with warm water, and anointed with perfumes, Virg. Æn. vi. 219. Ovid. Her. x. 122. Plin. Epist. v. 16. by slaves called POLLINCTORES, (quasi pellis unctores), Plaut. Asin. v. 2. 60. Pan. prol. 63. belonging to those who took care of funerals, (LIBITINARI) ; Senec. de benef. vi. 38. and had the charge of the temple of Venus Libitina ; where the things requisite for funerals (necessaria funeribus) were sold, Plutarch. Rom. quest. R. 23. Liv. xli. 21. Hence Vitare Libitinam, not to die, Horat. Od. iii. 30. 6. Mirari nihil, nisi quod Libitina sacravit, to admire nobody till after his death, Id. Ep. ii. 1. 49. Libitinam evadere, to escape death, Juvenal. xii. 122. Libitina is also put for the funeral couch, Martial. viii. 43. 4. Acron. in Hor. Od. iii. 30. 6.

In this temple was kept an account (ratio vel ephemeris) of those who died, Suet. Ner. 39. for each of whom a certain coin was paid, Dionys. iv. 15. hence Autumnusque gravis, Libitinae questus acerba, because autumn, being unhealthful, usually occasioned great mortality, Horat. Sat. ii. 6. 19. So Phædr. iv. 19. 25.

The money paid for the liberty of burial and other expenses, was called ARBITRIUM, oftener plur. -a, Cic. post red. in Sen. 7. Dom. 37. Pis. 9. so arbitrium vendendi salis, the monopoly of salt, Liv. ii. 9.

The body was then dressed in the best robe which the deceased had worn when alive, Virg. Æn. ix. 488. Ordinary citizens in a white togæ, Juv. ii. 172. Magistrates in their prætecta, &c. and laid (componebatur vel collocabatur) on a couch in the vestibule (locus vacuus ante januam domus, per quem a via ad cædes iter, Gell. xvi. 5.) with the feet outwards, as if to take its last departure, Ovid. Met. ix. 502. Tacit. Agric. 45. Senec. Ep. 12. brev. vit. 20. Suet. Aug. 101. Pers. iii. 104. Hence componere, to bury, Horat. Sat. 1. 9. 28. Ovid. Fast. iii. 547. v. 426. Tacit. Hist. i. 47. Then a lamentation was made. Hence Sic positum affati discedite corpus, Virg. Æn. ii. 644. The couch was sometimes decked with leaves and flowers, Virg. Æn. xi. 66. Dionys. xi. 39. the bedstead of ivory, Prop. ii. 10. 21. If the deceased had received a crown for his bravery, it was now placed on his head, Cic. de legg. ii. 24. Plin. xxi. 3. A small coin, triens vel obolus, was put in his mouth, which he might give to Charon, (Portitor vel Porthmeus, the ferryman of hell,) for his freight, Juven. iii. 267. Hence a person who wanted this and the other funeral oblations, was said, Abiis ad Acheruntem sine viatico ; for without them it was thought that souls could not purchase a lodging or place of rest, (nusquam posse divertii), Plaut. Pœn. prol. 71.

A branch of cypress was placed at the door of the deceased, at least if he was a person of consequence, Lucan. iii. 442. Festus, Horat. Od. ii. 14. 23. Plin. xvi. 33. to prevent the Pontifex Maximus from entering, and thereby being polluted : Serv. ad Virg. Æn. iii. 64. iv. 507. for it was unlawful for him not only to touch a dead body, Dio. lvi. 31. but even to look at it, Senec. Marc. 15. Id. liv. 28. This tree was sacred to Pluto, because when once cut, it never grows again, called atra, feralis, funerea, vel funebria, from its being used at funerals, Ibid.

The Romans at first usually interred (humabant) their dead, which is the most ancient and most natural method, Cic. de legg. ii. 22. Plin. vii. 54. Genes. iii. 19. They early adopted the custom of burning (cremandi, vel comburendi) from the Greeks, Plutarch. in Numa, which is mentioned in the laws of Numa, and of the twelve tables, Cic. ibid. but it did not become general till towards the end of the republic.

Sylla was the first of the Patrician branch of the Gens Cornelia that was burnt ; which he is supposed to have ordered, lest any one should dig up his body, and dissipate his remains, as he did those of Marius, Cic. Plin. ibid. Pliny ascribes the first institution of burning among the Romans, to their having discovered that the bodies of those who fell in distant wars were dug up by the enemy, Ibid. The wise men among the Indians, called Gymnosophistæ, commonly burnt themselves alive, Plin. vi. 19. s. 22. as Calanus, in presence of Alexander, Cic. Tusc. ii. 21. Zamarus, at Athens, while Augustus was there, Dio. liv. 9.

Under the emperors, it became almost universal, Tacit. Ann. xvi. 9. but was afterwards gradually dropt upon the introduction of Christianity, so that it had fallen into disuse about the end of the fourth century, Macrob. vii. 7.

Children before they got teeth were not burnt, Plin. vii. 15. s. 16. Juvenal. xv. 140. but buried in a place called SUGGRUNDARIUM, Fulgent. de prisc. serm. 7. So likewise persons struck with lightning, (fulguriti), Plin. ii. 55. Senec. de Ir. iii. 23. Qu. Nat. ii. 21. were buried in the spot where they fell, called BIDENTAL, because it was consecrated by sacrificing sheep, (bidentes), Pers. ii. 27. Luc. i. 606. viii. 864. Fest. Gell. xvi. 6. It was enclosed with a wall, and no one was allowed to tread upon it, Ibid. To remove its bounds (movere bidental), was esteemed sacrilege, Horat. Art. p. 471.

The terms, SEPELIRE, Sepultura, and Sepulchrum, are applied to every manner of disposing (condendi) of a dead body, Plin. 17. 55. Cic. Tusc. i. 45. So also HUMARE, &c. Cic. legg. ii. 22. Nep. Eumen. 13. JUSTA, exsequia, vel funus, funeral obsequies or solemnities : hence JUSTA funebria, justa funerum vel exsequiarum, et justa funera alicui facere, solvere, vel persolvere, Cic. Flac. 38. Legg. ii. 17. Liv. i. 20. Sallust. Jug. 11. Cæs. B. G. vi. 17. Reddere justa funeri ; Plin. x. 2. But EXSEQUIÆ properly denotes the funeral procession, (officium exsequiarum v. pompa funebris.) Hence EXSEQUIAS ducere, deducere, comitari, frequentare, prosequi, &c. to attend the funeral, funeri interesse, Tacit. Ann. ii. 32. xvi. 6. 7. 21. Suet. Tib. 23. Ter. And. i. 100.

Of funerals there were chiefly two kinds, public and private.

The public funeral was called INDICTIVUM, (ad quod præconem homines evocabantur,) because people were invited to it by a herald, Cic. Dom. 18. (See p. 153.) Of this kind the most remarkable were Funus CENSORIUM, Tacit. Ann. iv. 15. xiii. 2. Dio. liii. 30. liv. 28. including funus consulare, prætorium, triumphale, &c. PUBLICUM, when a person was buried at the public expense, Tacit. Ann. iii. 48. vi. 11. Suet. Vit. 3. and COLLATIVUM, by a public contribution, Liv. ii. 33. Val. Max. iv. 4. Plutarch. in Poplic. (See p. 127.) Augustus was very liberal in granting public funerals, (δημοτικὰ ταφάς,) as at first in conferring the honour of a triumph, Dio. liv. 12.

A private funeral was called TACITUM, Senec. de tranq. 1. Ovid. Trist. i. 3. 22. TRANSLATIVUM, Suet. Ner. 33. PLEBEIUM, Propert. ii. 10. 25. COMMUNE, Auson. Parent. x. 5. and VULGARE, Capitolin. in Anton. Phil. 13.

The funeral of those who died in infancy, or under age, was called ACERBUM, or immaturum, Virg. Æn. vi. 429. Juvenal. xi. 44. Senec. Ep. 123. or EXSEQUIÆ IMMATURÆ, Id. tranq. anim. i. 11. But funus acerbum is applied by some only to infants, and immaturum to young men. Such were buried sooner than grown persons, and with less pomp, Cic. Cluent. 9. Tacit. Ann. xiii. 17. Suet. Ner. 33. Funera puerorum ad faces et cereos ducta, Senec. brev. vi. 20. Ep. 122.

When a public funeral was intended, the corpse was kept usually for seven or eight days, Serv. in Virg. v. 64. vi. 218. with a keeper set to watch it, Id. xi. 30. and sometimes boys to drive away the flies, Xiphilin. lxxiv. 4. When the funeral was private, the body was not kept so long, Cic. Cluent. 9. Suet. Oth. Tacit. Ann. xiv. 9.

On the day of the funeral, when the people were assembled, the dead body was carried out with the feet foremost, (pedibus efferebatur, Plin. vii. s. 9.) on a couch covered with rich cloth, (strangulæ vestis,) with gold and purple, Suet. Jul. 84. supported commonly on the shoulders of the nearest relations of the deceased, Plin. vii. 44. Juvenal. x. 259. Val. Max. vii. 1. or of his heirs, Horat. Sat. ii. 5. 86. sometimes of his freedmen, Pers. iii. 106. Julius Cæsar was borne by the magistrates, Suet. 84. Augustus by the senators, Id. 101. and Germanicus by the tribunes and centurions, Tacit. Ann. iii. 2. So Drusus, his father, who died in Germany, by the tribunes and centurions to the winter quarters; and then by the chief men in the different cities on the road to Rome, Dio. lv. 2. Suet. Claud. I. Paulus Æmilius, by the chief men of Macedonia, who happened to be at Rome when he died, Val. Max. ii. 10. 3. Plutarch. in Vit.

Poor citizens and slaves were carried to the funeral pile in a plain bier or coffin, (SANDAPILA, Martial. ii. 81. viii. 75. 14. Juve-val. viii. 175. VILIS ARCA, Horat. Sat. i. 8. 9. ORCINIANA SPONDA, Martial. x. 5. 9.) usually by four bearers called VESPILLONES, vel Vespæ, (quia vespertino tempore mortuos efferebant.) Festus, Suet. Dom. 17. Eutrop. vii. 34. Martial. i. 31 and 48. SANDAPILONES, vel -arii; and in later writers, LECTICARII.

The funeral couches, (LECTICÆ, lecti vel tori) of the rich seem also to have been borne by Vespillones, Nept. Att. 35. Gell. x. 3. Hence a couch carried by six was called HEXAPHORUM, Martial. ii. 81. vi. 77. 10. and by eight, OCTOPHORUM, ix. 3. 11. or Lectica octophorus; as the ordinary couches or sedans used in the city, or on a journey, were carried by slaves, called LECTICARII, Cic. Verr. v. 11. Fam. iv. 12. Phil. 41.

These couches were sometimes open, and sometimes covered, Ibid.

The general name of a bier was FERETRUM, Virg. Æn. vi. 222. xi. 64. 149. Stat. Theb. vi. 55. Ovid. Met. xiv. 747. or CAPULUS, vel -um, (quad corpus capiat), Serv. in Virg. xi. 64. Festus; hence capularis, old, at death's door, Plaut. Mil. iii. 1. 34. Capuli decus, Asin. v. 2. 42. Some make feretrum to be the same with lectus; others, that on which the couch was supported, Varr. de L. L. iv. 35.

Children who died before they were weaned, were carried to the pile by their mothers, Stat. Sytv. v. 5. 15. Ovid. Her. xv. 115.

All funerals used anciently to be solemnized in the night-time with torches, that they might not fall in the way of magistrates and priests, who were supposed to be violated by seeing a corpse, so that they could not perform sacred rites till they were purified by an expiatory sacrifice, Serv. in Virg. xi. 143. Donat. Ter. And. i. 1. 81. Thus, to diminish the expense of funerals, it was ordained by Demetrius Phalereus at Athens, Cic. de legg. ii. 26. according to an ancient law, which seems to have fallen into desuetude, Demosth. adv. Macariatum, p. 666. Hence FUNUS, a funeral, from funes accensi, Isid. xi. 2. xx. 10. or funalia, funales cerei, cereæ faces, vel candelæ, torches, candles, or tapers, originally made of small ropes or cords; (funes, vel funiculi) covered with wax or tallow, (sevum vel sebum), Serv. ibid. et Æn. i. 727. Val. Max. iii. 6. 4. Varr. de vit. pop. R.

But in after ages, public funerals, (funera indiotiva) were celebrated in the day-time, at an early hour in the forenoon, as it is thought from Plutarch. in Syll. with torches also, Serv. in Virg. Æn. vi. 224. Tacit. Ann. iii. 4. Private or ordinary funerals (lacita), were always at night, Fest. in VESPILLONES.

As torches were used both at funerals and marriages, Ovid. Ep. xxi. 172. hence inter utramque facem, for inter nuptias et funus, Proper. iv. 12. 46. Et faces pro thalami, fax mihi mortis adest, Ovid. Ep. xxi. 172.

The order of the funeral procession was regulated, and every one's place assigned him, by a person called DESIGNATOR, an undertaker or master of ceremonies, (dominus funeris), attended by Lictors, dressed in black, Horat. Ep. i. 7. 6. Cic. Att. iv. 2. legg. ii. 24.

First went musicians of various kinds; pipers, (TIBICINES, Ovid. Fast. vi. 660. vel SITICINES, Gell. xx. 2.) trumpeters, Pers. iii. 103. Serv. in Virg. xi. 192. and cornetters, Horat. Sat. i. 6. 43. then mourning women, (PRÆFICÆ, quæ dabant cæteris modum plan-gendi,) hired to lament, Festus; Lucil. 22. Horat. Art. P. 431. and to sing the funeral song, (NÆNIA vel LESSUS,) or the praises of the deceased, Plaut. Truc. ii. 6. 14. iv. 2. 18. to the sound of the flute, Cic. legg. ii. 24. Quintil. viii. 2. Boys and girls were sometimes employed for this last purpose, Suet. Aug. 101. As these praises were often unmerited and frivolous; hence nugæ is put for NÆNIA, Plaut. Asin. iv. 63. and Lexidia, res inanes et frivola, for voces præficarum, Gell. xviii. 7.

The flutes and trumpets used on this occasion were larger and longer than ordinary, Ovid. Am. ii. 6. 6. of a grave dismal sound, Stat. Theb. v. 120. By the law of the twelve tables, the number of players on the flute at a funeral was restricted to ten, Cic. legg. ii. 24. Ovid. Fast. vi. 664.

Next came players and buffoons, (Ludii vel histriones, et scurræ,) who danced and sung, Dionys. vii. 9. Suet. Tib. 57. One of them, called ARCHIMIMUS, supported the character (personam agebat) of the deceased, imitating his words and actions while alive, Suet. Vesp. 19. These players sometimes introduced apt sayings from dramatic writers, Suet. Cæs. 84.

Then followed the freed-men of the deceased, with a cap on their head, (pileati.) Cod. de Lat. libert. Liv. xxxviii. 55. Dionys. viii. Some masters at their death freed all their slaves, from the vanity of having their funeral procession attended by a numerous train of freed-men, Dionys. iv. 24.

Before the corpse were carried the images of the deceased, and of his ancestors, Cic. Brut. 34. Mil. xiii. 32. Horat. Epod. viii. 11. Val. Max. viii. 15. 1. Plin. xxxv. 2. on long poles or frames; Sil. x. 566. but not of such as had been condemned for any heinous crime, Tacit. Ann. ii. 32. iii. 76. whose images were broken, Juvenal. viii. 18. The Triumviri ordained, that the image of Cæsar, after his deification, should not be carried before the funeral of any of his relations, Dio. xlvii. 19. Sometimes there were a great many different couches carried before the corpse, on which it is supposed the images were placed, Tacit. Ann. xvi. 11. Serv. in Virg. v. 4. vi. 862. 875. After the funeral these images were again set up in the hall where they were kept. See p. 35.

If the deceased had distinguished himself in war, the crowns and rewards which he had received for his valour were displayed, together with the spoils and standards he had taken from the enemy, Virg. Æn. xi. 78. At the funerals of renowned commanders, were carried images or representations of the countries they had subdued, and the cities they had taken, Tacit. Ann. i. 8. Dio. lvi. 34. lxxiv. 4. at the funeral of Sylla, above 2000 crowns are said to have been carried which had been sent him by different cities on account of his victory, Appian. B. C. i. 417. The lictors attended with their fasces inverted, Tacit. Ann. iii. 2. Sometimes also the officers and troops, with the spears pointing to the ground, Ibid. Virg. xi. 92. or laid aside, Lucan. viii. 735.

Behind the corpse walked the friends of the deceased in mourning, (atra vel lugubri veste; atrati vel pullati;) his sons with their heads veiled, and his daughters with their heads bare, and their hair dishevelled, contrary to the ordinary custom of both; Plutarch. quest. Rom. 14. the magistrates without their badges, and the nobility without their ornaments, Tacit. Ann. iii. 4.

The nearest relations sometimes tore their garments, and covered their hair with dust, Virg. Æn. xii. 609. Catull. lxii. 224. or pulled it out, Cic. Tusc. iii. 26. The women in particular, who attended the funeral, Ter. And. i. 1. 90. Suet. Cæs. 84. beat their breasts, tore their checks, &c. Virg. Æn. iv. 673. Tibull. i. 1. 68. although this was forbidden by the Twelve Tables, MULIERES GENAS NE RADUNTO, Cic. legg. ii. 24. Plin. xxxvi. 11. i. e. UNGUIBUS NE SCINDUNTO, Festus.

At the funeral of an illustrious citizen, the corpse was carried through the Forum; where the procession stopped, and a funeral oration (LAUDATIO) was delivered in praise of the deceased from the Rostra, by his son, or by some near relation or friend; Polyb. vi. 51. Cic. Orat. i. 84. Suet. Cæs. 84. Aug. 101. Tib. vi. Ner. 9. sometimes by a magistrate, Plin. Ep. ii. 1. according to the appointment of the senate, Quinctil. iii. 7. vel 9.

This custom is said to have been introduced by Poplicola, in honour of his colleague Brutus, Plutarch. in Popl. Dionys. v. 17. ix. 54. It was an incentive to glory and virtue; but hurtful to the authenticity of historical records, Liv. viii. 40. Cic. Brut. 17.

The honour of a funeral oration was decreed by the senate also to women, for their readiness in resigning their golden ornaments to make up the sum agreed to be paid by the Gauls as a ransom for leaving the city; Liv. v. 50. or, according to Plutarch, to make the golden cup which was sent to Delphi, as a present to Apollo, in consequence of the vow of Camillus, after the taking of Veji, Plutarch. in Camillo.

But Cicero says, that Popilia was the first to whom this honour was paid, by her son Catulus, several ages after, Cic. Orat. ii. 11. and, according to Plutarch, Cæsar introduced the custom of praising young matrons upon the death of his wife Cornelia. But after that, both young and old, married and unmarried, were honoured with funeral orations, Suet. Jul. 6. Cal. 10. Tacit. Annal. v. 1. xvi. 6. Dio. xxxix. 64 & 59.

While the funeral oration was delivering, the corpse was placed before the Rostra. The corpse of Cæsar was placed in a gilt pavilion like a small temple, (aurata ædes), with the robe in which he had been slain suspended on a pole or trophy; Suet. Cæs. 84. and his image exposed on a moveable machine, with the marks of all the wounds he had received; for the body itself was not seen, Appian. B. C. ii. p. 521. but Dio says the contrary, xliv. 4.

Under Augustus it became customary to deliver more than one funeral oration in praise of the same person, and in different places, Dio. l. v. 2.

From the Forum the corpse was carried to the place of burning or burial, which the law of the Twelve Tables ordered to be without the city, HOMINEM MORTUUM IN URBE NE SEPELITO, NEVE URITO. Cic. legg. ii. 23. according to the custom of other nations; the Jews, Matth. xxvii. 53. John. xix. 20 & 41. the Athenians, Cic. Fam. iv. 12. Liv. xxxi. 24. and others, Cic. Flacc. 31. Tusc. v. 23. Plutarch. in Arato.—Strab. x.

The ancients are said to have buried their dead at their own houses, Serv. in Virg. Æn. v. 64. vi. 152. Isidor. xiv. 11. whence, according to some, the origin of idolatry, and the worship of household gods, the fear of hobgoblins or spectres in the dark, (LARVÆ vel LEMURES,) &c. Ibid.—Souls, separated from the body, were called LEMURES vel MANES; if beneficent, LARES; if hurtful, LARVÆ vel MANIÆ, (ἀγαθὴ καὶ κακὰ δαιμόνια;) Apul. de deo Socratis. Augustus, in his speech to the soldiers before the battle of Actium, says that the Egyptians embalmed their dead bodies to establish an opinion of their immortality, Dio. l. 24. Several of these still exist, called Mummies, from mum, the Egyptian name of wax. The manner of embalming is described by Herodotus, ii. 86. The Persians also anointed the bodies of their dead with wax, to make them keep as long as possible, Cic. Tusc. i. 45.

The Romans prohibited burning or burial in the city, both from a sacred and civil consideration, that the priests might not be contaminated by seeing or touching a dead body; and that houses might not be endangered by the frequency of funeral fires, Cic. legg. ii. 22, or the air infected by the stench, Serv. in Virg. vi. 150. Isid. xiv. 11.

The flamen of Jupiter was not allowed to touch a dead body, nor to go where there was a grave; Gell. x. 15. so the high priest among the Jews; Levit. xxi. 11, and if the pontifex maximus had to deliver a funeral oration, a veil was laid over the corpse, to keep it from his sight, Senec. cons. ad Marc. 15. Dio. liv. 28. 35.

The places for burial were either private or public; the private in fields or gardens, usually near the highway, to be conspicuous, and to remind those that passed of mortality, Varr. de L. L. v. 6. Hence the frequent inscriptions, SISTE VIATOR, ASPICE VIATOR, &c. on the via Appia, Aurelia, Flaminia, Tiburtina, &c. Liv. vi. 36. Suet. Gal. 59. Galb. 20. Juvenal, i. ult. Martial, i. 89. 115. 117. vi. 28. x. 43. xi. 14. Propert. iii. 16. 30. Nep. Att. ult. Plin. Ep. vii. 29. The public places of burial for great men were commonly in the CAMPUS MARTIUS, Strab. v. Suet. Cæs. 84. Cl. 1. Virg. Æn. vi. 873. Dio. 39. 64. 48. 53, or CAMPUS ESQUILINUS, granted by a decree of the senate, Cic. Phil. ix. 7. for poor people, without the Esquiline gate; in places called PUSICULÆ, vel -i, (quod in puteos corpora mitterantur,) Varr. de L. L. iv. 5. Festus. Horat. Sat. 1. 8. 8.

As the vast number of bones deposited in that common buryingground rendered the places adjoining unhealthy, Augustus, with the consent of the senate and people, gave part of it to his favourite, Mæcenas, who built there a magnificent house (molem propinquam nubibus arduis, Hor. Od. iii. 29. 10. called TURRIS MÆCENATIANA, Suet. Ner. 38.) with extensive gardens; whence it became one of the most healthy situations in Rome, Suet. Aug. 72. Tib. 15. Ner. 31.

There was in the corner of the burying-ground, a stone pillar, CIPPUS, on which was marked its extent towards the road, (in fronte,) and backwards to the fields, (in agro, vel -um,) Horat. ibid. also who were to be buried in it.

If a burying-ground was intended for a person and his heir, it was called SEPULCHRUM, vel MONUMENTUM HEREDITARIUM, which was marked in letters, thus, H. M. H. S. i. e. Hoc MONUMENTUM HÆREDES SEQUITUR; or GENTILE and GENTILITUM, Suet. Ner. 50; PATRIUM, Virg. Æn. x. 557. AVITUM, Ovid. Trist. iv. 3. 45. Met. xiii. 524. If only for himself and family, FAMILIARE, L. 5. D. *de religio*s. Freed-men were sometimes comprehended, and relations, when undeserving, excluded, Suet. Aug. 102.

The right of burying, (jus inferendû,) was sometimes purchased by those who had no burying-ground of their own.

The Vestal virgins were buried in the city, (quia legibus non tenebantur,) Serv. in Virg. Æn. ix. and some illustrious men, as, Poplicola, Tubertus, and Fabricius, (virtutis causâ, legibus soluti;) which right their posterity retained, Cic. legg. ii. 23. but did not use. To show, however, that they possessed it, when any of them died, they brought the dead body, when about to be burnt, into the Forum, and setting down the couch, put a burning torch under it, which they immediately removed, and carried the corpse to another place, Plutarch. in Poplic. et Quæst. Rom. 78. The right of making a sepulchre for himself within the pomærium was decreed to Julius Cæsar as a singular privilege, Dio. xlv. 7.

When a person was burnt and buried in the same place, it was called BUSTUM, Festus; whence this word is often put for a tomb, (Τυμβός,) Cic. Tusc. v. 35. Att. vii. 9. Pis. 4. 7. Legg. ii. 26. A place where one was only burnt, USTRINA, vel -um, Festus.

The funeral pile (ROGUS, vel PYRA) was built in the form of an altar, with four equal sides; Herodian. iv. 2. hence called ARA SEPULCHRI, Virg. vi. 177. Sil. xv. 388. FUNERIS ARA, Ovid. Trist. ii. 13. 21. in Ibin. 102. of wood which might easily catch fire, as fir, pine, cleft oak, &c. Virg. Æn. iv. 504. vi. 180. Stat. Theb. vi. 54. unpolished, according to the law of the Twelve Tables; ROGUM ASCIÆ NE POLITO, Cic. legg. ii. 24. but not always so, Plin. xxxv. 7. also stuffed with paper and pitch; Martial. viii. 44. 14. x. 97. made higher or lower, according to the rank of the deceased; Lucan. viii. 743. Virg. Ibid. &c. xi. 215. (hence ROGUS PLEBÆIUS, Ovid. in Ibin. 152.) with cypress trees set around to prevent the noisome smell, Ibid. and Serv. in loc. Sil. x. 535. at the distance of sixty feet from any house, Cic. legg. ii. 24.

The basilica Porcia and senate-house adjoining, contiguous to the Forum, were burnt by the flames of the funeral pile of Clodius, Ascon. in Cic. pro Milone, Dio. xl. 49.

On the funeral pile was placed the corpse with the couch, Tibull. i. 1. 61. The eyes of the deceased were opened, Plin. ii. 37. to which Virgil is thought to allude, Æn. iv. 214.

The nearest relations kissed the body with tears, Prop. ii. 13. 29. Tibull. i. 1. 62. and then set fire to the pile with a lighted torch, turning away their face (aversi;) to show that they did it with reluctance, Virg. Æn. vi. 223. They prayed for a wind to assist the flames, Propert. iv. 7. 31. as the Greeks did, Homer. xxiii. 193. and when that happened, it was thought fortunate, Plutarch. in Syll.

They threw into the fire various perfumes, (odores;) incense, myrrh, cassia, &c. Plin. xii. 18. s. 41. Juven. iv. 109. Stat. Sylv. v. 1. 208. Martial. x. 26. which Cicero calls SUMPTUOSA RESPERASIO; forbidden by the Twelve Tables, Legg. ii. 24. also cups of oil, and dishes, (dapes v. fercula;) with titles marking what they contained; Virg. Æn. vi. 223. Stat. Theb. vi. 126. likewise the clothes and ornaments not only of the deceased, Virg. Æn. vi. 221. Lucan. ix. 175. but their own; Tacit. Ann. iii. 3. 2. Suet. Jul. 84. every thing in short that was supposed to be agreeable to the deceased while alive, Donat. in Virg. Æn. vi. 217. Cæs. B. G. vi. 17. All these were called MUNERA, vel DONA, ibid.

If the deceased had been a soldier, they threw on the pile his arms, rewards, and spoils, Virg. Æn. xi. 192. Sil. x. 562. and if a general, the soldiers sometimes threw in their own arms, Suet. Jul. 84. Lucan. viii. 735.

At the funeral of an illustrious commander or emperor, the soldiers made a circuit (DECURREBANT) three times round the pile, Virg. Æn. xi. 188. Tacit. Ann. ii. 7. from right to left, (orbe sinistro;) with their ensigns inverted, Stat. Theb. vi. 213. and striking their weapons on one another to the sound of the trumpet, Val. Flacc. iii. 346. all present accompanying them; as at the funeral of Sylla, Appian. B. C. 1. of Augustus, Dio. lvi. 42. &c. which custom seems to have been borrowed from the Greeks; Homer. xxiii. 13. and used also by the Carthaginians, Liv. xxv. 17. sometimes performed annually at the tomb, Suet. Claud. 1.

As the Munes were supposed to be delighted with blood, Tertullian. de Spect. various animals, especially such as the deceased had been fond of, were slaughtered at the pile, and thrown into it; Plin. viii. 40. s. 61. Virg. Æn. xi. 197. Homer. Il. xxiii. 166. Plin. Ep. iv. 2. In ancient times, also men, captives, or slaves, were thrown into the pile, Virg. x. 518. xi. 82. Homer. Il. xxi. 27. to which Cicero alludes, Flac. 38. Afterwards, instead of them, gladiators, called BUSTUARII, were made to fight; Serv. in Æn. x. 510. Horat. Sat. ii. 3. 85. Flor. iii. 20. so among the Gauls, slaves and clients were burnt on the piles of their masters, Cæs. B. G. vi. 17. among the Indians and Thracians, wives on the piles of their husbands, Cic. Tusc. v. 27. Mel. de sit. orb. ii. 2. As one man had several wives, there was sometimes a contest among them about the preference, which they determined by lot, Prop. iii. 7. Ælian. 7. 18. Serv. in Æn. v. 95. Thus also among the Romans, friends testified their affections;* as Plotinus to his patron, Plin. 7. 36. Plautius to his wife Orestilla, Val. Max. iv. 6. 3. soldiers to Otho, Tacit. Hist. ii. 49. Mnester, a freed-man, to Agrippina, Id. Ann. xiv. 9. &c.

Instances are recorded of persons who came to life again on the funeral pile, after it was set on fire; so that they could not be preserved; and of others, who having revived before the pile was kindled, returned home on their feet, Plin. vii. 52. s. 53. xxvi. 3. s. 8.†

The Jews, although they interred their dead, (condere, quam cremare, e more Ægyptio.) Tacit. Hist. v. 5. filled the couch on which the corpse was laid with sweet odours, and divers kinds of spices, and burnt them, 2. Chron. xvi. 14. Jerem. xxxiv. 5.

When the pile was burnt down, the fire was extinguished, and the embers soaked with wine, Virg. Æn. vi. 226. the bones were gathered (ossa legebantur) by the nearest relations, Tibull. iii. 2. 9. with loose robes, Id. & Suet. Aug. 101. and sometimes barefooted, Suet. ib.

We read also of the nearest female relations gathering the bones in their bosom, Tibull. i. 3. 5. Senec. ad Helv. 11. Lucan. ix. 60. who were called FUNERÆ, vel -eæ, Serv. in Virg. Æn. ix. 486.

The ashes and bones of the deceased are thought to have been distinguished by their particular position. Some suppose the body to have been wrapt in a species of incombustible cloth, made of what the Greeks called Asbestos, Plin. xix. 1. s. 4. But Pliny restricts this to the kings of India, where only it was then known.

The bones and ashes, besprinkled with the richest perfumes, were put into a vessel called URNA, an urn, Cic. Tusc. i. 15. Ovid. Am. iii. 9. 39. FERALIS URNA, Tacit. Ann. iii. 1. made of earth, brass, marble, silver or gold, according to the wealth or rank of every one, Prop. ii. 13. 32. Virg. Æn. vi. 228. Eutrop. viii. 5. Sometimes also a small glass vial full of tears, called by the moderns a Lachrymatory, was put in the urn.

The urn was solemnly deposited (componebatur) in the sepulchre, (SEPULCHRUM, TUMULUS, MONUMENTUM, sedes, vel domus, CONDITORIUM, v. -tium, CINERARIUM, &c.) Propert. ii. 24. 35. Ovid. Fast. v. 426. Met. iv. 157. Hence componere, to bury, Horat. Sat. i. 9. 28. Tacit. Hist. i. 47. to shut up, to end, Virg. Æn. i. 378. composito die, i. e. finito, Plin. Ep. ii. 17.

When the body was not burnt, it was put into a coffin, (arca, vel loculus,) with all its ornaments, Plin. vii. 2. usually made of stone, as that of Numa; Plin. xiii. 13. Val. Max. i. 1. 12. so of Hannibal; Aur. Vict. iii. 42. sometimes of Assian stone, from Assos, or -us, a town in Troas or Mysia, which consumed the body in forty days, except the teeth; Plin. ii. 98. xxxvi. 17. hence called SARCO-

* In like manner, at the present day, it is common for wives in Hindostan to throw themselves on the funeral pile of their husbands, and to be consumed along with the dead body; and this they generally do with the utmost cheerfulness.

† So instances have occurred in our time of persons who revived after being buried, which ought to render people cautious of interring their friends prematurely.

PHAGUS, Ib. which word is also put for any coffin or tomb, Juvenal. x. 172.

The coffin was laid in the tomb on its back ; in which direction among the Romans, is uncertain : but among the Athenians, looking to the west, Ælian. v. & vii. Plutarch. in Solon.

Those who died in prison, were thrown out naked on the street, Liv. xxxviii. 59.

When the remains of the deceased were laid in the tomb, those present were three times sprinkled by a priest with pure water, (aqua pura, vel lustralis,) from a branch of olive or laurel (aspergil-lum,) to purify them ; Serv. in Virg. Æn. vi. 239. Fest. in LAURUS, Juvenal. ii. 158. then they were dismissed by the PRÆFICA, or some other person, pronouncing the solemn word ILICET, i. e. re licet, you may depart, Serv. ib. At their departure, they used to take a last farewell, by repeating several times VALE, or SALVE æternam, Id. xi. 97. ii. 640. adding NOS TE ORDINE, QUO NATURÀ PERMISSERIT, CUNCTISEQUEMUR, Serv. Æn. iii. 68. which were called VERRA NOVISSIMA ; also to wish that the earth might lie light on the person buried, Juvenal. vii. 207. which is found marked on several ancient monuments in these letters, S. T. T. L. SIT TIBI TERRA LEVIS, Martial. i. 89. v. 35. ix. 30. and the gravestone (CIPPUS,) Pers. i. 37. that his bones might rest quietly, or lie softly, (molliter cubarent,) Ovid. Am. i. 8. 108. Ep. vii. 162. Trost. iii. 3. 75. Virg. Ecl. x. 33. PLACIDE QUIESCAS, Tacit. Agric. 46. Hence Compositus, buried, Ovid. Fast. v. 426. and positus, Ib. 480. So placida compositus pace quiescit, is said of Antenor, while yet alive, Id. Æn. i. 249. We find in Ovid the contrary of this wish, Solliciti jaceant, terrâque premantur iniquâ, Amor. ii. 16. 15. as if the dead felt these things. Sometimes the bones were not deposited in the earth till three days after the body was burnt, Virg. Æn. xi. 210.

The friends, when they returned home, as a further purification, after being sprinkled with water, stepped over a fire, (ignem supergrediebantur,) which was called SUFFITIO, Festus. The house itself also was purified, and swept with a certain kind of broom or besom, (scopæ, -arum,) which purgation was called EXVERRÆ, v. Everra ; and he who performed it, EVERRIATOR, id.

There were certain ceremonies for the purification of the family, called FERIE DENICAE, (a nece appellata,) Cic. legg. ii. 22. Festus ; when they buried a thumb, or some part cut off from the body before it was burnt, or a bone brought home from the funeral pile ; Cic. ib. 24. Quinctil. viii. 5. 21. Senec. benef. xv. 24. on which occasion a soldier might be absent from duty, Gell. xvi. 4.

A place was held religious, where a dead body, or any part of it, was buried, but not where it was burnt, Cic. ibid.

For nine days after the funeral, while the family was in mourning, and employed about certain solemnities at the tomb, it was unlawful to summon the heir, or any near relation of the deceased, to a court of justice, or in any other manner to molest them, Novell. 115. On the ninth day, a sacrifice was performed, called NOVEN-

DIALE, Porphyrio ad Horat. epod. xvii. 48. with which these solemnities were concluded, Donat. in Ter. Phorm.

Oblations or sacrifices to the dead, (INFERIÆ, vel PARENTALIA,) were afterwards made at various times, both occasionally and at stated periods, consisting of liquors, victims, and garlands, Virg. Æn. iii. 66. v. 77. 94. ix. 215. x. 519. Tacit. Hist. ii. 95. Suet. Cal. 3. 15. Cl. 11. Ner. 11. called FERALIA MUNERA, Ovid. Trist. iii. 3. 81. Thus ALICUI INFERIAS FERRE, vel MITTERE, et PARENTARE, to perform these obligations, Cic. legg. ii. 21. Phil. i. 6. Flacc. 38. Parentare regi sanguine conjuratorum, to appease, to avenge, Liv. xxiv. 21. so Cæs. B. G. vii. 17. Saguntinorum manibus vastatime Italia, &c. parentatum est, an atonement was made to their ghosts, Flor. ii. 6. so LITARE, Id. ii. 5. iii. 18. (PARENTARE propriè est parentibus justa facere,) Ovid. Amor. i. 13. 4.

The sepulchre was then bespread with flowers and covered with crowns and fillets, Suet. Ner. 57. Tac. Hist. ii. 55. Cic. Flacc. 38. Before it, there was a little altar, on which libations were made, and incense burnt, Virg. Æn. iii. 63. 302. vi. 883. A keeper was appointed to watch the tomb, Prop. iii. 16. 24. which was frequently illuminated with lamps, D. xl. 4. 44. Suet. Aug. 99.

A kind of perpetual lamps are said by several authors to have been found in ancient tombs still burning, which, however, went out on the admission of air. But this by others is reckoned a fiction, Kippingi, Antiq. iv. 6. 14.

A feast was generally added, called SILICERNIUM, (cæna funebris, quasi in silice posita, Serv. in Virg. Æn. v. 92. vel quod silentes, sc. umbræ, eam cernebant, vel parentantes, qui non degustabant, Donat. in Ter. Adolph. iv. 2. 48.) both for the dead and the living. Certain things were laid on the tomb, commonly beans, Plin. 18. 12. s. 30. lettuces, bread, and eggs, or the like, which it was supposed the ghosts would come and eat: hence CÆNA FERALIS, Juvenal. v. 85. What remained, was burnt; for it was thought mean to take any thing thus consecrated, or what was thrown into the funeral pile. Hence Rapere de rogo cænam, Catull. 57. 3. Tibull. i. 5. 53. E flammâ cibum petere, Ter. Eun. iii. 2. 38. Bustiræpus is applied as a name of contempt to a sordid person, Plaut. Pseud. i. 3. 127. and SILICERNIUM, to an old man, Ter. ibid.

After the funeral of great men, there was not only a feast for the friends of the deceased, but also a distribution of raw meat among the people, called VISCERATIO, Liv. viii. 22. See p. 274. with shows of gladiators and games, which sometimes continued for several days; Liv. xxxvi. 46. sometimes celebrated also on the anniversary of the funeral, Virg. Æn. v. Faustus, the son of Sylla, exhibited a show of gladiators in honour of his father, several years after his death, and gave a feast to his people, according to his father's testament, Cic. Syll. 19. Dio. xxxvi. 51.

The time of mourning for departed friends was appointed by Numa, Plutarch. in Num. as well as funeral rites, (justa funebria,) and offerings to appease the manes, (inferiæ ad placandos Manes,)

Liv. i. 20. There was no limited time for men to mourn, because none was thought honourable, Senec. Epist. 63. as among the Germans, Tacit. 27. It usually did not exceed a few days, Dio. lvi. 43. Women mourned for a husband or parent ten months, or a year, according to the computation of Romulus, See p. 277. but not longer, Senec. ib. & Consol. ad Helv. 16. Ovid. Fast. iii. 134.

In a public mourning for any signal calamity, the death of a prince or the like, there was a total cessation from business, (JUSTITIUM,) either spontaneously, or by public appointment, Liv. ix. 7. Tacit. Ann. ii. 82. Lucan. ii. 17. Capitolin. in Antonin. Phil. 7. when the courts of justice did not sit, the shops were shut, &c. Tacit. Ann. iii. 3. 4. iv. 8. Suet. Cal. 24. In excessive grief, the temples of the gods were struck with stones, (lapidata, i. e. lapidibus impetita;) and their altars overturned, Suet. Cal. 5. Senec. Vit. beat. 36. Arrian, Epictet. ii. 22.

Both public and private mourning was laid aside on account of the public games; Tacit. Ann. iii. 6. Suet. Cal. 6. for certain sacred rites, as those of Ceres, &c. and for several other causes enumerated by Festus, in voce MINUITUR. After the battle of Cannæ, by a decree of the senate, the mourning of the matrons was limited to thirty days, Liv. xxiii. 56. Val. Max. i. 1. 15. Immoderate grief was supposed to be offensive to the Manes, Tibull. i. 1. 67. Stat. Sylv. v. 1. 179.

The Romans in mourning kept themselves at home, Tacit. Ann. iii. 3. iv. 8. Plin. Ep. ix. 13. avoiding every entertainment and amusement; Cic. Att. xii. 13. &c. Senec. decl. iv. 1. Suet. Cal. 24. 45. neither cutting their hair nor beard; See p. 362. dressed in black, (LUGUBRIA sumebant;) Juvenal x. 245. which custom is supposed to have been borrowed from the Egyptians, Serv. in Virg. Æn. xi. sometimes in skins, Festus in PELLIS; laying aside every kind of ornament, Liv. ix. 7. Suet. Aug. 101. not even lighting a fire, Scholiast. in Juvenal. iii. 214. Apul. Met. ii. which was esteemed an ornament to the house, Homer. Il. 13. Hence Focus perennis, i. e. sine luctu, Martial. x. 47. 4. pervigil, Stat. Sylv. iv. 5. 13.

The women laid aside their gold and purple, Liv. xxxiv. 7. Ter. Heaut. ii. 3. 45. Under the republic, they dressed in black, like the men; but under the emperors, when party-coloured clothes came in fashion, they wore white in mourning, Plutarch. probl. 27. Herodian. iv. 2. 6.

In a public mourning, the senators laid aside their latus clavus and rings: Liv. ix. 7. the magistrates, the badges of their office; Cic. post red. in Sen. 5. Tacit. Ann. iii. 4. Lucan. ii. 18. and the consuls did not sit on their usual seats in the senate, which were elevated above the rest; but on a common bench, (sede vulgari;) Tacit. Ann. iv. 8. Dio. lvi. 31. Dio says that the senators in great mourning appeared in the dress of the Equites, xl. 46.

The Romans commonly built tombs (sepulchra, v. conditoria) for themselves during their life-time, Senec. brev. vit. 20. thus, the MAUSOLEUM, (μαυσόλειον;) of Augustus in the Campus Martius between the vis Flaminia and the bank of the Tiber, with woods and walks around, Suet. Aug. 101. Strab. v. p. 236. Hence these words frequently occur in ancient inscriptions, V. F. VIVUS FECIT; V. F. C. VIVUS FACIENDUM CURAVIT; V. S. P. VIVUS SIBI POSUIT; also SE VIVO FECIT. If they did not live to finish them, it was done by their heirs, Suet. Aug. 101. who were often ordered by the testament to build a tomb, Horat. Sat. ii. 3. 84. & 5. 105. Plin. Ep. vi. 10. and sometimes did it at their own expense, (DE SUO vel DE SUA PECUNIA.) Pliny complains bitterly of the neglect of friends in this respect, Ibid.

The Romans erected tombs either for themselves alone, with their wives, (SEPULCHRA PRIVA, vel SINGULARIA), or for themselves, their family, and posterity, (COMMUNIA,) Cic. Off. i. 17. FAMILIARIA et HÆREDITARIA, Martial. i. 117. Cod. 13. likewise for their friends, who were buried elsewhere, or whose bodies could not be found (CENOTAPHION, vel TUMULUS HONORARIUS, Suet. Cl. i. vel INANIS, Virg. Æn. iii. 304. Horat. Od. ii. 20. 21.) Tacit. Ann. i. 62. When a person, falsely reported to have been dead, returned home, he did not enter his house by the door, but was let down from the roof (quasi calitus missus,) Plutarch. Q. Rom. 5.

The tombs of the rich were commonly built of marble, Cic. Fam. iv. 12. Tibull. iii. 2. 22. the ground enclosed with a wall, (maceria,) Suet. Ner. 33. 50. or an iron railing, (ferrea sepe,) Strab. v. p. 236. and planted around with trees, Martial. i. 89. 3. as among the Greeks, Pausan. ii. 15.

When several different persons had a right to the same burying ground, it was sometimes divided into parts, and each part assigned to its proper owner.

But common sepulchres were usually built below ground, and called HIPOGÆA, Petron. 71. many of which still exist in different parts of Italy, under the name of catcombs. There were niches cut out in the walls, in which the urns were placed; these, from their resemblance to the niches in a pigeon-house, were called COLUMBARIA.

Sepulchres were adorned with various figures in sculpture, which are still to be seen, Cic. Tusc. Q. v. 23. Virg. Æn. vi. 233. with statues, Liv. xxxviii. 56. columns, &c.

But what deserves particular attention, is the inscription or epitaph, (TITULUS, ἔπιταφίη; ΕΠΙΤΑΦΙΟΝ, vel ELOGIUM,) expressed sometimes in prose, and sometimes in verse, Ovid. Her. xiv. 128. Martial. x. 71. Cic. Tusc. i. 14. Arch. 11. Senect. xvii. 20. Fin. ii. 35. Pis. 29. Virg. Eol. v. 43. Suet. Cl. 12. Plin. Ep. ix. 20. Sil. xv. 44. usually beginning with these letters, D. M. S. DIS MANIBUS SACRUM, Prudent. Symmach. i. 402. Gell. x. 18. vel MEMORIE, Suet. Vit. 10; then the name of the person followed, his character, and the principal circumstances of his life. Often those words are used, HIC SITUS EST vel JACET, Ovid. Met. ii. 378. Fast. iii. 373. Tibull. i. 3. 55. iii. 2. 29. Martial. vi. 52. Virg. vii. 3. Plin. Ep. vi. 10. Se- sec. Ep. 78. If he had lived happily in marriage, thus SINE QUERELA, SINE JURGIO, vel offensa, vel discordia, Plin. Ep. viii. 5.

When the body was simply interred without a tomb, an inscription was sometimes put on the stone coffin, as on that of Numa, Liv. xl. 29.

There was an action for violating the tombs of the dead, (SACRILEGII VIOLATI ACTIO), Cic. Tusc. i. 12. Senec. Contr. iv. 4. The punishment was a fine, the loss of a hand, (manus amputatio;) working in the mines, (damnatio ad metallum.) banishment or death.

A tomb was violated by demolition, by converting it to improper purposes, or by burying in it those who were not entitled, (alienos inferendo), Cic. legg. ii. 26. D. de sep. viol. 47. 12. Tombs often served as lurking-places for the persecuted Christians, Chrysost. Hom. 40. and others, Martial. i. 35. iii. 92. 15.

The body was violated by handling, l. 4. C. de sep. viol. ix. 19. or mutilating it, which was sometimes done for magical purposes; Quinctil. decl. 15. Apul. Met. ii. Tacit. Ann. ii. 69. by stripping it of any thing valuable; as gold, arms, &c. Id. 69. Phadr. i. 27. 3. or by transporting it to another place, without leave obtained from the Pontifex Maximus, from the Emperor, or the Magistrate of the place, Dig. & Cod. Plin. Ep. x. 73 & 74.

Some consecrated temples to the memory of their friends, as Cicero proposed to his daughter Tullia; which design he frequently mentions in his letters to Atticus, xii. 18. 19. 35. 36. 41. 43. &c. Lactant. i. 15. This was a very ancient custom, Plin. 27. and probably the origin of idolatry, Wisd. xiv. 15.

The highest honours were decreed to illustrious persons after death, Minuc. Felix in Octav. The Romans worshipped their founder Romulus, as a god, under the name of Quirinus, Liv. i. 16. Hence afterwards the solemn CONSECRATION (θεοθεωσις) of the emperors, by a decree of the senate, Herodian. iv. 2. who were thus said to be ranked in the number of the gods, (in deorum numerum, inter vel in deos referri, Suet. Cæs. 88. calo decari, Plin. Pan. 11. &c.) also some empresses, Suet. Cl. 11. Tacit. Ann. v. 2. xvi. 21. Temples and priests were assigned to them, see p. 263. They were invoked with prayers, Virg. G. i. 42. Men swore by their name or genius, and offered victims on their altars, Horat. Ep. ii. 1. 16.

The real body was burnt, and the remains buried in the usual manner. But a waxen image of the deceased was made to the life; which, after a variety of ridiculous ceremonies paid to it for seven days in the palace, was carried on a couch in solemn procession on the shoulders of young men of equestrian and patrician rank; first to the Forum, where the dirge was sung by a choir of boys and girls of the most noble descent; then to the Campus Martius, where it was burnt, with a vast quantity of the richest odours and perfumes, on a lofty and magnificent pile; from the top of which, an eagle let loose was supposed to convey the prince's soul to heaven, Herodian. iv. 3.

ROMAN WEIGHTS and COINS.

THE principal Roman weight was AS or libra, a pound; which was divided into twelve parts, or ounces, (UNCIÆ:) thus uncia, an ounce, or $\frac{1}{12}$ of an as; sextans, 2 ounces, or $\frac{2}{12}$; quadrans, 3, $\frac{3}{12}$ or $\frac{1}{4}$; triens, 4, $\frac{4}{12}$, or $\frac{1}{3}$; quincunx, 5, or $\frac{5}{12}$; semis, 6, or $\frac{6}{12}$; septunx, 7, or $\frac{7}{12}$; bes, or bessis, 8, $\frac{8}{12}$, or $\frac{2}{3}$; dodrans, 9, $\frac{9}{12}$ or $\frac{3}{4}$; dextans, or decunx, 10, $\frac{10}{12}$, or $\frac{5}{6}$; denar, 11 ounces, or $\frac{11}{12}$ of an as.

The UNCIÆ was also divided thus, semuncia, $\frac{1}{2}$, the half of an ounce, or $\frac{1}{24}$ of an as; duella, $\frac{1}{3}$; sicilicus, vel um, $\frac{1}{4}$; sextula, $\frac{1}{6}$; drachma, $\frac{1}{8}$; hemisescla, i. e. semisextula, $\frac{1}{12}$; tremissis, scrupulus, scriptulum vel scripulum, $\frac{1}{24}$ of an ounce, or $\frac{1}{288}$ of an as, Varr. L. iv. 36.

AS was applied to any thing divided into twelve parts; as, to an inheritance, see p. 60. an acre, Liv. viii. 11. to liquid measure, see p. 383. or to the interest of money, &c. Hence probably to our word acc, or unit.

The Roman pound was equal to 10 ounces, 18 penny-weights, 13 $\frac{1}{2}$ grains of English Troy weight, or nearly 12 ounces Avoirdupoise.

The Greek weights mentioned by Roman authors, are chiefly the talent, divided into 60 mina, and the mina into 100 drachma. The mina was nearly equal to the Roman libra.

The English TROY weight, by which silver and gold are weighed, is as follows: 24 grains, 1 penny-weight; 20 dwt. 1 ounce; 12 oz. 1 pound. But Apothecaries, in compounding medicines, make 20 grains 1 scruple; 3 s. 1 drachm; 8 dr. 1 ounce; 12 oz. 1 pound. Avoirdupoise weight, by which larger and coarser commodities are weighed, 19 drachms, 1 ounce; 16 oz. 1 pound.

The Romans, like other ancient nations, Strab. iii. 155. at first had no coined money, (pecunia signata), but either exchanged commodities with one another, or used a certain weight of uncoined brass, (AES RUDE), or rather metal: hence the various names of money also denote weight; so pendere for solvere, to pay; stipendium, (a stipe pendenda), soldiers' pay, Festus; because at first it was weighed, and not counted. Thus talentum and mina among the Greeks, shekel among the Hebrews, and pound among us.

Several Greek words are supposed to allude to the original custom of exchanging commodities, thus, ἀγοραῖαι, to purchase or exchange, by giving a lamb, (ἀγρ, αγρος, agnus;) ἐνομομαί, by giving an ass, (ἄνος, assinus;) ἑωλεω, by giving a foal, ἑωλος, (equuleus), or the young of any animal.

Servius Tullius first stamped pieces of brass with the image of cattle, oxen, swine, &c. (PECUNES), whence PECUNIA, money, Ovid. Fast. v. 281. (Servius rex, ovium boumque effigie primus as signavit, Plin. xxxiii. 3. Aes pecore notavit; Varro. R. R. ii. 1. Plutarch. Q. Rom. 40. Silver was first coined, A. U. 484. five years before the first Punic war, or, according to others, A. U. 498. and gold, sixty-two years after, Plin. xxxiii. 3. 40. Liv. Ep. xv. Silver coins, however, seem to have been in use at Rome before that time, but of foreign coinage, Liv. viii. 11. The Roman coins were then only of brass.

Hence Æs or æra, plur. is put for money in general, Horat. art. p. 345. ep. 1. 7. 23. Aureos nummos æs dicimus, Ulpian. Ære mature, to buy or sell; æs alienum, debt; annua æra, yearly pay, Liv. v. 4. ararium, the treasury; æs militare, money for paying the soldiers, given from the treasury to the Quæstor by the Tribuni ararii, Ascon. et Fest. or by them to the soldiers, Varr. L. L. iv. 36. Homo æratus, a moneyed man, Plaut. Most. iv. 2. 9. as some read the passage; so tribuni non tam ærati, i. e. bene nummati, quam ut appellantur, ararii, i. e. ære corrupti, vel in ararios aut Carites referendi, Cic. Att. i. 16. See p. 113. Æra vetusta, i. e. prisca moneta, ancient money; Ovid. Fast. i. 220. but Æra vetera, old crimes or debts; Cic. Verr. v. 13. Æruscare vel æsculari, to get money by any means; Fest. et Senec. de clem. ii. 6. Æruscator, vel esculator, a low beggarly fellow, a fortune-teller, or the like, Gell. ix. 2. xiv. 1. obæratu, oppressed with debt, a debtor, Liv. 26. 40. Cæs. B. G. i. 3. Tacit. Ann. vi. 17. In meo ære est, i. e. in bonis meis, vel in meo censu, mine, my friend, Cic. Fam. xiii. 62. xv. 14. æs circumforaneum, money borrowed from bankers (argentarii), who had shops in porticos round the Forum, Cic. Att. ii. 2.

Money was likewise called STIPS (a stipando), from being crammed in a cell, that it might occupy less room, Varr. L. L. iv. 36. But this word is usually put for a small coin, as we say a penny or farthing, offered to the gods at games, or the like; Cic. leg. ii. 16. Liv. 25. 12. Tacit. Ann. xiv. 15. Suet. Aug. 57. or given as an alms to a beggar; Id. 91. or to any one as a new year's gift, (STRENA), Id. Cal. 42. or by way of contribution for any public purpose, Plin. xxxiii. 10. s. 48. xxxiv. 5.

The first brass coin (NUMMUS vel numus æris, a Numa rege vel a vopæ lex), was called AS, (anciently assis, from æs;) of a pound weight, (liberatis.) The highest valuation of fortune (census maximus) under Servius, was 100,000 pounds weight of brass, (centum millia æris, sc. assium vel librarum.) Liv. i. 43.

The other brass coins, besides the as, were semisses, trientes, quadrantes and sextantes. The quadrans is also called TERUNCIVS, Cic. Fam. ii. 17. Att. v. 20. (a tribus unciis.) Plin. xxxiii. 3. s. 13.

These coins at first had the full weight which their names imported, hence in later times called ÆS GRAVE, Plin. xxxiii. 3. s. 13.

This name was used particularly after the weight of the as was diminished, to denote the ancient standard, Liv. iv. 41. 60. v. 12. Senec. ad Helv. 12. because when the sum was large, the asses were weighed and not counted. Servius on Virgil makes as grave to be lumps (massæ) of rough copper, or uncoined brass (æris rudis), Æn. vi. 862.

In the first Punic war, on account of the scarcity of money, asses were struck weighing only the sixth part of a pound, or two ounces;

(asses sextantario pondere feriebantur), which passed for the same value as those of a pound weight had done; whence, says Pliny, the republic gained five-sixths, (ita quinque partes facta lucri), and thus discharged its debt. The mark of the as was then a double Janus on one side, and the beak or stern of a ship on the other, Plutarch. Q. Rom. 40. See Ovid. Fast. i. 229. &c. of the triens and quadrans, a boat, (rates;) whence they are sometimes called RATI-TI, Festus, Plin. ibid.

In the second Punic war, while Fabius was dictator, the asses were made to weigh only one ounce, (unciales;) and afterwards, by the law of Papirius, A. U. 563, half an ounce, (semunciales.) Plin. xxxiii. 3. s. 13.

The sum of three asses was called tressis; of ten asses, decussis; of twenty, vicesis; and so on to a hundred, centussis, Varr. L. L. iv. 36. viii. 49. Pers. v. 76. 191. Gell. xv. 15. Macrob. Sat. ii. 13. but there were no such coins.

The silver coins were DENARIUS, the value of which was ten asses or ten pounds of brass, (Deni aris, sc. asses), marked with the letter X.—QUINARIUS, five asses, marked V.—and SESTERTIUS, two asses and a half (quasi sesquiertius), commonly marked by the letters L. L. S. for Libra libra semis; or by abbreviation, H. S. and often called absolutely NUMMUS, because it was in most frequent use, Cic. Verr. iii. 60 & 61.

The impression on silver coins, (nota argenti), was usually on one side, carriages, drawn by two or four beasts, (bigæ vel quadrigæ;) whence they are called BIGATI and QUADRIGATI, sc. nummi, Plin. xxxiii. 3. Liv. xxii. 52. xxiii. 15. and on the reverse, the head of Roma with an helmet.

On some silver coins was marked the figure of victory, hence called VICTORIATI, Cic. Font. 5. Quinctil. vi. 3. stamped by the Clodian law, Plin. xxxiii. 3. of the same value with the quinarii.

From every pound of silver were coined 100 denarii; so that at first a pound of silver was equal in value to a thousand pounds of brass. Whence we may judge of the scarcity of silver at that time in Rome. But afterwards the case was altered. For when the weight of the as was diminished, it bore the same proportion to the denarius as before, till it was reduced to one ounce; and then a denarius passed for sixteen asses, (except in the military pay, in which it continued to pass for ten asses, at least under the republic, Plin. xxxiii. 3. for in the time of Tiberius it appears no such exception was made, Tacit. Ann. 1. 17.) a quinarius for eight asses, and a sestertius for four; which proportion continued when the as was reduced to half an ounce, Plin. ibid. Hence argentum ære solutum, i. e. an as for a sestertius, or the fourth part, Sall. Cat. 33. See p. 48.

But the weight of the silver money also varied, and was different under the emperors from what it had been under the republic.

Varro mentions silver coins of less value: LIBELLA, worth an as, or the tenth part of a denarius; SEMIBELLA, (quasi semilibella), worth half a pound of brass, or the twentieth part of a denarius, and TRUNCIUS, the fortieth part of a denarius, Varro de ling. Lat. iv. 36. But Cicero puts the libella for the smallest silver coin, Verr. ii. 10. Rosc. C. 4. as well as the trunci, Fin. iii. 14. Att. v. 20. Fam. ii. 17. this, however, he does only proverbially; as we say a peenny or a farthing.

A golden coin was first struck at Rome in the second Punic war, in the consulship of C. Claudius Nero and M. Livius Salinator, A. U. 546. called AUREUS, or aureus nummus, equal in weight to two denarii and a quinarius, and in value to twenty-five denarii, or 100 sestertii, Suet. Oth. 4. Tacit. Hist. l. 24. Hence the fee allowed to be taken by a lawyer is called by Tacitus dena sestertia, Ann. xi. 7. by Pliny decem millia, sc. H. S. Ep. v. 21. and by Ulpian CENTUM AUREI, D. l. 12. de extr. cognit. See p. 162. all of which were equivalent.

The common rate of gold to silver under the republic was ten-fold; (ut pro argenteis decem, aureus unus valeret,) Liv. 38. 11. But Julius Cæsar got so much gold by plundering, that he exchanged it (promercato divideret,) for 3000 sestertii, or 750 denarii the pound, i. e. a pound of gold for 7½ pounds of silver, Suet. Cæs. 54.

The aureus in later ages was called SOLIDUS, but then greatly inferior, both in weight and beauty, to the golden coins struck under the republic and first emperors, Lamprid. in Alex. 39.

At first forty aurei were made from a pound of gold, with much the same images as the silver coins. But under the late emperors they were mixed with alloy; and thus their intrinsic value was diminished. Hence a different number of aurei were made from a pound of gold at different times; under Nero 45, Plin. 33. 3. but under Constantine, 72.

The emperors usually impressed on their coins their own image, Juvenal. xiv. 291. This was first done by Julius Cæsar, according to a decree of the senate, Dio. xlv. 4.

The assay or trial of gold was called OBRUSSA, Plin. 33. 3. Cic. Brut. 74. Senec. Ep. 13. s. 19. hence aurum ad obrussam, sc. exactum, the purest gold, Suet. Ner. 44. ARGENTUM PUSULATUM, the finest silver, Ibid. Martial. vii. 85. vel purumputum, Gell. vi. 5. ARGENTUM infectum vel rude, bullion, unwrought or uncoined silver; factum, plate; signatum, coined silver, Liv. xxvii. 18. xxxiv. 52. NUMMUS asper, new-coined, Suet. ib. Senec. Ep. 19. vetus vel tritus, old, &c.

Some coins were indented, (serrati,) Tacit. de Mor. German. 5.

Besides the ordinary coins, there were various medals struck to commemorate important events, properly called MEDALLIONS: for what we commonly term Roman medals, were their current money. When an action deserved to be recorded on a coin, it was stamped and issued out of the mint.

Money was coined in the temple of Juno MONETA; whence our word money. The consuls at first are thought to have had the charge of it. But particular officers were afterwards created for that purpose. See p. 129.

There are several Grecian coins mentioned by Roman writers, some of them equal to Roman coins, and some not ; DRACHMA, equal to a denarius : but some make it to be as nine to eight ; MINA, equal to 100 drachmæ, or to a Roman libra, or pound of silver, Plin. xxi. 34. TALENTUM, equal to sixty minæ, or Roman pounds : TETRADRACHMA vel -um, equal to four drachmæ or denarii, as its name imports, Liv. xxxvii. 46. Cic. Fam. xii. 13. but Livy, according to the common reading, makes it three denarii, Liv. xxxiv. 52. OBOLUS, the sixth part of a denarius or drachmæ, Plin. xxi. 34. The Greek obolus was worth 1 penny $\frac{1}{4}$ and $\frac{1}{4}$ of a farthing, sterling. Six oboli made a drachma, 100 drachmæ made a mina, and 60 minæ, a talent.

METHOD OF COMPUTING MONEY.

THE Romans usually computed sums of money by SESTERTII or SESTERTIA. Sestertium is the name of a sum, not of a coin.

When a numeral noun is joined with sestertii, it means just so many sesterces ; thus, decem sestertii, ten sesterces ; but when it is joined with sestertia, it means so many thousand sestertii ; thus, decem sestertia, ten thousand sesterces.

SESTERTIUM, Mille sestertii, mille nummi, v. sestertii nummi ; mille sestertiûm, mille nummûm vel sestertiûm, nummûm mille ; H. S. vel H. S. 2500 aris, sc. asses ; 250 denarii vel drachmæ denote the same sum.

When a numeral adverb is joined to sestertium, it means so many hundred thousand sestertii ; thus, quadragies sestertium is the same with quadragies centena millia sestertiorum nummorum, or quater millies mille sestertii, four millions of sestertii. Sometimes the adverb stands by itself, and denotes the same thing ; thus, decies, vicies vel vigesies, sc. sestertium ; expressed more fully, decies centena, sc. millia sestertiûm ; Horat. Sat. i. 3. 15. Juvenal. x. 335. and completely, Cic. Verr. i. 10. and ib. iii. 70. So also in sums of brass, decies aris, sc. centena millia assium, Liv. xxiv. 11. For when we say deni æris, centum æris, &c. asses is always to be supplied.

When sums are marked by letters, if the letters have a line over them, centena millia is understood, as in the case of the numeral adverbs ; thus, H. S. M. C. signifies the same with millies centies, i. e. 110,000,000 sestertii or nummi, 888,020l. : 16 : 8 : whereas H. S. M. C. without the cross line, denotes only 1100 sestertii, 8l. : 17 : 7½d.

When the numbers are distinguished by points in two or three orders, the first towards the right hand signifies units, the second thousands, and the third hundred thousands ; thus, III. XII. DC. HS. denotes, 300,000 ; 12,000, and 600 H. S. in all making 312,600 sestertii, 5047l. : 3 : 9.

Pliny says, xxxiii. 3. that seven years before the first Punic war, there was in the Roman treasury auri pondo XVI. DCCCX. argenti pondo, XXII. LXX. et in numerato, LXII. LXXXV. CCCC. that is, 16,810 pounds of gold, 22,070 pounds of silver, and in ready money, 6,275,400 sestertii, 50,741*l.* : 10 : 2½. But these sums are otherwise marked, thus, auri pondo XVI. M. DCCCX, argenti XXII. M. LXX. et in numerato LXII. LXXV. M. CCCC.

When sestertium neut. is used, pondo is understood, that is, two pounds and a half of silver, or a thousand sestertii, Liv. xxii. 23.

When H. S. or sestertium, is put after decem millia or the like, it is in the genitive plural for sestertiorum, and stands for so many sestertii, which may be otherwise expressed by decem sestertia, &c. But sestertium, when joined with decies or the like, is in the nominative or accusative singular, and is a compendious way of expressing decies centies sestertium, i. e. decies centum vel decies centena millia sestertium, v. sestertiorum.

The Romans sometimes expressed sums by talents; thus, decem millia talentum, and sestertium bis millies et quadringentis, are equivalent, Cic. Rabir. Post. 8. So 100 talents and 600,000 denari, Liv. xxxiv. 50.—or by pounds, (LIBRÆ) pondo, i. e. pondere in the ablative, for these words are often joined, as we say pounds in weight; and when PONDO is put by itself as an indeclinable noun, for a pound or pounds: it is supposed even then by the best critics to be in the ablative, and to have libra or libra understood. (See Gronovius de pec. vet.) Plaut. Pseud. iii. 2. 27. Rud. iv. 2. 9. Men. iii. 3. 3 & 18. Macrob. Sat. iii. 15. Columel. xii. 20. 28. Liv. xxvi. 47. iii. 29. iv. 20. xxii. 23. Gell. ii. 24. xx. 1. Cic. Cluent. 64. Invent. ii. 40. Parad. iii. 1.

The Roman libra contained twelve ounces of silver, and was worth about 3*l.* sterling; the talent, nearly 193*l.*

But the common computation was by sestertii or nummi.

A SESTERTIUS is reckoned to have been worth of our money one penny 3¼ farthings; a QUINARIUS or *victoriatu*s, 3*d.* 3¼*q.* a DENARIUS, 7*d.* 3*q.* the AUREUS, or gold coin, 16*s.* 1¼*d.* a SESTERTIUM, or a thousand sestertii, 6*l.* : 1 : 5½—ten sestertii, 1*s.* 7*d.* 1¼*q.*—an hundred sestertii, 16*s.* 1*d.* 3*q.*—ten sestertia, or 10,000 sestertii, 80*l.* : 14 : 7.—an hundred sestertia, vel decies sestertium, vel decies centena millia nummum, v. sestertium, or, 100,000 sestertii, 8,072*l.* : 18 : 4.—Centies, vel Centies H. S. 80,729*l.* : 3 : 4.—Millies H. S. 807,291*l.* : 13 : 4.—Millies Centies H. S. 8,072,916*l.* : 13 : 4 : 16 : 8, &c. Hence we may form some notion of certain instances on record of Roman wealth and luxury.

Crassus is said to have possessed in lands, bis millies, i. e. 1,614,583*l.* : 6 : 8. besides money, slaves, and household furniture, Plin. xxxiii. 10. s. 47. which may be estimated at as much more, (alterum tantum.) In the opinion of Crassus, no one deserved to be called rich who could not maintain an army, Cic. Off. i. 8. or a legion, Plin. xxxiii. 10.—Seneca, ter millies, 2,421,875*l.*; Tacit. Ann. xiii. 42.—Pallas, the freedman of Claudius, an equal sum, Id. xii. 53.—Lentulus, the augur, quater millies, 3,229,166*l.* : 13 : 4. Senec. de benef. ii. 27.—C. Apicius wasted on luxurious living sexcenties sestertium, 484,375*l.*; Seneca says, sestertium millies in culinam consumpsit, and being at last obliged to examine the state of his affairs, found that he had remaining only sestertium centies, 80,729*l.* : 3 : 4; a sum which he thought too small to live upon, and therefore ended his days by poison, Senec. consol. ad Helv. 10, Martial. iii. 22. Dio. lvii. 19.

* In the year 1791, when this book was first published. All these sums are estimated in sterling money.

A single dish of Æsop's is said to have cost an hundred sestertia, Plin. x. 51. s. 72. xxxv. 12.

Caligula laid out on a supper, centies H. S.—80,729l. : 3 : 4. Senec. Helv. 9. and Heliogabalus, tricies H. S.—24,218l. : 15. Lamprid. 27.

The ordinary expense of Lucullus for a supper in the hall of Apollo, was 50,000 drachmæ, 1614l. : 11 : 8. Plutarch. in Lucull.

Even persons of a more sober character were sometimes very expensive. Cicero had a citron-table, which cost him H. S. decies ; and bought the house of Crassus with borrowed money for H. S. xxxv. i. e. tricies quinquies, 24,218l. : 15. Plin. xiii. 15. vii. 38. Cic. Fam. v. 6.

This house had first belonged to the tribune M. Livius Drusus ; who, when the architect promised to build it for him in such a manner that none of his neighbours should overlook him, answered, "If you have any skill, contrive it rather so that all the world may see what I am doing," Vell. Pat. ii. 14.

Messala bought the house of Autronius for H. S. cccxxxvii, 3527l. : 17 : 3½. Cic. Att. i. 13.

Domitius estimated his house sexagies sestertia, i. e. at 48,437l. : 10. Val. Max. ix. 1. 5. The house of Clodius cost centies et quadragies octies, 119,479l. Plin. xxxvi. 15. s. 24.

The fish-pond of C. Herius was sold for quadragies H. S. 32,291l. : 13 : 4. Plin. ix. 55. and the fish of Lucullus for the same sum, Ibid. 54.

The house-rent of middling people in the time of Julius Cæsar, is supposed to have been bina millia nummum, 16l. : 2 : 11. from Suet. Cæs. 38. That of Calius was xxx millia nummum, 242l. : 3 : 9. and thought high, Cic. Cal. 7.

The value of houses in Rome rose greatly in a few years. The house of Marius, which was bought by Cornelia for 7½ myriads of drachmæ, 2421l. : 17 : 6. was not long after purchased by Lucullus for 50 myriads, and 200 drachmæ, 16,152l. : 5 : 10. Plutarch. in Mario.

The house of Lepidus, which in the time of his consulship, was reckoned one of the finest in Rome, in the space of 35 years was not in the hundredth rank, (centesimum locum non obtinuit), Plin. xxxvi. 15. s. 24.

The villa of M. Scaurus being burnt by the malice of his slaves, he lost H. S. millies, 807,291l. : 13 : 4. ibid.

The golden house (aurea domus) of Nero must have cost an immense sum, since Otho laid out in finishing a part of it quingentiss H. S. 403,645l. : 16 : 8. Plin. ibid.

The INTEREST of MONEY.

THE interest of money was called FCENUS, vel fenus ; or USURA, fructus, merces, vel impendium ; the capital, CAPUT or ors ; also FÆNUS, which is put for the principal as well as the interest, Tacit. Ann. vi. 17. Cic. Att. i. 12. v. 21. vi. 1. 2.

When one AS was paid monthly for the use of a hundred, it was called USURA CENTESIMA, because in an hundred months the interest equalled the capital ; or ASSES USURÆ. This we call 12 per cent. per annum, as Pliny, duodenis assibus debere vel mutuari, Ep. x. 62. v. 55. centesimas computare, Id. ix. 28. which was usually the legal interest at Rome, at least towards the end of the Republic and under the first emperors. Sometimes the double of this was exacted, binæ centesimæ, 24 per cent. and even 48 per cent. quaternæ centesimæ, Cic. Verr. iii. 70. Att. vi. 2. Horace mentions one who demanded 60 per cent. ; Quinas hic capiti mercedes exsecat ; i. e. quantuplices usuras exigit, vel quinis centesimis fœnerat, Sat. i. 2. 14.

When the interest at the end of the year was added to the capital, and likewise yielded interest, it was called Centesimæ renovatæ, Cic. Ibid. or ANATOCISMUS anniversarius, compound interest, Id. v. 21. if not, centesimæ perpetuæ ; or fœnus perpetuum, Ibid.

USURÆ semisses, six per cent. ; trientes, four per cent. ; quadrantes, three per cent. ; beses, eight per cent. &c. Cic. Att. iv. 15. Pers. v. 149. usuræ legitimæ vel licitæ, legal interest ; illicitæ vel illegitimæ, illegal, Digest. et Suet. Aug. 39.

USURA is commonly used in the plural, and FÆNUS in the singular.

The interest permitted by the 12 tables was only one per cent. FÆNUS UNCIARIUM vel UNCIÆ USURÆ, Tacit. Ann. vi. 16. (See Lex DUILIA MÆNIA,) which some make the same with usura centesima ; reduced A. U. 408, to one half, FÆNUS SEMUNCIARIUM, Id. et Liv. vii. 27. but these, and other regulations, were eluded by the art of the usurers, (Fœneratores), Cic. Att. vi. 1. Off. ii. 24 & 25. Sal. Cat. 33. Liv. viii. 28. xxxv. 7. 41. After the death of Antony and Cleopatra, A. U. 795, the interest of money at Roma fell from 12 to 4 per cent. Dio. li. 21.

Professed bankers or money lenders were also called MENSARII vel Trapezitæ, ARGENTARII, NUMMULARII, vel Collybistæ, Liv. vii. 21. Suet. Aug. 2. 3. 4. Cic. Flacc. 19. sometimes appointed by the public, Liv. xxiii. 21.

A person who laid out money at interest was said Pecuniam alicui, v. apud aliquem occupare, Cic. Flacc. 21. Verr. i. 36. ponere, collocare, &c. when he called it in, relegere, Horat. Epod. 2. ult.

The Romans commonly paid money by the intervention of a banker, Cic. Cacin. 6. (in foro, et de mensæ scriptura, magis quam ex arca demoque, vel cista pecunia numerabatur, Donat. in Ter. Adolph. ii. 4. 13.) whose account books of debtor and creditor, (Tabula vel codices accepti et expensi; mensæ rationes,) were kept with great care, Ibid. hence Acceptum referre, Cic. and among later writers, acceptum ferre, to mark on the debtor side, as received; ACCEPTILATIO, a form of freeing one from an obligation without payment; Expensum ferre, to mark down on the Creditor side, as paid or given away; Expensi ratio, the act of doing so; Ratio accepti atque expensi inter nos convenit, our accounts agree, Plaut. Most. i. 3. 146. In rationem inducere vel in tabulis rationem scribere, to state an account, Cic. Verr. i. 42. And because this was done by writing down the sum and subscribing the person's name in the banker's book; hence scribere nummos alicui, i. e. se per scriptum v. chirographum obligare ut solvat, to promise to pay, Plaut. Asin. ii. 4. 34. rationem accepti scribere, to borrow, Id. Truc. iv. 2. 36. rescribere, to pay, or to pay back what one has received, Ter. Phorm. v. 7. 29. Horat. Sat. ii. 3. 76. so perscribere, to order to pay, Ter. Phorm. v. 7. 30. Cic. Att. ix. 12. Flacc. 19. whence PERSCRIPTIO, an assignment or an order on a banker, Cic. Orat. i. 58. Att. iv. ult. Phil. v. 4. Flacc. 30. Att. xii. 51. Hence also NOMEN is put for a debt, for the cause of a debt, or for an article of an account. NOMINA facere, to contract debt, Senec. ben. i. 1. to give security for payment, by subscribing the sum in a banker's books, Cic. Off. iii. 14. or to accept such security, Cic. Fam. vii. 23. exigere, to demand payment, Cic. Verr. i. 10. So appellare de nomine, Att. v. 29. dissolvere, to discharge, to pay, Id. Planc. 28. solvere, Att. vi. 2. expungere, Plaut. Cist. i. 3. 41. Explicare, Att. 13. 29. Expedire, 16. 6. Transcribere nomina in alios, to lend money in the name of others, Liv. 35. 7. Pecunia ei est in nominibus, is on loan, Cic. Verr. v. 7. Top. 3. In codicis extrema cera nomen infimum in flagitiosa litura, the last article at the bottom of the page shamefully blotted, Cic. Verr. i. 36. Rationum nomina, articles of accounts, Ib. 30. In tabulas nomen referre, to enter a sum received, Multis Verri nominibus acceptum referre, to mark down on the debtor side many articles or sums received from Verres, Ibid. Hinc ratio cum Curtiis, multis nominibus, quorum in tabulis iste habet nullum, i. e. Curtiis nihil expensum tulit Verres, Ibid. Hence Cicero, pleading against Verres, often says, RACITA NOMINA, i. e. res, personas, causas, in quas ille aut quibus expensum tulit, the accounts, or the different articles of an account, Asccon. Certis nominibus pecuniam debere, on certain accounts, Cic. Quinct. 11. Non refert parva nomina in codices, small sums, Cic. Rosc. Com. 1. Multis nominibus versuram ab aliquo facere, to borrow many sums to pay another, Cic. Verr. ii. 76. Permulta nomina, many articles, Ib. 5.—Likewise for a debtor; Ego bonum nomen existimor, a good debtor, one to be trusted, Cic. Fam. v. 6. Optima nomina non appellando fiunt mala, Colum. 1. 7. Bono nomine centesimis contentus erat, non bono quaternas centesimas sperabat, 12 per cent. from a good debtor, 48 from a bed, Cic. Att. v. 21. Nomina sectatur tironum, i. e. ut debiliores faciat venatur, seeks to lend to minors, a thing forbidden by law, Horat. Sat. i. 2. 16. Cautos nominibus certis expendere nummos, i. e. sub chirographo bonis nominibus vel debitoribus dare, to lend on security to good debtors, Id. Ep. ii. 1. 105. Locare nomen sponsum improbo, to-become surety with an intention to deceive, Phadr. i. 16.

As the interest of money was usually paid on the Kalends, hence called TRISTES, Horat. Sat. i. 3. 87. and CELERES, Ovid. remed. Amor. 561. a book in which the sums to be demanded were marked, was called CALENDARIUM, Senec. benef. i. 2. vii. 10. Ep. 14. 87.

ROMAN MEASURES of LENGTH, &c.

THE Romans measured length or distance by feet, cubits, paces, stadia, and miles.

The Romans, as other nations, derived the names of measure chiefly from the parts of the human body; DIGITUS, a digit, or finger's breadth; POLLEX, a thumb's breadth, an inch; PALMUS, an hand's breadth, a palm equal to (=) 4 digiti or 3 inches; PES, a foot, = 16 digiti or 12 inches; PALMIPES, a foot and an hand breadth; CUBITUS, a cubit, from the tip of the elbow, bent inwards, to the extremity of the middle finger, = 1½ foot, the fourth part of a well-proportioned man's stature; PASSUS, a pace, = 5 feet, including a double step, or the space from the place where the foot is taken up to that where it is set down, the double of an ordinary pace, gradus vel gressus. A pole ten feet long (decempeda) was called PERTICA, a perch (quasi Portica, a portando.) The English perch or pole is 16½ feet.—Unã perticã tractare, to measure with the same ell, to treat in the same manner, Plin. Ep. 8. 2.

Each foot (PES) was divided into 4 palmi, or hand-breadths: 12 pollices, or thumb-breadths, and 16 digiti, or finger-breadths: Each digitus was supposed equal to 4 barley-corns, (hordei grana.) Frontin. de Aquaed. i. 2. But the English made their inch only three barley-corns.

The foot was also divided into 12 parts, denominated from the divisions of the Roman as; thus, dodrans, vel spithama, 9 pollices, or uncia, inches, Suet. Aug. 79. Plin. vii. 2.

A cubit (CUBITUS, v. -um) was equal to a foot and a half (sesquipes), 2 spithamæ, 6 palmi, 18 pollices, or 24 digiti. PASSUS, a pace, was reckoned equal to 5 feet; Plin. ii. 23. 125. Passus or 625 feet made a STADIUM or furlong; and 8 Stadia or 1000 paces, or 5000 feet, a mile, (MILLIARIUM, vel -re; vel MILLE, sc. passus, v. passuum; Cic. Cæcin. 10. Att. iii. 4. Gell. i. 16.)

The Greeks and Persians called 30 stadia PARASANGA; and 2 parasangs, SCHOENOS, Herodot. ii. 16. but others differ, Plin. v. 10. xii. 14.

The Roman acre (JUGERUM,) contained 240 feet in length, and 120 in breadth; that is, 28,800 square feet, Quinctil. i. 10. 48. Varr. R. R. i. 10. 1. Plin. xviii. 3. &c.

The half of an acre was called ACTUS QUADRATUS, consisting of 120 feet square; (ACTUS, in quo boves agerentur cum aratro uno impetu justo vel protelo, i. e. uno tractu vel tenore, at one stretch, without stopping or turning, Plin. xviii. 3. {Donat. in Ter. Phorm. l. 3. 36. non strigantes, without resting, Plin. id. 19. s. 49. Senec. ep. 31. Phædr. iii. 6. 9. Actus quadratus UNDIQUE finitur pedibus CXX. Hoc duplicatum facti jugerum, et ab eo, quidd erat JUNCTUM, nomen jugeri usurpavit, Col. v. l. 5. Jugum vocabatur, quidd uno jugo boum in die exarari posset, Plin. & Varr. Ibid.

An English acre contains 40 perches or poles, or 660 feet in length, and four poles or 66 feet in breadth. The Scots acre is somewhat more than one-fifth larger.

The JUGERUM was divided into the same parts as an AS; hence uncia agri, the 12th part of an acre, Varr. de R. R. l. 10.

ROMAN MEASURES of CAPACITY.

THE measure of capacity most frequently mentioned by Roman authors, is the AMPHORA, (ex ἀμφοί et ἀμφω, quod vas ejus mensuræ utrinque ferretur, duabus ansis.) called also QUADRANTAL, or CADUS, and by the Greeks metreta or ceranium, a cubic foot, containing 2 urna, 3 modii, 8 congrui, 48 sextarii, and 96 hemina, or cotyla. But the Attic amphora, (αδος, or metrēta.) contained 2 urna, and 72 sextarii.

The amphora was nearly equal to 9 gallons English, and the sextarius to one pint and a half English, or one mutchkin and a half Scots.

A sextarius contained 2 heminae, 4 quartarii, 8 acetabula, and 12 cyathi, which were denominated from the parts of the Roman as; thus, calices or cups were called sextantes, quadrantes, trientes, &c. according to the number of cyathi which they contained. See p. 383.

A cyathus was as much as one could easily swallow at once. It contained 4 ligulae, vel lingulae, or cochlearia, spoonfuls, Columel. xii. 21. Plin. xx. 5. Martial. xiv. 120.

CONGIUS, the eighth of an amphora, was equal to a cubic half foot, or to six sextarii. This measure of oil or wine, used anciently to be distributed by the magistrates or leading men among the people, Liv. xxv. 2. Plin. xiv. 14. Hence CONGIARIUM, a gratuity or largess of money, corn, or oil, given to the people, Liv. xxxvii. 57. Cic. Phil. ii. 45. Suet. Cæs. 38. chiefly by the emperors, Tacit. Annal. xiii. 31. Suet. Cæs. 27. Aug. 42. Tib. 20. Dom. 4. or privately to an individual, Cic. Fam. viii. 1. Att. x. 7. Suet. Vesp. 18.

A gratuity to the soldiers was called DONATIVUM, Suet. Cal. 46. Ner. 7. Plin. paneg. 25. Tacit. Ann. xii. 41. sometimes also CONGIARIUM, Cic. Att. xvi. 8. Curt. vi. 2.

The congiaria of Augustus, from their smallness, used to be called HEMINARIA, Quinctil. vi. 4.

The weight of rain water contained in an amphora, was 89 Roman pounds, in a congius, 10 pounds, and in a sextarius, 1 pound 8 ounces.

The greatest measure of things liquid among the Romans, was the CULEUS, containing 20 amphoræ.

Pliny says the ager Cæcubus usually yielded 7 culci of wine an acre, i. e. 143 gallons $3\frac{1}{2}$ pints English, worth at the vineyard 300 nummi, or 75 denarii, each culcus, i. e. 21 : 8 : $5\frac{1}{2}$, about a halfpenny of the English pint, Plin. xiv. 4. Columell. iii. 3.

MODIUS was the chief measure for things dry, the third part of a cubic foot, somewhat more than a peck English. A modius of Gallic wheat weighed about 20 libræ, Plin. xviii. 7. Five modii of wheat used to be sown in an acre : six of barley and beans, and three of pease, lb. 24. Six modii were called MEDIMNUS, vel -um, an Attic measure, Nep. Attic. 2. Cic. Verr. iii. 45. 47. 49. &c.

ROMAN METHOD of WRITING.

MEN in a savage state have always been found ignorant of alphabetic characters. The knowledge of writing is a constant mark of civilization.

The first attempt towards the representation of thought, was the painting of objects. Thus, to represent a murder, the figure of one man was drawn stretched on the ground, and of another with a deadly weapon standing over him. When the Spaniards first arrived in Mexico, the inhabitants gave notice of it to their emperor Montezuma, by sending him a large cloth, on which was painted every thing they had seen.

The Egyptians first contrived certain signs or symbols, called Hieroglyphics, (from ἱερός, sacred, and γλύψω, to carve,) whereby they represented several things by one figure.

The Egyptians and Phœnicians contended about the honour of having invented letters, Tacit. Ann. xi. 14. Plin. vii. 56. Lucan. iii. 220.

Cadmus, the Phœnician, first introduced letters into Greece near 1500 years before Christ, Herodot. v. 58. then only sixteen in number, α, β, γ, δ, ε, ι, κ, λ, μ, ν, ο, π, ς, τ, υ.* To these four were add-

* The original Latin letters were the same in number; that is to say, A, B, C, D, E, I, K, L, M, N, O, P, R, S, T, V, unless H, which is more properly considered an aspirate, be added as a letter to this number. "The letter C stands in the place of the Greek and Hebrew G, and was anciently pronounced like it, and used for it. It is certain, that the old Latins had not a G in their alphabet. Therefore Ausonius says that C supplied the place of G. Plutarch says that Carvilius Spurius first used the letter G. He was consul in the year before Christ 293 : or, if it was the last Carvilius Spurius, he was consul in the year before Christ 228. Whilst C was used for G, K continued in the old Roman alphabet : but after G was added, C became generally used for K, and then K was thought a superfluous letter.

Donatus reckons the V an original Latin letter : and Sergius the Grammarian, in his commentary on Donatus, observes, that Donatus said the Latin I and V were sometimes vowels and sometimes consonants, and were consonants when they were set either before themselves or other vowels. Aristotle and Pliny agree with Donatus, that V was a most ancient and a Cadmean letter. A learned author erroneously denies this, and strikes it out of the old alphabet. And though the Latin ed by Palamedes, in the time of the Trojan war, ϑ, ζ, φ, χ, and four afterwards by Simonides, ξ, η, ψ, ω,* Plin. vii. 56. s. 57. Hygin. fab. 277.

Grammarians agree that the Æolic Digamma was pronounced like the Latin consonant V, yet there seems to have been some difference; because the Æolic Digamma may be left out in any Greek word, and the word continue entire, though the pronunciation will not be the same as with it: but in most words the Latin V consonant cannot be left out: so the Æolic Digamma was a sound different from that of the English V consonant, and the same with that of W. Whether the Latins, who had no W, pronounced their consonant V like it, will be considered. The Latins, in most ancient times, as appears from the Etrurian alphabet, had no sound for their V but that of the vowel; it stood in the same order of place with the Greek Y, and was made from it by cutting off the lower straight line, as Marius Victorinus rightly observes. They used the Æolic Digamma Ϝ to express the sound of the V consonant, as Fotum, Virgo, for Votum, Virgo. But when they used V for a consonant as well as a vowel, they laid aside the Æolic Digamma; and afterwards it became an F, or the P aspirated, and answering to the Greek φ, or Φ.

The H was an original Cadmean and Pelasgic letter, which the Ionics and Attics received with the Phœnician alphabet, as did also the Etrurians and ancient Latins from the Pelasgi. But it was disputed amongst the grammarians whether it should be accounted in the number of the letters, or be esteemed a mere note of aspiration. Varro thought it was not a letter, and many Grammarians followed his opinion, and thought it was only a sign or mark of aspiration, and was formed out of the two marks of the aspirate and lene vowels of the Greeks, viz. F - I joined together. But these Grammarians were quite mistaken as to the original of the Latin H. It was derived from the Phœnician and Ionic H, and was many ages older than the Greek aspirate and lene marks, which were not used till after they had disused the H: and they were a corruption of the original letter H, which the Greeks divided into two parts, to denote vowels which were aspirated or not. And this was owing to the reception of the Eta or long E of Simonides, which was in the form of the old H; and then they used half of the H F, to supply its place, and to preserve the power of it: and that it might not be confounded with the H or long E of Simonides, they laid the H aside, and placed the half pointing to the right hand F, before the aspirated vowels. This appears in several old inscriptions. So that the learned Aldus Manutius is greatly mistaken in his observation, at the end of the old Byzantine grammarian Constantine Lascaris, that the Latins borrowed the form of their H from the conjunction of the aspirate and lene marks of the Greeks. He took this opinion from Sergius; but it is certain that the Latin H was far older than these marks of the Greeks, which were not used till after the time of Simonides: and the Latins used them as well as the Greeks, though they preferred the old H.

Isidore observes, that neither the Greeks nor Hebrews have the letter Q; and that it is not used in any language but the Latin: and that the ancients always expressed it by C. Concerning the letters X, Y, Z, he says the same with Peter Diaconus. But they are both of them mistaken with respect to the letter X, which was used in public inscriptions long before the age of Augustus. In the Dutilian pillar, inscribed in the year of Rome 494, and in the year 269 before the Christian era, we read, ΕΚΕΜΕΤ. ΜΑΧΙΜΟΣ. ΕΧΡΟΚΙΟΥΝΤ. The Y also was used before the reign of Augustus, as I showed from Cicero, though probably it was not much older. Diomedes says, that before the invention of the letter X, the ancients wrote G and S, or C and S, instead of it. Priscian says, X was the last Greek letter taken into Latin words: it was called Ix, not Ex, because in the Greek alphabet it ended in i, and was called Xi: before the use of it the Latins wrote CS or GS instead of it."

Jackson's Antiq.—Ed.

* The Latins had their letters from the Greeks before the Greeks had any double letters, or had found out their long vowels Η and Ω. So all the vowels amongst the Latins continued to be ambiguous, either long or short, without distinction, for many ages. And though the Greeks had invented a long E, viz. Η, and long O, viz. Ω, which was done by Simonides, who formed them by only doubling the E and O, and joining two together, as H and o-o: yet they never thought of distinguishing in writing the long and the short A, I, Y, which always remained of ambiguous quantity in themselves; and their quantity in particular words was known and fixed by use of speaking only. But the Latins in time distinguished their long from their short vowels by doubling the vowels when long, or writing AA, EE, etc. to denote the long A or long E. Afterward, to save the trouble of writing double vowels, they put a small Letters were brought into Latium by Evander from Greece, Ibid. & Liv. i. 7. The Latin letters at first were nearly of the same form with the Greek, Tacit. ibid. Plin. vii. 58.

Some nations ranged their letters perpendicularly, from the top to the bottom of the page, but most horizontally.* Some from the right to left, as the Hebrews, Assyrians, &c. Some from right to left, and from left to right, alternately, like cattle ploughing, as the ancient Greeks; hence this manner of writing was called βασεραφιδίον. But most, as we do, from left to right.

The most ancient materials for writing, were stones and bricks, Joseph. Ant. Jud. i. 4. Tacit. Ann. ii. 60. Lucan. iii. 223. Thus, the decalogue, or ten commandments, Exod. xxxiv. 1. and the laws of Moses, Deut. xxvii. 8. Jos. viii. 32.—then plates of brass, Liv. iii. 57. Tacit. Ann. iv. 43. or of lead, Plin. xiii. 11. s. 21. Job. xix. 24. and wooden tablets, Isaiah. xxx. 8. Horat. art. p. 399. Gell. ii. 13. On these, all public acts and monuments were preserved, Cic. Font. 14. Liv. vi. 20. Plin. pan. 54. Horat. od. iv. 8. 13. As the art of writing was little known, and rarely practised, it behoved the materials to be durable. Capital letters only were used, as appears from ancient marbles and coins.

The materials first used in common for writing, were the leaves or inner bark (liber) of trees; whence leaves of paper (chartæ, folia, vel plagulae), and LIBER, a book. The leaves of trees are still used for writing by several nations of India. Afterwards linen, Liv. iv. 7. 13. 20. and tables covered with wax were used. About the time of Alexander the Great, paper first began to be manufactured from an Egyptian plant or reed called PAPHYRUS, vel -um, whence our word paper; or BIBLOS, whence βιβλος, a book.

The Papyrus was about ten cubits high, and had several coats or skins above one another, like an onion, which they separated with a needle. One of these membranes (philyra, vel schedæ), was spread line over those which were pronounced long; as, \bar{A} , \bar{E} , \bar{O} , \bar{V} . They distinguished the i by lengthening the form of it when it was long: so a short i was wrote less than a long i. Concerning the small lines drawn over vowels, Quintilian observes, that it was sufficient to write them only over syllables of words which were ambiguous, and to distinguish the sense of some words from others which consist of the same letters, (as venit and venit; legit and legit;) as also the ablative cases of words whose last syllable is long, when that of the nominative case is short. The doubled letters are found in ancient manuscripts and coins, as VAARVS for VARVS; and MEHE for ME; so in ancient coins the long E is expressed by doubling it; as, SEEDS for SEDS; FELIX for FELIX; and we find the doubled V to express the long one in the brass Fulvian table: P. MVVCTO COS. for MVCTO. and IVVSO, for IVSO; and in Ennius we read, qui fuscinus ante Rudinai, where the short V is made long by being doubled. Fuscinet, habumerit, fuscorit. Lucretius has fusida; and Lucilius wrote luscit, etc. These examples show that the ancient Latins, to express a long V, or to render a short one long, doubled it. They also used the double V to express the sound of the Greek diphthong oo: and Victorinus says, the Latins added \bar{O} to V to express the long V. Ennius has loure for Iure, in his Annals; and in an ancient decree of the Roman senate, in the year of Rome 368, we read Inducebamus for Inducebamus."

Jackson's Antiq.—Ed.

* "This way of writing (which the Chinese are known to use) was called by the Greeks Taepecon, as the present reading is in Paulus Diaconus and Pompejus Festus; and in this way they wrote from the right hand to the left, as the Chinese do."

Jackson's Antiq.—Ed.

on a table longwise, and another placed above it across. The one was called a stamen, and the other subtemen, as the warp and the woof in a web. Being moistened with the muddy water of the Nile, which served instead of glue, they were put under a press, and after that dried in the sun. Then these sheets, (plagula, vel schedæ.) thus prepared were joined together, end to end, but never more than twenty in what was called one SCAPUS, or roll, Plin. xiii. 11. s. 21.

The sheets were of different size and quality.

Paper was smoothed with a shell, or the tooth of a boar, or some other animal: hence charta dentata, smooth, polished, Cic. Q. fr. ii. 15. The finest paper was called at Rome, after Augustus, AUGUSTA regia; the next LIVIANA; the third HIERATICA, which used anciently to be the name of the finest kind, being appropriated to the sacred volumes. The emperor Claudius introduced some alteration, so that the finest paper after him was called CLAUDIA. The inferior kinds were called Amphitheatrica, Saitica, Lenœtica, from places in Ægypt where paper was made; and FANNIANA from Fannius, who had a noted manufactory (officina) for dressing Egyptian paper at Rome, Plin. ib.

Paper which served only for wrappers, (involutura vel segestria, sing. e.) was called EMPORETICA, because chiefly used by merchants for packing goods, Plin. xiii. 12. coarse and spongy paper, SCABRA BIBULAQUE, Plin. Ep. viii. 15.

Fine paper of the largest size was called MACROCOLLA, sc. charta as we say, royal or imperial paper, and any thing written on it, MACROCOLLUM, sc. volumen, Ibid. & Cic. Att. xiii. 25. xvi. 3.

The exportation of paper being prohibited by one of the Ptolemies, out of envy against Eumenes, king of Pergamus, who endeavoured to rival him in the magnificence of his library, the use of parchment, or the art of preparing skins for writing, was discovered at Pergamus, hence called PERGAMENTA, sc. charta, vel MEMBRANA, parchment. Hence also Cicero calls his four books of Academics, quatuor διαδερμα, i. e. libri e membranis facti, Att. xiii. 24. Some read διαδερμα, i. e. pelles, by a metonymy, for libri pellibus tecti, vel in pellibus scripti. See Munutius. DIPHTHERA Jovis is the register book of Jupiter, made of the skin of the goat Amalthea, by whose milk he was nursed, on which he is supposed by the poets to have written down the actions of men. Whence the proverb, Diphtheram sero Jupiter inspexit; and Antiquiora diphtherâ, Erasm. in Chiliad. Vid. Polluc. vii. 15. Ælian. ix. 3. To this Plautus beautifully alludes, Rud. prol. 21.

The skins of sheep are properly called parchment; of calves VELLUM, (quasi VITULINUM, sc. corium.)

Most of the ancient manuscripts which remain are written on parchment, a few on the papyrus.

Ægypt having fallen under the dominion of the Arabs in the seventh century, and its commerce with Europe and the Constantinopolitan empire being stopped, the manufacture of paper from the pa- pyrus ceased. The art of making paper from cotton or silk, (charta bombycina), was invented in the east about the beginning of the tenth century; and in imitation of it, from linen rags, in the fourteenth century. Coarse brown paper was first manufactured in England, A. 1588; for writing and printing, A. 1690; before which time about 100,000*l.* are said to have been paid annually for these articles to France and Holland.

The instrument used for writing on waxen tables, the leaves or bark of trees, plates of brass or lead, &c. was an iron pencil, with a sharp point, called STYLUS, or GRAPHIUM. Hence Stilo abstineo, I forbear writing, Plin. Ep. vii. 21. On paper or parchment, a reed sharpened and split in the point, like our pens, called CALAMUS, ARUNDO, fistula vel canna, which they dipt in ink, (atramento intingebant;) as we do our pens, Cic. Att. vi. 8. Ad. Q. fr. ii. 15. Pers. iii. 11 & 14. Horat. Art. p. 246. Plin. xvi. 36. s. 64.

SEPIA, the cuttle-fish, is put for ink, Pers. ib. because when afraid of being caught, it emits a black matter to conceal itself, which the Romans sometimes used for ink, Cic. de Nat. D. ii. 20. Ovid. Halieut. 18.

The ordinary writing materials of the Romans were tablets covered with wax, paper, and parchment. Their stilus was broad at one end; so that when they wished to correct any thing, they turned the stilus, and smoothed the wax with the broad end, that they might write on it anew: hence sæpe stilum vertas, make frequent corrections, Horat. Sat. i. 10. 72.

An author, while composing, usually wrote first on these tables for the convenience of making alterations; and when any thing appeared sufficiently correct, it was transcribed on paper or parchment, and published, Horat. Sat. ii. 3. 2.

It seems one could write more quickly on waxen tables than on paper, where the hand was retarded by frequently dipping the reed in ink, Quinctilian. x. 3. 30.

The labour of correcting was compared to that of working with a file, (limæ labor;) hence opus limare, to polish, Cic. Orat. i. 25. limare de aliquo, to lop off redundancies, Id. iii. 9. supremam limam operiri, to wait the last polish, Plin. ep. viii. 5. limâ mordaciùs uti, to correct more carefully, Ovid. Pont. i. 5. 19. Liber rarus limâ amici, polished by the correction of a friend, Id. ii. 4. 17. ultima lima defuit meis scriptis, Ovid. Trist. i. 6. 30. i. e. summa manus operi defuit vel non imposita est, the last hand was not put to the work, it was not finished; metaph. vel translat. a picturâ, quam manus complet atque ornat suprema, Serv. in Virg. Æn. vii. 572. or of beating on an anvil; thus, Et male tornatos (some read formatos) incudi reddere versus, to alter, to correct, Horat. Art. p. 441. uno opere eandem incudem diem noctemque tundere, to be always teaching the same thing, Cic. Orat. ii. 39. Ablatum mediis opus est incudibus illud, the work was published in an imperfect state, Ovid. Ibid. 29.

The Romans used also a kind of blotting or coarse paper, or parchment, (charta deletitia), called PALIMSESTOS, (α παλιν, rursus, et ↓aw, rado,) vel palinæstus, (a ξω, rado,) on which they might easily erase (delere) what was written, and write it anew, Martial. xiv. 7. Cic. Fam. vii. 18. But it seems this might have been done on any parchment, Horat. Art. p. 389. They sometimes varied the expression by interlining (suprascripto,) Plin. ep. vii. 12.

The Romans used to have note-books, (ADVERSARIA, -orum,) in which they marked down memorandums of any thing, that it might not be forgotten, until they wrote out a fair copy; of an account, for instance, or of any deed, (ut ex iis iusta tabularum conficerentur,) Cic. Rosc. Com. 2 & 3. Hence referre in adversaria, to take a memorandum of a thing, ib.

The Romans commonly wrote only on one side of the paper or parchment, and always joined (agglutinabant) one sheet (scheda) to the end of another, till they finished what they had to write, and then rolled it up on a cylinder or staff; hence VOLUMEN, a volume or scroll; evolvere librum, to open a book to read, Cic. Tusc. i. 11. Top. 9. animi sui complicatam notionem evolvere, to unfold, to explain, Off. iii. 19.

An author generally included only one book in a volume, so that usually in a work there was the same number of volumes as of books. Thus Ovid calls his 15 books of Metamorphoses, mutatae ter quinque volumina forma, Trist. i. 1. 117. So Cic. Tusc. iii. 3. Att. ix. 10. Fam. xvi. 17. When the book was long, it was sometimes divided into two volumes: thus, Studiosi tres, i. e. three books on Rhetoric, in sex volumina propter amplitudinem divisi, Plin. ep. iii. 4. Sometimes a work, consisting of many books, was contained in one volume; thus, Homerus totus in uno volumine, i. e. forty-eight books, Ulpian. l. 52. D. de legat. iii. Hence annosa volumina vatum, aged books, Horat. ep. ii. 1. 26. Peragere volumina, to compose, Plin. ib.

When an author, in composing a book, wrote on both sides (in utraque pagina) of the paper or parchment, it was called OPISTHOGRAPHUS, vel -on, Plin. ib. i. e. scriptus et in tergo, (ex ἐπίστυ, a tergo, et γράφω, scribo,) Juvenal. i. 1. 6. in chartâ aversâ, Martial. viii. 62. in very small characters, (minutissimis, sc. litteris,) Plin. ib.

When a book or volume was finished, a ball or boss (bulia) of wood, bone, horn, or the like, was affixed to it on the outside, for security and ornament, (ad conservationem et ornatum.) called UMBILICUS, from its resemblance to that part of the human body; hence Ad umbilicum adducere, to finish, Horat. Epod. xiv. 8. ad umbilicos pervenire, Martial. iv. 91. Some suppose this ornament to have been placed in the middle of the roll, Schol. in Horat. but others, at the end of the stick, (bacillus, vel surculus.) on which the book was rolled, or rather at both ends, called CORNUA, Ovid. Trist. i. 1. 8. Martial. xi. 108. hence we usually find umbilici in the plur. Catull. xx. 7. Martial. i. 67. iii. 2. 5. 6. viii. 61. and in Stattius, Silv. iv. 9. 8. binis umbilicis decoratus liber.

UMBILICUS is also put for the centre of any thing, as navel in English; thus, Delphi umbilicus Græciæ, Liv. xxxv. 18.—41. 23.

orbis terrarum, Id. xxxviii. 47. Cic. divin. ii. 56. So Cic. Verr. iv. 48. Cutikia lacus, in quo fluctuet insula, Italia umbilicus, Plin. iii. 13. s. 17. and for a shell or pebble, Cic. Orat. ii. 6.

The Romans usually carried with them, wherever they went, small writing tables, called PUGILLARES, vel -ia (quod non majores, erant quam quæ pugno, vel pugillo comprehenderentur, vel quod in iis stilo pungendo scribebatur), by Homer, εναυς, Il. vi. 169. hence said to have been in use before the time of the Trojan war. Plin. xiii. 11. on which they marked down any thing that occurred, Plin. ep. i. 6. Ovid. Met. ix. 520. either with their own hands, Plin. viii. 9. or by means of a slave, called from his office, NOTARIUS, Id. iii. 5. or TABELLARIUS, Cic. Phil. ii. 4.

The pugillares were of an oblong form, made of citron, or box-wood, or ivory, also of parchment, covered with coloured or white wax, Ovid. Amor. i. 12. 7. Martial. xiv. 3. containing two leaves, (duplices, διπλοῦς;) three, four, five, or more, Martial. ib. with a small margin, raised all round, as may be seen in the models of them which still remain. They wrote on them (exarabant;) with a stilus; hence Ceris et stylo incumbere, for in pugillaribus scribere, Plin. Ep. vii. 27. Remittere stilum, to give over writing, ib.

As the Romans never wore a sword or dagger in the city, Plin. xxxiv. 14. s. 39. they often, upon a sudden provocation, used the graphium or stilus, as a weapon, Suet. Cæs. 12. C. 28. Cl. 15. 35. Senec. de clem. i. 14. which they carried in a case, (theca calamaria, aut graphiaria, vel graphiarium;) Martial. xiv. 21. Hence probably the stileto of the modern Italians.

What a person wrote with his own hand, was called CHIROGRAPHUS, vel -um, Cic. Fam. xii. 1. xvi. 21. Suet. Jul. 17. Aug. 87. which also signifies one's hand or hand-writing, Cic. Phil. ii. 4. Fam. ii. 13. x. 21. Att. ii. 20. Nat. D. ii. 74. Versus ipsius chirographo scripti, with his own hand, Suet. Ner. 52. Chirographum alicujus imitari, Id. Aug. 64. Tit. 3.

But chirographum commonly signifies a bond or obligation which a person wrote, or subscribed with his own hand, and sealed with his ring, Juvenal. xiii. 137. Suet. Cal. 11. When the obligation was kept by both parties, and a copy of it kept by each, as between an undertaker and his employer, &c. it was called SYNGRAPHIA, -us, vel -um, Ascon. in Verr. i. 36. Plaut. Asin. iv. 1. which is also put for a passport or furlough, Plaut. Cap. ii. 3. 90.

A place where paper and implements for writing, or books, were kept, was called SCRINIUM, vel CAPSA, an escrioir, a box or case, (arcula, vel locus;) Horat. Sat. i. l. f. 4. 22. and 10. 63. commonly carried by a slave, who attended boys of rank to school, Juvenal. x. 117. called CAPSARIUS, Suet. Ner. 36. or LIBRARIUS, Id. Cl. 35. together with the private instructor, PÆDAGOGUS, Ibid. also for the most part of servile condition, Plaut. Bacch. 1. 2. distinguished from the public teacher, called PRÆCEPTOR, Plin. Ep. iv. 13. Senec. de Ir. ii. 22. DOCTOR, vel MAGISTER, Id. paneg. 47. but not properly DOMINUS, unless used as a title of civility, as it sometimes was,

Suet. Cl. 21. Tacit. Ann. ii. 87. especially to a person whose name was unknown or forgotten, as Sir among us, Senec. ep. iii. 47. thus, DOMINA is used ironically for mistress or madam, Ter. Heaut. iv. 1. 15. Augustus would not allow himself to be called DOMINUS, Suet. 53. nor Tiberius, Id. 27. because that word properly signifies a master of slaves, (qui domi præest vel imperat.) Ter. Eun. iii. 2. 33. An under-teacher was called HYPODIDASCULUS, Cic. Fam. ix. 18.

Boys of inferior rank carried their satchels and books themselves, (lævo suspensi oculos tabulamque lacerto.) Hor. Sat. i. 6. 74.

When a book was all written by an author's own hand, and not by that of a transcriber, (manu librarii.) it was called AUTOGRAPHUS, Suet. Aug. 71. 87. or Idiographus, Gell. ix. 14.

The memoirs which a person wrote concerning himself or his actions, were called COMMENTARII, Cæs. & Cic. Brut. 75. Suet. Cæs. 56. Tib. 61. also put for any registers, memorials, or journals, (Diaria ephemerides, acta diurna, &c.) Cic. Fam. v. 12. f. viii. 11. Phil. i. 1. Verr. v. 21. Liv. i. 31 & 32. xlii. 6. Suet. Aug. 64. Plin. ep. vi. 22. x. 96. Memorandums of any thing, or extracts of a book, were called Hypomnēmata, Cic. Att. xvi. 14. 21. Also COMMENTARII, electorum vel excerptorum, books of extracts, or common-place books, Plin. ep. iii. 5.

When books were exposed to sale by booksellers (bibliopola.) they were covered with skins, smoothed with pumice stone, Horat. ep. i. 20. Plin. xxxvi. 21. s. 42. Catull. xx. 8. Tibull. iii. 1. 10.

When a book was sent any where, the roll was tied with a thread, and wax put on the knot and sealed; hence signata volumina, Horat. ep. i. 13. So letters, Cic. Cat. iii. 5. The roll was usually wrapt round with coarser paper, or parchment, Plin. xiii. 11. or with part of an old book, to which Horace, is thought to elude, Ep. i. 20. 13. Hence the old Scholiast on this place, Fient ex te opistographa literarum, so called, because the inscription written on the back showed to whom the letter or book was sent.

Julius Cæsar, in his letters to the senate, introduced the custom of dividing them into pages, (pagina.) and folding them into the form of a pocket-book, or account-book, (libellis memorialis, vel rationalis.) with distinct pages, like our books; whereas formerly consuls and generals, when they wrote to the senate, used to continue the line quite across the sheet (transversâ chartâ.) without any distinction of pages, and roll them up in a volume, Suet. Cæs. 56. Hence, after this, all applications or requests to the emperors, and messages from them to the senate, or public orders to the people, used to be written and folded in this form, called LIBELLI, see p. 28. Suet. Aug. xlv. 53. Tib. xviii. 66. Cl. 15. N. 15. Domit. 17. Martial. viii. 31. 82. or COMICELLI, Tacit. Ann. xvi. 24. Suet. Tib. xxii. 42. Cat. 18. CL 29. rarely used in the singular; applied chiefly to a person's last will, see p. 59. also to writing tables, the same with pugillares, or to letters written on them, Cic. Phil. viii. 10. Fam. iv. 12. vi. 18. ix. 26. Q. fr. ii. 11. Suet. Cl. 5. N. 49.

A writ conferring an exclusive right or privilege, was called DI- PLOMA, (i. e. libellus duplicatus, vel duorum foliorum, consisting of two leaves, written on one side,) granted by the emperor, or any Roman magistrate, similar to what we call Letters patent, i. e. open to the inspection of all, or a patent, Cic. Fam. vi. 12. Att. x. 17. Pis. 37. Senec. ben. vii. 10. Suet. Aug. 50. Cal. 38. Ner. 12. Oth. 7. given particularly to public couriers, or to those who wished to get the use of the public horses or carriages for despatch, Plin. ep. x. 54. 55. 121.

Any writing, whether on paper, parchment, tablets, or whatever materials, folded like our books, with a number of distinct leaves above one another, was called CODEX, (quasi CAUDEX, plurium tabularum contextus, Senec. de brev. vit. 13. Cic. Ver. i. 36. 46. & Ascon. in loc.) particularly account-books; tabula, vel CODICES, accepti et expensi, Cic. Rosc. Com. i. 2, &c. Verr. ii. 61. libri or libelli. Thus we say, liber and volumen, of the same thing, Quinctil. ix. 4. f. liber grandi volumine, Gell. xi. 6. but not codex. Legere vel recitare suam codicem, the crime of the tribune Cornelius, who read his own law from a book in the assembly of the people, when the herald and secretary, whose office that was, (See p. 83 & 153.) were hindered to do it by the intercession of another tribune, Ascon. in Conrel. Cic. Vat. 2. Quinctil. iv. 4. Hence, in after times, Codex was applied to any collection of laws, See p. 189.

All kinds of writings were called LITERÆ, Cic. passim: Hence QUAM VELLE NESCIRE LITERAS, I wish I could not write, Suet. Ner. 10. Senec. Clem. 1. but literæ is most frequently applied to epistolary writings, (EPISTOLÆ, vel chartæ epistolares.) Cic. used in this sense by the poets, also in the sing. Ovid. Pont. i. 7 & 9. ii. 7. iv. 8. Ep. xviii. 9. xix. fin. & xxi. fin. so in a negative form, Cic. Att. xiii. 39. Fam. ii. 17. Arch. 8. Verr. i. 36, or for one's hand-writing, (manus.) Cic. Att. vii. 2. But in prose, litera commonly signifies a letter of the alphabet.

EPISTOLA was always sent to those who were absent, Cic. Q. fr. i. 1. 13. iii. 1. 3. Fam. i. 7. ii. 4. CODICILLI were also given to those present, Tacit. Ann. iv. 39. Senec. ep. 55. So LIBELLI, Suet. Aug. 84.

The Romans, at least in the time of Cicero, divided their letters, if long, into pages, Cic. Att. vi. 2. Q. fr. i. 2. 3. Fam. ii. 13. xi. 25. and folded them in the form of a little book, Senec. ep. 45. tied them round with a thread, (lino obligabant.) Cic. Cat. iii. 5. Ovid. ep. xviii. 28. as anciently, Nep. Paus. 4. Curt. vii. 2. covered the knot with wax, or with a kind of chalk (creta.) Cic. Flacc. 16. Verr. iv. 26. and sealed it, (obsignabant.) Plaut. Bacch. iv. 4. 64. 96. first wetting the ring with spittle, that the wax might not stick to it, Ovid. Trist. v. 4. 5. Amor. ii. 15. 15. Juvenal. i. 68. Hence epistolam vel literas resignare, aperire, vel solvere, to open, Nep. Hann. 11. Cic. Att. xi. 9. resolvere, Liv. xxvi. 15. If any small postscript remained, after the page was completed, it was written crosswise (transversim) on the margin, Cic. Att. v. 1.

In writing letters the Romans always put their own name first, and then that of the person to whom they wrote, Auson. ep. 20. sometimes with the addition of SUO, as a mark of familiarity or fondness, Cic. & Plin. Martial. xiv. 11. if he was invested with an office, that likewise was added; but no epithets, as among us, unless to particular friends, whom they sometimes called Humanissimi, optimi, dulcissimi, animæ suæ, &c. Cic. & Plin. passim.

They always annexed the letter S. for SALUTEM, sc. dicit, wishes health; as the Greek, χαίρω, or the like: so Horace, Ep. i. 8. Hence salutem alicui mittere, Plaut. Pseud. i. 1. 39. Ovid. Her. xvi. 1. xviii. 1. &c. multum, vel plurimam dicere, adscribere, dare, imperitare, nuntiare, referre, &c. as we express it, to send compliments, &c. Cic. Fam. xiv. 1. Att. xvi. 3.

They used anciently to begin with SI VALES, BENE EST, vel PAU-DEO, EGO VALEO, Senec. ep. i. 15. Plin. ep. i. 11. Cic. Fam. v. 9. 10. xiv. 8. 11. &c. which they often marked with capital letters, Hirt. B. Hisp. 26. They ended with VALE, Ovid. Trist. v. 13. 33. CURA UT VALEAS; sometimes AVE or SALVE to a near relation, with this addition, MI ANIME, MI SUAVISSIME, &c. They never subscribed their name, as we do, but sometimes added a prayer for the prosperity of the person to whom they wrote; as, Deos obsecro ut te conservent, Suet. Tib. 21. which was always done to the emperors, Dio. lvi. 11. and called SUBSCRIPTIO, Suet. Tib. 32. The day of the month, sometimes the hour, was annexed, Suet. Aug. 50.

Letters were sent by a messenger, commonly a slave, called TABELLARIUS, Cic. for the Romans had no established post. There sometimes was an inscription on the outside of the letter, sometimes not, Plutarch. in Dione. When Decimus Brutus was besieged by Antony at Mutina, Hirtius and Octavius wrote letters on thin plates of lead, which they sent to him by means of divers, (urinatores), and so received his answer, Dio. xlvi. 36. Frontin. iii. 13. 7. Appian mentions letters inscribed on leaden bullets, and thrown by a sling into a besieged city or camp, Mithrid. p. 191. See Dio. xl. 9. li. 10.

Julius Cæsar, when he wrote to any one what he wished to keep secret, always made use of the fourth letter after that which he ought to have used; as D for A, X for B, &c. Suet. Cæs. 56. Dio. xl. 11. Augustus used the letter following, Dio. li. 3. as B for A, and C for B; for Z, AA, Suet. Aug. 88. Isidor. i. 24. So that those only could understand the meaning, who were instructed in their method of writing, Gel. xvii. 9.

The Romans had slaves or freedmen who wrote their letters, called AB EPISTOLIS, Suet. Claud. 28. (A MANU, vel AMANUENSES), Suet. Cæs. 74. Aug. 67. Vesp. Tit. i. 3. and accounts, (RATIONIBUS, vel ratiocinatores, Cic. Att. i. 12. Suet. Claud. 28.) also who wrote short hand, (ACTUARI, Suet. Jul. 55. vel NOTARI, Senec. Ep. 90.) as quickly as one could speak; Currant verba licet, manus est velocior illis, Martial. xiv. 208. on waxen tables, Auson. Ep. 146. 17. Manil. iv. 195. sometimes put for amanuenses, Plin. Ep. iii. 5. ix. 36. who transcribed their books, (LIBRARI), Cic. Att. xii. 3. Liv. xxxviii. 55. who glued them, (GLUTINATORES, Cic. Att. iv. 4. vulgarly called librorum concinnatores vel compactores, βιβλιοθηκη, bookbinders;) polished them with pumice stone, (pumice poliebant, vel lavigabant, Ovid. Trist. i. 1. 9. iii. 1. 13.) anointed them with the juice of cedar, (cedro illinebant,) to preserve them from moths and rottenness, (a tineis et carie,) Ibid. & Plin. xiii. 12. Martial. iii. 2. v. 6. viii. 61. Hence carmina cedro linenda, worthy of immortality, Horat. Art. p. 332. So Pers. i. 42.) and marked the titles or index with vermilion, (MINIUM, v. cinnabaris, Ovid. Ibid. Plin. xxxiii. 7.) purple, (coccus vel purpura,) Martial. ib. red earth, or red ochre, (rubrica,) see p. 190. who took care of their library, (A BIBLIOTHECA,) C. Fam. xiii. 77. assisted them in their studies, (A STUDIA, Suet. Cal. 28.) read to them, (ANAGNOSTÆ, sing. -es, Cic. Att. i. 12. Fam. v. 9. Nep. Att. 14. LECTORES, Suet. Aug. 78. Plin. Ep. viii. 1.)

The freedmen, who acted in some of these capacities under the emperors, often acquired great wealth and power. Thus Narcissus, the secretary (ab epistolis, vel secretis,) of Claudius, and Pallas, the comptroller of the household, (a rationibus,) Suet. Claud. 28. So the master of requests, (a libellis,) Suet. Dom. 14. Tacit. Ann. iv. 35. xvi. 8.

The place where paper was made was called OFFICINA chartarum, Plin. xviii. 10. where it was sold, TABERNA; and so OFFICINÆ ARMORUM, Cic. Phil. vii. 4. CYCLOPUM, workhouses, Horat. i. 4. 8. SAPIENTIÆ, Cic. legg. i. 13. omnium artium, eloquentiæ, vel dicendi, schools, Id. Orat. 13. Fin. v. 3. But officina & taberna are sometimes confounded, Plin. x. 43. s. 60.

A warehouse for paper, or books, or any merchandise, APOTHECA; a bookseller's shop, TABERNA LIBRARIA, Cic. Phil. ii. 9. or simply Libraria, Gell. v. 4. LIBRARIUM, a chest for holding books, Cic. Mill. 12.

The street in Rome, where booksellers (bibliopōlæ) chiefly lived, was called ARGILETUS, Mart. i. 4. or that part of the forum or street, called JANUS; where was a temple or statue of the god Vertumnus, Horat. Ep. i. 20. 1.

LIBRARIES.

A GREAT number of books, or the place where they were kept, was called BIBLIOTHECA, a library, Festus.

The first famous library was collected by Ptolemy Philadelphus at Alexandria in Egypt, B. C. 284. containing 700,000 volumes, Gell. vi. 17. the next, by Attalus, or Eumenes, king of Pergamus, Plin. xiii. 12.

Adjoining to the Alexandrian library, was a building, called MUSEUM, (i. e. domicilium, specus vel templum musis dicatum,) Plin. Ep. i. 9. for the accommodation of a college or society (συνεδος) of learned men, who were supported there at the public expense, with a covered walk and seats, (exedra,) where they might dispute, Strab. 17. An additional museum was built there by Claudius, Suet. Claud.

42. MUSEUM is used by us for a repository of learned curiosities ; as it seems to be by Pliny, xxvii. 2. s. 6.

A great part of the Alexandrian library was burnt by the flames of Cæsar's fleet, when he set it on fire to save himself, Plutarch. in Cas. & Dio. 42. 38. but neither Cæsar himself nor Hirtius mention this circumstance. It was again restored by Cleopatra, who, for that purpose, received from Antony the library of Pergamus, then consisting of 200,000 volumes, Plutarch. in Anton. It was totally destroyed by the Saracens, A. 642.

The first public library at Rome, and in the world, as Pliny observes, was erected by Asinius Pollio, Plin. vii. 30. xxxv. 2. in the Atrium, of the temple of Liberty, Ovid. Trist. iii. 1. 71. on Mount Aventine, Mart. xii. 3. 5.

Augustus founded a Greek and Latin library in the temple of Apollo on the Palatine hill, Suet. 39. Dio. liii. 1. and another, in name of his sister Octavia, adjoining to the theatre of Marcellus, Plutarch. in Marcell. Ovid. Trist. iii. 1. 60 & 69.

There were several other libraries at Rome ; in the Capitol, Suet. Dom. 20. in the temple of Peace, Gell. xvi. 8. in the house of Tiberius, Gell. xiii. 18. &c. But the chief was the Ulpian library, instituted by Trajan, Gell. xi. 17. which Dioclesian annexed as an ornament to his Thermae, Vopisc. in Prob. 2.

Many private persons had good libraries, Cic. Fam. vii. 28. Q. fr. iii. 4. Att. iv. 10. Plutarch. in Lucull. Senec. de tranq. 9. Horat. od. i. 29. 13. particularly in their country villas, Cic. Fin. iii. 2. Martial. vii. 16. Plin. ep. ii. 17.

Libraries were adorned with statues and pictures, Suet. Tib. 70. Plin. ep. iii. 7. iv. 28. particularly of ingenious and learned men, Plin. xxxv. 2. Juvenal. ii. 7. the walls and roofs with glasses, Boeth. Consol. Plin. xxxvi. 25. Senec. ep. 86. Stat. Silv. i. 5. 42. The books were put in presses or cases, (ARMARIA vel CAPSÆ.) along the walls, which were sometimes numbered, Vopisc. Tac. 8. called also FORULL, Suet. Aug. 31. Juvenal. iii. 219. LOCULAMENTA, Senec. tranq. 9. Nid. Martial. i. 118. but these are supposed by some to denote the lesser divisions of the cases.

The keeper of a library was called a BIBLIOTHECA ; Bibliothecarius is used only by later writers.

HOUSES OF THE ROMANS.

THE houses of the Romans are supposed at first to have been nothing else but cottages, (casæ, vel tuguria.) thatched with straw, Ovid. Amor. ii. 9. 18. hence CULMEN, the roof the house, (quod culmis tegebatur.) Serv. in Virg. Ecl. i. 6. Æn. viii. 654.

After the city was burnt by the Gauls, it was rebuilt in a more solid and commodious manner ; but the haste in building prevented attention to the regularity of streets, Liv. v. 55. Diodor. xiv. 119.*

* "Rome was rebuilt within a year, without question in a very wretched manner. The streets in the lower parts of the city had previously been broad and straight ; for

The houses were reared every where without distinction, (nullâ distinctione passim erectæ;) Tacit. Ann. xv. 43. or regard to property, (omisso sui alienique discrimine, aded ut forma urbis esset occupata magis, quam divisa similis;) where every one built in what place he chose, Liv. ib. and, till the war with Pyrrhus, the houses were covered only with shingles, or thin boards, (SCANDULÆ, vel scindulæ, i. e. tabellæ, in parvas laminas scissæ;) Plin. xvi. 10. s. 15.

It was in the time of Augustus that Rome was first adorned with magnificent buildings; hence that emperor used to boast, that he had found it of brick, but should leave it of marble; Marmoream se relinquere, quam lateritiam accepisset, Suet. Aug. 29. The streets however, still were narrow and irregular, Suet. Ner. 38. Tacit. Ann. xv. 38. and private houses, not only incommodious, but even dangerous, from their height, and being mostly built of wood, Jornal. iii. 193. &c. Scalis habito tribus, sed altis, three stories high, Martial. i. 118.

In the time of Nero, the city was set on fire, and more than two-thirds of it burnt to the ground: of fourteen wards (regiones), into which Rome was divided, only four remained entire, Tacit. Ann. xv. 40. Nero himself was thought to have been the author of this conflagration. He beheld it from the tower of Mæcenas, and delighted, as he said, with the beauty of the flame, played the taking of Troy, drest like an actor, Suet. 38. Tacit. Ann. xv. 39. 40. 44.

The city was rebuilt with greater regularity and splendour. The streets were made straight and broader. The areas of the houses were measured out, and their height restricted to 70 feet, as under Augustus, Strab. v. p. 162. Each house had a portico before it, the sewers ran beneath them: and even on the hills, in its gradual enlargement under the kings, the same rule which was followed in the laying out of new colonial towns, appears to have been observed, so far as the ground would allow of it: that is to say, there were straight broad streets reserved to the state, while the building-ground bounded by them was regularly parcelled out and allotted as property to individuals. This right the government seems to have regarded as extinct since the enemy's conquest: hence every body was allowed to build where he chose, in order that there might be a stronger inducement to make a beginning, and that after some progress so many additional voices might be gained in favour of patience and perseverance. The Romans in after-ages, forgetting that but for this disadvantage they probably would not then have been living at Rome, complained of the precipitation with which the city was rebuilt: for, even when it was in its greatest splendour, it was impossible, before the fire under Nero, to change the crookedness and narrowness of the streets. To lighten the task, the senate granted bricks: every body was allowed to hew stones or wood wherever he pleased, provided he gave security to finish his building within a year. By the grant of bricks must be meant that the state allowed them to be taken from buildings already existing: for how could it have found the means of paying for new ones? Such buildings it had at Veii: and with a view of putting an end for ever to the hated scheme of migrating thither, it was wise to favour the demolition of that city, which was in fact reduced to an insignificant place, and barely continued to exist, till it in some measure revived under Augustus as a military colony. For the substructions of the Capitol too, which were built no long time after,—and no doubt on the side beneath the citadel, where Cominius and the Gauls clomb up the grass-covered rock—and for the repair of the walls, blocks of stone ready hewn would be supplied by Veii: in this manner its temples and city-walls disappeared. The Romans who had staid there to avoid the charge of building, were commanded by an ordinance of the senate to return before a stated day, under pain of the severest punishment." Nisbaur.—Ed.

fronting the street, and did not communicate with any other by a common wall as formerly. It behoved a certain part of every house to be built of Gabian or Alban stone, which was proof against fire, (ignibus impervius.) Tacit. Ann. xv. 53.

These regulations were subservient to ornament as well as utility. Some, however, thought that the former narrowness of the streets, and height of the houses, were more conducive to health, as preventing by their shade the excessive heat, Ibid.

Buildings, in which several families lived, were called INSULÆ; houses in which one family lived, DOMUS, vel ÆDES PRIVATÆ, Suet. Ner. xvi. 38. 44. Tacit. Ann. vi. 45. xv. 41. See p. 53.

We know little of the form either of the outside or inside of Roman houses, as no models of them remain. The small house dug out of the ruins of Pompeii bears little or no resemblance to the houses of opulent Roman citizens.

The principal parts were,

1. VESTIBULUM, which was not properly a part of the house, but an empty space before the gate, through which there was an access to it, Gell. xvi. 5. Cic. Cælin. 12. Plaut. Most. iii. 2. 130.

The vestibule of the golden palace (aurea domus) of Nérô, was so large, that it contained three porticos, a mile long each, and a pond like a sea, surrounded with buildings like a city, Suet. Ner. 30. Here was also a colossus of himself, or statue of enormous magnitude, 120 feet high. See p. 294.

2. JANUA, ostium vel fores, the gate, (PORTA murorum et ætrorum; JANUA parietis et domorum.) made of various kinds of wood, cedar, or cypress, Virg. G. ii. 442. elm, oak, &c. Ovid. Met. iv. 487. Amor. ii. 1. 25. sometimes of iron, Plaut. Pers. iv. 4. 21. or brass, Plin. xxxiv. 3. and especially in temples, of ivory and gold, Cic. Verr. iv. 36. Plin. viii. 10.

The gate was commonly raised above the ground, so that they had to ascend to it by steps, Virg. Æn. ii. 492. Sen. ep. 84.

The pillars at the sides of the gates, projecting a little without the wall, were called ANTÆ, and the ornaments affixed to them, wrought in wood or stone, ANTEFRAGMENTA, Festus.

When the gate was opened among the Romans, the folds (VALVÆ, quod intus revolvantur) bent inwards, unless it was granted to any one by a special law to open his door outward; as to P. Valerius Poplicola, and his brother, who had twice conquered the Sabines, (ut domûs eorum fores extra aperirentur.) Plin. xxxvi. 15. after the manner of the Athenians, whose doors opened to the street, (in publicum;) and when any one went out, he always made a noise, by striking the door on the inside, to give warning to those without to keep at a distance: hence CREPUIT FORIS, Concrepuit a Glycerio ostium, the door of Glycerium hath creaked, i. e. is about to be opened; Ter. And. iv. 1. 59. Hec. iv. 1. 6. Plaut. Amph. i. 2. 34. This the Greeks called ἄψος ἢ θυγαν; and knocking from without, κρούειν, pulsare vel pullare.

A slave watched (servabat) at the gate as a porter, (JANITOR.)

Ovid. Fast. i. 138. hence called OSTIARIUS, PUER AB JANUA, Nep. Han. 12. Claustritimus, Gell. xii. 10. usually in chains, (catenatus.) Columel. præf. Ovid. Am. i. 6. 1 & 25. which, when emancipated, he consecrated to the Lares, Horat. i. 5. 65. or to Saturn, Mart. iii. 29. armed with a staff or rod, (arundo, vel virga.) Senec. de Const. 14. and attended by a dog, likewise chained, Suet. Vit. 16. Senec. de Ira. iii. 37. On the porter's cell was sometimes this inscription, CAVE CANEM, Petron. 29. Plaut. Most. iii. 2. 162.

Dogs were also employed to guard the temples, Cic. Sext. Rosc. 20. Arnob. vi. and because they failed to give warning, when the Gauls attacked the Capitol, Liv. v. 47. a certain number of them were annually carried through the city, and then impaled on a cross, Plin. xxix. 4.

Females also were sometimes set to watch the door, (JANITRICES.) usually old women, Plaut. Curc. i. 1. 76. Tibull. i. 7. 67. Petron. 55.

On festivals, at the birth of a child or the like, the gates were adorned with green branches, flowers, and lamps, Juvenal. ix. 85. xii. 91. as the windows of the Jews at Rome were on Sabbaths, Senec. 95. Pers. v. 180. Before the gate of Augustus, by a decree of the senate, were set up branches of laurel, as being the perpetual conqueror of his enemies; Ovid. Trist. iii. 1. 39. Plin. xv. 30. s. 39. hence LAUREATE FORES, Senec. ad Polyb. 35. LAURIGERI PENATES; Martial. viii. 1. So a crown of oak was suspended on the top of his house, as being the preserver of his citizens, Plin. xvi. 3. which honour Tiberius refused; Suet. 26. The laurel branches seem to have been set up on each side of the gate, in the vestibule; and the civic crown to have been suspended from above between them: hence Ovid says of the laurel, mediamque tuebere quercum, Met. i. 563.

The door, when shut, was secured by bars, (obices, claustra, repagula, vectes;) iron bolts, (pessuli;) chains, Juv. iii. 304. locks, (seræ.) and keys, (claves;) hence obdere pessulum foribus, to bolt the door, Ter. Heaut. ii. 3. 37. occludere ostium pessulis, with two bolts, one below, and another above, Plaut. Aul. i. 2. 25. uncinum immittere, to fix the bolt with a hook; obserare fores, vel ostium, to lock the door, Ter. Eun. iv. 6. 25. seram ponere, Juvenal. vi. 34. oppositâ janua fulta serâ, locked, Ovid. Art. A. ii. 244. reserare, to open, to unlock, Ovid. Met. x. 384. excudere poste seram, Am. i. 6. 24. &c. It appears that the locks of the ancients were not fixed to the pannels (impages) of the doors with nails, like ours, but were taken off when the door was opened, as our padlocks: hence, et jacet tacitâ lapsa catena serâ, Propert. iv. 12. 26.

Knockers (marculi v. mallei) were fixed to the doors, or bells (tinnabula) hung up, as among us, Suet. Aug. 91. Senec. de Ira. iii. 35. Dio. liv. 4.

The porter usually asked those who knocked at the gate, who they were, Cic. Phil. ii. 31. He admitted or excluded such as his master directed, Suet. Oth. 3. Senec. ep. 47. Sometimes he was ordered to deny his master's being at home, Cic. Orat. ii. 68. Martial. ii. 5. v. 23. Ovid. Art. Am. ii. 521.

Besides the janitor, the emperors and great men had persons who watched or kept guard in the vestibule, (EXCUBIÆ, vel CUSTODIÆ.) Tacit. Ann. xv. 52. to which Virgil alludes, Æn. vi. 555. 574.

A door in the back part of the house was called POSTICUM, vel posticum ostium, Plaut. Stich. iii. 1. 40. Horat. ep. i. 5. 31. or PSEUDOTHYRUM, v. -on, Cic. Verr. ii. 20. Red. in Senat. 6. that in the fore part, ANTICUM, Festus.

3. The Janua, or principal gate, was the entrance to the ATRIUM, or AULA, the court or hall, which appears to have been a large oblong square, surrounded with covered or arched galleries, (porticus tectæ vel laqueatæ.) Auson. Edyll. x. 49.

Three sides of the Atrium were supported on pillars; in later times, of marble, Plin. xvii. 1.—xxxvi. 2 & 3.

The side opposite to the gate was called TABLINUM, and the other two sides, ALÆ, Vitruv. vi. 4.

The tablinum was filled with books, and the records of what any one had done in his magistracy, Plin. xxxv. 2.

In the atrium, the nuptial couch was erected, See p. 393. the mistress of the family, with her maid-servants, wrought at spinning and weaving, Cic. Mil. 5. Nep. præf. (In medio ædium, i. e. in atrio, Lit. i. 57.)

The ancient Romans used every method to encourage domestic industry in women. Spinning and weaving constituted their chief employment.

To this the rites of marriage directed their attention, See p. 392. Hence the frequent allusions to it in the poets, Virg. Æn. viii. 408. ix. 488. and the atrium seems to have been the place appropriated for their working, (ex veterè more in atrio telæ texebantur, Ascon. in Cic. pro Mil. 5.) that their industry might be conspicuous: hence the qualities of a good wife, (morigeræ uxoris;) probitas, forma, fides, fama pudicitæ, lanificæque manus, Auson. Parent. iii. 3. xvi. 3. But in after-times, women of rank and fortune became so luxurious and indolent, that they thought this attention below them. Nunc pleræque sic luxu et inertia defruunt, ut ne lanificii quidem curam suscipere dignentur, Columel. xii. Proem. 6. On this account, slaves only were employed in spinning and weaving, (ΤΕΧΤΟΝΕΣ et TEXTRICES, lanifici, et -æ.) and a particular place appropriated to them where they wrought, (TEXTRINA, vel -UM.) Thus Verres appointed in Sicily, Cic. Verr. iv. 26.

The principal manufacture was of wool; for although there were those who made linen, LINTEONES, Plaut. Aul. iii. 5. 38. Serv. in Æn. vii. 14. and a robe of linen, (vestis linteæ.) seems to have been highly valued, Cic. Verr. v. 56. yet it was not much worn.

The principal parts of the woollen manufacture are described by Ovid, Met. vi. 53. dressing the wool; picking or teasing, combing and carding it, (lanam carpere, pectere, v. pectinare, carminare, &c.

spinning (nere, poet. ducere, vel trahere) with a distaff, (COLUS), and spindle, (FUSUS), winding or forming the thread into clews, (glomerare;) dyeing, (tingere, fucare, fucio medicare.)

The wool seems to have been sometimes put up in round balls, (glomerari in orbes,) before it was spun, Ovid. ibid. 19. Horat. ep. i. 13. 14.

Wool, when new cut, (recens tonsa), with its natural moisture, was called SUCCIDA, (a succo, Varr.) so mulier succida, plump, Plaut. Mil. iii. 1. 193. It used to be anointed with wine or oil, or awine's grease, to prepare it for being dyed, Juvenal. v. 24. Plin. vii. 48. xxix. 2. Varr. R. R. ii. 11.

The loom, (machina in qua tela tela texitur.) or at least that part to which the web was tied, was called JUGUM, a cylinder or round beam across two other beams, in this form, Π , resembling the jugum ignominiosum, under which vanquished enemies were made to pass, Festus & Liv. iii. 28.

The threads or thrums which tied the web to the jugum, were called LICIA; the threads extended longwise, and alternately raised and depressed, STAMEN, the warp, (a stando.) because the ancients stood when they wove, placing the web perpendicularly, (whence Radio stantis (i. e. pendentis) percurrens stamina tela, Ovid. Met. iv. 275.) and wrought upwards, (in altitudinem, vel sursum versum, Festus), which method was dropt, except by the linen weavers (LINTRONES;) and in weaving the Tunica Recta, Ib.

The threads inserted into the warp, were called SUBTEMEN, the woof or weft, (quasi subteximen, vel substamen), some read subtegemem, but improperly: the instruments which separated the threads of the warp, ARUNDO, the reed; which inserted the woof into the warp, RADIUS, the shuttle; which fixed it when inserted, PECTEN, the lay, Ovid. Met. vi. 53. vel SPATHA, Senec. Ep. 91.—When the web was woven upright, a thin piece of wood, like a sword, seems to have been used for this purpose; as in the weaving of Arras, of Turkey carpeting, &c. in which alone the upright mode of working is now retained, the weft is driven up with an instrument somewhat like a hand, with the fingers stretched out, made of lead or iron. It is doubtful whether the ancients made use of the reed and lay for driving up the weft as the moderns do. The principal part of the machinery of a loom, vulgarly called the Caam or Hiddles, composed of eyed or hooked threads, through which the warp passes, and which, being alternately raised and depressed by the motion of the feet on the Treadles, raises or depresses the warp, and makes the shed for transmitting the shuttle with the weft, or something similar, seems also to have been called LICIA; hence Licia telas addere, to prepare the web for weaving, to begin to weave, Virg. G. i. 285.

When figures were to be woven on cloth, several threads of the warp of different colours, were alternately raised and depressed; and in like manner, the woof was inserted; if, for instance, three rows of threads (tria licia) of different colours were raised or inserted together, the cloth was called TRILIX, wrought with a triple tissue or warp, which admitted the raising of threads of any particular colour or quality at pleasure, Virg. Æn. iii. 467. v. 259. vii. 639. So BILIX, Id. xii. 375. Hence the art of mixing colours or gold and silver in cloth: thus, Fert picturatas auri subtemine vestes, figured with a web of gold, Virg. Æn. iii. 483. The warp was so called TRAMA, Senec. Ep. 91. Hence trama figura, skin and bones, like a threadbare coat, Pers. vi. 73. But Servius makes trama the same with subtemen, Virg. Æn. iii. 483.

The art of embroidering cloth with needle work (acu pingere) is said to have been first invented by the Phrygians; whence such vests were called PHRYGIONÆ, Plin. viii. 48. s. 74.—the interweaving of gold, (aurum intexere), by King Attalus; whence VESTES ATTALICÆ, Ib. et Propert. iii. 18. 19.—the interweaving of different colours (colores diversos picturæ intexere) by the Babylonians; hangings and furniture of which kind of cloth for a dining-room (triclinaria Babylonica) cost Nero 32,281l. : 13 : 4. quadrages sestertio; and even in the time of Cato cost 800,000 sestertii, Plin. ibid.—the raising of several threads at once (plurimis liciis texere), by the people of Alexandria in Egypt, which produced a cloth similar to the Babylonian, called POLYMITA, (ex πολυς, multus, et μιτρος, filum), Ib. & Martial. xiv. 150. Isidor. xix. 22. wrought, as weavers say, with a many-leaved caam or comb. The art of mixing silver in cloth (argentum in fila deducere, et filis argenteis vestimenta contexere) was not invented till under the Greek emperors; when clothes of that kind of stuff came to be much used under the name of VESTIMENTA SYRMATINA, Salmas. ad Vopisci. Aurelian. 46.

From the operation of spinning and weaving, FILUM, a thread, is often put for a style or manner of writing, Cic. Læl. 7. Orat. ii. 22. iii. 26. Fam. ix. 12. Gell. xx. 5. and DUCCERE or DEDUCERE, to write or compose: Juvenal. vii. 74. thus, Tenui deducta poemata filo, i. e. subtiliore stilo scripta, Horat. Ep. ii. 1. 225. So deductum dicere, carmen, to sing a pastoral poem, written in a simple or humble style. Virg. Ecl. vi. 5.—Ovid. Trist. i. 10. 18. Ep. xvii. 88. Pont. i. 5. 7. & 13. also TEXERE, Cic. Fam. ix. 21. Q. fratr. iii. 5. and subtexere, to subjoin, Tibull. iv. 1. 211.

In the Atrium anciently the family used to sup, Serv. in Virg. Æn. i. 726. iii. 353. where likewise was the kitchen, (CULINA), Ibid.

In the Atrium, the nobility placed the images of their ancestors, see p. 35. the clients used to wait on their patrons, Horat. Ep. i. 5. 31. Juvenal. vii. 71. and receive the sportula. See p. 380.

The Atrium was adorned with pictures, statues, plate, &c. and the place where they were kept was called PINATHECA, Plin. xxxv. 2. Petron. 29. 83.

In later times the atrium seems to have been divided into different parts, separated from one another by hangings or veils, (vela), into which persons were admitted, according to their different degrees of favour; whence they were called amici ADMISSIONIS prima, se-cande, vel tertia; which distinction is said to have been first made by C. Gracchus and Livius Drusus, Senec. de benef. vi. 33. 34. Clem. i. 10. Hence those who admitted persons into the presence of the emperor, were called EX OFFICIO ADDESSIONIS, Suet. Vesp. 14. vel ADDESSIONALES, Lamprid. in Alex. 4. and the chief of them; MASISTRE ADDESSIONUM, master of ceremonies, Vopisc. Aurelian. 12. usually freed-men, who used to be very insolent under weak or wicked princes, Plin. xxxiii. 3. and even to take money for admission, Senec. const. Sapient. 14. but not so under good princes, Plin. paneg. 47.

There was likewise an atrium in temples; thus, atrium Libertatis, Cic. Mil. 22. Liv. xxv. 7. Tacit. Hist. i. 31. Artium in publicum in Capitolio, Liv. xxiv. 10.

In the hall there was an hearth (FOCUS), on which a fire was kept always burning near the gate, under the charge of the janitor, Ovid. Fast. i. 135. around it the images of the Lares were placed; whence Lar is put for focus, ibid.

The ancients had not chimneys for conveying the smoke through the walls, as we have; hence they were much infested with it, Horat. Sat. i. 5. 81. Vitruv. vii. 3. hence also the images in the hall are called FUMOSÆ, Cic. Pis. i. Juvenal. viii. 8. and December FUMOSUS, from the use of fires in that month, Martial. v. 31. 5.

They burnt wood, Horat. od. i. 9. 5. which they were at great pains to dry, Id. iii. 17. 14. and anoint with the lees of oil, (amurca), to prevent smoke, Plin. xv. 8. hence called ligna ACAPNA, (ex a priv. et uasvoc, fumus), Mart. xiii. 15. vel cocta, ne fumum faciant, Ulpian. de legg. iii. l. 53. Cato de R. R. c. 133.

The Romans used portable furnaces, (camini portatiles, fornaces, vel -cula, foculi, ignitabula vel escharæ) for carrying embers and burning coals, (præna vel carbones igniti), to warm the different apartments of a house, Suet. Tib. 74. Vit. 8. which seem to have been placed in the middle of the room, Cat. de re rust. 18. Colum. xi. 1.

In the time of Seneca, a method was contrived of conveying heat from a furnace below, by means of tubes or canals fixed to the walls, (per tubos parietibus impressos), which warmed the rooms more equally, Senec. ep. 90. de provid. 4.

4. An open place in the centre of the house, where the rain-water fell, and which admitted light from above, was called IMPLUVIUM, or Compluvium, Festus; Varro de L. L. iv. 33. Ascon. in Cic. Varr. i. 23. Liv. xliiii. 15. also CAVEDIUM, or Cavum adium, Varr. ibid. Plin. ep. ii. 17. commonly uncovered (subdivale); if not, from its arched roof, called TESTUDO, Varr. ibid.

Vitruvius directs that it should not be more than the third, nor less than the fourth part of the breadth of the Atrium, vi. 4.

The slave, who had the charge of the Atrium and what it contained, was called ATRIENSIS, Petron. 25. He held the first rank among his fellow-slaves, Cic. Top. 5. Plaut. Asin. ii. 3. 80. and exercised authority over them, Id. ii. 4. 18.

5. The sleeping apartments in a house was called CUBICULA dormitoria, vel nocturna, noctis, et somni; for there were also cubicula diurna, for reposing in the day-time, Plin. ep. i. 3. ii. 17. v. 6.

Each of these had commonly an anti-chamber adjoining, (Prococtum, vel Procestrium,) Ibid.

There were also in bed-chambers places for holding books, inserted in the walls, (armaria parieti inserta,) Id. ii. 17.

Any room or apartment in the inner part of the house, under lock and key, as we say, was called CONCLAVE, vel -ium, Ter. Heaut. v. 1. 29. (a con et clavis, quæd unâ clavi clauditur, Festus; vel quæd intra eum locum loca multa et cubicula clausa sunt, adhaerentia triclinio, Donat. in Ter. Eun. iii. 5. 35.) put also for the TRICLINIUM, Cic. Verr. iv. 26. Orat. ii. 88. Quinctil. ix. 2. Horat. Sat. ii. 6. 113.

Among the Greeks, the women had a separate apartment from the men, called GYNÆCIUM, (γυναικειον,) Cic. Phil. ii. 37. Ter. Phorm. v. 6. 22.

The slaves who took care of the bed-chamber were called CUBICULARII, Cic. Att. vi. 14. Suet. Tib. 21. or CUBICULARES, Id. Ner. 38. the chief of them, PRÆPOSITUS CUBICULO, vel DECURIO CUBICULARIORUM, Suet. Dom. 16 & 17. They were usually in great favour with their masters, and introduced such as wanted to see them, Cic. ibid. For the emperors often gave audience in their bed-chamber; the doors of which had hangings or curtains suspended before them, (foribus pratenta vela,) Tacit. Ann. 5. Suet. Cl. 10. which were drawn up (levabantur) when any one entered, Senec. ep. 81.

The eating apartments were called Cenationes, Canacula, vel Triclinia. See p. 367.

A parlour for supping or sitting in, was called DIÆTA, Plin. ep. ii. 17. Suet. Cl. 10. sometimes several apartments joined together, were called by that name, or ΖΕΤΑ, Plin. ep. ii. 17. v. 6. and a small apartment or alcove, which might be joined to the principal apartment, or separated from it at pleasure, by means of curtains and windows, ZOTHECA, vel -cula, Ibid.

DIÆTA, in the civil law, is often put for a pleasure-house in a garden: so Plin. ep. ii. 17. and by Cicero, for diet, or a certain mode of living, for the cure of a disease, Att. iv. 3. It is sometimes confounded with cubiculum, Plin. ep. vi. 16.

An apartment for basking in the sun was called SOLARIUM, Plaut. Mil. ii. 4. 25. Suet. Cl. 10. which Nero appointed to be made on the portico before the house, Id. Ner. 16. or HELIOCAMINUS, Plin. ib.

The apartments of a house were variously constructed and arranged at different times, and according to the different taste of individuals.

The Roman houses were covered with tiles (tegulae), of a considerable breadth; hence bricks and tiles are mentioned in Vitruvius and ancient monuments, two feet broad, (bipedales;) and a garret, (canaculum,) covered by one tile; Suet. Gramm. 11. When war was declared against Antony, the senators were taxed 4 obdli or 10 asses for every tile on their houses, whether their own property or hired, Dio. xlv. 31. In Nonius Marcellus we read, In singulas tegulas impositis sexcentis sexcenties confici posse, c. iv. 93. But here sexcentis is supposed to be by mistake for sex nummis, or singulas tegulas to be put for singula tecta, each roof.

The roofs (tecta) of the Roman houses seem to have been generally of an angular form, like ours, the top or highest part of which was called FASTIGIUM, Festus, Virg. Æn. i. 442. ii. 458. 758. hence operi fastigium imponere, to finish, Cic. Off. iii. 7. put also for the whole roof, Cic. Orat. iii. 46. Q. fr. iii. 1. 4. but particularly for a certain part on the top of the front of temples, where inscriptions were made, Plin. paneg. 54. and statues erected, Plin. xxxv. 12. s. 45. xxxvi. 5. Hence it was decreed by the senate, that Julius Cæsar might add a Fastigium to the front of his house, and adorn it in the same manner as a temple, Flor. iv. 2. Cic. Phil. ii. 43. which, the night before he was slain, his wife Calpurnia dreamt had fallen down, Suet. Jul. 81. Plutarch. in Cæs. p. 738.

From the sloping of the sides of the roof of a house, FASTIGIUM is put for any declivity; hence Cloaca fastigio ducta, sloping, Liv. i. 38. So Cæs. B. G. i. 25. ii. 24. FASTIGATUS, bending or sloping, Cæs. B. G. ii. 8. and from its proper signification, viz. the summit or top, it is put for dignity or rank; thus, Curatio altior fastigio suo, a charge superior to his rank, Liv. ii. 27. Pari fastigio stetit, with equal dignity, Nep. xxv. 14. In consulare fastigium proventus, to the honour of consul, Vell. ii. 69. or for any head of discourse; Summa sequar fastigia rerum. I will recount the chief circumstance, Virg. Æn. i. 346. also for depth, as altitudo, Serv. in Virg. G. ii. 288. The centre of the inner part of a round roof of a temple, where the beams joined, was called THOLUS, Serv. in Virg. Æn. ix. 408. Ovid. Fast. iv. 296. the front of which, or the space above the door, was also called FASTIGIUM, Virg. ibid. But any round roof was called THOLUS, Martial. ii. 59. Viruv. i. 7. 5. as that of Vesta, resembling the concave hemisphere of the sky, Ovid. Fast. vi. 282 & 296. Whence Dio says, that the Pantheon of Agrippa had its name, because from the roundness of its figure (Σφαιροειδης ὄν) it resembled heaven, the abode of the gods, liii. 27. From the Tholus offerings consecrated to the gods, as spoils taken in war, &c. used to be suspended, or fixed to the Fastigium, Virg. ib. and on the top of the Tholus, on the outside, statues were sometimes placed, Mart. i. 71. 10.

The ancient Romans had only openings, (foramina.) in the walls to admit the light; FENESTRÆ, windows, (from φανω, ostendo;) hence oculi et aures sunt quasi fenestras animi, Cic. Tusc. i. 20.) covered with two folding leaves, (bifores valvae.) of wood, Ovid. Pont. iii. 5. Amor. i. 5. 3. and sometimes a curtain, Juvenal. ix. 105. hence said to be joined, when shut, Horat. i. 25. Cubiculum ne diem quidem sensit, nisi apertis fenestris, Plin. ii. 17. ix. 36. sometimes covered with a net, (fenestras RETICULATÆ, ne quod animal maleficum introire quæst, Varr. R. R. iii. 7.) occasionally shaded by curtains, (obductis velis;) Plin. ep. vii. 21.

Under the first emperors, windows were composed of a certain transparent stone, called LAPIS SPECULARIS, found first in Spain, and afterwards in Cyprus, Cappadocia, Sicily, and Africa, which might be split into thin leaves, (finditur in quamlibet tenuis crustus;) like slate, but not above five feet long each, Senec. ep. 90. Plin. xxxvi. 22. s. 45. What this stone was is uncertain.

Windows, however, of that kind (SPECULARIA), were used only in the principal apartments of great houses, Senec. ep. 86. Nat. Q. iv. 13. in gardens, Plin. xv. 16. xix. 5. Martial. viii. 14. called PRÆSTICUA GEMMA, Ib. 68. in porticos, Plin. ep. ii. 17. in sedans, (laticæ;) Juvenal. iv. 21. or the like.

Paper, linen cloth, and horn, seem likewise to have been used for windows; hence CORNEUM SPECULAR, Tert. de Anim. 53.

The Romans did not use glass for windows, although they used it for other purposes, particularly for mirrors, (specula;) nor is it yet universally used in Italy, on account of the heat. Glass was first invented in Phœnicia, accidentally, by mariners burning nitre on the sand of the sea-shore, Plin. xxxvi. 26. s. 65.

Glass windows (vitrea specularia) are not mentioned till about the middle of the fourth century by Hieronymus, (St. Jerome;) ad Ezech. xl. 16. first used in England, A. D. 1177; first made there, 1558; but plate-glass for coaches and looking-glasses not till 1673.

The Romans, in later times, adorned the pavements of their houses with small pieces (crustæ, vel -a) of marble of different kinds, and different colours, curiously joined together, called PAVIMENTA SECTILLA, Suet. Cæs. 46. (Ἰσοπέγωνα, Varro,) vel EMBLEMATA VERNICULATA, Cic. Orat. iii. 43. or with small pebbles, (calculi, vel tesseræ, s. ulæ;) dyed in various colours; hence called PAVIMENTA TESSELLATA, Suet. Ib. used likewise, and most frequently, in ceilings, Lucan. x. 114. in after-times, called opus mœusum, vel musivum. Mosaic work, probably because first used in caves or grottos consecrated to the muses (mœsæ;) Plin. xxxvi. 21. s. 42. The walls also used to be covered with crusts of marble, Ib. 6.

Ceilings were often adorned with ivory, and fretted or formed into raised work and hollows, (laqueata tecta; Cic. legg. ii. 1. LAQUENARIA vel LACUNARIA, from lacus or lacuna, the hollow interstice between the beams, Serv. in Virg. Æn. 1. 726.) gilt, (aurea, Ibid. & Horat. od. ii. 11. inaurata, Plin. xxxiii. 3.) and painted, Plin. xxxv. 11. s. 40. Nero made the ceiling of his dining-room to shift and exhibit new appearances, as the different courses or dishes were removed, Senec. ep. 90. Suet. Ner. 31.

VILLAS and GARDENS of the ROMANS.

THE magnificence of the Romans was chiefly conspicuous in their country villas, Cic. de legg. iii. 13.

VILLA originally denoted a farm-house, and its appurtenances, or the accommodations requisite for a husbandman, (quasi VILLA, quo fructus vehebant, et unde vehebant, cum venderentur, Varr. R. R. i. 2. 14.) hence the overseer of a farm was called VILLICUS; and his wife, (UXOR liberi, et CONTUBERNALIS servi), VILLICA. But when luxury was introduced, the name of villa was applied to a number of buildings reared for accommodating the family of an opulent Roman citizen in the country, Cic. Rosc. Com. 12. hence some of them are said to have been built in the manner of cities, in urbium modum exadificata, Sallust. Cat. 12. Ædificia privata, laxitatem urbium magnarum vincentia, Senec. benef. vii. 10. Ep. 90. Horat. od. ii. 15. iii. 1. 33.

A villa of this kind was divided into three parts, URBANA, RUSTICA, and FRUCTUARIA. The first contained dining-rooms, parlours, bed-chambers, baths, tennis-courts, walks, terraces, (xystris), &c. adapted to the different seasons of the year. The villa rustica contained accommodations for the various tribes of slaves and workmen, stables, &c. and the Fructuaria, wine and oil-cellars, corn-yards; (famalia et palearia) barns, granaries, store-houses, repositories, for preserving fruits, (apotheca), &c. Columel. i. 4. 6.

Cato and Varro include both the last parts under the name of VILLA RUSTICA, Cat. de R. R. iii. 1. ix. 1. Varr. xiii. 6. But the name of villa is often applied to the first alone, without the other two, and called by Vitruvius, PSEUDO-URBANA; by others, PASTORIUM, Suet. Aug. 72. Cal. 37. Tit. 8.

In every villa there commonly was a tower; in the upper part of which was a supping room, (cænatio.) where the guests, while reclining at table, might enjoy at the same time a pleasant prospect, Plin. ep. ii. 17.

Adjoining to the VILLA RUSTICA, were places for keeping hens, GALLINARIUM; geese, CHENOBOCIUM; ducks, and wild fowl, NESSOTROPHIUM; birds, ornithon, vel AVIARIUM; dormice, GLIBARIUM; swine, SUILE, sc. stabulum, et hara, hogsties; hares, rabbits, &c. LEPORARIUM, a warren: bees, APIARIUM; and even snails, COCHLEARIA, &c.

There was a large park, of fifty acres or more (παρὰδισος), for deer and wild beasts, THERIOTROPHIUM, vel VIVARIUM, Gell. ii. 20. but the last word is applied also to a fish-pond, (PISCINA.) Juvenal. iv. 51. or an oyster-bed, Plin. ix. 54. or any place where live animals were kept for pleasure or profit: Hence in vivaria mittere, i. e. lactare, numeribus et observantia omni alicujus hereditatem captare, to court one for his money, Horat. ep. i. 1. 79. Ad vivaria currunt, to good quarters, to a place where plenty of spoil is to be had, Juvenal. iii. 308.

The Romans were uncommonly fond of gardens, (HORTUS, vel ORTUS, ubi arboras et olera oriuntur.) as indeed all the ancients were: Hence the fabulous gardens and golden apples of the HESPERIDES, Virg. Æn. iv. 484. of Adonis and Alcinous, lb. G. ii. 87. Ovid. Am. i. 10. 56. Pont. iv. 2. 10. Stat. Sylv. i. 3. 81. the hanging gardens (pensiles horti) of Semiramis, or of Cyrus at Babylon, Plin. xix. 4. the gardens of Epicurus, put for his gymnasium, or school, Ibid. et Cic. Att. xii. 23. Fin. v. 3.

In the laws of the Twelve Tables, villa is not mentioned, but hortus in place of it, Plin. ibid. The husbandmen called a garden altera succidia, a second dessert, or fitch of bacon, (perna, petâso vel lardum), which was always ready to be cut, Cic. Sen. 16. or a salad, (acetaria, -orum, facilia concoqui, nec oneratura sensum cibo, Plin. xix. 4. s. 19.) and judged there must be a bad housewife (nequam mater familias, for this was her charge) in that house where the garden was in bad order, (indiligens hortus, i. e. indiligenter cultus.) Even in the city, the common people used to have representations of gardens in their windows, Plin. ibid.

In ancient times the garden was chiefly stored with fruit-trees and pot-herbs, (ex horto enim plebei macellum, lb.) hence called HORTUS RINGUIS, the kitchen garden, Virg. G. iv. 118. Plin. ep. ii. 17. and noble families were denominated not only from the cultivation of certain kinds of pulse (legumina), Fabii, Lentuli, Pisones, &c. but also of lettuce, Lactucini, Plin. xix. 4.

But in after-times, the chief attention was paid to the rearing of shady trees, Horat. od. ii. 14. 22. et od. xv. 4. Ovid. Mux. 29. &c. aromatic plants, flowers and evergreens; as the myrtle, ivy, laurel, boxwood, &c. These, for the sake of ornament, were twisted, and cut into various figures by slaves trained for that purpose, called TOPIARII, Plin. ep. iii. 19. who were said TOPIARIAM, sc. artem, FACERE, Cic. Q. fr. iii. 1. 2. vel OPUS TOPIARIUM, Plin. xv. 30.

Gardens were adorned with the most beautiful statues, Cic. Dom. 43. Plin. ep. viii. 18. f. Here the Romans, when they chose it, lived in retirement, Cic. Art. xii. 40. Suet. Cl. 5. Tacit. Ann. xvi. 34. and entertained their friends, Senec. ep. 21. Mart. iv. 64.

The Romans were particularly careful to have their gardens well watered, (rigui, vel irrigui;) and for that purpose, if there was no water in the ground, it was conveyed in pipes (inducebatur per canales, vel fistulas aquarias, Plin. ep. v. 6. per tubos plumbeos, vel ligneos, Plin. xvi. 42. s. 81. vel fictiles, seu testaceos, Id. xxxi. 6. s. 31.) These aqueducts (ductus aquarum) were sometimes so large that they went by the name of NILI and EURIP: Cic. legg. ii. 1.

The gardens at Rome most frequently mentioned in the Classics, were, horti CÆSARIS, Horat. Sat. i. 9. 18. Suet. 83. LUCULLI, Tacit. Ann. xi. 1. 37. MARTIALIS, iv. 64. NERONIS, Tacit. Ann. xiv. 3. xv. 44. POMPEII, Cic. Phil. ii. 29. SALLUSTII, v. -IANI; the property first of Sallust the historian, then of his grand-nephew and adopted son, Tacit. Ann. iii. 30. afterwards of the emperors, Id. xiii. 47. Hist. iii. 82. SENECE, Id. xiv. 52. Juvenal. x. 16. TARQUINII SUPERBI, the most ancient in the city, Liv. i. 54. Ovid. Fast. ii. 703. &c.

Adjoining the garden were beautiful walks, (ambulacra vel -tiones), shaded with trees, and a place for exercise, (palæstra), Cic. legg. ii. 2. Gell. i. 2.

Trees were often reared with great care round houses in the city, Horat. ep. i. 10. 22. Tibull. iii. 3. 15. and statues placed among them, Cic. Verr. i. 19.

AGRICULTURE of the ROMANS.

THE ancient Romans were so devoted to agriculture, that their most illustrious commanders were sometimes called from the plough; thus, Cincinnatus, Liv. iii. 26. Cic. Rosc. Am. 18. The senators commonly resided in the country, and cultivated the ground with their own hands, Ibid. see p. 15. and the noblest families derived their surnames from cultivating particular kinds of grain; as the FABII, PISONES, LENTULI, CICERONES, &c. Plin. xviii. 1. To be a good husbandman was accounted the highest praise, (BONUS COLONUS, vel AGRICOLA, was equivalent to VIR BONUS, Ibid. 3. Cato, R. R. Pr. 2. LOCUPLES, rich, q. loci, hoc est, agri plenus; PÆCUNIOSUS, a pecoribus copia; so ASSIDUUS, ab asse dando, Quinctil. v. 10. Ovid. Fast. v. 280. Gell. x. 5. Festus;) and whoever neglected his ground, or cultivated it improperly, was liable to the animadversion of the Censors, Plin. ibid.

At first no citizen had more ground than he could cultivate himself. Romulus allotted to each only two acres, Varr. R. R. i. 10. Plin. xviii. 11. called HÆREDIUM, (quod hæredem sequerentur,) Id. and SORS, Festus; or cespes fortuitus, Horat. od. ii. 15. 17. which must have been cultivated with the spade. An hundred of these sortes or heredia was called CENTUARIA; Columell. i. 5. Hence in nullam sortem bonorum natus, i. e. partem hereditatis, to no share of his grandfather's fortune, Liv. i. 34. After the expulsion of the kings, seven acres were granted to each citizen, Plin. xviii. 3. which continued for a long time to be the usual portion assigned them in the division of conquered lands, Liv. v. 30. Val. Max. iv. 3. 5. L. Quinctius Cincinnatus, Curius Dentatus, Fabricius, Regulus, &c. had no more, Id. iv. 4. 6 & 7. Cincinnatus had only four acres, according to Columella, præf. & i. 3. and Pliny, xviii. 3.

Those whom proprietors employed to take care of those grounds, which they kept in their own hands, were called VILLICI, Horat. ep. i. 14. Cic. Verr. iii. 50. Att. xiv. 17. and were usually of servile condition, Ibid.

Those who cultivated the public grounds of the Roman people, and paid tithes for them, were also called ARATORES, whether Roman citizens, or natives of the provinces, (provinciales;) and their farms, ARATIONES, Cic. Verr. iii. 20. 27. 53. Phil. ii. 37.

But when riches increased, and the estates of individuals were enlarged, opulent proprietors let part of their grounds to other citizens, who paid a certain rent for them, as our farmers or tenants, and were properly called COLONI, Cic. Cæsin. 32. Plin. ep. x. 24. Colum. i. 7. CONDUCTORES, Plin. ep. vii. 30. or PARTIARI, because usually they shared the produce of the ground with the proprietor, Caius, l. 25. § 6. ff. Locati Plin. ep. ix. 37. It appears that the Romans generally gave leases for five years, (singulis lustris pradiis locâsse,) Id. ix. 37.

AGRICOLÆ was a general name, including not only those who ploughed the ground, (ARATORES, qui terram arant, vel ipsi sua manu, vel per alios, Cic. Verr. v. 38.) but also those who reared vines, (vinitores;) or trees, (arboratores;) and shepherds, (pastores.)

At first, the stock on the farm seems to have belonged to the proprietor, and the farmer received a certain share of the produce for his labour. A farmer of this kind was called POLITOR, vel Polintor, the dresser of the land, or PARTIARIUS, which name is also applied to a shepherd, or to any one who shared with another the fruits of his industry. Such farmers are only mentioned by Cato, who calls those who farmed their own grounds, COLONI. So Virg. ecl. ix. 4. But this word is commonly used in the same general sense with agricola: Non dominus, sed colonus, Senec. ep. 88. In Columella, colonus means the same with the farmer or tenant among us, who was always of a free condition, and distinguished from VILLICUS, a bailiff or overseer of a farm, a steward, who was usually a slave or freedman, Colum. l. 7. Horat. ep. l. 14. Cic. Verr. iii. 50. So shepherds, Virg. Ecl. i. 28 & 41. When a free-born citizen was employed as an overseer, he was called PROCURATOR, Cic. Cæcilia. 20. Att. xiv. 17. Orat. i. 58. and those who acted under him, ACTORES, Plin. ep. iii. 19.

The persons employed in rustic work, under the farmer or bailiff, were either slaves or hirelings; in latter times, chiefly the former, and many of them chained; See p. 43. Plin. xviii. 4. Martial. ix. 23. Ovid. Pont. i. 6. 31. The younger Pliny had none such, Ep. iii. 19.

The Romans were very attentive to every part of husbandry, as appears from the writers on that subject, Cato, Varro, Virgil, Pliny, Columella, Palladius, &c.

Soils were chiefly of six kinds; fat and lean, (pingue vel macrum,) free and stiff, (solutum vel spissum, rarum vel densum,) wet and dry, (humidum vel siccum,) which were adapted to produce different crops, Col. ii. 2.

The free soil was most proper for vines, and the stiff for corn, Virg. G. ii. 229.

The qualities ascribed to the best soil are, that it is of a blackish colour, (terra nigra vel pulla, Virg. G. ii. 203.) glutinous, when wet, ib. 248. and easily crumbled, when dry; has an agreeable smell and a certain sweetness, ib. 238. Plin. xvii. 5. imbibes water, retains a proper quantity, and discharges a superfluity, ib. when ploughed, exhales mists and flying smoke, not hurting the plough-irons with salt-rust; the ploughman followed by rooks, crows, &c. and when at rest, carries a thick grassy turf, Plin. ib. Virg. G. ii. 217. Land for sowing was called ARVUM, (ab arando; Varr. R. R. l. 1. 29.) anciently Arous, sc. ager, Plaut. Truc. l. 2. 47. ground for pasture, PASCUUM, v. -us, sc. ager, Ibid.

The Romans used various kinds of manure to improve the soil; particularly dung, (fmus vel stercus,) which they were at great pains to collect, and prepare in dunghills, (sterquilinia, vel fmeta,) constructed in a particular manner, Col. i. 6. Plin. xxiv. 19. et xvii. 9. They sometimes sowed pigeon's dung, or the like, on the fields like seed, and mixed it with the earth, by sarcling, or by weeding-hooks, (sarcula,) Col. ii. 16.

When dung was wanting, they mixed earths of different qualities, Ibid. they sowed lupines, and ploughed them down for manure, (stercerandi agri causá,) Varr. R. R. i. 23. Beans were used by the Greeks for this purpose, Theophrast. viii. 9.

The Romans also for manure burnt on the ground the stubble, (stipulam urebant,) Virg. G. i. 84. shrubs, (fruteta,) Plin. xviii. 6. twigs and small branches, (virgas et sarmenta,) Id. 25. They were well acquainted with lime, (calx,) but do not seem to have used it for manure, at least till late. Pliny mentions the use of it for that purpose in Gaul, xvii. 8. and hence probably it was tried in Italy. He also mentions the use of marl, (MARGA,) of various kinds, both in Britain and Gaul, and likewise in Greece, called there Leucargillon, xvii. 5. &c. but not found in Italy, Ib.

To carry off the water, (ad aquam, vel uliginem nimiam deducendam,) drains (INCILIA, vel fossæ inciles) were made, both covered and open, (cæcæ et patentes,) according to the nature of the soil, and water-furrows, (sulci aquarii, vel elices, quod undam eliciunt, Virg. G. i. 109.) Col. ii. 2 & 8. Plin. xviii. C.

The instruments used in tillage were,

ARATRUM, the plough; concerning the form of which authors are not agreed. Its chief parts were, TRAMO, the beam; to which the jugum or yoke was fastened; STIVA, the plough tail or handle; on the end of which was a cross-bar, (transversa regula, called MANICULA, vel CAPULUS, Ovid. Pont. i. 8. 57.) which the ploughman (arator, v. bubulcus) took hold of, and by it directed the plough; VOMER, vel -eris, the plough-share; BURIS, a crooked piece of wood, which went between the beam and the plough-share; hence ARATRUM CURVUM, Virg. G. i. 170. represented by Virgil as the principal part of the plough, to which there seems to be nothing exactly similar in modern ploughs; to it was fitted the DENTALE, the share-beam, a piece of timber on which the share was fixed; called by Virgil, duplici dentalia dorso, i. e. lato; and by Varro, dens; to the buris were also fixed two AURES, supposed to have served in place of what we call mold-boards, or earth-boards, by which the furrow is enlarged, and the earth thrown back, (regeritur;) CULTER, much the same with our coulter, Plin. xviii. 18. RALLA, or rulla, vel -um, the plough-staff, used for cleaning the plough-share, Id. 19.

The Romans had ploughs of various kinds; some with wheels, earth-boards, and coulters, others without them, &c. The common plough had neither coulter nor earth-boards.

The other instruments were, LIGO, or PALA, a spade, used chiefly in the garden and vineyard, but anciently also in corn-fields, Liv. iii.

26. Horat. od. iii. 6. 38. ep. i. 14. 27. RASTRUM, a rake ; SARCULUM, a sarcle, a hoe, or weeding-hook ; BIDENS, a kind of hoe or drag, with two hooked iron teeth for breaking the clods, and drawing up the earth around the plants, Virg. G. ii. 400. Ovid. Am. i. 13. 15. OCCA, vel CRATES DENTATA, a hartow, Virg. G. i. 91. Plin. xviii. 18. IRPEX, a plank with several teeth, drawn by oxen, as a wain, to pull roots out of the earth, Varr. L. L. iv. 31. MARRA, a mattock, or hand-hoe, for cutting out weeds, Juvenal. iii. 311. DOLABRA, an ad-dice, or adz, with its edge athwart the handle : SECURIS, an axe, with its edge parallel to the handle ; sometimes joined in one ; hence called SECURIS DOLABRATA ; used not only in vineyards but in corn-fields, for cutting roots of trees, &c. Col. ii. 2. The part of the pruning knife, (falx), made in the form of the half-formed moon, (semiformis luna), was also called SECURIS, Cal. iv. 25.

The Romans always ploughed with oxen, usually with a single pair, (singulis jugis, vel paribus), Cic. Verr. iii. 21. often more, Plin. xviii. 18. sometimes with three in one yoke, Col. vi. 2. 10. What a yoke of oxen could plough in one day was called JUGUM, Varr. R. R. i. 10. vel JUGERUM, Plin. xviii. 3.

Oxen, while young, were trained to the plough with great care, Virg. G. iii. 163. Varr. i. 20. Col. vi. 2. The same person managed the plough, and drove the cattle, (RECTOR, Plin. ep. 8. 17.) with a stick, sharpened at the end, called STIMULUS, (κάρπον) a goad. They were usually yoked by the neck, sometimes by the horns, Plin. viii. 45. Col. ii. 2. The common length of a furrow, made without turning, was 120 feet, hence called ACTUS, which, squared, and doubled in length, made a JUGERUM, Plin. xviii. 3. Varr. i. 10. 1. Col. v. 1. 5. used likewise as a measure among the Hebrews, 1. Sam. xiv. 14.

The oxen were allowed to rest a little at each turning, Col. ii. 2. Cum ad versuram ventum est, vel Cum versus peractus est, i. e. cum sulcus ad finem perductus est ; and not at any other time ; (nec strigare in actu spiritus, i. e. nec interquiescere in ducendo sulco, Plin. xviii. 19. nec in media parte versuræ consistere, Col. ii. 2.)

When in ploughing, the ground was raised in the form of a ridge, it was called PORCA, (i. e. inter duos sulcos terra elata, vel eminens), Varr. R. R. i. 29. Fest. in IMPORCTOR, or LIRA, Col. ii. 4. But Festus makes PORCÆ to be also the furrows on each side of the ridge for carrying off the water, properly called COLLIÆ, Plin. xviii. 19. s. 49. Hence LIRARE, to cover the seed when sown with the plough, by fixing boards to the plough-share, Plin. xviii. 20. Varr. i. 29. when those side furrows were made, Col. ii. 4. These ridges are also called SULCI ; for sulcus denotes not only the trench made by the plough, but the earth thrown up by it, Virg. G. i. 113.

The Romans indeed seem never to have ploughed in ridges unless when they sowed. They did not go round when they came to the end of the field, as our ploughmen do, but returned in the same tract. They were at great pains to make straight furrows, and of equal breadth. The ploughman, who went crooked, was said DELIRARE,

(i. e. de lirâ decedere; hence a recto et æquo, et a communi sensu recedere, to dote, to have the intellect impaired by age or passion, Horat. Ep. i. 2. 14. Cic. Orat. ii. 18.) and PRÆVARICARI, to prevaricate; whence this word was transferred to express a crime in judicial proceedings, Plin. xviii. 19. s. 49.—See p. 225.

To break and divide the soil, the furrows were made so narrow, that it could not be known where the plough had gone, especially when a field had been frequently ploughed, lb. This was occasioned by the particular form of the Roman plough, which, when held upright, only stirred the ground, without turning it to a side.

The places where the ground was left uncovered, (crudum et imotum,) were called SCAMNA, baulks, lb. & Col. ii. 2.

The Romans commonly cultivated their ground and left it fallow alternately, (alternis, sc. annis,) Virg. G. i. 71. as is still done in Switzerland and some provinces of France.

They are supposed to have been led to this from an opinion, that the earth was in some measure exhausted by carrying a crop, and needed a year's rest to enable it to produce another, or from the culture of olive-trees, which were sometimes planted in corn-fields, and bore fruit only once in two years, Col. v. 7. 8 & 9. Varr. i. 55. Plin. xv. 3.

A field, sown every year, was called RESTIBILIS; after a year's rest or longer, NOVALIS, fam. vel novale, or VERVACTUM, Plin. xviii. 19. s. 49. (quod vere semel aratum est.) When a field, after being long uncultivated, (rudus vel crudus,) was ploughed for the first time, it was said PROSCINDI; the second time, ITERARI, vel OFFRINGERI, because then the clods were broken by ploughing across, and harrowing, Festus; Plin. xviii. 29. the third time, TERTIARI, LIBRARI, vel in liram redigi; because then the seed was sown, Varr. i. 29. But four or five ploughings were given to stiff land, sometimes nine, Virg. G. i. 47. Plin. xviii. 20. Plin. Ep. v. 6.

To express this, they said, tertio, quarto, quinto sulco serere, for ter, quater, quinquies, arare. One day's ploughing, or one yoking, was called UNA OPERA; ten, decem operæ, Col. ii. 4.

Fallow-ground was usually ploughed in the spring and autumn; dry and rich land, in winter; wet and stiff ground, chiefly in summer: Hence that is called the best land, (optima seges,) BIS QUÆ SOLEM, BIS FRIGORA SENSIT, i. e. bis per æstatem, bis per hiemem arata, Plin. xviii. 20. Virg. G. i. 48. Thus also seges is used for ager or terra, Id. iv. 129. Cic. Tusc. ii. 5. Locus ubi prima paretur arboribus SEGES, i. e. seminarium, a nursery, Virg. G. ii. 266. but commonly for sata, growing corn, or the like, a crop; as seges lini, G. i. 77. or metaphorically, for a multitude of things of the same kind; thus, Seges virorum, Ovid. Met. iii. 110. Virg. G. ii. 142. Seges telorum, Æn. iii. 46. Seges gloriæ, a field, Cic. Mil. 13.

The depth of the furrow in the first ploughing, (cum sulcus altius imprimeretur,) was usually three-fourths of a foot, or nine inches, (sulcus DODRANTALIS,) Plin. xviii. 19. Pliny calls ploughing four fingers or three inches deep, SCARIFICATIO, Ib. 17. tenui sulco arare, Ib. 18. tenui suspendere sulco, Virg. G. i. 68.

The seed was sown from a basket, (SATORIA, sc. corbis, trimodis containing three bushels, Col. ii. 9.) It was scattered by the hand, Cic. Sen. 15. Plin. xviii. 24. and that it might be done equally, the hand always moved with the step as with us, Ib.

The Romans either sowed above furrow, (in lira), or under furrow, (sub sulco), commonly in the latter way. The seed was sown on a plain surface, and then ploughed, so that it rose in rows, and admitted the operation of hoeing. It was sometimes covered with rakes and harrows, (rastris, vel crata dentata.) Plin. xviii. 20.

The principal seed-time, (tempus sativum, sationis, v. seminationis, vel sementum faciendi), especially for wheat and barley, was from the autumnal equinox to the winter solstice, Virg. G. i. 208. and in spring as soon as the weather would permit, Col. ii. 8. Varr. i. 34.

The Romans were attentive not only to the proper seasons for sowing, but also to the choice of seed, and to adapt the quantity and kind of seed to the nature of the soil, Varr. i. 44. Virg. G. i. 193. Plin. xviii. 24. s. 55.

When the growing corns, (segetes, vel sata, -orum,) were too luxuriant, they were pastured upon, (depascebantur.) Virg. G. i. 193.

To destroy the weeds, two methods were used; SARCULATIO vel sarritio, hoeing; and RUNCATIO, weeding, pulling the weeds with the hand, or cutting them with a hook. Sometimes the growing corns were watered, (rigabantur.) Virg. G. i. 106.

In some countries, lands are said to have been of surprising fertility, (sata cum multo fanore reddebant, Ovid. Pont. i. 5. 26.) yielding an hundred fold, (ex uno centum), sometimes more; as in Palestine, Gen. xxvi. 12. in Syria and Africa, Varr. i. 44. in Hispania Batuca, and Egypt, the Leontine plains of Sicily, around Babylon, &c. Plin. xviii. 10 & 17. but in Italy in general, only ten after one, (ager cum decimo efficiebat, efferebat, v. fundeat; decimo cum fanore reddebat.) Varr. i. 44. as in Sicily, Cic. Verr. iii. 47. sometimes not above four, (frumenta cum quarto respondebant.) Col. iii. 3.

The grain chiefly cultivated by the Romans was wheat, of different kinds, and called by different names, TRITICUM, siligo, robus, also Far, or ador, far adoreum, vel semen adoreum, or simply adoreum; whence ADORÆA, warlike praise or glory; Adoræa aliquem afficere, Plaut. Amph. i. 1. 38. i. e. gloriâ, v. 2. 10. or victory; because a certain quantity of corn (ador) used to be given as a reward to the soldiers after a victory, Horat. od. iv. 3. 41. Plin. xviii. 3. No kind of wheat among us exactly answers the description of the Roman far. What resembles it most is what we call spelt.

FAR is put for all kinds of corn; whence FARINA, meal; farinus siliginea, vel triticea, simila, vel similago, flos siliginis, pollen tritici, flour. Cum fueris nostræ paulo ante farina, i. e. generis vel gregis, Pers. v. 115.

Barley, HORDEUM, vel ordeum, was not so much cultivated by the Romans as wheat. It was the food of horses, Col. vi. 30. sometimes used for bread, (panis hordeaceus.) Plin. xviii. 7. s. 14. given to soldiers, by way of punishment, instead of wheat, Liv. xxvii. 13. In France and Spain, also in Pannonia, Dio. xlix. 36. especially before the introduction of vineyards, it was converted into ale, as among us, called calia, or ceria in Spain, and cervisia in France, Plin. xiv. 22. the froth or foam of which (spuma) was used for barm or yeast in baking, (pro fermento.) to make the bread lighter, xviii. 7. and by women for improving their skin, (ad cutem nutriendam.) Id. xxii. 25. s. 82.

Oats, AVENA, were cultivated chiefly as food for horses; sometimes also made into bread, (panis avenaceus.) AVENA is put for a degenerate grain, (vitium frumenti, cum hordeum in eam degenerat.) Plin. xviii. 17. Cic. Fin. v. 30. or for oats, which grow wild (steriles avenæ, i. e. quæ non seruntur.) Serv. in Virg. Ecl. v. 37. G. i. 153. 226.

As the rustics used to play on an oaten stalk; hence avena is put for a pipe, (tibia, vel fistula.) Virg. Ecl. i. 2. iii. 27. Martial. viii. 3. So calamus, stipula, arundo, ebur, &c.

Flax or lint (LINUM) was used chiefly for sails and cordage for ships; likewise for wearing apparel, particularly by the nations of Gaul and those beyond the Rhine, Plin. xix. 1. sometimes made of surprising fineness, Ibid. The rearing of flax was thought hurtful to land. Virgil joins it with oats and poppy, G. i. 77.

Willows (SALICES) were cultivated for binding the vines to the trees that supported them; for hedges, Virg. G. ii. 436. and for making baskets. They grew chiefly in moist ground; hence udum salictum, Horat. od. ii. 5. 8. Liv. xxv. 17. Cato 9. So the osier, siler; and broom, genista, Virg. G. ii. 11.

Various kinds of pulse (legumina) were cultivated by the Romans; FABA, the bean: pisum, pease; lupinum, lupine; faselus, phaselus, vel phaseolus, the kidney-bean; lens, lentil; cicer v. cicercula, vicia v. ervum, vetches, or tares; sesamum, v. -a, &c. These served chiefly for food to cattle; some of them also for food to slaves and others, especially in times of scarcity; when not only the seed, but also the husks of pods, (siliqua.) were eaten, Horat. ep. ii. 1. 123. Pers. iii. 35. The turnip (rapum, v. -a, vel rapus.) was cultivated for the same purpose, Plin. xviii. 13.

There were several things sown, to be cut green for fodder to the labouring cattle; as ocimum, vel ocymum, fenum Græcum, vicia, cicera, ervum, &c. &c. particularly the herb medica; and citysus for sheep, Plin. xiii. 24.

The Romans paid particular attention to meadows, (PRATA, quasi semper parata, Plin. xviii. 5.) for raising hay and feeding cattle, by cleaning and dunging them, sowing various grass seeds, defending them from cattle, and sometimes watering them, Col. ii. 17.

Hay (FœNUM) was cut and piled up in cocks or small heaps of a conical figure, (in metas extractum;) then collected into large stacks, or placed under covert, Col. ii. 22. When the hay was carried off the field, the mowers (fanisæces, vel -cæ) went over the meadows again, (prata siliciebant, i. e. falcibus consecabant.) and cut what they had at first left. This grass was called sicilimentum, and distinguished from fanum. Late hay was called FOENUM CARDUM, Plin. xviii. 28.

The ancient Romans had various kinds of fences, (septa, sepes, vel sepimenta,) a wall, (maceria,) hedge, wooden fence, and ditch, for defending their marches, (limites,) and corn-fields, Virg. G. i. 270. and for enclosing their gardens and orchards, but not their meadows and pasture-grounds. Their cattle and sheep seem to have pastured in the open fields, with persons to attend them. They had parks for deer and other wild beasts, Col. ix. præf. but the only enclosures mentioned for cattle, were folds for confining them in the night-time, (septa, v. stabula bubilia, ovilia, caprilia, &c.) either in the open air, or under covering. Virg. Æn. vii. 512.

Corns were cut down (metebantur) by a sickle, or hook, or by a scythe; or the ears (spicæ) were stripped off by an instrument, called BATILLUM, i. e. serrula ferrea, an iron saw, Varr. i. 50. (Falx verriculata rostrata, vel dentata, merga, vel pecten;) and the straw afterwards cut, Col. ii. 21. To this Virgil is thought to allude, G. i. 317. and not to binding the corn in sheaves, as some suppose; which the Romans seem not to have done, Col. ibid. In Gaul, the corn was cut down by a machine drawn by horses, Plin. xviii. 30.

Some kinds of pulse, and also corn, were pulled up by the root, (vellebantur,) Col. ib. et ii. 10. 12. Plin. xviii. 30. s. 72.

The Greeks bound their corn into sheaves, Homer. Il. xviii. 550. as the Hebrews, Gen. xxxvii. 7. who cut it down with sickles, taking the stalks in handfuls, (mergites,) as we do, Ruth. ii. 15.

The corn when cut, was carried to the threshing-floor, (area,) or barn, (horreum,) or in a covered place, adjoining to the threshing-floor, called NUBILIARIUM, Col. ii. 21. if the ears were cut off from the stalks, they were thrown into baskets, Varr. i. 1. When the corn was cut with part of the straw, it was carried in carts or wains, (plaustra,) as with us, Virg. ii. 206.

The AREA, or threshing-floor, was placed near the house, Col. i. 6. on high ground, open on all sides to the wind, of a round figure, and raised in the middle, Varr. i. 2.

It was sometimes paved with flint-stones, Col. i. 6. but usually laid with clay, consolidated with great care, and smoothed with a huge roller, Virg. G. i. 178.

The grains of the corn were beaten out, (excutebantur, tundebantur, terebantur, vel exterebantur,) by the hoofs of cattle driven over it, or by the trampling of horses, (equarum gressibus, Plin. xvii. 30. Virg. G. iii. 132. Col. ii. 21. hence Area dum messes sole calente teret; for frumenta in area terentur, Tibull. i. 5. 22. or by flails, (baculi, fustes, vel perticæ.) ibid. or by a machine, called ΤΡΑΗΑ, v. trahæa, a dray or sledge, a carriage without wheels; or TRIBULA, vel -um, made of a board or beam, set with stones or pieces of iron, (tabula lapidibus, aut ferro asperata,) with a great weight laid on it, and drawn by yoked cattle, (jumentis junctis, Ibid. et Varr. i. 52.)

Tribûla, a threshing-machine, has the first syllable long, from τρίβω, tero, to thresh: but tribulus, a kind of thistle, (or warlike machine, with three spikes or more, for throwing or fixing in the ground, called also murex, usually plural, murices, v. tribuli, caltrops, Plin. xix. l. a. 6. Curt. iv. 13. Veget. iii. 24.) has tri short, from τρεις, three; βελη, a spike, or prickle.

These methods of beating out the corn were used by the Greeks, Homer. Il. xx. 495. and Jews, Isai. xxviii. 27.

Corn was winnowed, (ventilabatur), or cleaned from the chaff, (acus, -eris), by a kind of shovel, (vallus, pala, vel ventilabrum), which threw the corn across the wind, Varr. i. 52. or by a sieve, (vannus vel cribrum), which seems to have been used with or without wind, Col. ii. 21. as among the Greeks, Homer. Il. xiii. 588. and Jews, Is. xxx. 24. Amos. ix. 8. Luke. xxii. 31.

The Corn, when cleaned, (expurgatum), was laid up in granaries, (horrea vel granaria) variously constructed, Plin. xviii. 30. sometimes in pits, (in scrobibus), where it was preserved for many years; Varro says fifty, Il. & Varr. i. 57.

The straw was used for various purposes; for littering cattle, (pecori, ovibus bubusque sublerneratur, unde STRAMEN, v. -tum dictum), Varr. i. l. 3. for fodder, Plin. xviii. 30. and for covering houses: whence CULMEN, the roof, from culmus, a stock of corn, Id.

The straw cut with the ears was properly called PALEA; that left in the ground, and afterwards cut, STRAMEN, vel stramentum, vel stipula, the stubble, which was sometimes burnt in the fields, to meliorate the land, and destroy the weeds, Id. & Virg. G. i. 84.

As oxen were chiefly used for ploughing, so were the fleeces of sheep for clothing; hence these animals were reared by the Romans with the greatest care. Virgil gives directions about the breeding of cattle, (quia cultus habendo sit pecori;) of oxen and horses (ARMENTA), G. iii. 49. 72. of sheep and goats, (GREGES), v. 286. also of dogs, 404. and bees, iv. as a part of husbandry.

While individuals were restricted by law to a small portion of land, and citizens themselves cultivated their own farms, there was abundance of provisions, without the importation of grain: and the republic could always command the service of hardy and brave warriors when occasion required. But in after-ages, especially under the emperors, when landed property was in a manner engrossed by a few, Juvenal. ix. 55. and their immense estates in a great measure cultivated by slaves, Liv. vi. 12. Senec. Ep. 114. Rome was forced to depend on the provinces, both for supplies of provisions, and of men to recruit her armies: hence Pliny ascribes the ruin first of Italy, and then of the provinces, to overgrown fortunes, and too extensive possessions, (Latifundia, sc. nimis ampla, perdidere Italiam; jam vero et provincias), xviii. 3 & 6.

The price of land in Italy was increased by an edict of Trajan, that no one should be admitted as a candidate for an office who had not a third part of his estate in land, Plin. Ep. vi. 19.

PROPAGATION of TREES.

THE Romans propagated trees and shrubs much in the same way as we do.

Those are properly called trees (arbores) which shoot up in one great stem, body, or trunk, (stirps, truncus, caudex, vel stipes.) and then, at a good distance from the earth, spread into branches and leaves, (rami et folia;) shrubs, (FRUTICES, vel virgula.) which divide into branches, (rami, v. -uli.) and twigs or sprigs, (virga, v. -ula.) as soon as they rise from the root. These shrubs which approach near to the nature of herbs, are called by Pliny, suffrutices.

Virgil enumerates the various ways of propagating trees and shrubs, (syloca fruticesque.) both natural and artificial; G. ii. 9. &c.

I. Some were thought to be produced spontaneously; as the osier (siler); the broom, (genista;) the poplar and willow, (salix.) But the notion of spontaneous propagation is now universally exploded. Some by fortuitous seeds; as the chestnut, the esculus, and oak; Some from the roots of other trees; as the cherry, (CERASUS, first brought into Italy by Lucullus, from Ceræsus, a city in Pontus; A. U. 680. and 120 years after that, introduced into Britain, Plin. xv. 25. s. 30.) the elm and laurel, (laurus.) which some take to be the bay tree.

II. The artificial methods of propagating trees, were,—1. By suckers, (STOLONES, unde cognomen, STOLO, Plin. xvii. 1. Varr. i. 2.) or twigs pulled from the roots of trees, and planted in furrows or trenches, (sulci v. fossæ.)

—2. By sets, i. e. fixing in the ground branches, (rami, v. talea.) sharpened (acuminati) like stakes, acuto robore valli vel pali, cut into a point; sudes quadrifida, slit at the bottom into four, Virg. G. ii. 25. Plin. xvii. 17. or pieces of the cleftwood, (caudices secti.) Id. or by planting the trunks with the roots, (stirpes.) Id. When plants were set by the root, (cum radice serebantur.) they were called VI-RADICES, quicksets, Cic. Sen. 13.

—3. By layers, (propagines.) i. e. bending a branch, and fixing it in the earth, without disjoining it from the mother-tree, whence new shoots spring, (viva sua plantaria terra.) v. 27. This method was taught by nature from the bramble, (sax rubo.) Plin. xvii. 13. s. 21. It was chiefly used in the vines and myrtles, Virg. G. ibid. v. 63. the former of which, however, were more frequently propagated.

—4. By slips or cuttings, small shoots cut from a tree, and planted in the ground, (surculi, et MALLEOLI, i. e. surculi utrinque capitulati) with knobs, or knobs, i. e. protuberances on each side, like a small hammer, Plin. xvii. 21.

—5. By grafting, or ingrafting, (INSITIO.) i. e. inserting a cion, a shoot or sprout, a small branch or graft, (tradux v. surculus.) of one tree into the stock or branch of another. There were several ways of ingrafting; of which Virgil describes only one; namely, what is called cleft grafting ; which was performed by cleaving the head of a stock, and putting a cion from another tree into the cleft, (feraces plantæ immittuntur, Ibid. v. 78. Alterius ramos vertere in alterius, 31;) thus beautifully expressed by Ovid, Fissaque adoptivas accipit arbor opes, Medic. fac. 6.

It is a received opinion in this country, that no graft will succeed unless it be upon a stock which bears fruit of the same kind. But Virgil and Columella say, that any cion may be grafted on any stock, Omnis surculus omni arbori inseri potest, si non est ei, cui inseritur, cortice dissimilis, Col. v. 11. as apples on a pear-stock, and cornels, or Cornelian cherries on a prune or plum-stock, Virg. G. ii. 33. apples on a plane-tree, pears on a wild ash, &c. v. 70. Plin. xv. 1. 5. s. 17.

Similar to ingrafting, is what goes by the name of inoculation, or budding, (oculus imponere, inoculare, v. -atio.) The parts of a plant whence it budded, (unde germinaret,) were called OCULI, eyes, Plin. xvii. 21. s. 35. and when these were cut off, it was said occæcari, to be blinded, Id. xvii. 22.

Inoculation was performed by making a slit in the bark of one tree, and inserting the bud (gemma v. germen) of another tree, which united with it, v. 73. called also EMPLASTRATIO, Col. v. 11. But Pliny seems to distinguish them, xvii. 16. s. 26. The part of the bark taken out, (pars exempta; angustus in ipso nodo sinus,) was called SCUTULA v. TESSELLA, the name given also to any one of the small divisions in a chequered table or pavement, Id. See p. 446.

Forest-trees, (arbores sylvestres,) were propagated chiefly by seeds. Olives by truncheons, (trunci, caudices secti, v. lignum siccum,) i. e. by cutting or sawing the trunk or thick branches into pieces of a foot, or a foot and a half in length, and planting them; whence a root, and soon after a tree was formed, Virg. G. ii. 30 & 63.

Those trees which were reared only for cutting, were called ARBORES CADUÆ, or which, being cut, sprout up again, (succisæ repululant,) from the stem or root, Plin. xii. 19. Some trees grew to an immense height. Pliny mentions a beam of larix or larch 120 feet long, and 2 feet thick, xvi. 40. s. 74.

The greatest attention was paid to the cultivation of vines. They were planted in ground well trenched and cleaned, (in pastinato, sc. agro,) in furrows, or in ditches, Plin. xvii. 22. disposed in rows, either in the form of a square, or of a quincunx, Virg. G. ii. 277. The uttermost rows were called ANTES, Id. 417. & Festus.

When a vineyard was dug up, (refodiebatur,) to be planted anew, it was properly said repastinari, from an iron instrument with two forks, called pastinum, Col. iii. 18. which word is also put for a field ready for planting, (ager pastinatus.) An old vineyard thus prepared was called VINETUM RESTIBILE, Id.

The vines were supported by reeds, (arundines,) or round stakes, (PALI; whence vites palare, i. e. fulcire vel pedare,) or by pieces of cleft-oak or olive, not round, (ridicæ.) Plin. xvii. 22. which served as props, (adminicula, v. pedamenta;) round which the tendrils (claviculæ, v. capreoli, i. e. colliculi v. cauliculi vitei intorti, ut cincinnati, Varr. l. 31.) twined. Two reeds or stakes, (valli furcæque bidentes,) supported each vine, with a stick, (pertica,) or reed across, called JUGUM or CANTHERIUM, Col. iv. 12. and the tying of the vines to it, CAPITUM CONJUGATIO, et RELIGATIO, Cic. Sen. 15. was effected by osier or willow-twigs, many of which grew near Ameria in Umbria, Virg. G. i. 265. Col. iv. 30. 4. Plin. xvi. 37. s. 69.

Sometimes a vine had but a single pole or prop to support it, without a jugum or cross-pole; sometimes four poles, with a jugum to each; hence called vitis COMPLUVIATA, (a cavis ædium compluvius.) Plin. xvii. 21. if but one jugum, UNI JUGA, 22. Concerning the fastening of vines to certain trees, see p. 381. The arches formed by the branches joined together, (cum palmites sarmento inter se junguntur funium modo,) were called FUNETA, Plin. xvii. 22. and branches of elms extended to sustain the vines, TABULATA, stories, Virg. G. ii. 311.

When the branches, (palmites v. pampini,) were too luxuriant, the superfluous shoots or twigs (sarmenta) were lopt off with the pruning-knife, (ferro amputata.) Cic. Sen. 15. Hence VITES compscere vel castigare; comas stringere, brachia tendere, Virg. G. ii. 368. Pampinare for pampinos decerpere, to lop off the small branches, Plin. xviii. 27.

The highest shoots were called FLAGELLA, Virg. G. ii. 299. the branches on which the fruit grew, PALMÆ; the ligneous, or woody part of a vine, MATERIA; a branch springing from the stock, PAMPINARIUM; from another branch, FRUCTUARIUM; the mark of a hack or chop, CICATRIX; whence cicatricosus, Plin. xvii. 22. Col. v. 6.

The vines supported by cross stakes in dressing, were usually cut in the form of the letter X, which was called DECUSSATIO, Colum. iv. 17.

The fruit of the vine was called UVA, a grape; put for a vine, Virg. G. ii. 60. for wine, Horat. od. i. 20. 10. for a vine branch, (pampinus,) Ovid. Met. iii. 666. for a swarm (examen) of bees, Virg. G. iv. 558. properly not a single berry, (acinus, v. -um,) Suet. Aug. 76. but a cluster, (RACEMUS, i. e. acinorum congeries, cum pediculis,) Col. xi. 2.

The stone of the grape was called VINACEUS, v. -um, or acinus vinaceus, Cic. Sen. 15. Any cluster of flowers, or berries, (racemus in orbem circumactus,) particularly of ivy, (hedera,) was called CORYMBUS, Plin. xvi. 34. Virg. Ecl. iii. 39. Ovid. Met. iii. 665. crocei corymbi, i. e. flores, Col. x. 301.

The season when the grapes were gathered, was called VINDEMIA, the vintage, (a vino demendo, i. e. uvis legendis;) whence vindemiator, a gatherer of grapes, Horat. Sat. i. 7. 30.

Vineyards, (VINEÆ vel vineta,) as fields, were divided by cross paths, called LIMITES; (hence limitare, to divide or separate; and limes, a boundary.) The breadth of them was determined by law:

See lex MANILIA. A path or road from east to west, was called DECIMANUS, sc. limes, (a mensura denum actuum;) from south to north, CARDO, (a cardine mundi, i. e. the north pole;) thus, Mount Taurus is called CARDO, Liv. xxxvii. 34. or semita; whence semitare, to divide by-paths in this direction, because they were usually narrower than the other paths. The spaces, (aræ), included between two semitæ, were called PAGINÆ, comprehending each the breadth of five pali, or capita vitium, distinct vines, Plin. xvii. 22. Hence agri COMPAGINANTES, contiguous grounds.

Vines were planted (serebantur) at different distances, according to the nature of the soil, usually at the distance of five feet, sometimes of eight; of twenty feet by the Umbri and Marsi, who ploughed and sowed corn between the vines, which places they called PORCULETA. Vines which were transplanted, (translata), bore fruit two years sooner than those that were not, (sata), Plin. ibid.

The Limites DECUMANI were called PRORSI, i. e. porro versi, straight; and the CARDINES transversi, cross, Festus. From the decumani being the chief paths in the field; hence DECUMANUS for magnus; thus, Ova vel poma decumana, Festus. Acipenser decumanus, large, Cic. Fin. ii. 8. So Fluctus decimanus, vel decimus, the greatest, Ovid. Trist. i. 2. 49. Met. xi. 530. Sil. xiv. 122. Lucan. v. 672. Senec. Agamm. 502. as επιπνοια, tertius fluctus, among the Greeks. LIMITES is also put for the streets of a city, Liv. xxxi. 24.

Pliny directs the limites decumam in vineyards to be made eighteen feet broad; and the cardines, or transversi limites, ten feet broad, Plin. xvii. 22. s. 35.

Vines were planted thick in fertile ground, (pingui campo), and thinner on hills, but always in exact order, (ad unguem), Virg. G. ii. 277.

The Romans, in transplanting trees, marked on the bark the way each stood, that it might point to the same quarter of the heaven in the place where it was set, Virg. G. ii. 269. Columell. de Arbor. 17. 4.

In the different operations of husbandry, they paid the same attention to the rising and setting of the stars, as sailors, Id. G. i. 204. also to the winds, Id. 51. iii. 273.

The names of the chief winds were, Aquilo, or Boreas, the north wind; Zephyrus vel Favonius, the west wind; Auster v. Notus, the south wind; Eurus, the east wind; Corus, Caurus, vel Japix, the north-west; Africus, vel LIBS, the south-west, Senec. Nat. Q. v. 16. Volturnus, the south-east, &c. But Pliny denominates and places some of these differently, ii. 47. xviii. 33 & 34. Winds arising from the land were called Altanti, or apogæi; from the sea, tropæi, Plin. ii. 44.

The ancients observed only four winds; called VENTI CARDINALES, Sero. in Virg. i. 131. because they blew from the four cardinal points of the world, Plin. ii. 47. Homer mentions no more, Odys. E. 295. So in imitation of him, Ovid. Met. i. 61. Trist. i. 2. 27. and Manilius, Astron. iv. 589. Afterwards intermediate winds were added, first one, and then two, between each of the venti Cardinales.

CARRIAGES of the ROMANS.

THE CARRIAGES (VEHICULA, vectabula, v. -acula) of the ancients, were of various kinds; which are said to have been invented by different persons; by Bacchus and Ceres, Tibull. ii. l. 42. Minerva, Cic. Nat. D. iii. 24. Erichthonius, Virg. G. iii. 113. the Phrygians, Plin. vii. 56, &c.

Beasts of burden were most anciently used, (animalia vel jumenta DOSSUARIA, vel dorsualia, from DORSUM, i. e. tota posterior pars corporis, quod ea deversa fit, deorsum, Festus.) A dorser, dorsel, or dosser, a pannel, or pack-saddle, (clitella vel stratum.) was laid on them to enable them to bear their burden more easily, used chiefly on asses and mules; hence CLITELLARI, humorously applied to porters, geruli vel bajuli, Plaut. Most. iii. 2. 94. but not oxen; hence CLITELLÆ BOVI SUNT IMPOSITÆ, when a task is imposed on one, which he is unfit for, Cic. Att. v. 15. BOS CLITELLAS, sc. portat. Quinctil. v. 11.

This covering was by later writers called SAGMA; put also for sella or ephippium, a saddle for riding on: hence jumenta SAGMARI, vel sarcenaria, et SELLARIA, Veget. ii. 10. Lamprid. Heliog. 4. sometimes with a coarse cloth below, (CENTO, vel centunculus, a saddle cloth.

A pack-horse was called CABALLUS, or CANTHERIUS, v. -um, sc. jumentum, (quasi carenterius, i. e. equus castratus, a gelding; qui hoc distat ab equo, quod majalis a verre, a barrow or hog from a boar, capus a gallo, vevex ab ariete, Varro. de re Rust. ii. 7. fin.) Cic. Fam. ix. 18.

Hence minime sis cantherium in fossa, be not a pack-horse in the ditch, Liv. xxiii. 47. Some make cantherius the same with clitellarius, an ass or mule, and read; MINIME, sc. descendam in viam; SCIS, CANTHERIUM IN FOSSA, sc. equus habebat obvium, i. e. you know the fable of the horse meeting an ass or mule in a narrow way, and being trodden down by him, Scheffer. de re vehic. See Swinburne's Travels in the south of Italy, vol. ii. sect. 66. Others suppose an allusion to be here made to the prop of a vine, Gronovius in loc.

He who drove a beast of burden, was called AGASO, and more rarely AGITATOR, Virg. G. i. 273. A leathern bag, (sacculus scor-teus) or wallet, in which one who rode such a beast carried his necessaries, was called HIPPOPERA, Senec. ep. 87. MANTICA, Horat. Sat. i. 8. 106. PERA, vel AVERTA, a cloak-bag or portmanteau, Scholias. ib. or BULGA, Festus.

An instrument put on the back of a slave or any other person, to help him to carry his burden, was called ÆRUMNULA, (from ærus, tollo.) FURCA vel FURCILLA, Festus. Plaut. Casin. ii. 8. 2. and because Marius, to diminish the number of waggons, which were an incumbrance to the army, appointed that the soldiers should carry their baggage, (sarcinæ, vasa et cibaria.) tied up in bundles upon furcæ, or forks; but the soldiers and these furcæ were called MULIMA-RIANI, Fest. in Æramnula, & Frontin. iv. 1. 7. Plutarch. in Mar. EXPELLERE, vel EXICERE EXTRUDEERE FURCA, vel furcillâ, to drive away by force, Horat. ep. i. 10. 24. Cic. Att. xvi. 2.

Any thing carried, not on the back, but on the shoulders, or in the hands of men, was called FERCULUM; as the dishes at an entertainment, Suet. Aug. 74. the spoils of a triumph, Id. Cæs. 37. the images of the gods at sacred games, Id. 76. the corpse and other things carried at a funeral, Id. Cal. 16.

When persons were carried in a chair or sedan, on which they sat, it was called SELLA, gestatoria, portatoria, v. fertoria, Suet. Ner. 26. or CATHEDRA, Juvenal. i. 64. vi. 90. in a couch or litter, on which they lay extended, LECTICA, vel CUBILE, Suet. Dom. 2. Ovid. A. A. i. 487. used both in the city and on journeys, Tac. Hist. i. 35. Ann. xiv. 4. Plin. ep. iii. 5. Suet. Oth. 6. Ner. 26. Vit. 16. sometimes open, and sometimes covered, Cic. Phil. ii. 41. Att. x. 12. with curtains of skin or cloth, Martial. xi. 99. 11. called PLAGULE, Suet. Tit. 10. which were occasionally drawn aside, Senec. Suet. 7. sometimes with a window of glass or transparent stone, Juv. iii. 242. iv. 20. so that they might either read or write, or sleep in them, Juv. iii. 249. There were commonly some footmen or lackeys, who went before the sedan, (CURSORES.) Petron. 28. Senec. ep. 123.

The sellæ and lecticæ of women were of a different construction from those of men; hence sella vel lectica muliebris, Suet. Oth. 6. The cathedra is supposed to have been peculiar to women, Juv. vi. 91. Mart. xii. 38. The sella usually contained but one; the lectica one or more, Tacit. Hist. iii. 67. Suet. Ner. 9. Cic. Q. fr. ii. 9. The sella had only a small pillow, (cervical,) to recline the head on, Juv. vi. 352. The lectica had a mattress, Senec. ad Marc. 16. stuffed with feathers: hence pensiles plumæ, Juv. i. 159. sometimes with roses, (pulvinus rosâ farctus.) Cic. Verr. v. 11. probably with ropes below, Mart. ii. 57. 6. Gell. x. 3.

The sellæ and lecticæ were carried by slaves, called LECTICARII, calones, geruli, v. bajuli, Senec. ep. 80 & 110. drest commonly in a dark or red penula, Id. ben. iii. 28. tall, (longi v. procæri,) and handsome, Senec. ep. 110. from different countries, Juv. iii. 249. vi. 350. vii. 132. viii. 132. ix. 142. They were supported on poles, (ASSERES, vel amites.) Id. vii. 132. Mart. ix. 23. 9. not fixed, but removeable, (exemptiles.) Suet. Cal. 58. placed on the shoulders or necks of the slaves, Plin. pan. 22 & 24. hence they were said aliquem succollare, Suet. Cl. 10. and those carried by them, succollari, Id. Oth. 6. who were thus greatly raised above persons on foot, particularly such as were carried in the sella or cathedra, Juvenal. iii. 240.

The sella was commonly carried by two, Juv. ix. 142. and the lectica, by four: sometimes by six, hence called hexaphōros, Mart. ii. 81. and by eight, OCTOPHOROS, v. -um, Id. vi. 59. ix. 3. See p. 401.

When the Lectica was set down, it had four feet to support it, usually of wood, Catull. x. 22. sometimes of silver or gold, Athen. v. 10. The kings of India had Lectica of solid gold, Curt. viii. 9.

The use of Lectica is thought to have been introduced at Rome from the nations of the East towards the end of the republic. But we find them mentioned long before, on journey, and in the army, Liv. xxiv. 41, Gell. x. 3. The emperor Claudius is said first to have used a sella covered at top, Dio. lx. 2.

They do not seem to have been used in the city in the time of Plautus or of Terence; but they were so frequent under Cæsar, that he prohibited the use of them, unless to persons of certain rank and on certain days, Suet. Cæs. 43. Cl. 28. Those who had not sedans of their own, got them to hire, Juvenal. vi. 352. ix. 142. Hence we read in later times of CORPORA ET CASTRA Lecticariumum, who seem to have consisted not only of slaves, but of plebeians of the lowest rank, particularly freed-men, Mart. iii. 46. (SELLÆ erant ad exonerandum ventrem aptæ, et PRIVATE, vel FAMILIARICÆ, Varr. R. i. 14. et PUBLICÆ, Martial. xii. 78.)

A kind of close litter carried (gestata v. deportata) by two mules, (MULL, ex equa et asino; HINNULI, v. BURDONES, ex equo et asina,) Plin. viii. 44. s. 69. or little horses; MANNI, Ovid. Amor. ii. 16. 49. i. e. equi minuti, vel pumilii, s. -iones, dwarfs, was called BASTARNA, mentioned only by later writers.

A carriage without wheels, drawn by any animals, was called TRAHA, v. -ea vel traga, a sledge, used in rustic work, in beating out the corn, See p. 456. (called by Varro, Panicum plostellum, R. R. i. 52. because used for that purpose by the Carthaginians,) and among northern nations in travelling on the ice and snow.

Carriages with one wheel were called UNAROTA, Hygin. ii. 14. A vehicle of this kind drawn by the hands of slaves, CHIRAMAXIUM, Petron. 28. or ARCUMA, Festus. A vehicle with two wheels, BIRO- TUM; with four, quattrodiurnum, τετρακύκλος άρσην, v. τετραρόχος, quatuor rotarum currus, Homer. II. Ω , 324.

Two horses yoked to a carriage were called BIGÆ, bijūgi, v. bi-jūges; three, trigæ; and four, quadrigæ, quadrijūgi, v. -ges; frequently put for the chariot itself, bijuge curriculum, Suet. Cal. 19. quadrijugus currus, Virg. G. iii. 18. but Curriculum is oftener put for cursus, the race, Cic. Rabir. 10. Marcell. 2. Horat. od. i. 1. 3. We also read of a chariot drawn by six horses, joined together abreast, (ab Augusto sejuges, sicut et elephantii, Plin. xxxiv. 5. s. 10.) for so the Romans always yoked their horses in their race chariots: Nero once drove a chariot at the Olympic games, drawn by ten horses, (aurigavit decemjugem, sc. currum.) Suet. N. 24. See also Aug. 94.

Those who drove chariots in the circus at Rome, with whatever number of horses, were called QUADRIGARII, Suet. Ner. 16. from the quadrigæ being most frequently used; hence FACTIONES QUADRIGARIORUM, Festus.

Those who rode two horses joined together, leaping quickly from the one to the other, were called DESULTORES; hence desultor

v. desertor amoris, inconstant, Ovid. Am. i. 3. 15. and the horses themselves, DESULTORII, Liv. xlv. 9. Suet. Cæs. 39. sometimes successfully used in war, Liv. xxiii. 29.

The vehicles used in races were called CURRUS, or curricula, chariots, a currendo, from their velocity, having only two wheels, by whatever number of horses they were drawn: so those used in war by different nations; of which some were armed with scythes, (currus, falcati, falcata quadrigæ), in different forms, Liv. xxxvii. 41 & 42. Curt. iv. 9. Also those used by the Roman magistrates, the consuls, prætors, censors, and chief Ædiles, whence they were called MAGISTRATUS CURULES, Gell. iii. 18. and the seat on which these magistrates sat in the senate-house, the rostra, or tribunal of justice, SELLA CURULIS, because they carried it with them in chariots, Id. & Isidor. xx. 11.

It was a stool or seat without a back, (anaclinterium, v. tabulatum a tergo surgens in quod reclinari posset.) with four crooked feet, fixed to the extremities of cross pieces of wood, joined by a common axis, somewhat in the form of the letter X, (decussatim), and covered with leather, so that it might be occasionally folded together for the convenience of carriage, and set down wherever the magistrate chose to use it, Plutarch. in Mar. Suet. Aug. 43. Gell. vi. 9. adorned with ivory; hence called CURULE EBUR, Horat. ep. i. 6. 53. and ALTA, Sil. viii. 488. because frequently placed on a tribunal, or because it was the emblem of dignity; RÉGIA, because first used by the kings, Liv. i. 20. Virg. Æn. xi. 334. borrowed from the Tuscans, Liv. i. 8. Flor. i. 5. in later times adorned with engravings; conspicuum signis, Ovid. Pont. iv. 5. 18.

A carriage in which matrons were carried to games and sacred rites was called PILENTUM, an easy soft vehicle, (pensile.) Serv. in Virg. Æn. viii. 666. with four wheels; usually painted with various colours, Isidor. xx. 12. The carriage which matrons used in common (festo profestoque) was called CARPENTUM, Liv. v. 25. named from Carmenta, the mother of Evander, Ovid. Fast. i. 620. commonly with two wheels and an arched covering; as the flamines used, (currus arcuatus.) Liv. i. 21. 48. Suet. Tib. 2. Cl. 11. sometimes without a covering, Liv. i. 34. Women were prohibited the use of it in the second Punic war by the Oppian law, Liv. xxxiv. 1. which, however, was soon after repealed, Id. 8.—put for any carriage, Flor. i. 18. iii. 2. 10.

A splendid carriage with four wheels, and four horses, adorned with ivory and silver, in which the images of the gods were led in solemn procession from their shrines (e sacrariis) at the Circensian games, to a place in the Circus, called PULVINAR, Suet. Aug. 45. where couches were prepared for placing them on, was called THENSA, Festus; from the thongs stretched before it, (lora tensa.) Asc. in Cic. Verr. i. 59. attended by persons of the first rank, in their most magnificent apparel, Liv. v. 41. who were said Thensam ducere vel deducere, Id. & Suet. Aug. 43. Vesp. 5. who delighted to touch the thongs by which the chariot was drawn, (funemque manu contingere gau- dent,) Ascon. ib. Virg. Æn. ii. 239. And if a boy, (puer patrimus et matrimus) happened to let go (omittere) the thong which he held, it behoved the procession to be renewed, Cic. Resp. H. 10 & 11.

Under the emperors, the decreeing of a Thensa to any one, was an acknowledgment of his divinity, Suet. Cas. 76.

A carriage with two wheels, for travelling expeditiously, was called CISIUM, q. citium, Cic. Phil. ii. 31. S. Rosc. 7. Senec. ep. 72. the driver, CISIARIUS, Ulpian; drawn usually by three mules, Auson. ep. viii. 7. its body (capsum, v. -a) of basket-work, (PLOXIMUM, v. -inum,) Festus. A larger carriage for travelling, with four wheels, was called RHEDA, a Gallic word, Quinctil. i. 9. Cic. Mil. 10. Att. v. 17. vi. 1. or CARRUCA, Suet. Ner. 30. the driver, RHEDARIUS, or CARRUCARIUS, ib. an hired one, MERITORIA, Suet. Cas. 57. both also used in the city, Martial. iii. 47. sometimes adorned with silver, Plin. xxxiii. 11. An open carriage with four wheels, for persons of inferior rank, as some think, was called PETORRITUM, Gell. xv. 30. Horat. Sat. i. 6. 104. also a Gallic word, Festus.

A kind of swift carriage used in war by the Gauls and Britons, was called ESSEDUM, Cæs. B. G. iv. 33. Virg. G. iii. 204. the driver, or rather one who fought from it, ESSEDARIUS, Cic. Fam. vii. 6. Cæs. v. 19. adopted at Rome for common use, Cic. Phil. ii. 58. Suet. Cal. 26. Galb. vi. 18.

A carriage armed with scythes, used by the same people, COVINUS, Sil. xvii. 418. the driver, COVINARIUS, Tacit. Agr. xxxv. 36. Similar to it, was probably BENNA, Festus.

In the war chariots of the ancients, there were usually but two persons, one who fought, (bellator), and another who directed the horses, (auriga, the charioteer,) Virg. Æn. ix. 330. xii. 469. 624. 737.

An open carriage for heavy burdens, (vehiculum onerarium) was called PLAUSTRUM, or veha (μαξα), a waggon or wain: generally with two wheels, sometimes four; drawn commonly by two oxen or more, Virg. G. iii. 536. sometimes by asses or mules. A waggon or cart with a coverlet wrought of rushes laid on it, for carrying dung or the like, was called SCIRPEA, Varr. L. L. iv. 3. properly the coverlet itself, sc. crates; In plastro scripea lata fuit, Ovid. Fast. vi. 780. A covered cart or waggon laid with clothes, for carrying the old or infirm of meaner rank, was called ARCERA, quasi arca, Gell. xx. 1.

The load or weight which a wain could carry at once, (unâ vecturâ) was called VEHES, -is, Col. xi. 2.

A waggon with four wheels was also called CARRUS, v. -um, by a Gallic name, Cæs. B. G. i. 6. 26. Liv. x. 28. or SARRACUM, Juv. iii. 255. or EPIRHEDIUM, Id. viii. 66. Quinctil. i. 5. and by later writers, ANGARIA, vel CLABULARE; also CARRAGIUM, and a fortification formed by a number of carriages, CARRAGO, Am. Marcellin. xxxi. 20.

SARRACA Βοῦτα, v. -tis, or plaustra, is put for two constellations, near the north pole, Juvenal. v. 23. Ovid. Met. ii. 117. called the two bears, (Arcti geminae, vel duæ ἀρκτοι), URSA MAJOR, named Hellæ, (Parrhâsis, i. e. Arcadica), Lucan. ii. 237. Cic. Acad. iv. 20. PARRHASIS ARCTOS, Ovid. Trist. i. 3. 48. from Callisto, the daughter of Lycæon, king of Arcadia, who is said to have been converted into this constellation by Jupiter, Ovid. Met. ii. 506. and URSA MINOR, called CYNOSURA, i. e. κυνος οὐρα, canis cauda, Cic. N. D. ii. 41. Ovid. Fast. ii. 106. properly called ARCTOS, distinguished from the great bear, (HÉLICE,) Ovid. Ep. xviii. m.

The greater bear alone was properly called PLAUSTRUM, Hygin. poet. Astron. i. 2. from its resemblance to a waggon, Ovid. Pont. iv. 10. 39. whence we call it Charles's wain, or the plough; and the stars which compose it, TRIONES, Martial. vi. 58. q. TRIONES, ploughing oxen, Varr. L. L. vi. 4. Gell. ii. 21. seven in number, SEPTEMTRIONES, Cic. ib. 42. But plaustra in the plur. is applied to both bears; hence called GEMINI TRIONES, Virg. Æn. i. 744. also inoccidui, x. nunquam occidentes, because they never set, Cic. ib. Oceani metuentes æquore tingi, Virg. G. 246. for a reason mentioned, Ovid. Fast. ii. 191. and tardi vel pigri, because from their vicinity to the pole, they appear to move slow, Neque se ququam in cælo commovent, Plaut. Amph. i. 1. 117.

The Ursa Major is attended by the constellation BOOTES, q. bubulcus, the ox-driver, Cic. N. D. ii. 42. said to be retarded by the slowness of his wains, Ovid. Met. ii. 177. named also ARCTOPHYLAX, q. ursa custos, Manil. i. 316. Custos Erymanthidos Ursa, Ovid. Trist. i. iii. 103. into which constellation Arcas, the son of Callisto by Jupiter, was changed, and thus joined with his mother, Ovid. Met. ii. 506. viii. 206. A star in it of the first magnitude was called ARCTURUS, q. ἀρκτου οὐρα, ursæ cauda; STELLA POST CAUDAM URÆ MAJORIS, Serv. in Virg. Æn. i. 744. iii. 516. G. i. 204. said to be the same with Böotes, Id. G. i. 67. as its name properly implies, ἀρκτου οὐρα, ursæ custos. Around the pole moved the dragon, (draco v. ānguis; geminus qui separat Arctos, Ovid. Met. ii. 45.) approaching the ursa major with its tail, and surrounding the ursa minor with its body, Virg. G. i. 244.

The principal parts of a carriage were, I. The wheels, (ROTÆ,) the body of the carriage, (CAPSUM, us, v. -a, FLOXEMUM, v. -us, Festus,) and draught-tree, TEMO; to which the animals which drew it were yoked.

The wheels consisted of the axle-tree, (AXIS,) a round beam (lignum, v. stipes teres,) on which the wheel turns: the nave, (medi-ölus,) in which the axle moves, and the spokes, (radii,) are fixed: the circumference of the wheel, (peripheria, v. rotæ summæ curvatura, Ovid. Met. ii. 108.) composed of felines, (apsides,) in which the spokes are fastened, commonly surrounded with an iron or brass ring, (canthus,) Quintil. i. 5. 8. Pers. v. 71. Virg. Æn. v. 274.

A wheel without spokes (non radiata,) was called TYMPANUM, from its resemblance to the end of a drum. It was made of solid boards, (tabula,) fixed to a square piece of wood, as an axis, without a nave, and strengthened by cross-bars, (transversis asseribus.) with an iron ring around, (ferreus canthus;) so that the whole turned together on the extremities of the axis, called CARDINES, Probus in Virg. G. i. 163. Such wheels were chiefly used in rustic wains, Ibid. & G. ii. 444. as they still are in this country, and called TUMBLERS. Tympānum, is also put for a large wheel, moved by horses or men, for raising weights from a ship, or the like, by means of pulleys, (trochlea,) ropes, and hooks, a kind of crane, (tollēno, grus, v. γρᾶνος.) Lucret. iv. 903. or for drawing water, (machina haustoria.) VITRUV. x. 9. Curva, ANGLIA, Mart. ix. 19. ANCLA v. ANTHA, Suet. Tib. 51. (ἀντημα, Jahn, vi. 11.) HAUSTUM, v. rota aquaria, sometimes turned by the force of water, Lucret. v. 317. the water was raised through a siphon, (sipho v. on, fistula, v. canalis,) by the force of a sucker, (embōlus v. -um,) as in a pump, or by means of buckets, (modioli, v. hamæ,) Juvenal. xiv. 305. Water engines were also used to extinguish fires, Plin. Ep. x. 42.

From the supposed diurnal rotation of the heavenly bodies, AXIS is put for the line around which they were thought to turn, Cic. de Univ. 10. VITRUV. ix. 2. and the ends of the axis, CARDINES, VERTICES, vel POLI, for the north and south poles, Cic. N. D. iii. 41. Virg. G. i. 242. Plin. ii. 15. AXIS and POLUS are sometimes put for caelum or æther; thus, sub ætheris axe, i. e. sub dio vel ære, Virg. ÆN. ii. 512. viii. 28. lucidus polus, iii. 585. Cardines mundi quatuor, the four cardinal points; SEPTENTRIO, the north; MERIDES, the south; ORIENS, sc. sol, vel ortus solis, the east; OCCIDENS, v. occasus solis, the west: Quinctil. xii. 10. 67. cardo Eous, the east, Stat. Theb. i. 157. occiduus, v. Hesperius, the west, Lucan. iv. 672. v. 71. In the north Jupiter was supposed to reside; hence it is called DOMICILIUM Jovis, Serv. in Virg. ÆN. ii. 693. SEDES DEORUM, Festus in SINISTRÆ AVES: and, as some think, PORTA COELI, Virg. G. iii. 261. thus, Tempestas a vertice, for a septentrione, Ib. ii. 310.

The animals usually yoked in carriages, were horses, oxen, asses, and mules, sometimes camels, Suet. Ner. 11. Plin. viii. 18. elephants, Cart. viii. 9. Plin. viii. 2. Suet. Cl. 11. Senec. de Ir. ii. 31. and even lions, Plin. viii. 16. tigers, leopards, and bears, Martial. i. 105. dogs, Lamprid. Heliog. 28. goats and deer, Mart. i. 52. also men, Plin. xxxiii. 3. Lucan. x. 276. and women, Lamprid. ib. 29.

Animals were joined to a carriage, (vehiculo v. ad vehiculum jungebantur, Virg. ÆN. vii. 724. Cic. Att. vi. 1. Suet. Cæs. 31.) by what was called JUGUM, a yoke; usually made of wood, but sometimes also of metal, Horat. od. iii. 9. 18. Jerem. xxviii. 13. placed upon the neck, one yoke commonly upon two; of a crooked form, Ovid. Fast. iv. 216. with a bend (curvatura) for the neck of each: Hence sub jugo cogere, v. jungere; colla v. cervices jugo subjicere, subdere, submittere, v. supponere, & eripere: JUGUM subire, cervice, ferre, detrectare, exuere, a cervicibus dejicere, excutere, &c.

The yoke was tied to the neck of the animals, and to the pole or team with leathern thongs, (lora SUBJUGIA,) Cato, 63. VITRUV. x. 8.

When one pair of horses was not sufficient to draw a carriage, another pair was added in a straight line, before, and yoked in the same manner. If only a third horse was added, he was bound with nothing but ropes, without any yoke.

When more horses than two were joined abreast, (æquata fronte,) a custom which is said to have been introduced by one Clisthenes of Sicyon, two horses only were yoked to the carriage, called JUGALES, jugarii, v. juges, (Ζυγιοί,) Festus; and the others were bound (appensi vel adjuncti) on each side with ropes; hence called FUNALES EQUI, Suet. Tib. 9. Stat. Theb. vi. 461. (Ζυραφοροί, σιγαιοί, v. φαγρωροί,) Dionys. vii. 73. Isidor. xvii. 35. Zonar. Ann. ii. or FUNES, Auson. epitaph. xxxv. 10. in a chariot of four, (in quadrigis), the horse on the right, DEXTER, v. primus; on the left, SINISTER, lævus v. secundus, Id. This method of yoking horses was chiefly used in the Circensian games, or in a triumph.

The instruments by which animals were driven or excited, were —1. The lash or whip, FLAGELLUM, (μαστιξ,) made of leathern thongs, SCUTICA, loris horridis, σκνταλη, (Martial. x. 62.) or twisted cords, tied to the end of a stick, sometimes sharpened (aculeati) with small bits of iron or lead at the end, (HORRIBILE FLAGELLUM, Horat. Sat. i. 3. 117.) and divided into several lashes, (lænicæ, v. lora), called SCORPIONS, 1 Kings, xii. 11.

—2. A rod, (VIRGA, Juvenal. iii. 317. Lucan. iv. 683.) or goad, (STIMULUS, i. e. perlica cum cuspile acuta, a pole, or long stick, with a sharp point:) hence stimulos alicui adhibere, admovere, addere, adjicere; stimulis fodere, incitare, &c. Adversus stimulum calces, sc. jactare, to kick against the goad, Ter. Phorm. i. 2. 28. αρος κεντρα λακτιζων, in stimulos calcitrare, Acts. ix. 5.

—And 3. A spur, (CALCAR, quod calci equitis alligetur; ferrata calce cunctantem impellebat equum, Sil. vii. 696.) used only by riders: hence equo calcaria addere, subdere, &c. Alter frenis eget, alter calcaribus, said by Isocrates of Ephorus and Theopompus, Cic. Att. vi. 1. Orat. iii. 9.

The instruments used for restraining and managing horses, were —1. The bit or bridle, (FRÆNUM, pl. -i, v. -a.) said to have been invented by the Lapithæ, a people of Thessaly, Virg. G. iii. 115. or by one Pelethronius, Plin. vii. 56. the part which went round the ears was called AUREA; that which was put in the mouth, properly the iron or bit, OREA, Festus; sometimes made unequal and rough, like a wolf's teeth, particularly when the horse was headstrong, (ΤΕΝΑΧ,) Liv. xxxix. 5. Ovid. Am. iii. 4. 13. (durior oris equus.) Ib. ii. 9. 30. hence frena LUPATA, Horat. od. i. 8. 6. Virg. G. iii. 208. Ovid. Am. i. 2. 15. or LUPL, Id. Trist. iv. 6. 4. Stat. Achil. i. 281. Frena injicere, conculere, accipere, detrahere, laxare, &c. Frænum mordere, to be impatient under restraint or subjection, Cic. Fam. xi. 23. but in Martial. i. 105. & Stat. Sylv. i. 2. 28. to bear tamely.

The bit was sometimes made of gold, as the collars, (monilia), which hung from the horse's neck; and the coverings for their backs (strata) were adorned with gold and purple, Virg. Æn. vii. 279.

—2. The reins (HABENÆ, vel Lora;) hence habenæ, corribere, flectere, v. moliri, to manage; dare, immittere, effundere, laxare, permittere, to let out; adducere, to draw in, and supprimere, Ovid. Am. i. 13. 10.

To certain animals, a head-stall or Muzzle (CAPISTRUM) was applied, Virg. G. iii. 188. sometimes with iron spikes fixed to it, as to calves or the like, when weaned, ib. 399. or with a covering for the mouth, (fiscella;) hence fiscellis capistrare, boves, to muzzle, Plin. xviii. 19. φυσῖν, Deut. xxv. iv. os consuere, Senec. ep. 47. But Capistrum is also put for any rope or cord; hence vitem capistro constringere, to bind, Columel. iv. 20. Jumenta capistrare, to tie with a halter, or fasten to the stall, Id. vi. 19.

The person who directed a chariot and the horses, was called AURIGA, (ἡνίοχος, qui lora tenebat;) or agitor, (ἄναρχος;) the charioteer or driver, Ovid. Met. ii. 327. Cic. Att. xiii. 21. Acad. iv. 29. also MODERATOR, Lucan. viii. 199. But these names are applied chiefly to those who contended in the Circus, Suet. Cal. 54. Ner. xxii. 24. Plin. ep. ix. 6. or directed chariots in war, Virg. and always stood upright in their chariots, (insistebant curribus;) Plin. ep. ix. 6. Hence AURIGARE for currum regere; and AURIGARIUS, a person who kept chariots for running in the circus, Suet. ib.

Auriga is the name of a constellation, in which two stars, called HEDI, the kids; above the horns of Taurus; Serv. in Virg. Æn. ix. 668. On the head of Taurus, are the Hyades, (ab ἰσν, pleure;) or Sucula, (a suibus;) Cic. N. D. ii. 43. Plin. ii. 39. Gell. xiii. 9. called Pluvia, by Virgil, Æn. iii. 516. and Tristes, by Horace; because at their rising and setting, they were supposed to produce rains, Od. i. 3. 14. on the neck, or, as Servius says, G. i. 137. ante genua tauri, Plin. ii. 41. in caudâ tauri septem; PLEIADES, or VERGILÆ, the seven stars; sing. Pleias vel PLIAS, Ovid. ep. xviii. 188.

AGITATOR is also put for agator, (qui jumenta agebat) a person who drove any beasts on foot, Virg. G. i. 273. But drivers were commonly denominated from the name of the carriage; thus, rhedarius, plaustrarius, &c. or of the animals, which drew it: thus, MULIO, Suet. Ner. 30. Senec. ep. 87. Martial. ix. 58. xii. 24. commonly put for a muleteer, who drove mules of burden, (mulæ clitellarii;) Martial. x. 2 & 76. as equiso, for a person who broke or trained horses, (equorum domitor, qui solutum incedere, v. badizare docebat, to go with an ambling pace,) under the Magister Equorum, the chief manager of horses, Varro. The horses of Alexander and Cæsar would admit no riders but themselves, Curt. iv. 5. Plin. viii. 42. Dio. xxxvii. 54.

The driver commonly sat behind the pole, with the whip in his right hand and the reins in the left; hence he was said sedere primâ sellâ, Phædr. iii. 6. sedere temone, v. primo temone, i. e. in sella proxima temoni, Stat. Sylv. i. 2. 144. Propert. iv. 8. and temone labi, v. excuti, to be thrown from his seat, Virg. Æn. xii. 470. sometimes drest in red, (canusinatus, i. e. veste Canusii, confecta indutus;) Suet. Ner. 30. or scarlet, (cocco;) Martial. x. 76. sometimes he walked on foot, Liv. i. 48. Dionys. iv. 39. Senec. ep. 87.

When he made the carriage go slower, he was said, curram equosque sustinere, Cic. Att. xiii. 21. when he drew it back or aside, retorquere et avertere, Virg. Æn. xii. 485.

Those who rode in a carriage, or on horseback, were said vehi, or portari, evahi, or invehi; those carried in a hired vehicle, (vehiculo meritorio.) VECTORES: so passengers in a ship; Cic. Nat. D. iii. 37. 3. Juvenal. xii. 63. but vector is also put for one who carries, Ovid. Fast. i. 433. Fulminis vector, i. e. aquila, Stat. Theb. 9. 855. as vehens for one who is carried, Cic. Clar. or. 27. Justin. xi. 7. Gell. v. 6. so invehens, Cic. N. D. i. 28.

When a person mounted a chariot he was said currum conscendere, ascendere, inscendere, et insilire, which is usually applied to mounting on horseback, saltu in currum emicare, Virg. xii. 327. when helped up, or taken up by any one, curru, v. in currum tolli. The time for mounting in hired carriages was intimated by the driver's moving his rod or cracking his whip, Juvenal. iii. 317. to dismount, descendere v. desilire.

The Romans painted their carriages with different colours, Serv. in Virg. A. viii. 666. and decorated them with various ornaments, with gold and silver, and even with precious stones, Plin. xxxiii. 3. Juvenal. vii. 125. as the Persians, Curt. iii. 3. x. 1. Hence Ovid. Met. ii. 107.

Of the CITY.

ROME was built on seven hills, (colles, montes, arces, vel juga, nempe, Palatinus, Quirinalis, Aventinus, Cælius, Viminalis, Esquilinus, et Janicularis;) hence called urbe SEPTICOLLIS; or SEPTEMGEMINA, Stat. Sylv. i. 2. 191. iv. 1. 6. by the Greeks, ἑπτάκορος. Serv. in Æn. vi. 784. G. ii. 535. and a festival was celebrated in December, called SEPTIMONTIUM, Festus, Suet. Dom. 4. to commemorate the addition of the 7th hill, Plutarch. q. Rom. 68.

The Janiculum seems to be improperly ranked by Servius among the seven hills of Rome; because, though built on, and fortified by Ancus, Liv. i. 33. it does not appear to have been included within the city, Id. ii. 10. 51. Dio. 37. Gell. xv. 27. although the contrary is asserted by several authors, Eutrop. i. 5. The Collis Capitolinus, vel Tarpeius, which Servius omits, ought to have been put instead of it.

The Janiculum, Collis Hortulorum, and Vaticanus, were afterwards added.

1. Mons PALATINUS vel PALATIUM, the Palatine mount, on which alone Romulus built, Liv. i. 5. Here Augustus had his house, and the succeeding emperors; as Romulus had before: hence the emperor's house was called PALATIUM, a palace, Suet. 72. Dio. liii. 16. DOMUS PALATINA, Suet. Cl. 17. Vesp. 25. D. 15. and in later times, those who attended the emperor, were called PALATINI.

2. CAPITOLINUS; so called from the Capitol built on it, formerly named SATURNIUS, from Saturn's having dwelt there, Justin. xliii. 1. Virg. ibid. and TARPEIUS, from Tarpeia, who betrayed the citadel to the Sabines, Liv. i. 11. Dionys. ii. 38. to whom that mount was assigned to dwell in, Liv. i. 33.

3. AVENTINUS, the most extensive of all the hills, Dionys. iv. 26. named from an Alban king of that name, who was buried on it, Liv. i. 3. the place which Remus chose to take the omens, Ib. 6, therefore said not to have been included within the Pomærium, Gell. xiii. 14. Senec. de brev. vitæ, 14. till the time of Claudius, Ibid. But others say, it was joined to the city by Ancus, Liv. i. 33. Dionys. iii. 42. called also Collis MURCIUS, from Murcia, the goddess of sleep, who had a chapel, (sacellum,) on it, Festus; Collis DIANÆ, from a temple of Diana, Stat. Sylv. ii. 3. 32. and REMONIUS, from Remus, who wished the city to be founded there.

4. QUIRINALIS, is supposed to have been named from a temple of Romulus, called also Quirinus, which stood on it, Horat. ep. ii. 268. Ovid. Fast. iv. 375. or from the Sabines, who came from Cures, and dwelt there, Festus; added to the city by Servius, Liv. i. 44. called in later times, Mons Caballi, or Caballinus, from two marble horses placed there.

5. CÆLIUS, named from CÆLES Vibenna, a Tuscan leader, who came to the assistance of the Romans against the Sabines, with a body of men, and got this mount to dwell on; Varr. L. L. iv. 8. added to the city by Romulus, according to Dionys. ii. 50. by Tullus Hostilius, according to Liv. i. 30. by Ancus Martius, according to Strabo, v. p. 234. by Tarquinius Priscus, according to Tacit. Ann. iv. 65. anciently called QUERQUETULANUS, from the oaks which grew on it, Ibid. in the time of Tiberius, ordered to be called AUGUSTUS, Tacit. Ann. iv. 64. Suet. Tib. 48. afterwards named LATERANUS, where the Popes long resided before they removed to the Vatican.

6. VIMINALIS, named from thickets of osiers which grew there, (vimineta,) Varr. ibid. Juvenal. iii. 71. or FAGUTALIS, (from fagi, beeches,) Plin. xvi. 10. added to the city by Servius Tullius, Liv. i. 44.

7. EXQUILINUS, Esquilæ, vel Esquilæ, supposed to be named from thickets of oaks, (æsculeta,) which grew on it, Varro. L. L. iv. 8. or from watches kept there (excubiæ,) Ovid. Fast. iii. 246. added to the city by Servius Tullius, Liv. i. 44.

JANICULUM, named from Janus, who is said to have first built on it, Virg. Æn. viii. 358. Ovid. Fast. i. 246. the most favourable place for taking a view of the city, Martial. iv. 64. vii. 16. From its sparkling sands, it got the name of Mons Aureus, and by corruption, MONTORIUS.

VATICANUS, so called, because the Romans got possession of it by expelling the Tuscans, according to the counsel of the soothsayers, (vates,) Festus; or from the predictions uttered there, Gell. xvi. 17. adjoining to the Janiculum, on the north side of the Tiber, Horat. od. i. 20. disliked by the ancients on account of its bad air, (infamis aer, Frontin.) Tacit. hist. ii. 93. noted for producing bad wine, Mart. vi. 92. xii. 48. 14. now the principal place in Rome, where are the Pope's palace, called St. Angelo, the Vatican library, one of the finest in the world, and St. Peter's church.

COLLIS HORTULORUM, so called, from its being originally covered with gardens, Suet. Ner. 50. taken in to the city by Aurelian; afterwards called PINCUS, from the Pincii, a noble family who had their seat there.

The gates of Rome, at the death of Romulus, were three, or at most four; in the time of Pliny thirty-seven, when the circumference of the walls was thirteen miles, 200 paces; it was divided by Augustus into fourteen regiones, wards or quarters, Plin. iii. 5. s. 9.

The principal gates were,—1. Porta FLAMINIA, through which the Flaminian road passed; called also FLUMENTANA, because it lay near the Tiber.—2. COLLINA, (a collibus Quirinali et Viminali;) called also QUIRINALIS, AGONENSIS vel SALARIA, Festus, Liv. v. 41. Tacit. Hist. iii. 82. To this gate Hannibal rode up, Liv. xxvi. 10. and threw a spear within the city, Plin. xxxiv. 6. s. 15. Cic. Fin. iv. 9.—3. VIMINALIS.—4. ESQUILINA, anciently Metia, Labicana, vel Lavicana, without which criminals were punished, Plaut. Cæs. ii. 6. 2. Horat. epod. v. 99. Tacit. Ann. ii. 32.—5. NÆVIA, so called from one Nævius, who possessed the grounds near it, Varr. L. L. iv. 34.—6. CARMENTALIS, through which the Fabii went, Liv. ii. 49. from their fate called SCELERATA, Festus.—7. CAPENA, through which the road to Capua passed;—TRIUMPHALIS, through which those who triumphed entered, Cic. Pis. 23. Suet. Aug. 101. but authors are not agreed where it stood.

Between the Porta Viminalis, and Esquilina, without the wall, is supposed to have been the camp of the PRÆTORIAN cohorts or milites PRÆTORIANI, a body of troops instituted by Augustus to guard his person, and called by that name in imitation of the select band which attended a Roman general in battle, See p. 322. composed of nine cohorts, Tacit. Ann. iv. 5. Suet. Aug. 49. according to Dio Cassius, of ten, Dio. lv. 24. consisting each of a thousand men, horse and foot, Ibid. & Suet. Cal. 45. chosen only from Italy, chiefly from Etruria and Umbria, or ancient Latium, Tacit. Ann. iv. 5. Hist. i. 84. Under Vitellius, sixteen Prætorian cohorts were raised, and four to guard the city, Id. Hist. ii. 93. Of these last, Augustus instituted only three, Id. Ann. iv. 5.

Severus new-modelled the prætorian bands, and increased them to four times the ancient number, Herodian. iii. 44. They were composed of the soldiers draughted from all the legions on the frontier, Dio. lxxiv. 2. They were finally suppressed by Constantine, and their fortified camp destroyed, Aurel. Victor. Zosim. ii. p. 89. pænegyric. 9.

Those only were allowed to enlarge the city, (pomærium proferræ;) who had extended the limits of the empire. Tacitus, however, observes, that although several generals had subdued many nations, yet no one after the kings assumed the right of enlarging the pomærium, except Sylla and Augustus, to the time of Claudius, Ann. xii. 23. But other authors say, this was done also by Julius Cæsar, Cic. Att. xiii. 20. 33 & 35. Dio. xliii. 49. xlv. 49. Gell. xiii. 14. The last who did it was Aurelian, Vopisc. in Aurel. 21.

Concerning the number of inhabitants in ancient Rome, we can only form conjectures. Lipsius computes them in its most flourishing state at four millions.

PUBLIC BUILDINGS of the ROMANS.

I. TEMPLES. Of these, the chief were,

1. The CAPITOL, so called, because, when the foundations of it were laid, a human head is said to have been found, (CAPUT Oli vel Toli cujusdam,) Liv. i. 38. 55. Dionys. iv. 59. Serv. in Virg. Æn. viii. 345.—built on the Tarpeian or Capitoline mount, by Tarquinius Superbus, ib. and dedicated by Horatius, Liv. ii. 8. burnt A. U. 670. rebuilt by Sylla, and dedicated by Q. Catulus, A. U. 675. again burnt by the soldiers of Vitellius, A. D. 70. Tacit. Hist. iii. 72. and rebuilt by Vespasian. At his death it was burnt a third time, and restored by Domitian, with greater magnificence than ever, Suet. Dom. 5. A few vestiges of it still remain.

CAPITOLIUM is sometimes put for the mountain on which the temple stood; as, Liv. i. 10. 33. 38. ii. 8. &c. and sometimes for the temple itself, Liv. iii. 18. vi. 4. &c. The edifice of the Capitol was in the form of a square, extending nearly 200 feet on each side. It contained three temples, (ædes, templa, cella vel delubra), consecrated to Jupiter, Minerva, and Juno, Dionys. iv. 61. The temple of Jupiter was in the middle, (whence he is called Mediâ qui sedet ad DEUS, Ovid. Pont. iv. 9. 32. The temple of Minerva was on the right, Liv. vi. 4. whence she is said to have obtained the honours next to Jupiter, (Proximos illi (sc. Jovi) tamen occupavit Pallas honores, Horat. od. i. 12. 19.) and the temple of Juno on the left. P. Victor. in descr. Rom. Regionis, viii. Livy, however, places Juno first, iii. 15. So Ovid. Trist. ii. 291.

The Capitol was the highest part of the city, and strongly fortified; hence called ARX, Virg. Æn. viii. 652. (vel ab ARCEO, quod sit locus munitissimus urbis, a quo facillimè possit hostis prohiberi, Varr. L. L. iv. 32. vel ab arce, summus;) Capitolium atque arx, Liv. ii. 49. iii. 5. arx Capitolii, Flor. iii. 21. The ascent to the Capitol from the Forum was by 100 steps, Tacit. Hist. iii. 71. Liv. viii. 6. It was magnificently adorned; the very gilding of it is said to have cost 12,000 talents, i. e. 1,976,350*l.* Plutarch. in Poplic. hence called AUREA, Virg. ib. 348. and FULGENS, Horat. od. iii. 3. 43. The gates were of brass, Liv. x. 23. and the tiles gilt, Plin. xxxiii. 3.

The principal temples of other cities were also called by the name of Capitol, Suet. Cal. 47. Sil. xi. 267. Gell. xvi. 13. Plaut. Circ. ii. 2. 19.

In the Capitol were likewise the temples of Terminus, Liv. i. 54. see p. 244. of Jupiter Feretrius, Id. iv. 20. Nep. Att. 20. &c. Casa Romuli, the cottage of Romulus, covered with straw, Liv. v. 53. Senec. Helv. 9. Vitruv. ii. 1. near the Curia Calabra, Macrob. Sat. i. 1. Senec. Contr. i. 6. Ovid. Fast. iii. 183.

Near the ascent of the Capitol, was the ASYLUM, or sanctuary, Liv. i. 8. which Romulus opened, see p. 44. in imitation of the Greeks, Serv. in Virg. Æn. viii. 342. ii. 761. Stat. Theb. xii. 498. Liv. xxxv. 51. Cic. Verr. i. 33. Tacit. Ann. iv. 14.

2. The PANTHEON, built by Agrippa, son-in-law to Augustus, and dedicated to Jupiter Ultor, Plin. xxxvi. 15. or to Mars and Venus, Dio. liii. 27. or, as its name imports, to all the gods, see p. 270. repaired by Adrian, Spartian. 19. consecrated by Pope Boniface IV. to the Virgin Mary, and All Saints, A. D. 607. now called the Rotunda from its round figure, said to be 150 feet high, and of about the same breadth. The roof is curiously vaulted, void spaces being left here and there for the greater strength. It has no windows, but only an opening in the top for the admission of light of about 25 feet diameter. The walls in the inside are either solid marble or incrust-ed. The front on the outside was covered with brazen plates gilt, the top with silver plates, but now it is covered with lead. The gate was of brass, of extraordinary work and size. They used to ascend to it by twelve steps, but now they go down as many; the earth around being so much raised by the demolition of houses.

3. The temple of Apollo, built by Augustus on the Palatine hill, Suet. Aug. 29. Vell. ii. 81. in which was a public library, Hor. ep. i. 3. 17. where authors, particularly poets, used to recite their compositions, Id. Sat. i. 10. 38. sitting in full dress, Pers. i. 15. sometimes before select judges, who passed sentence on their comparative merits. The poets were then said committi, to be contrasted or matched, Suet. Aug. 89. Juvenal. vi. 435. as combatants, Suet. Aug. 45. and the reciters, committere opera, Suet. Cl. 4. Hence Caligula said of Seneca, that he only composed COMMISSIONES, showy declamations, Suet. Cl. 53.

A particular place is said to have been built for this purpose by Hadrian, and consecrated to Minerva, called ATHENÆUM, Aurel. Vict.—Capitol. in Gordian. 4. Pertinac. 11.

Authors used studiously to invite people to hear them recite their works, Dialog. de Orat. 9. who commonly received them with acclamations, Plin. ep. ii. 14. thus, BENE, pulchrè, bellè, euge; NON POTEST MELIUS, Cic. Orat. iii. 26. Horat. Art. P. 428. Pers. i. 49. 84. Mart. ii. SOPHOS, i. e. sapienter, (σοφως,) scitè, doctè, Mart. i. 4. 7. —50. 37.—67. 4.—77. 9. and sometimes expressed their fondness for the author by kissing him, Martial. i. 4. 7. et 77. 14.

4. The temple of Diana, built on the Aventine mount, at the instigation of Servius Tullius, by the Latin States, in conjunction with the Roman people, in imitation of the temple of Diana at Ephesus, which was built at the joint expense of the Greek States in Asia, Liv. i. 45.

5. The temple of Janus, built by Numa, (index belli et pacis.) with two brazen gates, one on each side, to be open in war and shut in time of peace, Liv. i. 19. Vell. ii. 38. Plin. 34. 7. Serv. in Virg. i. 294. vii. 607. shut only once during the republic, at the end of the first Punic war, A. U. 529. Ibid. thrice by Augustus, (Janum Quirinum, i. e. Templum Jani belli potentis, ter clausit, Suet. Aug. 22. Janum Quirini, Hor. od. iv. 15. 9.) first after the battle of Actium, and the death of Antony and Cleopatra, A. U. 725. Dio. li. 20. a second time, after the Cantabrian war, A. U. 729. Dio. liii. 26. about the third time, authors are not agreed. Some suppose this temple to have been built by Romulus, and only enlarged by Numa; hence they take Janus Quirini for the temple of Janus, built by Romulus, Macrob. Sat. i. 9.

A temple was built to Romulus by Papirius, A. U. 459. Liv. x. 46. and another by Augustus, Dio. liv. 19.

6. The temples of, Saturn, Juno, Mars, Venus, Minerva, Neptune, &c. of Fortune, of which there were many, of Concord, Peace, &c.

Augustus built a temple to Mars Ultor in the Forum Augusti, Suet. Aug. 29. Ovid. Fast. v. 551. Dio says, in the Capitol, liv. 8. by a mistake either of himself or his transcribers. In this temple were suspended military standards, particularly those which the Parthians took from the Romans under Crassus, A. U. 701. Dio. xl. 27. and which Phraates, the Parthian king, afterwards restored to Augustus, Id. liii. 23. together with the captives, Id. liv. 8. Vell. ii. 91. Just. xlii. 5. Flor. iv. 12. Eutrop. vii. 5. Suetonius, Aug. 21. and Tacit. Annal. ii. 1. say that Phraates also gave hostages. No event in the life of Augustus is more celebrated than this, and on account of nothing did he value himself more than that he had recovered without bloodshed, and by the mere terror of his name, so many citizens and warlike spoils lost by the misconduct of former commanders. Hence it is extolled by the poets, Horat. od. iv. 15. 6. Ep. i. 18. 56. Ovid. Trist. ii. 227. Fast. vi. 405. Virg. Æn. vii. 606. and the memory of it perpetuated by coins and inscriptions. On a stone, found at Ancyra, now Angouri, in Phrygia, (in lapide Ancyrano.) are these words PARTHOS TRIUM EXERCITUM ROMANORUM, (i. e. of the two armies of Crassus, both son, Dio. xl. 21. and father, Id. 24. and of a third army, commanded by Oppius Statianus, the lieutenant of Antony, Id. xlix. 25.) SPOLIA ET SIGNA REMITTERE MIHI, SUPPLICESQUE AMICIAM POPULI ROMANI PETERE COEGI: and on several coins, the Parthian is represented on his knees delivering a military standard to Augustus, with this inscription, CIVIB. ET SIGN. MILIT. A PARTHIS. RECEP. vel BESTIT. vel RECUP.

II. Theatres, see p. 303. Amphitheatres, p. 294. and places for exercise or amusement.

ODEUM (ὠδῶν, and ὠδῶ, cano.) a building where musicians and actors rehearsed, or privately exercised themselves, before appearing on the stage, Cic. Att. iv. 16. Suet. Dom. 5.

NYPHÆUM, a building adorned with statues of the nymphs, and abounding, as it is thought, with fountains and water-falls, which afforded an agreeable and refreshing coolness; borrowed from the Greeks, Plin. xxxv. 12. s. 43. long of being introduced at Rome, Capitol. Gord. 32. unless we suppose it the same time with the temple of the nymphs, mentioned by Cicero, Mil. 27. Arusp. 27.

CIRCI. The CIRCIUS MAXIMUS, see p. 287. CIRCIUS FLAMINIUS, laid out by one Flaminius; called also Apollinaris, from a temple of Apollo near it, Liv. iii. 54. 63. used not only for the celebration of games, but also for making harangues to the people, Cic. post red. in Sen. 6. Sext. 14.

The CIRCUS MAXIMUS was much frequented by sharpers and fortune-tellers, (sortilégi), jugglers, (prastigiatores), &c. hence called FALLAX, Horat. Sat. i. 6. 113.

Several new Circi were added by the emperors, Nero, Tacit. Ann. xiv. 14. Caracalla, Heliogabalus, &c.

STADIA, places nearly in the form of Circi, for the running of men and horses, Suet. Cæs. 39. Dom. 5. ΗΙΠΠΟΔΡΟΜΙ, places for the running or coursing of horses, Plaut. Bacch. iii. 3. 27. also laid out for private use, Martial. xii. 50. especially in country villas, Plin. ep. v. 6. but here some read Hypodromus, a shady or covered walk, which indeed seems to be meant; as Sidon. ep. ii. 2.

PALESTRÆ, GYMNASIA, et XYSTI places for exercising the Athletæ; see p. 289 & 290. or pancrastiatæ, who both wrestled and boxed, (qui PANCRATIO certabant, i. e. omnibus veribus («α παντας.) Senec. ben. v. 3. Gell. iii. 15. xiii. 27. Quinctil. ii. 9.

These places were chiefly in the CAMPUS MARTIUS, a large plain along the Tiber, where the Roman youth performed their exercises, anciently belonging to the Tarquins: hence called SUPERBI REGIS AGER, Juvenal. vi. 523. and after their expulsion, consecrated to Mars, Liv. ii. 5. called by way of eminence, CAMPUS, Horat. od. iii. 1. 10. Cic. Cat. i. 5. Off. i. 29. put for the Comitia held there, Cic. Orat. iii. 42. hence fors domina campi, Cic. Pis. 2. or for the votes; hence venatis campus, i. e. suffragia, Lucan. i. 180. Campi Nota, a repulse, Val. Max. vi. 9. 14. or for any thing in which a person exercises himself; hence latissimus dicendi campus, in quo liceat oratori vagari liberè, a large field for speaking, Cic. Off. i. 18. Acad. iv. 35. Campus, in quo excurrere virtus, cognoscique possit, Cic. Mur. 8.

NAUMACHIÆ, places for exhibiting naval engagements, built nearly in the form of a Circus; VETUS, i. e. Naumachia, Circi, Maximi, Suet. Tit. 7. AUGUSTI, Id. 43. Tib. 72. DOMITIANI, Id. 5. Martial. Spect. 28. These fights were exhibited also in the circus and amphitheatre, Ibid. See p. 291.

III. CURIÆ, buildings where the inhabitants of each Curia met to perform divine service, Varro. de L. L. iv. 32. see p. 9. or where the senate assembled, (SENACULA;) p. 15.

IV. FORA, public places.—Of these the chief was, FORUM ROMANUM, VETUS, vel MAGNUM, a large oblong open space between the Capitoline and Palatine hills, now the cow market, where the assemblies of the people were held, where justice was administered, and public business transacted, See p. 71. 91. 109. &c. instituted by Romulus, Dionys. ii. 50. and surrounded with porticos, shops, and buildings by Tarquinius Priscus, Liv. i. 35. These shops were chiefly occupied by bankers, (argentarij;) hence called ARGENTARIÆ, sc. tabernæ, Liv. xxvi. 11. VETERES, Plaut. Curc. iv. 1. 19. hence ratio pecuniarum, quæ in foro versatur, the state of money matters; Cic. Manil. 7. fidem de foro tollere, to destroy public credit, Cic. Rull. i. 8. in foro versari, to trade, Id. Flac. 29. foro cedere, to become bankrupt, Sen. ben. iv. 39. vel in foro eum non habere, Cic. Rabir. Post. 15. but de foro decedere, not to appear in public, Nep. Att. 10. in foro esse, to be engaged in public business, Id. Cat. 1. vel dare operam foro, Plaut. Asin. ii. 4. 22. fori tabes, the rage of litigation, Tacit. Ann. xi. 6. in alieno foro litigare, to follow a business one does not understand, Martial. pref. xii.

Around the forum were built spacious halls, called BASILICÆ, where courts of justice might sit, and other public business be transacted, see p. 110. not used in early times, Lic. xxvi. 27. adorned with columns and porticos; Cic. Varr. iv. 3. v. 58. Att. iv. 16. afterwards converted into christian churches.

The Forum was altogether surrounded with arched porticos, with proper places left for entrance; Liv. xli. 27.

Near the Rostra stood a statue of Marsyas, vel -a, Horat. Sat. i. 6. 120. who having presumed to challenge Apollo at singing, and being vanquished, was flayed alive, Liv. xxxviii. 13. Ovid. Fast. vi. 707. Hence his statue was set up in the Forum, to deter unjust litigants.

There was only one Forum under the republic. Julius Cæsar added another; the area of which cost H. S. millies, i. e. 807,291: 13: 4. Suet. Jul. 26. Plin. xxxvi. 15. s. 24. and Augustus a third, Id. xxix. 31. Hence TRINA FORA, Ovid. Trist. iii. 12. 24. Senec. de Ira. ii. 9. TRIPLEX FORUM, Martial. iii. 38: 4.

Domitian began a fourth Forum, which was finished by Nerva, and named from him, FORUM NERVÆ, Suet. Dom. 5. called also TRANSITORIUM, because it served as a convenient passage to the other three, Lamprid. in Alex. 28.

But the most splendid Forum was that built by Trajan and adorned with the spoils he had taken in war, Marcellin. xvi. 6. Gell. xiii. 23.

There were also various FORA, or market-places, where certain commodities were sold; thus, Forum BOARIUM, the ox and cow market, Festus; in which stood a brazen statue of a bull, Tacit. xii. 24. adjoining to the Circus Maximus, Ovid. Fast. vi. 477. SVARUM, the swine-market; PISCARIUM, the fish-market; OLITORIUM, the green-market; Forum CUPEDINIS, where pastry and confections were sold; all contiguous to one another along the Tiber: when joined together, called MACELLUM, from one Macellus, whose house had stood there, Varr. de L. L. iv. 32. Those who frequented this place are enumerated, Ter. Eun. ii. 2. 25.

V. PORTICUS, or piazzas, were among the most splendid ornaments of the city. They took their names either from the edifices to which they were annexed; as Porticus Concordiæ, Apollinis, Quirini, Herculis, Theatri, Circi, Amphitheatri, &c. or from the builders of them; as Porticus Pompeia, Livia, Octavia, Agrippæ, &c. used chiefly for walking in or riding under covert, Ovid. Art. Am. i. 67. Cic. Dom. 44.

In Porticos, the senate and courts of justice were sometimes held, Appian. Bell. civ. ii. p. 500. Here also those who sold jewels, pictures, or the like, exposed their goods.

Upon a sudden shower, the people retired thither from the theatre, Vitruv. v. 9. Soldiers sometimes had their tents in porticos, Tacit. Hist. i. 31. There authors recited their works, Juvenal. i. 12. philosophers used to dispute, Cic. Orat. ii. 20. Propert. ii. 33. 45. particularly the Stoics; whence their name, (from στωα, porticus), because Zeno, the founder of that sect, taught his scholars in a portico at Athens, called Pocile, (σπουλη, varia, picta.) adorned with various pictures, particularly that of the battle of Marathon, Cic. Mur. 29. Pers. iii. 53. Nep. Milit. 6. So Chryssippi porticus, the school of, Horat. Sat. ii. 3. 44. See p. 371.

Porticos were generally paved, (pavimentata.) Cic. Dom. 44. Q. fr. iii. 1. supported on marble pillars, Senec. Ep. 115. and adorned with statues, Ovid. Fast. v. 563. Trist. iii. 1. 59. Propert. ii. 23. 5. Suet. Aug. 31.

VI. COLUMNÆ, (στυλαι vel στυλοι.) columns or pillars properly denote the props or supports (fulcra) of the roof of a house, or of the principal beam on which the roof depends, (columen;) but this term came to be extended to all props or supports whatever, especially such as are ornamental, and also to those structures which support nothing, unless perhaps a statue, or globe, or the like.

A principal part of architecture consists in a knowledge of the different form, size, and proportions of columns.

Columns are variously denominated from the five different orders of architecture, Doric, Ionic, Corinthian, Tuscan, and Composite, i. e. composed of the first three.

The foot of a column is called the base, (basis, Plin. xxxvi. 23. s. 56.) and is always made one half of the height of the diameter of the column: that part of a column on which it stands, is called its pedestal, (stylobates, vel -ta.) the top, its chapter or capital, (epistylum, caput vel capitulum.) and the straight part, its shaft, (scapus.)

Various pillars were erected at Rome in honour of great men, and to commemorate illustrious actions, Plin. xxxiv. 5. thus, COLUMNA MÆNA, a brazen pillar, on which a league with the Latins was written, Liv. ii. 33. COLUMNA ROSTRATA, a column adorned with figures of ships in honour of Duilius, in the Forum; see p. 480. of white marble, Sil. vi. 663. still remaining with its inscription; another in the Capitol, erected by M. Fulvius, the Consul, in the second Punic war, Liv. xlii. 20. in honour of Cæsar, consisting of one stone of Numidian marble, near twenty feet high, Suet. Jul. 86. of Galba, Id. G. 23.

But the most remarkable columns were those of Trajan and Antoninus Pius.

Trajan's pillar was erected in the middle of his Forum, composed of twenty-four great pieces of marble, but so curiously cemented as to seem but one. Its height is 128 feet; according to Eutropius, 144 feet, viii. 5. It is about twelve feet diameter at the bottom; and ten at the top. It has in the inside 185 steps for ascending to the top, and forty windows for the admission of light.

The whole pillar is incrusted with marble, on which are represented the warlike exploits of that emperor and his army, particularly in Dacia. On the top was a Colossus of Trajan, holding in his left hand a sceptre, and in his right, an hollow globe of gold, in which his ashes were put; but Eutropius affirms his ashes were deposited under the pillar, viii. 5.

The pillar of Antoninus was erected to him by the senate after his death. It is 176 feet high, the steps of his ascent 106, the windows 56. The sculpture and other ornaments are much of the same kind with those of Trajan's pillar, but the work greatly inferior.

Both these pillars are standing, and justly reckoned among the most precious remains of antiquity. Pope Sixtus V. instead of the statues of the emperors, caused the statue of St. Peter to be erected on Trajan's pillar, and of Paul on that of Antoninus.

The Romans were uncommonly fond of adorning their houses with pillars, Cic. Verr. i. 55. &c. Horat. od. ii. 18. Juven. vii. 182. and placing statues between them, (in intercolumniis.) Cic. Verr. i. 19. as on temples, Or. Trist. iii. 1. 61.

A tax seems to have been imposed on pillars, called COLUMNARIUM, Cic. Att. xiii. 6. Cas. B. C. iii. 28. s. 32.

There was a pillar in the Forum, called Columna Mænia, from C. Mænius, who having conquered the Antiates, A. U. 417. placed the brazen beaks of their ships on the tribunal in the Forum, from which speeches were made to the people; hence called ROSTRA; See p. 73. Plin. xxxiv. 5. s. 11.

Near this pillar, slaves and thieves, or fraudulent bankrupts, used to be punished, Cic. Cluent. 13. Hence insignificant idle persons, who used to saunter about that place, were called COLUMNARI, Cic. Fam. viii. 9. as those who loitered about the Rostra and courts of justice were called SUBROSTRANI, Cic. Fam. viii. 1. and SUBBASILICARI, Plaut. Capt. iv. 2. 35. comprehended in the Turba forensis, or plebs urbana, which Cicero often mentions.

VII. ARCUS TRIUMPHALES, arches erected in honour of illustrious generals, who had gained signal victories in war, Dio. xlix. 15. li. 19. liv. 8. several of which are still standing. They were at first very simple; built of brick or hewn-stone; of a semicircular figure; hence called FORNICES by Cicero, Verr. i. 7. ii. 63. but afterwards more magnificent, built of the finest marble, of a square figure, with a large arched gate in the middle, and two small ones on each side, adorned with columns and statues, and various figures done in sculpture, Juv. x. 136.

From the vault of the middle gate, hung little winged images of victory, with crowns in their hands, which, when let down, they put on the victor's head as he passed in triumph. This magnificence began under the first emperors; hence Pliny calls it NOVICIUM INVENTUM, xxxiv. 6. s. 12.

VIII. TROPHÆA, trophies, were spoils taken from the enemy, and fixed upon any thing, as signs or monuments of victory, (a eorum fuga;) erected (posita vel statuta;) usually in the place where it was gained, and consecrated to some divinity, with an inscription, Virg. Æn. xi. 5. iii. 288. Ovid. Art. Amor. ii. 744. Tacit. Ann. ii. 22. Curt. vii. 7. viii. 1. used chiefly among the ancient Greeks, who, for a trophy, decorated the trunk of a tree with the arms and spoils of the vanquished enemy, Stat. Theb. ii. 707. Juv. x. 133. Those who erected metal or stone, were held in detestation by the other states, Cic. de Invent. ii. 23. nor did they repair a trophy when it decayed, to intimate that enmities ought not to be immortal, Plutarch. Quæst. Rom. 36. Diod. Sic. 13.

Trophies were not much used by the Romans, who, Florus says, never insulted the vanquished, iii. 2. They called any monuments of victory by that name, Cic. Arch. 7. Dom. 37. Pis. 38. Plin. paneg. 59. Plin. nat. hist. iii. 3. s. 4. 20. s. 24. Thus the oak tree, with a cross piece of wood on the top, on which Romulus carried the spoils of Acron, king of the Cæninenses, is called by Plutarch τροφαιον: by Liv. It was reckoned unlawful to overturn a trophy, as having been consecrated to the gods of war. Thus Cæsar left standing the trophies which Pompey, from a criminal vanity, had erected on the Pyrenean mountains, after his conquest of Sertorius and Perpenna in Spain, Dio. xli. 24. Strab. iii. p. 156. and that of Mithridates over Triarius, near Ziela, in Pontus, Id. xlii. 48. but reared opposite to them monuments of his own victories; over Afranius and Petreius in the former place, and over Pharnaces, the son of Mithridates, in the latter, Ibid. The inscription on Cæsar's trophy on the Alps we have, Plin. iii. 20. s. 24. IX. AQUÆDUCTUS, see p. 372. The care of them anciently belonged to the Censors and Ædiles; afterwards certain officers were appointed for that purpose by the emperors, called CURATORES AQUARUM, with 720 men, paid by the public, to keep them in repair, divided into two bodies, (familix;) the one called PUBLICA, first instituted by Agrippa, under Augustus, consisting of 260; the other FAMILIA CÆSARIS, of 460, instituted by the emperor Claudius, Frontin. de Aquæduct.

The slaves employed in taking care of the water, were called AQUARII, Cic. Fam. viii. 6. AQUARIA PROVINCIA is supposed to mean the charge of the port of Ostia, Cic. Vat. 5. Mur. 8.

A person who examined the height from which water might be brought, was called LIBRATOR, Plin. ep. x. 50. 69. the instrument by which this was done, AQUARIA LIBRA, Vitruv. viii. 6. hence locus pari librâ cum æquore maris est, of the same height, Columell.

viii. 17. Omnes aquæ diversâ in urbem librâ perveniunt, from a different height, Frontin. i. 18. So turres ad libram factæ, of a proper height, Cæs. B. C. iii. 40. Locus ad libellam æquus, quite level, Varr. de R. R. i. 6.

The declivity of an aqueduct (libramentum aquæ) was at least the fourth of an inch every 100 feet, (in centenos pedes sicilici minimum erit,) Plin. xxxi. 6. s. 31. according to Vitruvius, half a foot, viii. 7. The moderns observe nearly that mentioned by Pliny. If the water was conveyed under ground, there were openings (lumina) every 240 feet (in binos actus.) Ibid.

The Curator or præfectus aquarum was invested by Augustus with considerable authority, Suet. Aug. 37. attended without the city by two lictors, three public slaves, an architect, secretaries, &c. Frontin. hence, under the late emperors, he was called CONSULARIS AQUARUM, J. I. C. de Aquæd.

According to P. Victor, there were twenty aqueducts in Rome, but others make them only fourteen. They were named from the maker of them, the place from which the water was brought, or from some other circumstance; thus, Aqua Claudia, Appia, Marcia, Julia, Cimina. Felix, Virgo, (vel virginæ liquor, *Ovid. X. CLOACÆ, (a cluo vel conluo, i. e. purgo, Fest. & Plin. sewers, drains, or sinks, for carrying off the filth of the city into the Tiber; first made by Tarquinius Priscus, Liv. i. 38. extending under the whole city, and divided into numerous branches: the arches which supported the streets and buildings were so high and broad, that a wain loaded with hay, (vehis, v. -es feri largè onusta,) might go below, and vessels sail in them: hence Pliny calls them operum omnium dictu maximum, suffossis montibus, atque urbe pensili, subterque navigatâ, xxxvi. 13. So Strab. v. p. 225. There were in the streets, at proper distances, openings for the admission of dirty water, or any other filth, Horat. Sat. ii. 3. 242. which persons were appointed always to remove, and also to keep the Cloacæ clean, Plin. ep. x. 41. This was the more easily effected by the declivity of the ground, and the plenty of water with which the city was supplied, Plin. xxxvi. 15.

The principal sewer, with which the rest communicated, was called CLOACA MAXIMA, the work of Tarquinius Superbus,* Liv. i. 56. various cloacæ were afterwards made, Liv. xxxix. 44.

* "Amongst the works of public utility belonging to Rome, none seem to have excited greater admiration in the ancients themselves than the Cloacæ. And from what remains of the Cloaca Maxima at the present day, we may infer that the praise which they bestowed on these works was not unmerited. The structure of this vast Cloaca is universally ascribed to Tarquinius Superbus, though it was planned and commenced by the elder Tarquin. It was intended, together with its different ramifications, to carry off the waters which stagnated in the low grounds near the Forum,

The Cloaca at first were carried through the streets, (per publicum ductæ;) but by the want of regularity in rebuilding the city, after it was burnt by the Gauls, they in many places went under private houses, Liv. v. 55.

Under the republic, the censors had the charge of the Cloaca; but under the emperors, CURATORES CLOACARUM were appointed, and a tax imposed for keeping them in repair, called CLOACARIUM, Ulpian.

with the other impurities of the city. Pliny expresses his wonder at the solidity and durability of this great undertaking, which, after a lapse of 700 years, still remained uninjured and entire. So vast were the dimensions of this Cloaca, that a cart loaded with hay could easily pass under it. Dionysius informs us, that it cost the state the enormous sum of 1000 talents to have the Cloaca cleaned and repaired. We hear also of other sewers being made from time to time on mount Aventine and other places, by the censors M. Cato and Valerius Flaccus, but more especially by Agrippa, who, according to Pliny, is said to have introduced whole rivers into these hollow channels, on which the city was as it were suspended, and thus was rendered subterraneously navigable." Cramer.—Ed.

* In order to afford some idea of the nature and importance of these works, we copy from the accurate account of them given in the description of ancient Italy by Cramer, so much as may indicate their course and extent through the various provinces of that country.

"The principal way, which traversed Liguria, as well as the most ancient, was that which followed the whole length of the coast, and led into Gaul by the Alpis Maritima. It was made by the consul Aurelius, about 635 U. C. and from him was called the "VIA AURELIA. It seems to have been laid down in the first instance from Rome to Pisa, from which point it was subsequently continued, under the name of the Via Emilia, by the consul Æmilius Scaurus, A. U. C. 639, as far as Vada Sabata: here it left the coast, and led by a circuitous route to Acqui and Tortona. At a later period, however, this road was carried along the coast to the Maritime Alps, and even beyond them into Gaul as far as Arelate, Arles; when the name of Via Aurelia, as we find from the Itinerary of Antoninus, was commonly used to designate the route between that city and Rome.

"The VIA POSTHUMIA was another great Roman road, which, beginning at Genoa, traversed the Apennines, and the part of Liguria which lies on the other side of that chain; and continued its course through a great portion of Cisalpine Gaul, as far as Verona. It has not been ascertained by whom and at what time this road was constructed; but we know that it must have existed before 636 U. C. the date of the brazen tablet of Genoa, in which mention is made of it. It may with probability be ascribed to A. Posthumius Albinus, who was consul in 672 U. C. and afterwards censor in 578.

"In examining the different roads which intersected the province just described, we shall commence with those which crossed the Alps, and terminated at Milan. They were constructed, as Strabo informs us, by order of Augustus; though we are not to understand the geographer as stating, that these mountain-passes were opened for the first time during the reign of that emperor, but that they were rendered more easy of access by the works which he caused to be undertaken there. That which traversed the Graian Alp, or the Little St. Bernard, led from Milan to Vienna, formerly the capital of the Allobroges, through the country of the Centrones, now the Tarentaise; the other, which crossed the Pennine Alp, or Great St. Bernard, established a communication between the former city and Lyons. There were also two passes over the Rhetian Alps, which afforded a communication between Curia, Coire, and Milan; the one traversing the Splügen, the other Mont Septimer, and both uniting at Clavenna, Chiavenna. These roads also were probably made by Augustus, but the passes had been frequented long before, as Strabo reports on the authority of Polybius. From Milan two great roads branched off to the eastern and southern extremities of the province; the one leading to Verona and Aquileia, the latter to Placentia and Ariminum: the same name of Via Emilia was however applied to both. Concerning this celebrated way, we learn that it was made by M. Æmilius Lepidus, who was consul A. U. C. 567, in continuation of the Via Flaminia, which had been carried from Rome to Ariminum. The Via Emilia was laid down in the first instance as far as Bologna, but subsequently it was continued to Placentia and Milan, and finally to Verona and Aquileia. There was another branch of it however which led from Bologna to this last city by a shorter cut, though still avoiding the marshes of the Po, and rejoining the main road at Padua. Lastly, we may notice a road which seems to have led from Parma through Liguria into Etruria. No mention is made of it in the Itineraries, but there is good historical evidence of the existence of such a route: and we conceive that it was by this road that the Roman armies usually penetrated from Etruria into Cisalpine Gaul, before the Flaminian and Æmilian ways had been laid down. The general direction of this route, which is now much frequented, seems to have been from Pisa to Luca, Sarsane, Pontremoli, Fornose, and Parma.

The Carthaginians are said first to have paved (stravisse) their roads with stones: and after them, the Romans, Isidor. xv. 16.

“Aquileia was the central point to which all the roads that traversed Venetia tended, and from which others diverged to pass into the neighbouring provinces of Illyria and Pannonia. The principal and most important of these was that branch of the Via Emilia which has been described from Milan to Verona in the preceding section. At Verona, this road was joined by another, which crossed the Tridentine Alps, and terminated in Germany at Augusta Vindelicorum, Augsburg; following precisely the same direction as the modern chaussee, which traverses the Tyrol, and descends into Italy by Trent and the valley of the Adige. From this road again we find two others branching off at different points, through the most mountainous parts of the Carnic territory, and joining the Via Emilia, the one at Aquileia, the other at Concordia. From Aquileia, two roads led into Pannonia and Histria. The first of these crossed the Julian Alps, or the Mons Oera of Strabo, a passage apparently frequented from the earliest period. The road leading from Aquileia into Histria followed the coast round the peninsula as far as Tarsatica, no Tarsatis, in Liburnia.

“The Via Aurelia has already been treated of in the section which related to Liguria. The next road to be noticed as traversing Etruria was the “VIA CLAUDIA, or CLODIA, which parted from the Via Flaminia a little beyond the Pons Milvius, and again from the Via Cassia a few miles farther. We are not informed by whom it was constructed, and indeed its direction is but imperfectly traced from the Itineraries; it probably fell into disuse when the central parts of Etruria, which it seems to have crossed, became unfrequented. From Sienna, I am inclined to think that this road proceeded to Florence, where it rejoined the Via Cassia, and from thence to Luca and Luna. The Antonine Itinerary indeed describes a route between the two first cities, under the name of Via Clodia. We are equally ignorant by whom the Via Cassia was constructed. It is only known that it existed prior to Cicero's time; for he informs us in the second Philippic, that it was one of the three roads which led from Rome into Cisalpine Gaul. We have seen that it joined the Via Clodia at Florence. At the station called ad Novas, a road branched off to the left towards Sienna: if the distances are right, this communication must have been a circuitous one. We are inclined to think that it joined the Via Clodia near Sienna, thus connecting the central parts of Etruria with the coast. Lastly, there remains to be noticed a road which branched off from the Via Cassia at Baccano, and led to Ameria in Umbria, from which city it obtained the name of Via Amerina.

“The principal road we have to notice in Umbria and Picenum, is the “VIA FLAMINIA, together with its several branches. It was constructed by C. Flaminius when censor, A. U. C. 533. and was carried in the first instance from Rome to Narnia; from thence it branched off in two directions to Mevania and Spoletum, uniting however again at Fulginia: from this place it continued its course to Nuceria, and was there divided a second time, one branch striking off through Picenum to Ancona; from whence it followed the coast to Fanum Fortunæ; here it met the other branch, which passed the Apennines more to the north, and descended upon the sea by the pass of the Petra Pertusa and Forum Sempronii. These two roads thus reunited terminated at Ariminum. From Ancona there was a road which kept along the coast of Picenum, and connected the Flaminian with the Salarian way.

“The first road which we have to notice in the country of the Sabini is the

The first road which the Romans paved, (muniverunt,) was to Capua; first made by Appius Claudius, the censor, the same who

"VIA Salaria, which traversed the Sabine country, and terminated at Hadria in Picenum. We are told that it obtained its name from the use to which it was converted by the Sabines, for the importation of salt into their country from the sea. When or by whom it was constructed is not known; but it appears to have existed as early as the first invasion of the Gauls; for the battle on the Allia is said to have been fought near the eleventh milestone on that road. Strabo informs us, that it commenced at the Porta Collina, as did also the Via Nomentana, which rejoined the former near Eretum.

"The VIA Valeria is supposed, on the authority of a passage in Livy, to have been made by M. Valerius Maximus, who was censor with C. Junius Bubulcus A. U. C. 447. It commenced, as Strabo informs us, at Tibur, where the Via Tiburtina terminated, and led through the territories of the Æqui and Marsi to Corfinium; but the Itineraries make it extend as far as Hadria in Picenum.

"In describing the different roads which traversed Latium, we shall notice them in their order as they severally branched off from Rome, their common centre. The first is the

"VIA OSTIENSIS, which, as its name sufficiently implies, led to Ostia, commencing at the Porta Trigemina; or, if we take a later period, at the Porta Ostiensis, now Porta S. Paolo. The Via Laurentina branched off from this road about two miles from Rome, and terminated at Laurentum. We have no account of this Roman way in the Itineraries, but we are informed of its existence from Ovid. The next road is the

"VIA ARDEATINA, which evidently was intended to establish a communication with Ardea, distant about twenty miles from Rome. There was also a road which followed the line of the coast from Ostia to Tarracina, it was called SEVERIANA, having been constructed, or more probably repaired, by order of the emperor Severus, as we learn from ancient inscriptions.

"The Appian way was the most celebrated of the Roman roads, both on account of its length and the difficulties which it was necessary to overcome in its construction.

. qua limite noto
Appia longarum teritur Regina viarum.
STAT. SILV. II. 2.

It was made, as Livy informs us, by the censor Appius Cæcus, A. U. C. 442. and in the first instance was only laid down as far as Capua, a distance of about a thousand stadia, or an hundred and twenty-five miles; but even this portion of the work, according to the account of Diodorus Siculus, was executed in so expensive a manner that it exhausted the public treasury. From Capua it was subsequently carried on to Beneventum, and finally to Brundisium, when this port became the great place of resort for those who were desirous of crossing over into Greece and Asia Minor. This latter part of the Appian way is supposed to have been constructed by the consul App. Claudius Pulcher, grandson of Cæcus, A. U. C. 504. and to have been completed by another consul of the same family thirty-six years after. We find frequent mention made of repairs done to this road by the Roman emperors, and more particularly by Trajan, both in the histories of the time and also in ancient inscriptions. This road seems to have been still in excellent order in the time of Procopius, who gives a very good account of the manner in which it was constructed. The next road which presents itself to our notice is the "VIA LATINA. It commenced at the Porta Capena, and fell into the Via Appia at Beneventum. Of its formation we have no account, but it was certainly of great antiquity, and existed probably before the Romans had conquered Latium.

"The VIA LAVICANA, so called from its passing close to the ancient city of Lavicum, communicated with the Via Latina.

"The VIA FRÆNESTINA, like the Via Lavicana, issued from the Porta Esquillina, and fell into the Via Latina.

"So far the description of the Appian way has been confined to that portion of it which traversed the Latin plains; we may therefore resume our statement of the stations and distances of this celebrated road from the borders of Campania, and carry it on to the limits of the Samnite territory. The Latin way, which we also left on the confines of Campania, in the last section, may be considered as falling into the Via Appia at Capua. The Appian and Latin ways were also connected by a cross road which branched off from the former at Minturnæ, and passing through Suessa Aurunca, joined the Via Latina at Teanum. From inscriptions, we learn that it was called Via Hadriana, from having been constructed at the expense of that emperor. Another great road followed the Campanian coast from Sinuessa to Surrentum, passing through Cumæ, Puteoli, and Neapolis; that portion of it lying between the first of these cities and Sinuessa, obtained the name of Via Domitiana from the emperor Domitian, who caused it to be constructed, as we are informed, by Statius. In the Itinerary of Antoninus this route is entitled "Iter a Terracina Neapolim." The route which led from Capua to Cumæ is termed Via Consularis by Pliny; it also sometimes called Via Campana. One branch of it diverged to Puteoli. From Capua also commenced a Roman way, which traversed a portion of Campania, the whole of Lucania and Bruttium, and terminated at Rhegium on the Sicilian Straits. A curious inscription, discovered at Polla in Calabria, informs us that this road was constructed by M. Aquilius Gallus, the proconsul, the same probably who is mentioned by Florus as having been prætor in Sicily. In this inscription all the distances are reckoned from the spot where it was fixed to each place or station on the road from Capua to Rhegium.

"The course of the Appian way has been described through Campania as far as Capua; from that point therefore we may resume the detail of its stations and distances as far as Beneventum, and from thence again through the different ramifications of the same route to the confines of Apulia. From Beneventum, one branch of the Appian way proceeded through the country of the Hirpini to Venusia in Apulia, and from thence to Tarentum and Brundisium. Another branch took a more northerly direction on leaving Beneventum, and passing the Apennines near Æquetium, led to Canusium in Apulia, and from thence along the coast to Brundisium: the latter part of this road was called Via Egnatia. The northern part of Samnium was traversed by a road which communicated with the Valerian, Latin, and Appian ways, and after crossing through part of Apulia, fell into the Via Aquilia in Lucania. There is reason for supposing this to have been the Via Numicia of which Horace says, Brundisium Numici melius via ducat, an Appi.

I. EPIST. 18.

For Cicero speaks of a Via Minucia, which must have agreed in direction with that which I am now describing; and early critics have remarked, that the true reading in this passage of Cicero was Numicia. In the Itinerary of Antoninus this route is described under the head "Iter a Mediolano per Picenum et Campaniam ad Columnam." We may here observe that a branch of the Via Latina crossed into this route from Teanum Sidicinum, and thus afforded a more direct communication between that town and Beneventum than by Capua. Finally, a cross-road led from Beneventum into the country of the Picentini, where it fell in with the Via Aquilia at Piceñia. The only route which traversed the territory of the Frentani was a continuation of the Via Salaria, which followed the coast as far as Brundisium. According to Romanelli it was termed Via Frentana Apula. But in the Itinerary of Antoninus we find it described under the head "Via Flaminia per Picenum Brundisium."

"There yet remains to be noticed a road which followed the whole coast of the Iapygian peninsula, from Brundisium to Tarentum. The principal road to be noticed in Lucania was the Via Aquilia. We find also in the Antonine Itinerary a cross road communicating with the Via Appia and the Via Aquilia. On the eastern coast we have to follow the course of another Roman way, which terminated at Rhegium. An ancient inscription, as cited by Romanelli, informs us, that this road was regarded as a branch of the Appian way, and that in consequence of its having been repaired by Trajan, it took the name of Via Trajana." Cramer.—Ev.

other, commonly however not exceeding fourteen feet. The stones were of different sizes, from one to five feet every way, but so artfully joined, that they appeared but one stone. There were two strata below; the first stratum of rough stones cemented with mortar, and the second of gravel; the whole about three feet thick.

The roads were so raised as to command a prospect of the adjacent country. On each side there was usually a row of larger stones, called MARGINES, a little raised for foot passengers; hence the roads were said MARGINARI, Liv. xli. 27.

Sometimes roads were only covered with gravel, (glarea,) with a foot-path of stone on each side, Ibid.

Augustus erected a gilt pillar in the Forum, called MILLIARIUM AUREUM, Plin. iii. 5. Tacit. Hist. i. 73. Suet. Oth. 6. Dio. liv. 8. where all the military ways terminated, Plut. in Galba, p. 1064. The miles however were not reckoned from it, but from the gates of the city, l. 154. D. de V. S. along all the roads, to the limits of the empire, and marked on stones; hence LAPIS is put for a mile; thus, ad tertium lapidem, the same with tria millia passuum ab urbe, Plin. xv. 18. Liv. xxvi. 10. At smaller distances there were stones for travellers to rest on, and to assist those who alighted to mount their horses, Plutarch. in Gracch. See p. 185.

The principal roads were called PUBLICÆ, vel MILITARES, consulares, vel prætoriaræ; as among the Greeks, βασιλῆαι, i. e. regiæ; the less frequented roads, PRIVATÆ, agrariæ, vel vicinales, quia ad agros et vicos ducunt, Ulpian.

The charge of the public ways was intrusted only to men of the highest dignity, Plin. ep. v. 15. Augustus himself undertook the charge of the roads round Rome, and appointed two men of Prætorian rank to pave the roads; each of whom was attended by two lictors, Dio. liv. 8.

From the principal ways there were cross-roads, which led to some less noted place, to a country villa, or the like, called DIVER-TICULA, Suet. Ner. 48. Plin. 31. 3. s. 25. Serv. ad Æn. ix. 379. which word is put also for the inns along the public roads, Liv. i. 51. Donat. in Ter. Eun. iv. 2. 7. hence for a digression from the principal subject, Liv. ix. 17. Juvenal. xv. 72.

But places near the road where travellers rested (quod diverterent ad requiescendum,) are commonly called DIVERSORIA, whether belonging to a friend, the same with Hospitiu, Cic. Fam. vi. 19. or purchased on purpose, lb. vii. 23. or hired, (meritoria,) then properly called CAUPONÆ, Horat. ep. i. 11. 12. or TABERNÆ DIVERSORIÆ, Plaut. Truc. iii. 2. 29. and the keeper, (Institor,) of such a place, of an inn or tavern, CAUPO; those who went to it, DIVERSORES, Cic. Inven. i. 4. Divin. 27. Hence commorandi natura diversorium nobis, non habitandi dedit, Id. Sen. 23.

In later times, the inns or stages along the road were called MANSIONES; commonly at the distance of half a day's journey from one another, see p. 314. and at a less distance, places for relays, called MUTATIONES, where the public couriers, (publici cursores vel VEREDARI.) changed horses.

These horses were kept in constant readiness, at the expense of the emperor, but could only be used by those employed on the public service, without a particular permission, notified to the innkeepers by a diploma, Plin. ep. x. 14. 121. The Romans had no public posts as we have.

The first invention of public couriers is ascribed to Cyrus, Xenophon. Cyrop. viii. p. 496. Edit. Hutchinson. Augustus first introduced them among the Romans, Suet. Aug. 49. Plutarch. Galb. But they were employed only to forward the public despatches, or to convey political intelligence, Plin. ep. x. 120. It is surprising they were not sooner used for the purpose of commerce and private communications. Lewis XI. first established them in France, in the year 1474: but it was not till the first of Charles II. anno 1660, that the post office was settled in England by act of parliament, Rapin. vol. 2. 622. fol. ed. and three years after the revenues arising from it, when settled on the Duke of York, amounted only to 20,000*l.*, ib. 680.

Near the public ways the Romans usually placéd their sepulchres; See p. 404.

The streets of the city were also called VIAE, the cross-streets, VIAE TRANSVERSÆ, Cic. Verr. iv. 53. thus, VIA SACRA, Horat. Sat. i. 9. Nova, Ovid. Fast. vi. 395. &c. paved with flint, Juvenal. iii. 270. yet usually dirty, *Id. 247. Mart. vii. 60. 6. v. 23. 6.

The Roman ways were sometimes dug through mountains, as the grotto of Puzzoli, Crypta Puteolana, between Puteöli and Naples; and carried over the broadest rivers by bridges, (hence facere pon-

* "The VIA LATA was a prolongation of the Via Flaminia, and was the street through which victorious generals, who entered Rome on that side, marched their troops in triumph to the Capitol. It is supposed to have commenced at the Piazza S. Maria. We hear of several triumphal arches with which this approach was adorned. Those of M. Aurelius, Verus, and Gordian are noticed by Rufus; and Nardini is disposed to add one of Domitian, besides the temple Fortuna Redux, mentioned by Martial.

"The VIA NOVA was parallel to the Vicus Tuscus, and led also from the Forum to the Velabrum. This street existed in the time of the elder Tarquin, as appears from Livy; unless we suppose the historian to be there speaking of it in anticipation. Between the Campus Martius and the Tiber was a road called Via Recta, which is perhaps the same as the Triumphalis; it seems to have followed the left bank of the Tiber, and to have run parallel with the Via Flaminia, and nearly in the same direction as the modern Strada Giulia. On the eastern side of this road was a portico, which formed part of the theatre of Pompey, and another styled the portico of a hundred pillars; also some shady walks of plane-trees.

"The origin of the name, Via Sacra, seems uncertain; but it is well known that this was the street which led directly from the southern gates of Rome to the Capitol, and that by which the Roman generals led thither their victorious troops in triumphant procession. The precise direction of this celebrated street has been much discussed by Roman antiquaries, but the opinion of Nardini seems to be more generally adopted. That able topographer has proved from Varro, that the Via Sacra commenced near the Colosseum, and kept near the base of the Esquiline, passing close to the ruins commonly called the temple of Peace, and terminating in the Forum through the Fabian arch." Cramer.—Ed.

tem en fluvio ; fluvium pontere jungere, vel committere ; pontem fluvio imponere, indere vel insicere.)

The ancient bridges of Rome were eight in number.*

There are several bridges on the Anio or Tevere ; the most considerable of which is Pons NARSES, so called, because rebuilt by the eunuch Narses, after it had been destroyed by Totila, king of the Goths.

About sixty miles from Rome, on the Flaminian Way, in the country of the Sabines, was Pons NARNIENSIS, which joined two mountains, near Narnia, or Narni, over the river Nar, built by Augustus, of stupendous height and size : vestiges of it still remain ; one arch entire, above 100 feet high, and 150 feet wide.

But the most magnificent Roman bridge, and perhaps the most wonderful ever made in the world, was the bridge of Trajan over the Danube ; raised on twenty piers of hewn stone, 150 feet from the foundation, sixty feet broad, and 170 feet distant from one another, extending in length about a mile. But this stupendous work was demolished by the succeeding emperor Hadrian, who ordered the upper part and the arches to be taken down, under pretext that it might not serve as a passage to the Barbarians, if they should become masters of it ; Dio. lvi. 13. but in reality, as some writers say, through envy ; because he despaired of being able to

* " It may not be amiss to give some account of the Roman bridges and aqueducts. The number of the former never appears to have exceeded eight. The most ancient, and also the first in order, if we ascend the river, was the Pons Sublucius, so called from its being constructed of wood. It was built by Ancus Martius, but was rendered more celebrated for the gallant manner in which it was defended by Horatius Cocles against the forces of Porsenna. For some centuries after, this bridge was, through motives of religious feeling, kept constantly in repair with the same materials of which it had been framed originally, without the addition of a single nail for the purpose. This continued, as we learn from Dio Cassius, till towards the conclusion of the republic, when it was rebuilt of stone by the censor Paulus Æmilius Lepidus ; whence it is also sometimes called Pons Æmilius.

Cum tibi vicinum se præbeat Æmilius pons ?

JUV. SAT. VI. 32.

Julius Capitolinus states, that it was repaired by Antoninus Pius in marble. Next to it was the Pons Palatinus, now Ponte di S. Maria, or Ponte Rotto. This bridge is said to have been begun by M. Fulvius the censor, and to have been finished by P. Scipio Africanus and L. Mummius, who held that office A. U. C. 611. The bridge, which connects the island in the Tiber with the left bank of that river, was anciently known by the name of Pons Fabricius. Dio. Cassius speaks of it as having been built of stone soon after the conspiracy of Catiline ; from whence it might be inferred that a wooden one existed previously on the same spot. It is mentioned by Horace.

Atque a Fabricio non tristem ponte reverti.

II. SAT. 3. 36.

Its modern name is Ponte di quattro Capi. The name of Cestius was given to the bridge which connected the island with the other bank of the Tiber, it is now called Ponte di S. Bartolomeo. We are not informed by whom or when it was built ; but we learn from an inscription, that it was repaired under the emperors Valentinian, Valens, and Gratian. The bridge immediately above the island is now called Ponte Sisto, but its ancient name, as we learn from Victor, was Pons Janiculensis. Report assigns its construction to Antoninus Pius, and an inscription mentions its having been raise any work comparable to it. Some of the pillars are still standing.

There was a bridge at Nismes (Nemausus.) in France, which supported an aquæduct over the river Gardon, consisting of three rows of arches; several of which still remain entire, and are esteemed one of the most elegant monuments of Roman magnificence. The stones are of an extraordinary size, some of them twenty feet long; said to have been joined together, without cement, by ligaments of iron. The first row of arches was 438 feet long; the second, 746; the third and highest, 805; the height of the three from the water, 18½ feet.

In the time of Trajan, a noble bridge was built over the Tagus or Tayo, near Alcantara in Spain; part of which is still standing. It consisted of six arches, eighty feet broad each, and some of them 200 feet high above the water, extending in length 660 feet.

The largest single arched bridge known, is over the river Elaver, or Allier, in France, called Pons veteris Brivatis, near the city Brivode, in Avergne, from Briva, the name of a bridge among the ancient Gauls. The pillars stand on two rocks at the distance of 195 feet. The arch is eighty-four feet high above the water.

Of temporary bridges, the most famous was that of Cæsar over the Rhine, constructed of wood, Cæs. B. G. iv. 17.

The Romans often made bridges of rafts or boats, joined to one another, Cæs. B. G. i. 12. viii. 14. Flor. iii. 5. and sometimes of empty casks or leathern bottles, Herodian. viii. Zozim. iii. Lucan. iv. 420. as the Greeks, Zenoph. Cyr. iii.

LIMITS of the EMPIRE.

THE limits which Augustus set to the Roman empire, and in his testament advised his successors not to go beyond, Tacit. Ann. i. 11. Dio. lvi. 33 & 41. were the Atlantic Ocean on the west, and the Euphrates on the east; on the north, the Danube and the Rhine; and on the south, the cataracts of the Nile, the deserts of Africa and Mount Atlas; including the whole Mediterranean Sea, and the best part of the then known world. So that the Romans were not without foundation called REBUM DOMINI, Virg. Æn. i. 282. and Rome, LUX ORBIS TERRARUM, ATQUE ARX OMNIUM GENTIUM, Cic. Cat. iv. 6. TERRARUM DEA GENTIUMQUE ROMA, CUI PAR EST NIHIL, ET NIHIL SECUNDUM, Mart. xii. 8. CAPUT ORBIS TERRARUM, Liv. l. 16. xxi. 30.

repaired by Hadrian. Next to the Janiculensis was the Pons Triumphalis, of which we have no account in any classical writer; but the piles on which it was raised are said to be still visible when the bed of the river is low. The last bridge now takes its name from the castle of S. Angelo, in front of which it stands, and is known to have been built originally by Hadrian, after whom it was called Pons Ælius.

About two miles from Rome, we find on the Tiber a bridge called Pons Milvius, or Mulvius, a name which has been corrupted into that of Ponte Molla. Its construction is ascribed to M. Emilius Scaurus, who was censor A. U. C. 644. We learn from Cicero, that the Pons Milvius existed at the time of Catiline's conspiracy, since the deputies of the Allobroges were here seized by his orders. In later times it witnessed the defeat of Maxentius by Constantine." Cramer.—Ed.

Agreeably to the advice of Augustus, few additions were made to the empire after his time. Trajan subdued Dacia, north of the Danube, and Mesopotamia and Armenia, east of the Euphrates, Eutrop. viii. 2. The south of Britain was reduced by Ostorius under Claudius, and the Roman dominion was extended to the Frith of Forth and the Clyde, by Agricola, under Domitian, Tacit. Agric. 23. But what is remarkable, the whole force of the empire, although exerted to the utmost under Severus, one of its most warlike princes, could not totally subdue the nations of the Caledonians, whose invincible ferocity in defence of freedom, (DEVOTA MORTE PECTORA LIBERÆ, Horat. od. iv. 14. 18.) at last obliged that emperor, after granting them peace, to spend near two years in building, with incredible labour, a wall of solid stone, twelve feet high and eight feet thick, with forts and towers, at proper distances, and a rampart and ditch, from the Solway Frith to the mouth of the Tyne, above sixty-eight miles, to repress their inroads.*

The wall of Severus is called by some MURUS, and by others VAL-LUM. Spartianus says it was 80 miles long, in vita Severi, 18 & 22. Eutropius makes it only 32 miles, viii. 19.
